MACADAM, Sergeant (now FS) Gordon Forbes (Can 6006) - Mention in Despatches - No.7 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 113/44 dated 21 January 1944. Born 10 November 1914 at Schreiber, Ontario (RCAF press release 2659 announcing award). Educated there. Automobile mechanic for three years and Diesel operator for two years. Enlisted in Winnipeg, 11 September 1939 as Aero Engine Mechanic and posted to No.2 Equipment Depot, Winnipeg. To Seaplane Training School, 12 October 1939. Promoted AC1, 29 February 1940. Promoted LAC, 29 May 1940. To No.13 Operational Training Squadron, Patricia Bay, 31 October 1940. Promoted Corporal, 1 November 1940. To Prince Rupert, 16 April 1942. To Tofino, 20 November 1942 (servicing Allison engines of No.132 Squadron). Remustered to aircrew and posted to No.9 BGS, 22 December 1942. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 6 March 1943. To No.3 Repair Depot, Vancouver, 9 March 1943. To Prince Rupert, 24 March 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 November 1943. Commissioned 10 March 1944 (C46820); to No.7 Squadron, Alliford Bay, 24 April 1944. To Western Air Command Headquarters, 3 June 1944 (Aircrew Assessment Board to February 1945; Command Flight Engineer Officer to August 1945); promoted Flying Officer, 10 September 1944; promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 May 1945; to No.5 OTU, Boundary Bay, 13 August 1945; to Patricia Bay, 27 October 1945; to No.8 Release Centre, 16 November 1945. Volunteered for Interim Air Force and served in Western Air Command until final discharge on 28 September 1946. Died in White Rock, British Columbia, 4 March 1990.

This non-commissioned officer as a Flight Engineer has displayed constant devotion to duty requiring many hours of overtime work. He is responsible for the submission of many ideas which have resulted in the improvement of the working conditions for the squadron crews while on patrol. His unceasing efforts have been devoted to the maintenance of a high standard of efficiency in his flight.

First recommended for an AFM, 21 August 1943 by S/L R, Dobson, No.7 (BR) Squadron, when he had flown 359 hours ten minutes (all in previous six months) of which 350 hours had been operational (16 sorties) - but see application for Operational Wing:

Sergeant Macadam is responsible for the submission of many ideas which have resulted in the improvement of the working conditions for the squadron crews while on patrol. His unceasing efforts and constant devotion to duty is deserving of recognition.

Supported at Station and Western Air Command Headquarters level but did not reach Priority List for Air Force Medal. On 11 October 1943, suggested change to Mention in Despatches, to which Air Marshal Breadner concurred, 12 October 1943.

Training: Course at No.9 BGS was 11 January to 19 February 1943. Battle aircraft (six hours 20 minutes) and spent five hours 35 minutes at Turret Manipulation.. Fired 450 rounds on 25-yard range, 300 rounds on 200-yard range. Marked on Guns, pyrotechnics and ammunition (written, 220/250), Guns, practical (79/100), Sighting (220/250), Turret, practical (170/200), and Aircraft Recognition (168/200). Scored 3.5 percent hits in air. Placed first in a class of 24. "Excellent student, good appearance, and cooperative."

Course at School of Aeronautical Engineering, 20 February to 6 March 1943. Scored 73 percent on written examination and 81 percent on oral examination. Placed second in a class of ten. "Above average student. Sound knowledge of engines and operation." (F/L W. Schofield, 11 March 1943).

Selected Assessments: "Recent graduate Flight Engineer. Has good ideas and exceptionally quick to understand. Wants to do the right thing." (Commanding Officer, No.7 Squadron, Prince Rupert, 6 March 1943).

"A hard working, conscientious NCO and will stay on the job until the work is completed." (S/L R. Dobson, No.7 Squadron, 7 August 1943)

"A hard working, wide awake NCO who has qualities to warrant commissioned rank." (W/C L.H. Brooks, Commanding Officer, Prince Rupert, 10 March 1944)

"An exceptional engineer who has been employed in an instructional capacity in 7 BR Squadron, He has been recommended for a commission." (S/L R. Dobson, No.7 Squadron, 8 June 1944).

"Sound man, knows his trade exceptionally well. Has only held a commission for a little over six months but appears to have all the necessary qualifications to hold his commission. Recommend retention in the Service and promotion to rank of Temporary Flying Officer on completion of six months service." (W/C G.D.. Clarke, Western Air Command Headquarters, 25 September 1944)

"This officer is filling a Flight Lieutenant vacancy on the OTU Staff and is displaying exceptional ability and keenness in the performance of his duties." (W/C W. Weiser, Western Air Command Headquarters, 14 May 1945).

“Presently employed on Admin duties. Energetic and willing. Work sometimes suffers from carelessness.” (W/C R.V. Manning, 8 January 1946).

MacARTHUR, F/L William John Campbell (C5466) - Mention in Despatches - No.416 Squadron - Award effective 1 June 1943 as per London Gazette dated 2 June 1943 and AFRO 1247/43 dated 2 July 1943. Attended University of Manitoba and McGill University, graduating in Medicine, 1938 (captained McGill football team and later named to all-star team of the half-century). Also attended Mayo Clinic. Home in Oakville; enlisted in Toronto, 27 May 1941 as Medical Officer. Granted rank of Flight Lieutenant, 27 August 1941. With No.15 SFTS as of 7 September 1941. To "Y" Depot, 30 July 1942. To RAF overseas, 6 August 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 10 July 1943. Wounded early in Normandy operations but returned to duty as Medical Officer at Carpiquet. Repatriated 31 July 1944. To Technical Training School, 17 September 1944. To No.1 Air Command, 15 January 1945. Retired 30 November 1945. Joined the staff of Toronto Western Hospital but in 1946 transferred his practice to Oakville. Helped found Oakville-Trafalgar Memorial Hospital and was in succession Chief of Surgery and Chief of Staff, mentoring many young doctors and nurses. Retired in 1976. In 1970 he had his wife had visited Tortola, British Virgin Islands, and thus began a 30-year association with the islands as he assisted the medical and dental community through mentoring and sourcing of equipment. Arranged for the Oakville Rotary Club to sponsor British Virgin Island children needed specialized treatment in Toronto. His services led to his appointment as Member, Order of the British Empire (1985). Died at his farm north of Oakville, 2 April 2001. RCAF photo PL-28749 (ex UK-10176 dated 1 May 1944) shows two officers pulling on rope as they erect the "officers' ante room" at an RCAF airfield in England - W/C Hugh Godefroy, DSO, DFC and S/L "Cam" MacArthur, Oakville, Ontario, "former McGill football star and now a senior airfield medical officer." MacARTHUR, S/L William John Campbell (C5466) - Mention in Despatches - No.127 Wing (AFRO only gives "Overseas" as unit) - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. No citation.

RCAF press release 3420 issued 19 June 1944 read, in part:

WITH THE RCAF OVERSEAS: Canadian fighter pilots and ground crews fighting with Allied invasion forces, are assured the best in medical treatment right up in the forefront of the invasion.

Senior medical officer on the RCAF airfield of the RAF Tactical Air Force commanded by W/C M. Brown of Winnipeg, is S/L W.J.C. "Cam" MacArthur, Oakville, Ontario, former McGill backfield star. MacArthur moved in with an advance part of the invasion forces, surviving an explosion to his tank landing craft which killed 15 of the 75 aboard and blew him out of the ambulance in which he had been asleep. When RCAF pilots arrived at his French base, they came under his care.

"An injured lad will never be more than an hour at the outside from adequate medical care," he promised before he left Britain.

"People at home can be assured that none of their boys will be doped with drugs to keep up their energy in battle. They will have a complete surgical setup at their service and there will be plenty of morphine available should it be required."

Every tenth airman on the French airfield is thoroughly trained in first aid and all have rudimentary knowledge. Serious cases are to be flown back to a base hospital in England.

RCAF Press Release dated 24 January 1944 from F/O H. Ivers Kelly read:

Kindly "detectives" watch Canadian pilots overseas during every off-duty moment. They watch for signs of bad temper, for indications of the development of a cynical or sarcastic attitude, for criticisms of his fellow-pilots or his aircraft, and for changes in his eating, drinking or sleeping habits. If they find what they're looking for, they ground the pilot.

These "detectives" are skilled Canadian medical officers who know that a "scrappy" or morose pilot is fatigued and that he has started to draw on his reserves of nervous and physical powers. They order him off operations before he "burns himself out," before he becomes kin to some of the "burned-out" veterans of the last war who returned to civilian life without any apparent wounds but found that they could not stand the pace of earning a living at a job that was easy for them before they enlisted.

Typical of these “detectives” on Canadian airfields overseas are the three Medical Officers who watch carefully over the health of pilots and ground crews of the Red Indian and Wolf fighter squadrons at a base in England. Squadron Leader Cam. MacArthur of Toronto and Oakville, Ontario, was a successful surgeon in civil life after he graduated from McGill University where he starred at rugby – he still can “spot” some of the pilots ten or fifteen years and trounce them at tennis or squash. Flight Lieutenant Don. Munro of Vancouver, B.C., graduated from University of Manitoba and specialized in internal medicine before he enlisted. Flight Lieutenant Vic Perry of Toronto where he graduated in medicine, is another of the R.C.A.F. Medical Officers who avail themselves of opportunities in England to take short medical courses.

“There is no use just asking a pilot if he is tired; he will strenuously deny it,” said S/L MacArthur. “He will hotly contest any idea that he be taken off operations; but sometimes after he has been told flatly that he is being grounded, he will admit that ‘maybe’ he is a ‘bit’ tired.”

Nearly a year ago, one pilot was grounded against his will and went away for a short visit. When he returned a week later, the MO was away and he talked his way into being allowed to go on a sweep over France – he was shot down by German bullets an hour later. He was “fatigued” and not so alert as normally, but he did not realize it; he was keen to keep flying. He managed to escape the Germans, got back to England and took a two months’ rest and has since avenged himself by destroying two more enemy planes over Europe. He has a higher rank than when he was shot down and he wears the Distinguished Flying Cross on his left breast, but he has told the Medical Officers he will not argue the next time he is told he is tired and should take a rest.

“If we take a lad off operations before he drains his reserves of physical, mental and nervous energy, we preserve a useful pilot who can make another successful tour of operations after a rest,” said S/L MacArthur, who has been “mentioned in despatches for his work among pilots. “If he goes too far, he will become a physical and mental wreck, of no use as a fighter pilot and with his post-war career possibly jeopardized.”

A small U-tube monometer helps the MO’s to check whether a pilot has become fatigued and is starting to draw on his reserves. But the MO’s rely to a great extent on their own observations of each pilot’s day-to-day living. The monometer is a check. It contains mercury which a pilot, by blowing through a mouthpiece and tube, is required to hold at a steady 40 millimetres for as long as he can. If he is fatigued, he can’t do it for very long; but if he’s in top physical and mental condition, he can keep the mercury at 40 even after he has turned

“There are many indications of fatigue,” said S/L MacArthur, “such as irregularity of pulse, lowered blood pressure, general lassitude and lack of interest, a change in personality or in habits, and signs of insomnia and nightmares. One outstanding pilot I grounded told me later he had been having nightmares for several nights before I grounded him and that he kept having them for six weeks afterwards. He was fighting his battles over again in his sleep, was being shot down again and was bailing out into the sea. I did not know about his nightmares when I grounded him; it was from other indications that I knew he was tired.”

“Temperament has much to do with how soon a pilot feels fatigue. One lad here of 20 has made 120 sweeps over enemy territory, but he does not show fatigue. Neither do several others with more than 100 sweeps to their credit in one tour. But some show fatigue after half that many sorties.”

“Every fighter pilot realizes he must rely on his one engine; that if it packs up on him he is in deep trouble. A very few pilots have had several engine failures and taken them in their stride, but when a pilot becomes fatigued he starts listening to his motor, watching all the dials and gauges; he is worried about the possibility of his engine failing even though he may never have had a motor even skip on him during several hundreds of hours over enemy territory. But he is listening to that motor from the time he takes off until he has landed. He is tired, or the possibility of engine failure would not concern him for an instant. His usefulness as a fighter pilot has deteriorated; he has had enough operations for that tour and we ground him for a few months’ rest.”

“Some manifestations of fatigue are when an easy-going lad, who always has been friendly with everyone, starts to draw into himself and becomes morose. He is more inclined to criticize his friends or his aircraft. We know that in the jargon of the Air Force, ‘He’s Had It.’ We ground him for a rest and he will come back on operations as his natural, affable self after a couple of months doing non-operational work such as test-flying, gunnery instruction at a training unit, and so on.”

“We attend briefings,” said S/L MacArthur, “and we watch whether any of the lads tighten up when they see it is going to be a rough show – maybe it is across a long stretch of water into Holland in their single-engined fighters. We watch them on their return to see if the sweep has left them exhilarated or tired; we watch how they take off and land their planes; we sit among them at meals and see how their appetites are. If there is any deviation from anyone’s norm, we check into his case. We sometimes ask the squadron leader’s help, but we don’t go to leaders of sections in the squadron – if we tell them what we are looking for they will know what symptoms they must hide when they get tired but don't want to go off ops.”

The possibility of fatigue is often calculated roughly by the length of the operational tour, which usually averages for a fighter pilot about 100 sorties of about two hours each. Such a tour included many hours of monotonous “readiness,” of taking turns sitting near an aircraft on an airfield in readiness for an emergency signal that will send him scrambling skywards. In the summer, continuous “readiness” lasts from before 5 a.m. until after 10 p.m.

“The successful fighter pilot is the first to say that his success over anything the enemy has thrown at him is due 75 per cent to luck and only 25 per cent to skill,” said S/L MacArthur. “He has seen some friends die just because of an unlucky break and he has seen others of his friends come back when they seemingly had no chance of living – maybe the friend's plane caught fire over Holland but he got safely back. So the more sweeps a pilot makes, the more he has cause to wonder if his luck will soon start to run out”.

“People at home don't realize that they add to the strain on a pilot – as well as on others who are overseas – by not writing often enough. I have seen a pilot fidgeting for a couple of days and then have seen him relax as he sat smiling in a chair, oblivious of his surroundings, while he read some overdue mail he had just received. The boys here didn't write very much of what they're doing and the longer they are over here, the less news there is to write home; but it would be wonderful for their morale if the folks at home would realize this and keep writing often even though they don't get many letters in return.”

“It is nice to see the occasional association which knew a pilot before he enlisted sending him gifts such as cigarettes or candy. Sometimes a municipality adopts a squadron and sends it cigarettes, but all squadrons don't get them. Occasionally, all members of a group send a bunch of letters at one time to a particular ex-member. All these things happen too seldom, but they are what helps a pilot or any other person in the services to have pride in himself, in his former associations and in his background. But being ignored leads to that ‘what's the use’ feeling which definitely lowers morale.”

The work of keeping pilots and other personnel healthy entails careful attention by medical officers to diet. Attempts are made to get fresh milk and fruit juices and an occasional fresh egg for air crew, although non-flying personnel do without them. All personnel get raw carrots and raw cabbage and other vitamin foods regularly and arrangements are made to see they are not fed much fat or grease.

“Only a fraction of our time is taken up by pilots,” said S/L MacArthur. “Ground personnel outnumber the pilots ten or twelve to one – men in repair units, equipment depots, armament sections, motor transport division, the kitchen, and so on – they are all A1 category in health so far as ground work is concerned, and they get their colds and cuts and infections and need inoculations as much as any pilot. But we don’t have to watch the ground man’s fatigue reactions – he is already grounded.”

RCAF Press Release No.5568 dated 15 June 1944, transcribed by Huguette Oates, reads:

LONDON: -- Enemy action interrupted the journey of Squadron Leader Cam MacArthur of Oakville, Ontario, medical officer for an RCAF airfield, when he was within a few miles of the invasion coast before dawn broke on D-Day, and today he was back in England waiting to make another start.

MacArthur, who used to be a rugby star for McGill University, has spent his overseas service looking after the health of pilots in RCAF Spitfire squadrons, and the landing on D-Day morning would have made his unit the first Canadian air force medical formation ashore.

“Originally we were supposed to go over a couple of days after the first landings,” MacArthur said, “but then it was decided there should be somebody in there immediately to look after any pilots who came down in the beachhead and needed medical attention.” The unit was headed for a refueling and rearming strip where Spitfires would land after a sortie and take off for further operations after being serviced by British Servicing Commandos.

“I was asleep in the back of the ambulance with four other officers when the torpedo hit us about two in the morning,” MacArthur related. “We were on a tank landing craft, and the torpedo seemed to set everything on fire. Ammunition and gas tanks started to blow up and the vehicles caught fire in a hurry. All of us were blown right out of the ambulance, and I came down in about two feet of water on the deck. Two men sleeping in the cab of the ambulance were killed, but the four of us in the back got away with slight burns or scratches and a good shaking. Everybody on the ship behaved very well, and a lot of lives were saved because people kept calm while they were waiting to be rescued.”

Blown out of the ambulance with MacArthur were F/L Vic Perry of Toronto, also a medical officer; Captain Bob Forbes of Toronto, army liaison officer and F/O Alan McNab of Ottawa, Ontario. “We were lucky in having a launch come alongside to take the boys off about five minutes after the explosion,” MacArthur continued. “The Channel was pretty rough and they made a great job of getting us off. First they evacuated the men from the bow of the ship and then went around to the stern to take off the rest. Some of them had to swim for it before they were taken aboard. In fact, it was so rough that the launch had to leave some of the men behind, and they were picked up about 6:30 in the morning by a United States Navy craft.”

There were 75 men aboard when they set out, of which about 60 were saved from the wreck. In addition to medical men, the ship carried a number of Flying Control and Intelligence officers and Servicing Commandos to set up the skeleton organization on the French landing strip.

“We have been replaced by now, of course,” MacArthur said, “but the boys are hoping that they’ll get another shot at it before long. After we got aboard the rescue launch, we wanted to go on the rest of the way to the beach and do what we could even without our equipment, but the launch wasn’t able to take us. We finally arrived back in this country by way of a U.S. hospital ship. We saw a lot of flak and fires ashore while we were cruising around in the launch, and we saw the invasion beach from end to end.”

S/L MacArthur is in charge of medical services for a Canadian spitfire airfield which includes squadrons commanded by three veteran RCAF fighter pilots, S/L R.A. Buckham, DFC, Vancouver; S/L Walter Conrad, DFC, Richmond, Quebec; and S/L Fred Green, DFC, of Toronto, Ontario.

To Central Flying School, Trenton, 6 January 1941; posted to No.10 SFTS, 22 March 1941; promoted WO2, 1 December 1941; commissioned 30 June 1942. Posted to "Y" Depot, Halifax, 11 October 1942; struck off strength to overseas on same date. Promoted Flying Officer, 30 December 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 30 June 1944. Repatriated 15 April 1945; to No.2 Air Command, 2 May 1945; to No.18 SFTS, 17 July 1945. Left the RCAF at wars end but rejoined on 24 September 1951 (service number 42332) and still serving as of 1956. DFC presented 9 April 1949. Chris Shores, Those Other Eagles, gives the following victory list: 27 August 1943, one Ju.88 destroyed, 20 miles east of Kalafrana (Spitfire EN256, T-B); 2 December 1943, one Bf.109G destroyed, five miles south of Fier, Albania (Spitfire JK265, T-K); aircraft shot down was from 1/NAG.12, Oberleutnant Hans Marquardt baled out and reported missing. RCAF photo PL-27273 (ex UK-10108 dated 1 May 1944) has following caption: "Ready to take off on a moment's notice against the enemy but in the meantime taking it easy in the dispersal hut is RCAF pilot F/O K. MacBain of Brandon, Manitoba. Mac, who has one Ju.88 to his credit, is attached to an RAF Spitfire squadron in Italy."

This officer while operating as a flight commander in recent attacks against targets in the Balkans has led numerous sorties against enemy motor transport columns and camps. He has destroyed one enemy aircraft and at least fifty enemy vehicles in addition to six vessels in the Adriatic Sea. His attacks have always been pressed home in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire. Flight Lieutenant MacBain has always been eager to engage the enemy at every opportunity and adverse weather has never deterred him from completing the allotted tasks.

MacBRIDE, Sergeant Louise Rigg (W302934) - British Empire Medal - RCAF Overseas Headquarters - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946 and corrected rank in AFRO 781/46 dated 9 August 1946. Born in Gourock, Saskatchewan, 11 July 1921. Educated at Strathcona Academy, Montreal (1927-1928), Margaret Jenkins Academy, Victoria (1929-1933), Oak Bay High School, 1934-1938 and Victoria High School, 1938-1939. Home in Victoria (stenographer to manager of Victoria Cold Storage and then British Columbia Packers); enlisted in Vancouver, 21 April 1942 as Clerk Stenographer. Posted to No.6 Manning Depot on enlistment. Promoted AW1, 21 July 1942. Posted overseas, 20 August 1942. Disembarked in Britain, 1 September 1942 and posted to RCAF Overseas Headquarters. Promoted LAW, 21 October 1942. Promoted Corporal, 1 November 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 August 1944 on reclassification as Clerk Administration. Repatriated 23 October 1945. Released 5 December 1945. Married name was Brock. Died in West Vancouver, July 1995 as per Royal Canadian Legion Last Post website.

This non-commissioned officer enlisted in the Women's Division of the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1942 and in that year proceeded overseas with the first draft of Women's Division personnel and, until her repatriation, was continuously employed for a period of three years at Royal Canadian Air Force Overseas Headquarters. She is endowed with outstanding talent for dealing with office administrative detail and with a capacity for hard work. During her service overseas she gave unsparingly of these talents and set a splendid example to all ranks in initiative, strenuous effort and devotion to duty, involving a great amount of overtime work during the 1942-45 bombing and "V" attacks on London. Sergeant MacBride's record is an outstanding justification of the wisdom of establishing the Women's Division of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Recommendation raised 1 February 1946 by G/C (name illegible), Directorate of Accounts and Finance, RCAF Overseas Headquarters. Text as above.

Notes and Assessments: Interviewed 20 April 1942 in Vancouver - "Anxious to serve. Good type. Has had ten months experience as Stenographic Clerk."

Course at No.6 Manning Depot, 23 May to 20 June 1942. Scored 134/200 on Clerk Stenographer tests. "Average student in both practical and theoretical phases of the course. Reliable type of airwoman."

Described 11 August 1943 as follows: "Accurate and conscientious worker. Highly recommended" (W/C T.C. Davis, Director of Accounts and Finances, RCAF Overseas Headquarters.)

“Corporal Macbride is an especially competent and hard working NCO. She is a credit to the RCAF (WD).” (S/L B.M. Sears, 11 January 1944)

“This airwoman NCO is capable and efficient. Her promotion to the rank of Acting Sergeant is recommended. There is a vacancy in the establishment of this Directorate for this.” (S/L B.M. Sears, 7 July 1944)

This officer has, by his untiring effort and devotion to duty, assisted in maintaining a high standard of efficiency and morale in his unit. He has carried out all tasks assigned to him in a very efficient and willing manner.

MACBRIDE, F/L Robert Ernest (J9267) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.162 (Bomber Reconnaissance) Squadron - Award effective 11 August 1944 as per London Gazette dated 22 August 1944 and AFRO 2231/44 dated 13 October 1944.

Flight Lieutenant MacBride has a fine record of operational flying. He is a most skilful pilot, fully qualified to fly both land and sea aircraft and has operated from some of the most difficult bases, never allowing adverse weather to deter him from completing his mission. On one occasion while on an anti-submarine patrol this officer sighted a U-boat. Despite intense and heavy anti-aircraft fire he pressed home an excellent attack and the U-boat was probably destroyed.

Notes on Training:

At No.1 ITS he placed second in a class of 159. Courses and marks were: Mathematics (100/100), Armament, Practical and Oral (93/100), Signals (100/100), Hygiene and Sanitation (40/40), Drill (80/100), law and Discipline (60/60). Described as "An exceptional airman. Highly cultured, well-mannered student, possessed with above average intelligence and has an excellent educational background. Conscientious and a hard worker and is determined to succeed. Had made excellent showing in examinations. Recommend for commission."

At No.3 EFTS he flew Finches (23.15 dual, 30.00 solo of which 10.20 on instruments. Also logged ten hours in Link. CFI (H. Wright) wrote "A capable pilot. Slight inferiority complex. Very steady and conscientious. Aerobatics fair, instrument flying good." He placed 6th in a class of 36. Ground school courses as follows: Airmanship (173/200), Airframes (77/100), Aero Engines (75/100), Signals, Practical (94/100), Theory of Flight (70/100), Air Navigation (154/200), Armament, Oral (102/200).

At No.6 SFTS he flew 38.05 dual day, 45.25 day solo, 2.25 night dual, 9.45 night solo plus 20 hours in Link Placed 6th in a class of 71.

Course at No.31 GRS, 29 December 1941 to 28 February 1942 was a navigation course, 31 hours 55 minutes on Ansons. His flying was described thus: "A quiet, steady pupil who has worked hard but is inclined to be slow. With further experience he should be a reliable navigator." Ground School courses were DR Navigation (84/100 and 261/300), Astro Navigation (85/100), Compasses and instruments (114/200), Meteorology (104/200), Signals (80/100), Reconnaissance (180/200), Coding (83/100), Ship Recognition (148/200), Photography (83/100), Visual Signals (Pass). Chief Ground Instructor noted, "This pupil has worked hard throughout the course and has acquired a sound knowledge of G.R. subjects."

Course for Transport Conversion taken 14 May to 5 July 1945. This involved flying in Dakota and Beechcraft aircraft (46.20 day dual, 31.05 day solo, 11.50 night dual, 12.25 night solo. These times included 66.20 instrument flying; also logged 25 hours in Link. Ground Examinations in the following: Air Regulations (92/100), Weight and Balance (86/100), Engines

(125/150), Meteorology (128/150), Navigation (176/200), Radio Range and Standard Beam Approach (95/100), Signals, Written (136/150), Signals, Morse (50/50). Flying Tests in the following: General Flying (316/400), Applied Flying (158/200), Instrument Flying (197/250), Night Flying (79/100), Link (39/50). Described as "High average pilot. Works hard at his work, should come easier with experience."

His course at No.2 Advanced Flying School, Portage la Prairie, is interesting. It ran from 30 January to 21 May 1956. Subjects and marks as follows: Navigation (192/200), Meteorology (156/200), Flight Procedure (97.5/100), Medical, Safety Equipment, High Speed Flight (140/175), Aircraft Engineering (233/250). He flew 16.40 day dual, 17.20 day solo, 1.30 night dual and 1.30 night solo plus 4.05 IF (day) 25.25 navigation (day) and 18.50 formation (day) for a total of 82 hours 20 minutes. Wing Commander W.M. Middleton assessed him under the following headings:

Academic Training

A very serious, mature officer; although away from formal training for some time he applied himself diligently and made a fine showing on all progress tests and final examinations. Wing Commander MacBride is considered to be outstanding for his perseverance and leadership qualities, and is a credit to the RCAF.

Flying Training

General: Wing Commander MacBride enjoyed flying the T-33 and was very impressed with the aircraft's performance and handling. He was most cooperative and punctual at all times. He showed a very high degree of application while on course. Clear Hood: Well above average and grasped the feel of the air craft very early. Had no problems with any of the sequences that he did not master. Instrument: Usual weakness shown at the start but developed a very nice touch towards the end. High standard in both basic and procedure work, receiving a green rating. Navigation: Flight planning well carried out. Had no troubles in map reading, log keeping, mental DR. Flying ability very good. Formation: Very high average ability shown in both leading qualities and station keeping.

Officer Training

Applied himself well towards the course. Keen at all times to fly and attain a high standing. Much of his spare time was spent increasing his knowledge of the aircraft.

The course at No.3 (All-Weather) Operational Training Unit was 4 June to 10 September 1956. Flying training was on CF-100 (55.50 day, 22.40 night), T-33 (10.30 day) and B-25 (5.00 day). Academic marks as follows: Flight Procedure (100/100), radio Aids (84/100), CF-Con (93.5/100),

Navigation (92.2/100), Meteorology (88.4/100), AC and W (70.2/75), Aircraft Recognition (49/50), AI Technical (96/100), Airmanship (63/75) and Rocketry (80/100). Air Marks were as follows: T-33 Conversion (163.6/200), Instruments (522/600), CF-100 Conversion (169/200) and Crew Training (1,020/1,200). Assessed by W/C Macullitan [?] as follows:

Instrument and Conversion

Wing Commander MacBride completed the instrument phase of his training with above average results. An extremely capable pilot who carries out all instrument requirements with ease and confidence. CF-100 conversion presented no difficulties. Aircraft handling and airmanship were of top-notch calibre.

Crew Training and AI Phase

Wing Commander MacBride and his Obs/AI, F/L Tulloch form an above-average crew. Wing Commander MacBride has done exceptionally well on course. Initially his observer was very weak but, to a large degree as a result of Wing Commander MacBride's patience and encouragement, he was brought along to become an above average AI observer. This officer has an excellent attitude toward all-weather operations. He has constantly worked to learn all he possibly could concerning all-weather interception and has achieved a sound knowledge of the AI requirement. He graduates as a well above average all-weather pilot with no apparent weakness.

Rocketry

Due to the shortage of rocket pods at this unit, this officer did not complete any air rocketry exercises while on course.

General

Wing Commander MacBride has shown outstanding ability as reflected in the marks and standing above. He has put maximum effort into every phase of the course, and his presence here has had a marked influence on the junior course members. He has impressed my staff with his pleasant, efficient, cooperative manner. In my view he will make an excellent Squadron Commander, It has been a pleasure to have Wing Commander MacBride at the OTU.

Assessments: The following are excerpts from a variety of complementary assessments:

This officer stands out in all respects. He is capable, efficient and does an excellent job of work at all times. [Wing Commander C.G.W. Chapman, No.162 Squadron, 12 August 1944].

Wing Commander MacBride is an enthusiastic and skilled flyer who is the first off and the last down when weather conditions are marginal. His clean-cut, very tidy appearance and bearing honestly reflect the generally above average attributes of Wing Commander MacBride. Special inspections of the CF-100, and below limits weather, have retarded the rate at which the squadron [No.419] is becoming acclimatized to its new environment. However, through leadership and supervision, Wing Commander MacBride has maintained a high degree of morale and enthusiasm within his unit. His domestic and private affairs appear to be quite satisfactory. Both he and Mrs. MacBride attend Mess functions. [G/C R.W. McNair, 4 Fighter Wing, 10 February 1958].

Wing Commander MacBride has, by personal example, developed and maintained a very high standard of operational capability in his squadron [No.419]. In the rare instances of relatively unsatisfactory circumstances within the squadron he has promptly and effectively corrected the lapse of his subordinates. The slight impediment in his speech is of little consequence and is never apparent during flying operations. Wing Commander MacBride would make an excellent Commanding Officer of any type of unit involved in flying. His previous experience, plus the current tour as Commanding Officer of an operational squadron provides really sound qualifications for appointment to appropriate staff positions. {G/C R.W. McNair, 4 Fighter Wing, 14 November 1958},

Note: In a list of aircraft flown as of December 1957, he reported he had flown 3,703 hours 40 minutes in his career, including the following: Fleet (65 hours), Yale (25), Harvard (165), Anson (20), Canso "A" (1,950), Expeditor (463), Dakota (185), Norseman (20), Lockheed (45), T-33 (414) and Cf-100 (414) plus 38 hours on miscellaneous aircraft.

MacBRIEN, G/C William Ross (C173) - Officer, Order of the British Empire - No.127 Wing - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 132/45 dated 26 January 1945. Born in Camberley, England, 23 August 1913; moved with family to Canada, 1920. Educated in Ottawa at Ashbury College; later attended Royal Military College. Commissioned in RCAF, 1935. Instructed at Camp Borden and Trenton, 1937-1939; CFI at No.2 SFTS, 1941-1942. Went overseas in October 1942 and assumed command of successive Canadian fighter wings. In 1945 appointed Director of Operational requirements, AFHQ. Attended National War College, Washington, 1946-47. In 1948 became first RCAF member of Directing Staff, National Defence College, Kingston. August 1948, headed planning staff forming Air Defence Group; October 1949 named Commander, Air Defence Group on its move to St.Hubert. In August 1951 he was appointed Chief Staff Officer, Air Defence Command. Went overseas in April 1953 as Chief of Staff, 4th Allied Tactical Air Force. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 1 October 1953 (Air Commodore, No.1 Air Division). Returned to Canada, July 1956; August 1958 promoted to Air Vice-Marshal and made AOC Air Defence Command. Promoted to Air Marshal, September 1962 and assigned to SHAPE. July 1966 appointed Vice Chief of Defence Staff, CFHQ. Retired from RCAF, 5 November 1969. Died in Ottawa, 1986. RCAF photo PL-19721 (ex UK-5520 dated 11 October 1943) shows G/C W.R. MacBrien (left) conducting visitors to an RCAF Spitfire wing, namely Air Marshal Harold Edwards, Mr. W.P. Bickell (left middle, Toronto) and Mr. Ralph Bell (Ottawa, Director of Aircraft Production for Canada). RCAF photo PL-19887 (ex UK-5457 dated 7 October 1943) shows three officers with a Sherman tank - W/C Mannifrank Brown (Winnipeg, described as former bush pilot), W/C Hugh Godefroy (Toronto) and G/C W.R. MacBrien (Ottawa). RCAF photo PL-28555 (ex UK-8461 dated 8 March 1944) shows him with Spitfire. No citation to OBE in Canadian sources; Public Records Office Air 2/8872 has recommendation.

Group Captain MacBrien is at present serving as commander of a Canadian Spitfire wing, which he has supervised extremely well during the swift advance from the Normandy bridgehead to an airfield in Holland. He has always displayed great energy and enthusiasm and his Wing has recently produced exceptional results in air combat against the enemy. Previously he served as a Sector Commander during the planning and preparation for the landings in Normandy on D Day and during the immediate assault period. The exceptional efficiency of the Wings serving under him, both on the ground and in the air, has been a tribute to his leadership. Both as a Sector Commander and as commander of a Wing, Group Captain MacBrien has done much to assist in the operations since D Day.

MacBRIEN, G/C William Ross, OBE (173) - Croix de Guerre with Silver Star (France) - Award as per AFRO 485/47 dated 12 September 1947. External Affairs file "French Awards to Canadian Armed Forces - Particular Cases" (Library and Archives Canada, RG.25, Box 4140) has the following citation:

Group Captain MacBrien rendered distinguished service in the European theatre of operations as Commanding Officer of a Fighter Wing of the 2nd Tactical Air Force which was one of the first Air Force units to operate from Normandy upon the landings of the Allied Forces.

MacCALLUM, Corporal (now Sergeant) James Edgar (R72513) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - No.8 SFTS - Award effective 5 May 1944 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1133/44 dated 26 May 1944. Born 9 October 1918. Home in Southport, Prince Edward Island; enlisted in Charlottetown, 22 August 1940 for aircrew. To No.1 BGS, 30 September 1940; ceased training 3 November 1940 and reclassified as General Duties, 15 November 1940. To No.1A Manning Depot, 13 December 1940. To No.9 SFTS, 20 January 1941. Promoted AC1, 1 March 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 June 1941. To Detachment "F", 10 October 1941. To No.8 SFTS, 30 June 1942. Reclassified as Carpenter, 27 April 1943. Promoted Corporal, 1 August 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 December 1943. To Suffield, 28 June 1944. To "Y" Depot, 28 September 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 4 October 1944. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 May 1945. Dates of repatriation and release unknown. Rejoined 2 April 1952 as a Flight Cadet (46555) and subsequently commissioned in Supply Branch, 30 May 1952. Flight Lieutenant as of 1 July 1956.

This airman displayed initiative, resourcefulness and outstanding devotion to duty, with complete disregard of personal safety, when he entered a Motor Transport garage in the face of flames and smoke and attacked a fire which had almost enveloped a refuelling tender. He succeeded in getting the fire under control by the time help arrived. Had he not acted with outstanding speed and determination, an explosion and consequent fire of unpredictable proportions endangering lives and equipment was imminent.

MacCAUL, G/C Donald Harvey (C76) - Mention in Despatches - No.4 RD - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Born in Sault Ste. Marie, 22 December 1904. Home in Thessalon, Ontario. Educated at Trinity College (Port Hope) and RMC; as a student at RMS he was considered as a cadet nominee for the RAF. Enlisted in RCAF in Kingston, Ontario, 17 June 1925 as Pilot Officer. Attended Queen's University and RMC. Promoted Flying Officer, 17 June 1926. At Camp Borden, October 1925 to July 1926. Awarded pilot's flying badge, 26 April 1926. At High River, July to September 1926 (fire detection patrols). Under instruction at camp Borden, September 1926 to February 1927 (courses in Army Cooperation, Photography and Air Navigation). Seaplane training course at Vancouver, February to April 1927. On strength of Station Ottawa, April to November 1927 (photographic operations). On strength of Camp Borden, January 1928 to April 1929 (flying instructor until crash which blinded him in left eye leading to restricted flying). At AFHQ, October 1929 to April 1931 (staff duties, Personnel Branch); promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 April 1930. At Camp Borden, April to October 1931 (Adjutant to Flying Training Wing). Attended Queen's University on leave, winter 1931-32 (Bachelor of Science). At Ottawa, April 1932 to April 1933 (attached to Aeronautical Engineering Laboratories, National Research Council). At No.1 Aircraft Depot, April 1933 to September 1934 (Chief Works Officer). Attended Staff College, RMC, Kingston, September 1934 to January 1935 (passed preparatory exam for RAF Staff College). At RAF Station Henlow, August 1935 to June 1937 (specialist Engineering course).

At Portsmouth, June to November 1937 (Specialist Torpedo engineering course). At Aircraft Depot, Ottawa, January 1938 to March 1939 (Chief Works Officer; promoted Squadron Leader, 1 April 1938). To No.3 Repair Depot, Vancouver, March 1939. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 May 1940. At AFHQ, August 1940 to April 1941 (Engineering staff work, Director of Technical Maintenance). Wing Commander as of 1 May 1940. To No.1 Training Command, 6 April 1941. Promoted Group Captain, 1 April 1942. To RCAF Overseas, 10 April 1942; to RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 14 April 1942. Reported to have served in Bomber Command Headquarters and No.6 Group. Returned to Canada, 24 February 1943. To No.2 Training Command Headquarters (Winnipeg), 25 March 1943. Became Commanding Officer, No.4 Repair Depot, Scoudouc, 20 November 1944. To Scoudouc, 14 July 1945. To Air Material Command Headquarters, 1 November 1945. Remained in postwar RCAF. To No.10 Repair Depot, 18 November 1949. Appointed Commanding Officer, No.6 Repair Depot, 6 July 1951. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 23 October 1953, while CO of No.6 Repair Depot, Trenton. To AFHQ, 19 August 1955 for duties as Air Attache, Warsaw. To Ottawa, 19 August 1958. Retired 29 October 1959. Died in Langley, British Columbia, 25 September 1984 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

This officer is a Regular Officer of twenty years service who, due to a flying accident, has held a restricted flying category for some time. He is an Engineering Officer and has devoted most of his service to this speciality. He has served as Senior Engineering Officer at various command headquarters, one year on attachment with the Royal Air Force overseas, and latterly as Commanding Officer of No.4 Repair Depot. With his varied background and engineering knowledge, he has applied himself with a quiet, unassuming, but thoroughly efficient manner to the work assigned to him. As a station commander he is well above average. Although his work, by its nature, could not be spectacular it has been thorough, exacting, painstaking throughout.

This was based on a recommendation raised by Air Commodore Stewart, September 1945, which read:

Group Captain MacCaul is a Regular Officer of twenty years service who, due to a flying accident, has held a restricted flying category for some time. He is an Engineering Officer and has devoted most of his service to this speciality. During this war he has served as Senior Engineering Officer at various command headquarters, one year on attachment with the Royal Air Force overseas, and latterly as Commanding Officer of No.4 Repair Depot. With his varied background and engineering knowledge, he has applied himself with a quiet, unassuming, but thoroughly efficient manner to the work assigned to him. As a station commander he is well above average. Although his work, by its nature, could not be spectacular it has been thorough, exacting, painstaking throughout and well worthy of recognition in the form of Mention in Despatches.

Aircraft Accident: Moth No.82, 6 April 1929 at Camp Borden, Flying Officer D.H. MacCaul (seriously injured) and civilian pupil J.W. Aubrey (St.Catharines, Ontario) killed. Flight Sergeant G. Gorrill got MacCaul out of wreck. His own statement was as follows:

Mr. Abray was my pupil on the Flying Instructors Course. I had instructed him several times on the various ways of getting inadvertently into a spin and how to get out of it. He mastered this quite satisfactory [sic] and at no time did he express any anxiety to me on the danger of going into a spin. About a week previous to the accident he almost went into a spin unintentionally and I gave him more instruction, demonstrating the great danger if he lost speed on a gliding turn. He said he understood this, after which he did many satisfactory gliding turns when flying solo.

On the morning of April 6th, 1929, I was giving him instruction on forced landings and he was tending to get too far over his mark, necessitating steep turns near the ground. I told him about this and made one approach myself to show him how to do it. Then I told him to do the same himself. This time he made the same mistake, being consistently too far above his mark at 300 feet.

I then leaned forward to tell him about this. The speaking tube was fixed in such a position that I could see very little of what the aeroplane was doing. He then started a left hand turn to get away from his mark again while I was still talking to him. He must have stalled on the turn as the next thing I knew was, we were in a left hand spin. I immediately took over the controls to bring the aircraft out, but found that he had "frozen" to the controls and I could not move them.

I then yelled at him to let go but he did not slacken up his grip until we were about 75 feet from the ground, when I was able to move the rudder slightly, and the machine started to slow up in its spin. I did not have time to bring it out altogether, and I think we hit in a very slow spin.

Court recommended abolition of fixed speaking tubes. "If fixed in a central position they are a danger in crashes and if fixed to one side, as now in the Moth, they cause the instructor to sacrifice his view when leaning over to speak."

In view of this accident, the following reports bear noting. On 10 September 1930, F/L N.C. Ogilvie-Forbes wrote:

On September 8th I tested this officer in Gypsy Moth 160. During thirty minutes flying he took off seven times and made seven landings and approached including three forced landings on the aerodrome. His judgement in approaching and his landings were all good and I consider that he is in every way capable of flying solo.

In a report dated 18 September 1930, F/L D.A. Harding wrote:

This officer was given a flying test by me at noon on the 17th September. The weather rather uncertain with high and gusty wind making it difficult to judge distance when landing. Flying Officer MacCaul, however, carried out the Sequence of Flying in a satisfactory manner.

It is also worthy of note that on instruction he flew from the front seat without the use of instruments and for the first time in many months. This change of pace did not alter his judgement and he continued to fly in usual good form - no faults being noted.

I consider that in every flying aspect of aircraft handling Flying Officer MacCaul is capable.

This was followed almost at once by a test by F/L A. De Niverville (19 September 1930) in Avian 129; conclusion was, "This officer flies quite well, although there is room for improvement in certain sequences. This is due, undoubtedly, to his being away from active flying for some time. I consider that he is a perfectly safe pilot and that as far as flying ability is concerned, he is quite fit to fly solo again."

In May 1935, G/C E.W. Stedman wrote about MacCaul. He recommended that he be steered towards Engineering rather than Experimental work, the chief factor being concern for a one-eyed pilot and the need not to strain excessively his remaining eye.

DFC presented by Governor General at Government House, 7 November 1949. Photo PL-48166 shows him after investiture with his sister, Miss M. MacDiarmid. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.2610 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 18 December 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (160 hours 30 minutes), 19 May to 1 November 1944.

This officer, as an air gunner, has completed a tour of 32 attacks on enemy targets, many of which have been against the heavily defended targets of Germany. He has at all times shown a notable keenness for his work, both in the air and on the ground, and has assisted in the instruction of the rest of the gunners of the squadron. His cheerfulness and devotion to duty have been outstanding and often by his unfailing watchfulness he has been able to warn his captain of impending attacks by enemy aircraft in time to take evasive action, avoid combat and continue on his mission.

The sortie list was as follows:

19 May 1944 - Le Clipon (4.05)

MacDONALD, F/L Aeneas Murdock (J36974) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.429 Squadron - Award effective 30 March 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 721/45 dated 27 April 1945. Born 16 April 1919 in Toronto; home there (telephone craftsman); enlisted there 22 July 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay until 26 October 1942 when posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.3 Flying Instructor School, 21 January 1943. To No.5 ITS, 6 February 1943; graduated 17 April 1943 and posted to No.10 EFTS; to No.3 SFTS, 26 June 1943; graduated and commissioned 15 October 1943. To "Y" Depot, 29 October 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 15 November 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 15 April 1944. Repatriated 14 April 1945. Retired 19 June 1945. RCAF photo PL-42302 (ex UK-19277 dated 9 March 1945) shows two Toronto fliers who have recently completed their tour - F/L A.M. MacDonald (pilot, left) and Flight Sergeant K.M. Mason (left, rear gunner). DFC presented 22 November 1948. Employed postwar by Bell Canada. Died in Ancaster, Ontario, 21 September 2004.

This officer has displayed the highest standard of skill and determination. He has completed very many sorties including a number of minelaying missions. In December 1944, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald was detailed for a minelaying operation in distant enemy waters. In spite of adverse weather at the commencement of his flight, this officer showed the greatest determination to complete his mission successfully.

The original submission dated 20 January 1945 is in DHH file 181.009 D.2611 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20627) when he had flown 27 sorties (150 hours 15 minutes); no sortie list:

On December 24th, 1944, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald was detailed for a mining sortie in the Oslo area. Take off conditions for this operation were extremely poor with visibility lowering to about 300 yards. In spite of these difficult circumstances Flight Lieutenant MacDonald made a successful take-off and laid his mines in the allotted area. This officer is captain of a specially selected crew for the carrying out of gardening sorties and has always completed his missions successfully in the face of the utmost difficulties and extremely poor flying conditions. On several occasions, when tactics required gardening aircraft to fly at low level, thereby making them particularly vulnerable to even light flak guns, this captain, with his wonderful spirit and forcefulness of purpose, has set an inspiring example by pressing hom his attack and successfully completing his mission.

It is considered that this officer's exceptionally fine operational record, his fortitude and devotion to duty fully merit the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Training: Course at No.2 ITS was 15 July to 15 August 1941. Courses in Mathematics (71/100), Armament, practical and oral (86/100), Signals (92/100), Hygiene and Sanitation (36/40), Drill

(77/100), Law and Discipline (50/60), Link (70 percent). Placed 90th in a class of 224. "This lad is aggressive, has plenty of initiative, is quick and keen to make good but is not very mature for his age."

Course at No.19 EFTS was 1 September to 24 October 1941. Tiger Moth aircraft (31.45 dual, 29.25 solo including 9.50 on instruments). Logged 13.15 in Link. "Average, apt to be under confident, no bad flying habits, keen to fly." (W.J. McFee, CFI). Ground courses in Airmanship (170/200), Airframes (83/100), Aero Engines (95/100), Signals, practical (96/100), Theory of Flight (72/100). Air Navigation (155/200), Armament, oral (171/200), Officer Material (169/200). Placed 11th in a class of 61. "This is a very bright pupil as a reference to the above set-out record in Ground School shows. He is also a merry man and enjoys life. His department was good." (Bjarni Stefannson, CGI).

Course at No.13 SFTS was 27 October 1941 to 16 January 1942. Harvard aircraft (47.10 day dual, 39.35 day solo, 3.20 night dual, 8.40 night solo). Of this, 23.05 on instruments. Logged 20 hours in Link. "Only average ability in flying but seems to try hard. Over-controls badly." Ground courses in Airmanship and Maintenance (151/200), Armament, written (79/100), Armament, practical (79/100), Navigation (120/150), Meteorology (47/50), Signals, written (46/50) and Signals, practical (60/100). "Above average in Ground Instruction School. Clever, has a mind of his own." Placed tenth in a class of 48.

On completion of Central Flying School instructor course (2 May 1942) it was noted he had flown the following on course -Single Engine Elementary type, 17.40 day dual, 9.45 day solo; Single Engine Advanced type, 9.55 day dual, 2.00 night dual, 12.30 day solo, 1.00 night solo; Twin Engine Advanced type, 16.55 day dual, 1.00 night dual, 17.50 day solo, 1.00 night solo. "A good average pilot with good knowledge of sequence. Has a convincing manner of delivery and is a conscientious worker." (P/O W.F. Borrett). Ground training in Airframes (60/100), Engines (76/100), Airmanship (60/100), and Air Navigation (79/100). The Chief Ground Instructor was F/L G.P. Silke. Tested on a Cessna, 1 May 1942 and assessed under the following headings - Sequence (very good), Voice (good), Manner (interesting), Ability to Impart Knowledge (very good), Ability as Pilot (capable, steady). "Flies and demonstrates in a very convincing manner. Should do very well with experience." (S/L J.C. Mirabelli).

Course at No.15 (Pilots) AFU was 27 August to 19 October 1943. Oxford aircraft (3.10 day dual to first day solo, total 16.45 day dual, 18.45 day solo (4.40 in formation by day), 1.30 night dual to first night solo, 11.20 total night dual, 13.45 night solo including 10.10 night formation which was unusual. Also logged 12.05 in Link. Graded as follows on flying tests - General Flying (270/400), Applied Flying (135/200), Instrument Flying (180/250), Night Flying (65/100) and Link (35/50). "Had a little trouble to start with his approach and landing. Improved rapidly to good average all around. Instrument flying has been above average throughout. An excellent leader and extremely capable as captain of aircraft.”

Course at No.22 OTU was 20 October to 14 December 1943. Wellington III aircraft (4.40 day dual to first day solo, total 5.30 day dual; 5.10 day as second pilot, 10.40 day as captain; 2.35 night dual; 2.15 night as second pilot, 5.35 night as captain). Logged 6.30 on Link. Graded as follows on flying tests - General Flying (325/400), Applied Flying (170/200), Instrument Flying (200/250), Night Flying (75/100) and Link (38/50). Ground courses in Airmanship (225/300), Armament (245/300), Meteorology (70/100), Navigation (170/200), Signals (84/100). “This ex-instructor (AFU trained) has trained here without a crew and can only be assessed as a pilot. He is exceptionally good and has a lot of experience. Flies well and shows a lot of promise towards captaincy. The makeshift crews with which he has flown have all been captained well by him. Strongly recommended for Path Finder Force.”

Course at No.1664 Conversion Unit was 19 January to 10 February 1944. Flew 20 hours 40 minutes on course. “An ex-instructor who can only be assessed on circuits. His general flying is very good but it took a little time to get his landings taped. Should with more experience make a good captain.” (S/L H.V. Peterson, “C” Flight instructor). This assessment is puzzling given the following list of his exercises and flying times as No.1664 Conversion Unit - 1. Familiarization (30 minutes dual); 2. Dual Circuits and Bumps (2.00 dual); 3. Dual Circuits and Bumps , Overshoots (2.00 dual); 4. Dual, Three Engine Flying (30 minutes, before solo); 5. Solo, Circuits and Bumps (55 minutes); 6. Dual Check Including Overshoot (1.00 dual); 7. MacDONALD, F/L Allan Charles (J19189) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.83 Squadron - Award effective 6 January 1945 as per London Gazette dated 16 January 1945 and AFRO 508/45 dated 23 March 1945. Born 26 February 1921 in Vancouver; home in Marble Mountain, Nova Scotia; enlisted in Halifax, 5 March 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 Equipment Depot, 27 April 1941. To No.4 WS, 5 July 1941. Promoted LAC, 7 August 1941. To No.3 BGS, 23 November 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 22 December 1941. To No.31 OTU, 11 January 1942. To RAF overseas, 14 April 1942. Commissioned 8 November 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 8 May 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 6 June 1944. DFC presented at Buckingham Palace, 13 July 1945. Repatriated to Canada, 10 July 1946. Released 5 September 1946. Died in Port Hawksbury, Nova Scotia, 7 July 1999 as per Legion Magazine of March 2000.

This officer has shown himself to be a skilful and resourceful wireless operator. He has participated in a large number of operational sorties including attacks against the most heavily defended targets. On one occasion in September 1944, his aircraft was detailed for an attack against Kaiserlautern. On the way to the target a heavy electrical storm was encountered and the aerals were damaged. Flight Lieutenant MacDonald succeeded in locating the damage and effected repairs to his equipment and the aircraft was flown to the target. Throughout all his operations this officer has set a fine example of consistent courage, skill and untiring devotion to duty.

Public Records Office Air 2/9039 has a detailed recommendation dated 17 October 1944 when he had flown 50 sorties. The details of his first 33 could not be given (logbook lost after tour in Middle East) but he had 17 trips (99 hours four minutes) with No.83 Squadron:

19 Sept 1944 - Munchen Gladbach
23 Sept 1944 - Munster
27 Sept 1944 - Kaiserlauten

Flight Lieutenant Macdonald has completed 50 operational sorties on heavy bombers, including seventeen with the Pathfinder Force. He has shown outstanding keenness to operate, and has taken part in many attacks on the most heavily defended targets. He has always shown a high degree of skill and resource in his work, being undeterred by any difficulties.

On the night of 27th September 1944, his crew were taking part in an attack on Kaiserlauten. On the way to the target a heavy electrical storm was encountered. The aircraft was struck, and the aerals were damaged. Flight Lieutenant MacDonald succeeded in locating the damage and repairing his equipment and the aircraft was able to carry on to the target.

Flight Lieutenant Macdonald's spirit and skill have been a great example to the rest of his Section and the squadron. He has been as valuable in his work on the ground as in the air.

For his consistent courage and skill through his long operational career, Flight Lieutenant Macdonald is recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacDONALD, P/O Archie (J16310) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.404 Squadron - Award effective 24 September 1943 as per London Gazette dated 1 October 1943 and AFRO 2258/43 dated 5 November 1943. Born in Toronto, 9 March 1921; educated in Toronto and Alliston, Ontario; home in Angus, Ontario; enlisted at Camp Borden, 11 August 1939 for General Duties (mess waiter). Promoted AC1, 11 February 1940. Promoted Corporal, 5 December 1940. Remustered to aircrew, 4 May 1941, reverted to AC2 and posted that date to No.1 ITS; promoted LAC, 5 June 1941; to No.14 EFTS, 6 June 1941; to No.12 SFTS, 7 August 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 25 October 1941. To No.31 GRS, 14 November 1941. To "Y" Depot, 22 December 1941; to RAF overseas, 7 January 1942. To No.11 AFU, 21 February 1942. To No.2 (Coastal) OTU, 31 March 1942; to No.254 Squadron, 26 May 1942; to No.404 Squadron, 6 June 1942. Commissioned 8 December 1942. Attached 24 April 1943 to No.1 Special Low Attack Instructors School. Promoted Flying Officer, 8 June 1943. Wounded by anti-aircraft fire, right arm, 17 July 1943 on operational flight to Norway, attacking a flak ship. By then he had flown about 150 operational hours. Treated at Bassingstoke Hospital. To Repatriation Depot, 7

August 1943. Repatriated 13 September 1943. To Mountain View, 18 November 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 8 December 1944. To Central Flying School, 9 May 1945 for flying instructor course; to No.5 OTU, 5 July 1945, serving there to 17 September 1945. To Trenton, 10 December 1945. Released 11 May 1946. Cited with a P/O J.H.E. Delaney (RAF navigator). DFC presented by Governor General at Government House, 24 January 1956. Died in Richmond Hill, Ontario, 19 February 1997 as per Legion Magazine of September 1997.

In July 1943, Pilot Officers MacDonald and Delaney were pilot and navigator respectively of an aircraft which attacked an enemy anti-aircraft ship off the coast of Norway. The aircraft was hit by a cannon shell and badly damaged while Pilot Officer MacDonald was wounded in the right arm and leg. Despite partial paralysis of his right arm and considerable loss of blood he, with the able assistance of Pilot Officer Delaney, flew the aircraft back to base, making a successful crash landing. Both these officers displayed skill, fortitude and resourcefulness in trying circumstances and throughout many operations have always completed their tasks with courage and efficiency.

Training: Course at No.1 ITS was 3 May to 6 June 1941. Courses in Mathematics (90/100), Armament, practical and oral (74/100), Signals (98/100), Hygiene and Sanitation (31/40), Drill (79/100) and Law and Discipline (55/60). Placed 69th in a class of 177. "Steady type, serious, hard worker, giving best to task in hand."

Course at No.14 EFTS was 9 June to 27 July 1941. Tiger Moth aircraft - 21.15 dual, 37.45 solo. Flew 5.20 on instruments. Logged ten hours in Link. "Hard working student, tries hard and learns quickly. Instrument flying is very good." Ground courses in Airmanship (190/200), Airframes (83/100), Aero Engines (67/100), Signals, practical (98/100), Theory of Flight (60/100), Air Navigation (147/200), Armament, oral (150/200) and graded 155/200 on "Qualities as an NCO."

Course at No.12 SFTS was 8 August to 19 October 1941. Crane aircraft - 32.10 day dual, 47.35 day solo, 4.15 night dual, 6.00 night solo. Was 14.55 on instruments and logged 20 hours in Link. "Good steady, quick thinking. Needs checking occasionally. Very conscientious." (F/L J.W. Kerwin). Ground courses in Airmanship and Maintenance (161/200), Armament, written (79/100), Armament, practical (68/100), Navigation and Meteorology (116/200), Signals, written (88/100) and Signals, practical (46/50). Placed 21st in a class of 53. "Average student, very serious, works and studies hard - conduct exemplary."

Arrived at No.31 GRS, 17 November 1941 and made minimal effort - "Does not wish to do GR work. Has made no real effort on course. Has not the ability to cope with the course and has not enough sense of responsibility for a GR pilot. Recommend he be taken off the course." (16 December 1941).

Course at No.11 AFU was 21 February to 31 March 1942. Oxford aircraft - 17.50 day dual, 10.40 day solo, no night flying. Was 5.50 on instruments. Logged 6.40 in Link.

Course at No.5 (Coastal) OTU was 31 March to 26 May 1942. Flew 18 hours day dual, 47.10 day solo (17.40 crew training), 3.05 night dual, 6.55 night solo (1.45 crew training). Was on instruments six hours 55 minutes, in formation seven hours 55 minutes, and logged 14.45 in Link. Assessed "average" in all categories. "A poor average pilot - not really keen - will require careful handling." (W/C R.E.X. Mack).

Course at Central Flying School, 21 May to 29 June 1945. At the time he had 111.25 single engine solo, 48.05 single engine dual, 796.05 twin engine solo, 85.05 twin engine dual. On course flew 2.30 single engine advanced solo, 3.45 single engine advanced dual, 11.40 twin engine advanced day solo, one hour twin engine advanced night solo, 28.45 advanced twin engine sol and 3.15 advanced twin engine by night. "A good average pilot who presents patter in an interesting manner. Should become a good instructor." Tested on a Ventura, 25 June 1945 . Graded on Sequence (Average), Voice (Good), Manner (Instructive), Ability to Impart Knowledge (Unconvincing), and Ability as Pilot (Average). "An average pilot who with experience should become a more convincing instructor." Awarded Category "C".

Notes: Excerpts from report of action of 17 July 1943 (Beaufighters JM173) by G/C G.C. Truscott:

The pilot, Pilot Officer A. MacDonald, was on a shipping strike of Fedje in Norway and encountered an enemy Flak ship. The aircraft was hit by Flak and a cannon shell burst in the cockpit wounding Pilot Officer MacDonald in the forearm and leg and rendered the hydraulic system inoperative.

With the aid of Pilot Officer J.H. Delaney, the Navigator, Pilot Officer MacDonald brought the aircraft home to base and it was at this time that the hydraulic system was found to be unserviceable,. Pilot Officer MacDonald made a belly landing with the very minimum of damage to the aircraft.

Application for operational wing dated 14 November 1944 listed the following sorties:

Assessments: "A very satisfactory officer in all respects." (W/C G.E. Truscott, 20 July 1943, when he had flown 318 hours 20 minutes, 92.05 in previous six months). To this is added, "A conscientious keen officer with a well developed sense of responsibility." (G/C A.D. Gillmore).

"An airman of the Permanent Force who remustered to aircrew. Sound judgement. His attitude towards both subordinates and superiors was most acceptable. The conduct and operational ability of this officer while serving with this unit have been exemplary." (W/C C.A. Willis, 17 November 1943; he had flown 66 hours 50 minutes in previous six months). To this is added, "An enthusiastic officer with a fairly strong personality. He did well on ops with the squadron and set a good example both in the air and on the ground." (G/C A.D. Gillmore). Not clear why this is noted down long after he has left the squadron, and it may be that it should be dated 17 November 1942. On the other hand, it is classified as being submitted "on posting."

MacDONALD, F/O Donald (J88870) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.406 Squadron - Award effective 9 October 1945 as per London Gazette dated 19 October 1945 and AFRO 1822/45 dated 7 December 1945. Born 10 October 1920. Home in Winnipeg; enlisted there 26 August 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.5 Personnel Holding Unit, 10 October 1941. To No.12 SFTS (guard duty), 23 November 1941. To No.2 ITS, 4 January 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 28 March 1942; to No.5 EFTS that same date; to No.10 SFTS, 6 June 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 25 September 1942; to "Y" Depot, 9 October 1942. To RAF overseas, 27 October 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 25 March 1943. Promoted WO2, 25 September 1943. Commissioned 24 April 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 24 October 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 26 September 1945; released 6 November 1945. Score with No.409 Squadron was one Ju.188 damaged (16/17 June 1944), one Ju.188 destroyed (3/4 August 1944), one Ju.188 destroyed 17/18 August 1944), all with WO Colborne as navigator. With No.406 he destroyed one Ju.188 (1/2 February 1945). Medal sent by registered mail, 11 July 1950.

On operational flying this officer has displayed skill, courage and determination. In the course of his operations he has destroyed three enemy aircraft and damaged another. In June 1944, he damaged an enemy aircraft in the air near St.Sauveur. On another occasion in August 1944, while over Normandy, he destroyed another aircraft after a difficult chase. On yet another occasion in February 1945 he destroyed an enemy aircraft in the air near Trier. Flying Officer MacDonald's keenness and devotion to duty have set a fine example to the squadron.

Lived on Saltspring Island (1978-1980), Galiano Island and then to Richmond, British Columbia. An auction catalogue for Glendening's, 7 June 1989, reported sale of his medals including an American Bronze Star plus Canadian Forces Decoration. Estimated value, £ 800-1,000 (odd that they would be on the market when he was still alive). Died in Richmond, 17 April 2006. Photo PL-26808 (ex UK-7509 dated 24 January 1944) taken soon after he assumed command. Photo PL-26825 (ex UK-7370 dated 18 January 1944) shows G/C P.Y. Davoud handing over command of No.418 Squadron to W/C D.C. Macdonald (Vancouver). RCAF photo PL-60260 (ex UK-19153 dated 28 February 1945) showed Wing Commander Ralph Gordon (left), Bobcaygeon, Ontario and Wing Commander Don MacDonald, DFC (Westmount and Vancouver); Gordon commanding No.436 Squadron, MacDonald (ex- No.418 Squadron) described as RCAF Liaison Officer with RAF Transport Command in India. Logbooks held by Comox Air Force Museum.

This officer has participated in a large number of sorties and throughout has displayed great skill, determination and devotion to duty. On a recent occasion Wing Commander Macdonald led a small formation of aircraft on a sortie during which seven enemy aircraft were shot down, two of which were destroyed by Wing Commander Macdonald. The success achieved on this brilliantly executed operation reflects the greatest credit on the efforts of this officer.

MacDONALD, S/L Donald Charles Stirling, DFC (C1634) - Croix de Guerre with Gold Star (France) - AFRO 485/47 dated 12 September 1947. Pilot. External Affairs file "French Awards to Canadian Armed Forces - Particular Cases" (Library and Archives Canada, RG.25, Box 4140) has the following citation:

Group Captain MacDonald served with 418 Night Intruder Squadron and accomplished an outstanding tour of operations, many of his sorties being over France.

As a teenager, he had played violin with the Thunder Bay Philharmonic Society, under Gunton Smalley. Died in Thunder Bay, Ontario, 27 September 2002 as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of March/April 2003. Obituary stated he had flown two tours (55 sorties on Wellington, Halifax and Lancaster aircraft.

Flight Sergeant McDonald, serving as first wireless operator, has participated in a number of operational sorties. On one occasion, when attacking Essen by night, his aircraft was severely damaged by anti-aircraft fire and the wireless was rendered unserviceable. Showing great presence of mind and resourcefulness he effected a repair with chewing gum. By his determination and courage Flight

Sergeant McDonald has materially assisted in the successful completion of his many operational missions.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9604 has recommendation dated 24 September 1942, when he had flown 35 sorties (188 hours five minutes) which gives sortie list and a more detailed text than that published:

Since being posted to this squadron, Flight Sergeant MacDonald, who is a Canadian, has taken part in 35 operational sorties, on each of which he has been first wireless operator.

He has at all times proved himself to be a most determined and cool member of his crew. His reliability and his presence of mind when under fire, together with his quiet cheerfulness and self-confidence in face of danger have set a fine example to his crew and the squadron as a whole.

On 12th February 1942 he took part in the daylight attack on the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau. His captain circled the ships at 500 feet for 30 minutes in spite of very heavy opposition with the result that the aircraft was hit many times. With complete disregard for danger and great coolness, Flight Sergeant MacDonald maintained touch with the Multi-Frequency Direction Finding Station at Sealand getting many fixes to indicate the position of the ships.

On another occasion while attacking Essen on the night of 25th March, his aircraft was damaged by flak, which resulted in loss of petrol and the unserviceability of the wireless and TR.9. With great presence of mind and hard work under most trying and anxious conditions, Flight Sergeant MacDonald repaired the set with chewing gum and obtained three QDMs which greatly assisted his captain in reaching England speedily and forced landing safely at Horsham St. Faith before his petrol ran out.

This Non-Commissioned Officer has a fine offensive spirit under a quiet and unassuming manner. His outstanding ability and strong sense of duty together with his complete disregard of danger have set a fine example to his fellow aircrew and I most strongly recommend that he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal.

RCAF Immediate Press Release No.1083 dated November 1942, transcribed by Huguette Oates, reads:

"I guess it was the chewing gum effort," said Flight Sergeant Donald M. Macdonald in explaining his D.F.M. However, the records also show that this incident, to which the big, dark Fort William wireless operator air-gunner referred to, was only another example of the resourcefulness which he has shown through many operational sorties. Perhaps his seasonal occupation as a gold prospector in Northern Ontario when he was not working in the Lakehead elevators provides the answer to his resourcefulness.

It was in a raid to "Happy Valley" that Flight Sergeant Macdonald repaired a radio with a wad of chewing gum. The set had commenced acting up on the trip to the target and, on the home trip, it failed completely. A nut which held one of the wires in place had been lost. Macdonald used a wad of gum to hold the wire in place, and the set worked like a charm again.

Like many another airmen, Flight Sergeant Macdonald found the channel battle memorable. The night before, he had gone to Brest and had dropped flares to provide light for the bombers that followed. Within 15 hours of the start of that operation, he was in the air again, in "soupy" weather, helping in the search for the German battleships. They found them, too. The clouds sent them down and suddenly at 500 feet, they found themselves over the Scharnhorst. "That shook me", admitted Mac. And for half an hour they circled the heavily armed battleship at only a distance of 600 yards in the low cloud. "What amazed me," said Macdonald, "was that for all the flak that was thrown at us, we were not hit once." They were unable to drop their heavy bombs from that height so they took them home where the pilot made a wizard landing in spite of the bomb-load.

Macdonald has a healthy respect for the Ruhr anti-aircraft gunners. "They're good shots," he said. On one occasion, when caught in searchlights, the pilot took them around in so many circles, they became dizzy and eventually wound up on the wrong side of the searchlight belt and had to come through it again to escape. "The flak was so thick," said Macdonald, "I could hear it, smell it, and practically taste it." They had not been long out of the searchlights when a Ju.88 was spotted off the port beam. The tail-gunner, Flight Sergeant Louis Lavallee, of Edmonton, blazed away at it, and apparently with good effort because the Junkers was last seen in a dive through the clouds.

Lavallee flew with Macdonald on a number of trips and the Fort William wireless operator was full of praise for the gingery-haired lad from Edmonton. "Lavallee was excitable on the ground," said "Mac", but in the air he was as cool as ice."

On the Poissy raid, the crew got caught in the searchlights. Lavallee was front gunner on this trip and an Australian known intimately as “Digger” occupied the rear turret. The flak was terrific, although the gun concentration was not heavy.

Suddenly things began to happen. The controls jammed and the aircraft began to lose height steadily. The intercom was jammed with a weird combination of Cookney, Canadian, French Canadian, and Welsh and Australian accents, advising the pilot to “pull her out in a hurry”. Then, all at once, an exceptionally big piece of flak tore through the rear turret. They yelled to their Aussie rear-gunner and got no answer. Macdonald heard Lavallee yell, “My God, they got my pal. I don’t give a damn if my grandmother is in Paris.” Immediately Macdonald heard the slatter of Lavallee’s guns and one of the searchlights blinked out.

In the meantime, the dive of the aircraft became more marked and the crew began to get “that feeling”. Lavallee was coolly looking around for a place to land and pointed out a space between two houses, even giving the colors to the pilot. At this point, Macdonald asked, “What about the bombs?” Lavallee’s voice answered, “We can’t let them go here; we’ll kill a lot Frenchmen”. Somebody else suggested, “Dump them in the river?” The navigator chimed in plaintively, “Where the hell is the river?”

However, they found it and unloaded their bombs. At 50 feet over the ground, the pilot, by straining mightily at the controls, managed to level out. When they got home, they counted 150 holes in the tail assembly. And “Digger” was alright. He was spattered with oil and his turret was shot up, but he was unscratched. He had not answered because the big piece of flak, which had singed his eyebrows, had left him momentarily speechless.

Flight Sergeant Macdonald is proud of his Scottish ancestry. He spells his name with the small “d” of the Highland folk. Both he and his brother Ian, who is with an RCAF bomber squadron overseas, are accomplished pipers. Many of the boys who spent the spring of 1941 at Debert will remember the route marches through the red mud behind his skirling bagpipes. When visiting many of his relatives up in Stornaway, in the Hebrides, Donald Macdonald takes his pipes with him and plays the tunes his ancestors loved. At present he is an instructor at an O.T.U.

This officer has completed his first tour of 31 sorties as Air Bomber. Included in the many heavily defended targets which he has attacked are Nuremburg, Munich (2), Bremen, Hamburg and the Tirpitz. He has attacked many of the daylight precision targets often in the face of very heavy opposition. He took part in the second attack on the battleship Tirpitz and despite the difficulties of smoke and cloud successfully pressed home his attack.

Flying Officer MacDonald's crew have frequently been called upon to find a bombing wind in the vicinity of the target, a task requiring considerable skill and upon which the whole success of the attack depends. His aircraft has on these occasions been one of a specially picked force, and the success of many of the attacks carried out by his squadron have been attributable in a large measure to the accuracy of the winds found.

At all times he has taken the greatest care to bomb accurately and has frequently made several runs over precision targets, when smoke or cloud have obscured his aim. On occasions, rather than bomb inaccurately, he has returned with his bomb load.

Flying Officer MacDonald has always shown the greatest keenness to operate and has proved himself to be a skilful member of a sound operational crew. By his unconquerable spirit of determination to achieve his objective he has played a large part in the outstanding successes of his squadron.

MacDONALD, F/L Douglas Allister (J14691) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.630 Squadron - Award effective 28 December 1943 as per London Gazette dated 7 January 1944 and AFRO 410/44 dated 25 February 1944. Born 23 September 1923 in Ogema, Saskatchewan; home in Rockglen, Saskatchewan; enlisted Regina, 23 September 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.12 SFTS, 4 January 1942. To No.7 ITS, 4 February 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 11 April 1942; posted that date to No.16 EFTS; to No.15 SFTS, 20 June 1942; graduated and commissioned 9 October 1942. To "Y" Depot, 25 October 1942; to RAF overseas, 27 October 1942. Disembarked in United Kingdom, 5 November 1942. To No.19 (Pilots) AFU, 16 November 1942. While there attached to No.1533 Beam Approach Training Flight, 11-16 January 1943. To No.16 OTU, 19 January 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 9 April 1943. To No.1660 Conversion Unit, 4 May 1943. To No.619 Squadron, 15 June 1943. To No.630 Squadron, 15 November 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 December 1944. Missing, presumed dead, 2 January 1944 (No.630 Squadron, Lancaster JB532). Presented to next-of-kin, 28 February 1946.

Flight Lieutenant MacDonald is a highly skilled and most determined pilot, who has taken part in very many attacks on targets important to the enemy's war effort. He has displayed a high degree of courage and resolution in pressing home his attacks, qualities which have earned him much success. One night in November 1943, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald piloted an aircraft detailed to attack a target in central Germany. Before reaching the target one engine of his aircraft became useless. Despite this, and in the face of extremely trying weather, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald completed his task successfully. His achievement was most commendable.

Notes: At No.7 ITS he placed 51st in a class of 96 and described as "Good clean cut type. Appears to be very slow in absorbing instruction. A plugger who should show up well."

At No.16 EFTS he placed 28th in a class of 47. Flew Tiger Moths (44.00 day dual, 43.40 day solo, 4.05 night dual, plus ten hours in Link. "Good average pilot. Instrument flying rough. Ability, industrious, attentive. Conduct excellent."

At No.15 SFTS, flew Cranes (54.00 day dual, 83.15 day solo, 8.25 night dual, 10.15 night solo). This included formation flying (5.30). "An above average pilot with a good knowledge of flying and plenty of common sense." Placed 20th in a class of 59.

At No.19 (Pilots) AFU, the course was 18 November 1942 to 9 January 1943. Flew Oxford aircraft (5.45 day dual to first day solo, 24.25 total day dual, 25.50 day solo, 2.45 night dual to first night solo, total 4.35 night dual, 10.50 night solo. Of this, 2.25 was formation and 8.15 on instruments. Also logged 10.30 in Link. Flying Tests in General Flying (200/400), Applied Flying (90/200), Instrument Flying (150/250), Night Flying (50/100) and Link (35/50). His character was graded as 10/100 and the Commanding Officer, W/C F.L. Sayers, wrote a scathing assessment: "His flying is not consistent - sometimes good but often mediocre - because he does not think. Lacks initiative. Recommended for fighters - not because he is particularly suitable, but because he has not the strength of character necessary to captain a crew."

This contrasted sharply with the assessment from No.16 OTU (course lasting 19 January to 17 April 1943). He flew Wellingtons (3.30 day dual to first day solo, 18.20 total day dual, 31.30 day solo, 7.45 night dual to first night solo, 10.45 total night dual, 39.25 night solo, including 3.45 on instruments and an added 20 hours in Link. Ground Examinations in Airmanship (189/300), Armament (240/300), Meteorology (55/100), Navigation (144/200) and Signals (69/100). Flying Tests were in General Flying (330/400), Applied Flying (150/200), Instrument Flying (190/250), Night Flying (75/100) and Link (35/50). The character assessment was much more generous - 70/100. S/L F.R. Jeffs wrote, "A good reliable officer. A good average pilot who is keen to learn. Instrument flying above the average. Pilot, average. Recommended for heavy bombers. Nominated as captain. Recommended for Pathfinder Force." This last sentence is emphasized in red type,

The website "Lost Bombers" provides the following. Lancaster JB532, No.630 Squadron (LE-X), target Berlin, 1-2 January 1944. Aircraft was delivered to No.61 Squadron on 27 October 1943 but saw no operations with that unit. It joined No.630 Squadron in November 1943 and was lost on its first operation. When lost it had a total of 74 hours. Airborne at 2355 hours, 1 January 1944 from East Kirkby. Homebound, hit by flak which blew one engine from its frame. The Lancaster dived steeply and crashed at Grossbeuthen, 4 km north-northwest of Trebbin. Crew (all killed) were F/L D.A.MacDonald, DFC, RCAF; S/L K.F.Vare AFC (New Zealander and second pilot); Sergeant R.F.Smole, MID; F/O N.E.Westergaard, DFC; Flight Sergeant W.R.Turnbull; Sergeant W.R.Tyrie, DFM; Flight Sergeant W.Jenkins; Flight Sergeant W.J.Roche, RAAF.

MacDONALD, LAC Gerald William (R200388) - British Empire Medal - No.1 Flight Engineer School - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born at Bruce Mines, Ontario, 10 October 1917 (RCAF press release announcing award). Educated in Timmins including Staaker's Art School; employed by McIntyre Porcupine Mines at Schumacher, Ontario. Enlisted in North Bay, 28 January 1943 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To Technical Training School, 18 March 1943. Promoted AC1, 11 August 1943. To No.9 Repair Depot, 12 September 1943. Promoted LAC, 1 January 1944. To No.14 SFTS, 30 June 1944. To No.1 Flight Engineer School, 31 March 1945. To Release Centre, 17 February 1946. Released 22 February 1946. Instrument Mechanic. Medal sent by registered mail, 15 April 1946.

Leading Aircraftman MacDonald, in company with a group of skilled technicians, devoted many hours of his normal leisure time to the design, manufacture, test and improvement of certain electrical and instrument training devices needed for flight engineer instruction. The "mock-ups", built mainly from scrap material, filled a vital need during the earlier days of flight engineer training, when no spare parts for heavy bomber types existed in Canada. Leading Aircraftman MacDonald's work was motivated, not from any thought of reward but from a deeply rooted sense of duty and pride of accomplishment in doing his best to promote efficiency in his section. His devotion to duty and keen interest and application have contributed greatly to the training of flight engineers.

MACDONALD, F/L Gordon Webster (J15099) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.82 Squadron - Award effective 11 February 1944 as per London Gazette dated 18 February 1944 and AFRO 644/44 dated 24 March 1944. Born Wanham, Alberta, 3 July 1921; home there; enlisted in Edmonton, 27 September 1940. To No.2 ITS, 14 October 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 2 November 1940; to No.8 EFTS, 3 November 1940; to No.4 SFTS, 22 December 1940; graduated and promoted Sergeant on 17 March 1941. Commissioned 11 December 17 March 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 27 March 1941. Overseas as of 4 April 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 11 December 1943. Repatriated 3 November 1944. Released 14 August 1945. Presented 13 November 1948. Photo PL-34099 shows him with P/O R.H. Birkenes, DFC. Photo PL-18326 on right with F/O John H. Stevenson

This officer has taken part in operations both in the European and Middle East theatres of war. On one occasion, when participating in a low level shipping attack, the port engine of his aircraft was hit by anti-aircraft fire and the propeller fell off. Nevertheless, with great determination, he pressed home the attack and flew the damaged bomber safely back to base on one engine. During the last six months Flight Lieutenant Macdonald has flown on a large number of bombing attacks against the Japanese in Burma. He has often led the formation in adverse weather and, by his resolution, zeal and courage, has contributed in no small measure to the successes achieved by his squadron.

MacDONALD, F/O Harold Martyn (J21612) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.630 Squadron - Award effective 11 April 1944 as per London Gazette dated 21 April 1944 and AFRO 1075/44 dated 19 May 1944. Born 8 February 1923 in Drumheller, Alberta; raised there; home in West Vancouver. He was studying Commerce at University of British Columbia when Pearl Harbour was bombed. Enlisted in Vancouver, 13 January 1942. To No.15 SFTS (guard duty), 27 March 1942. To No.2 ITS, 9 May 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 1 August 1942; to No.5 BGS, 28 August 1942; to No.2 AOS, 29 October 1942; graduated and commissioned, 4 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, 27 December 1942. His obituary notice recalled his trio to Halifax as one that "whistled him from boyhood to Armageddon". To RAF overseas, 4 January 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 4 June 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 4 December 1944. Flew 30 sorties. Repatriated 23 January 1945. Released 9 March 1945. Returned to Vancouver after the war; completed his B.Comm. at UBC, and founded McDonald Fuels in Haney. During this time, he was active in many service organizations, including the Canadian Mental Health Association, the YMCA, Scouts Canada, The John Howard Society and the Burnaby Family Life Institute. His enthusiasm for the idealist politics of the early Sixties led him to run as a candidate in the Fraser Valley for the Federal Liberals under Lester Pearson in 1965. He later moved to West Vancouver with his children and worked as a broker for Pemberton Securities. Haunted by the demons of war and the call for atonement, Harold entered the Vancouver School of Theology where he graduated with his MDiv in 1976. After ordination, he ministered in Westlock, Alberta, at West Burnaby United, the Longhouse Council of Native Ministry, and as Chaplain of Central City Mission and the Aircrew Association. Later, he carried on a "funeral ministry" for those with no Church connections. Felled by a debilitating stroke in 1997. DFC presented 29 July 1947. Died in North Vancouver, 11 July 2003. Photo PL-35130 is a portrait. No citation other than "...completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty"

Flight Lieutenant MacDonald has completed a large number of successful attacks against the heaviest and most hotly defended targets. He has invariably returned with clockwork regularity having successfully bombed his target. On several occasions recently he has operated in a most important role showing the same skill and success. In recognition, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald is recommended for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This was duly endorsed by the Officer Commanding, Station Wyton (22 March 1943) and by the Air Officer Commanding, No.8 Group (28 March 1943).

The website "Lost Bombers" describes an incident in his career: 13/14 July 1942, Halifax W7761 (TL-N), target Duisburg. This was one of two No.35 Squadron Halifaxes lost on this operation (the other was W1154). It was airborne at 0012 hours, 14 July 1942 from Linton-on-Ouse. Over Duisburg the bomb release mechanism failed and the Halifax returned with its two 4,000lb bomb load intact. All attempts to jettison failed and the aircraft was abandoned at 0500 near Harrogate. Left to its own devices, the Halifax rolled onto its back, caught fire and crashed 0520 at Burn Bridge, Bracckenthwaite near Knaresborough, Yorkshire. In the last few seconds before impact, the bomb load released and exploded approximately one mile from the crash site. No injuries reported. Crew consisted of Sergeant H.B.MacDonald RCAF, P/O Baker, Sergeant Whitter, Sergeant Ely, P/O Freedman and Sergeant Jones.

Notes: Keenly interested in flying; in applying to enlist stated he had built about 50 model airplanes, and that he drew and painted them. "It has always been my ambition to make flying my career, above all to become a pilot in the air force. So far this has been denied, but I hope to become a pilot and help do my duty as a Canadian."

Flying incident, 22 June 1942, No.35 Squadron, Linton-on-Ouse. Halifax II, serial W1159, non-operational, day. Repairable at unit. "The accident occurred while making a cross wind landing. I corrected for the drift by yawing into wind and touched down on the right hand edge of runway. Immediately aircraft started to swing to port; I corrected, probably overcorrected and the starboard wheel got off the runway into soft ground, Immediately aircraft swung to starboard and headed for some concrete drain pipes. The brakes were useless as far as swinging the aircraft round and I did not want to use the engines because I was too near the concrete drain pipes, so I cut the petrol and switches. The aircraft's starboard wheel hit concrete pipe or pot hole and the aircraft ground looped and came to rest." Assessed as an error in judgement due to inexperience.

Incident, 31 July/1 August 1942, Halifax W1019, operation to Dusseldorf. The temperature of port inner engine steadily increased until 120 degrees registered on return flight, He feathered the engine and returned on three engines. Weather was dirty to he diverted to Cottesmore where visibility was good, Landed well; on examination the header tank was found empty of glycol due to leak in the radiator.

Incident, 5 October 1942, Halifax DT489, operational flight. Encountered severe electrical thunder storm. A flash of lightning blinded the Engineer, causing him so much pain that the operation was abandoned. Only superficial damage to aeroplane, Crew (all RAF) were 1331106 Sergeant R.E. Wilkes (second pilot, 120393 P/O J. Baker (navigator), 1059518 Sergeant E. Whitter (WOP/AG), 1335515 Sergeant J.R. Ely (AG), 1270179 Sergeant G. Carpenter (tail gunner) and 610981 Sergeant J.E. Jones (flight engineer, injured).

Application for Operational Wing dated 24 December 1943 stated he had flown 45 sorties, 18 January 1942 to 25 July 1943 (873 hours 35 minutes to date, operational and non-operational).

Training: Interviewed in Halifax, 18 October 1940 - "Good type for aircrew. Strongly recommended for pilot."

Course at No.1 Initial Training School was 18 January to 20 February 1941. Courses in Mathematics (70/100), Armament, practical and oral (86/100), Drill (81/100), Law and Discipline (54/60), Hygiene and Sanitation (47/40) and Signals (93/100). Placed 48th in a class of 112. "Excellent pilot type. Enthused, keen and eager. This airman is very serious and conscientious. Instills a high degree of confidence and was very interested in his work."

Course at No.11 EFTS was 22 February to 22 April 1941. Fleet Finch aircraft - 28 hours 55 minutes dual (excluding instrument dual), 40.10 solo, 6.30 instrument flying plus 10.25 in Link Trainer. "When this man wants to, he is really good, but at other times he seem to lose all interest in his flying. At the start he was very cocky but this attitude disappeared gradually. Due to his general deportment, this man is recommended for a commission. He should be a good leader." (P.M. Boisvert, Chief Flying Instructor). Ground school marks were in Airmanship (137/200), Airframes (82/100), Aero Engines (75/100), Signals, practical (100/100), Theory of Flight (80/100), Air Navigation (171/200), Armament, oral (178/200), Qualities as Officer (195/200). Placed tenth in a class of 25. "Exceptional ability. Very industrious and co-operative. Very likeable personality. Excellent officer material."

Course at No.8 SFTS was 4 May to 27 July 1941. Avro Anson aircraft - 47.20 day dual, 38.35 day solo, 4.25 night dual, 5.35 night solo. Flew 22.20 on instruments and logged 20 hours in Link. "Tends to be nervous and rough on control. Had difficulty with the Anson and his progress has been slow but steady." Ground courses in Airmanship and Maintenance (131/200), Armament, written (76/100), Armament, practical (75/100), Navigation and Meteorology (116/200), Signals, written (87/100), Signals, practical (48/5/50). Placed 21st in a class of 40. "Very eager and willing but will probably have difficulty with a new type of aircraft."

In No.35 Conversion Flight, 6-18 June 1942, flew 9.30 day dual, 10.05 day solo, 1.45 night dual, 1.50 night solo, assessed "Average".

Assessments: "Flight Lieutenant Macdonald has carried out 43 operational sorties as captain of aircraft and possesses average ability as a pilot and above average ability as Deputy Flight Commander " (W/C D.F.E. Dean, 31 July 1943. He had then flown 866 hours 42 minutes, 158.37 in previous six months.) To this, G/C R.V. Robinson adds, "An average Captain and Officer."

"An average pilot who has no outstanding qualities or faults." (W/C D.F.E. Dean, 2 September 1943 when he had flown 908 hours, 121 in previous six months).

"Has set a high standard of ability and his organizing power is outstanding. Is a good mixer and a most popular officer." (S/L R.F. Robinson, 12 March 1944).

"Cannot be employed on operational duties outside of Canada, having completed two operational tours outside of Canada." (memo dated 20 March 1944, G/C T.C. Macfarlane, DPC)

"Past experience on two operational tours should qualify this officer for Flight Commander duties in a heavy bomber unit. When this officer reported from overseas in April 1944, he was obviously feeling the strain of flying as a result of two operational tours just completed, during which he was awarded the DFC. In addition, he has qualified for the Pathfinder Badge. F/L Macdonald now shows marked benefit from his change of environment and is rapidly settling down to staff duties. He is a conscientious, keen and loyal type who has a pleasant personality, is popular with his messmates and temperate in habits. I consider this officer is suitable in every respect for promotion to Acting Squadron Leader." (G/C R. Halley, Western Ait Command Headquarters, 5 July 1944).

Recommended for promotion to Acting Squadron Leader and appointment as instructor at a Heavy Bomber OTU - "A keen, capable and loyal officer who is making progress on staff duties. Has distinguished himself on operations overseas and awarded the DFC and Pathfinder badge." (G/C R. Halley, Western Ait Command Headquarters, 10 October 1944).

MacDONALD, F/L Harry Deane (J15467) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.403 Squadron - Award effective 25 May 1943 as per London Gazette dated 4 June 1943 and AFRO 1187/43 dated 25 June 1943. Born in Toronto, 16 November 1919. Attended Bala Avenue Public School, 1927-1932 and York memorial Collegiate, 1932 to 1936. In applying for his commissioned he stated that he had been at "University of Chicago", 1936 to 1938, with courses listed as "meat packing". This may have been a joke, for he was thereafter employed as a meat packer by Canada Packers, 1936 to 1940. Enlisted in Toronto, 16 August 1940 and posted to No.1

Manning Depot. To No.3 EFTS, London, 31 August 1940 (guard duty). To No.1 ITS, Toronto, 28 November 1940; graduated and promoted LAC on 3 January 1941; to No.11 EFTS, Cap de la Madeleine, 4 January 1941; to No.4 Manning Depot, Quebec, 21 February 1941; to No.1 SFTS, Camp Borden, 6 March 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 16 May 1941. To Halifax, 17 May 1941. Embarked from Halifax, 17 June 1941. Arrived in UK, 17 July 1941. Further trained at Nos.61 and 54 OTU. No.401 Squadron, 30 October 1941 to 1 May 1942. Commissioned on 1 May 1942. At No.53 OTU, 1 May to 6 December 1942 (promoted Flying Officer, 1 November 1942). No.402 Squadron, 20-23 December 1942 and No.401 Squadron, 24 December 1942 to 16 August 1943. Returned to Canada, 25 August 1943 but back in UK, 16 October 1943 (see note below in assessments). To No.401 Squadron on 28 October 1943 (promoted Flight Lieutenant that date); killed in action 30 November 1943 (Spitfire MJ115). Returning from Ramrod, over North Sea (30 miles from Bradwell Bay). Engine cut and aircraft glided, then dived into water; he may have been rolling the aircraft prior to baling out but did not get out before aircraft went into dive. Conjecture was that the drop tank had ceased functioning. When killed he was reported to have flown 850 hours 30 minutes (all types) and 126 hours on Spitfires (which seems rather low). Biography appears in Fall 1971 issue of the Journal of the Canadian Aviation Historical Society. DFC and Bar sent to wife, 17 March 1947. Credited with the following victories: 12 February 1942, one Bf.109 damaged (Spitfire AA973); 20 January 1943, two FW.190s damaged (BS172); 8 March 1943, one FW.190 destroyed (BS172); 3 April 1943, one FW.190 destroyed (BS534); 3 April 1943, one FW.190 destroyed (BS534); 13 May 1943, one Bf.109 damaged (BS534); 14 May 1943, one Bf.109 destroyed (BS534); 15 May 1943, one Bf.109 destroyed plus one Bf.109 damaged (BS534); 1 June 1943, one Bf.109 destroyed (joint squadron victory, BS534); 15 June 1943, one FW.190 probably destroyed (BS534); 24 June 1943, one FW.190 destroyed (BS288); 6 July 1944, one Bf.109 destroyed (MA575); 15 July 1944, one Bf.109 destroyed (MA575, shared with another pilot). RCAF photo PL-15952 (ex UK-3809 dated 11 May 1943) is captioned as follows: "You can only see one of the swastikas between the dog and the pilot, but this Toronto man has three enemy aircraft destroyed. It is F/L H.D. MacDonaldm 30 Craydon Avenue, and his rivalry with F/L H.D. Godefroy, who also lives in Toronto at 120 Oriole Parkway, is a matter of considerable interest in the squadron. At the moment each have three to their credit. That is the crest of his school, York Memoriak, on the cowling, and the dog belongs to another Wolf Squadron pilot, P/O W.T. Lane of 250 Brady Street, Sudbury." Photo PL-15955 (ex UK-2812 dated 11 May 1943) shows F/L S.F. Carr, Brooks, Alberta (on right, squadron medical officer) having a laugh with F/L H.D. MacDonald, "taking in a spot of spring sunshine while he battles the 'doc' in a stiff workout on the chess board." Photo PL-19500 is a studio portrait; PL-19226 with High Godefroy; PL-19227 seated in Spitfire "York Memorial".

This officer, who has participated in a very large number of sorties, is an excellent flight commander. In addition to destroying five enemy aircraft, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald has damaged three locomotives and executed vigorous attacks on other targets. He has invariably displayed outstanding keenness.

MacDONALD, F/L Harry Deane (J15467) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.403 Squadron - Award effective 26 August 1943 as per London Gazette dated 3 September 1943 and AFRO 2049/43 dated 8 October 1943.

Flight Lieutenant MacDonald, acting as deputy squadron commander, has destroyed three enemy aircraft and damaged others since being awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. He has led the squadron on ten occasions and the wing once and displayed fine leadership and gallantry. He has destroyed at least eight enemy aircraft.

Training reports state that at ITS he was "Fairly good pilot material. Sincere and keen. Will have to work hard on ground subjects. Conscientious, determined and capable of hard work. Cheerful with plenty of the right spirit." The course itself was described as from 29 November 1940 to 4 January 1941 and he placed 64th in a class of 75.

At EFTS he logged 26 hours 40 minutes dual and 46 hours 30 minutes solo on Fleet Finches plus five hours in Link trainer. Described as "Fearless. Very keen and cheerful. Slightly cocky. Aerobatics not too good but improving slowly, and he likes them. He likes doing his flying right. Very hard worker. He placed 23rd in a class of 34 but was not yet considered suitable for a commission.

At SFTS he was less impressive. He trained on Yales (11.05 day dual, 12.40 day solo) and Harvards (27.10 day dual, 24.10 day solo, 9.15 night dual, 55 minutes night solo) with 14.55 on instruments. He was graded as an "average pilot", not trying hard in ground subjects, and placed 49th in a class of 50.

Assessments are interesting. On 11 December 1942, while at No.53 OTU, W/C P.H. Hamley wrote, "Showed keenness in his duty as instructor and as a pilot was above average". At that time he had flown 510 hours (168 in previous six months).

On 12 January 1943, W/C K.L.B. Hodson wrote, "Improves his knowledge if not too much effort. Usually can count upon his loyalty. This man talks too much and too loudly. Recommend that he keep his commission."

On 24 July 1943, S/L G. Scranton, writing on behalf of A/C F.G. Wait, wrote:

This officer has served in the 403 Squadron overseas. He is a most gallant and courageous fighter pilot and as Flight Commander he sets a high standard.

Recently he has been involved in several extremely strenuous combats with the enemy and although this has not affected his morale he appears to be worried by domestic news from Canada. In view of this officer's record at this squadron it is suggested that he be granted leave of absence to return to Canada to settle his private affairs. It is requested that on return to United Kingdom he be returned to the Canadian Spitfire IC Wing and be posted supernumerary. He is regarded here as an extremely promising Spitfire IX Squadron Commander. The case of this officer has been reviewed by Headquarters and arrangements have been made for him to return to Canada for one month after which he will return for full time duty in the United Kingdom.

On 24 September 1943, W/C H.C. Godefroy wrote, "He is a very good leader, shy with strangers, very loyal and has good common sense. This pilot would be a great asset to any Spitfire IX Wing as a Flight Commander or Squadron Commander." He had then flown 833 hours 15 minutes.

MacDONALD, F/L Harvey William (J14099) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.429 Squadron - Award effective 30 March 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 721/45 dated 27 April 1945. Born 8 February 1921 in Hamilton, Ontario; home there; enlisted there 19 September 1941. Granted Leave Without Pay until 21 October 1941 when posted to No.1 Manning Depot. Posted elsewhere, 10 November 1941; to No.6 ITS, 4 January 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 27 February 1942; to No.20 EFTS, 14 March 1942; graduated 22 May 1942 posted next day to No.16 SFTS; graduated and commissioned 11 September 1942. To No.2 Flying Instructor School, 1 October 1942. To No.9 SFTS, 6 December 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 May 1943. To "Y" Depot, 31 January 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 14 February 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 11 September 1944. Repatriated 13 June 1945. Released 4 September 1945. DFC presented 22 June 1949. Postwar doctor; died in Willowdale, Ontario, 20 January 2000. RCAF photo PL-42912 (ex UK-19549 dated 30 March 1945) is captioned as follows: "Halfway through his first tour of operations, F/L H.W. MacDonald, Toronto, a pilot with the Bison squadron of the RCAF Bomber Group, has been awarded an immediate DFC. On one of his recent attacks on Wanne Eickel his mid-upper gunner, FS W.H. Magill, also of Toronto, claimed destruction of an unidentified enemy fighter." Photo PL-42959 (ex-UK-19418) of 19 March 1945 shows F/L H.W. MacDonald (pilot, Toronto) and FS W.H. Magill (Toronto). RCAF photo PL-44622 (ex UK-22046 dated 7 June 1945) shows him; caption says he wore his father's First World War wings while on operations.

This officer has completed very many sorties involving attacks against various enemy targets. A highly efficient pilot and a resourceful captain, this officer has shown the greatest determination to complete his missions successfully, setting a most praiseworthy example.

DHH file 181.009 D.1502 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20599) has the original recommendation drafted 9 February 1945 by S/L H.V. Peterson; he had flown 15 sorties (104 hours 45 minutes):

On the night of 7/8 February 1945, this officer was detailed to attack Goch. Fourteen minutes after setting course his starboard outer engine failed owing to a mechanical failure and it was necessary to feather the propellor. Showing great determination, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald continued on his mission and by skillful airmanship kept his allotted height and arrived on time. Over the target area he was instructed by the Master Bomber to abandon his mission and return to base. He therefore returned to base and executed a masterly landing with a full bomb load.

This officer has taken part in 15 operations against the enemy and has been captain of a crew specially selected for mining sorties. He has at all times shown himself to be a skillful pilot who is very keen on his work and is possessed of great determination to press on to his target and complete his mission in spite of all difficulties.

It is considered that this officer's fine operational record and determination, coupled with his fine offensive spirit, fully merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Reference DHH file 181.009 D.2619 , Library and Archives RG.24 Volume 20628. On 29 May 1945 W/C E.H. Evans, No.429 Squadron, recommended him for the Air Force Cross. He was described as having flown 398 non-operational hours (instructing) in the previous six months. Not approved but submission transcribed for the historical record:

This officer has completed over 900 hours as a flying instructor in the BCATP. This instructing was carried out over a period of 14 months.

This officer completed many of his instructing hours over a short period due to shortage of Instructors and Staff. These duties, although under fatigue and pressure were performed in the highest possible manner. The calibre of pilots who were under S/L MacDonald have proven to be above average.

While stationed at No.9 SFTS, Centralia, and pilot of an Anson aircraft, the port engine of his aircraft failed while at a height of 100 feet. He carried out a circuit and pumped wheels down by hand and made a successful landing. His judgement and airmanship was responsible for the safe landing of the aircraft and eliminated any possible casualties.

Throughout this officer's service as an instructor and now as a Flight Commander, he has proven himself skilful and an inspiration to personnel under his command.

In view of this officer's outstanding record as an Instructor, operational pilot and Flight Commander, I most strongly recommend he be awarded the Air Force Cross.

MacDONALD, S/L Jack Thorold (J15821) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.406 Squadron - Award effective 23 February 1945 as per London Gazette dated 2 March 1945 and AFRO 802/45 dated 11 May 1945. Born 13 August 1916 in Montreal; home in Valois, Quebec; enlisted in Montreal, 24 August 1940. To No.1 ITS, 15 November 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 9 December 1940; posted 10 December 1940 to No.11 EFTS; graduated 28 January 1941 and posted that date to No.2 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 10 April 1941; to Embarkation Depot, 23 April 1941; to RAF overseas, 24 April 1941. Commissioned 17 August 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 17 February 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 14 December 1943. Promoted Squadron Leader, 21 December 1943. Repatriated 28 October 1944. To Northwest Air Command, 7 December 1944. To Suffield, 23 January 1945. To No.164 (Transport) Squadron, 7 June 1945. To Release Centre, 16 September 1945. Retired, 1 October 1945. Re-engaged for Interim Force, 27 June 1946 and posted to Eastern Air Command on 10 November 1946. To Goose Bay, 14 November 1946. To Eastern Air Command, 5 January 1947. Released 12 June 1947. DFC presented in Montreal, 25 November 1949.

Squadron Leader MacDonald has completed two tours of operational duty during which his flight has achieved many successes under his excellent leadership. He has destroyed five trains and three vehicles in addition to the probable destruction of one enemy aircraft. In June 1944, during an attack against an armoured car, his aircraft was severely damaged. Undaunted, Squadron Leader MacDonald pressed home his attack and set the vehicle on fire. Despite bad weather he succeeded in flying his crippled aircraft safely back to base. Squadron Leader MacDonald's fine fighting spirit, courage and devotion to duty at all times have been most praiseworthy.

MacDONALD, F/L John Alexander (J14526) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - No.13 SFTS - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born 26 January 1914. Home in Montreal; enlisted there 11 September 1941 and posted to No.6A Manning Depot. To No.12 Equipment Depot, 17 October 1941. To No.3 ITS, 5 January 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 28 February 1942 but not posted to No.11 EFTS until 14 March 1942; to No.13 SFTS, 6 June 1942; graduated and commissioned, 25 September 1942. To No.1 Flying Instructor School, 24 October 1942. To No.13 SFTS, 12 December 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 April 1943. To No.2 SFTS, 14 February 1944. To No.13 SFTS again, 25 February 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 June 1944. To Release Centre, 28 May 1945; released 14 June 1945. Certificate sent 5 July 1945.

This officer has been employed as a flying instructor and flight commander at this unit for about two years. He has devoted himself to his duty in a manner above the average; his efforts and example have contributed very largely to the efficient operation of the training wing.

MacDONALD, W/C John Kennedy Francis (C890) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.6 Group (now No.432 Squadron) - Award effective 19 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 471/45 dated 16 March 1945. Born 5 January 1917 in Antigonish, Nova Scotia; home there. An engineering student when he enlisted and was commissioned in Halifax, 7 November 1938. Trained at Trenton and Camp Borden, 1938-1939. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, November 1939 (Canteen Officer). On course at Trenton, February to May 1940. With No.8 (BR) Squadron, May 1940 to December 1942 holding down such diverse tasks as Flight Training Officer, Photo Officer, and detachment commander. During this time he rose from Flying Officer to Squadron Leader. To No.149 (TB) Squadron, December 1942. To Halifax, May 1943, reporting in UK, June 1943. Further trained at No.18 (P) AFU (Oxfords, 1 October 1943 to 1 January 1944), No.23 OTU (Wellingtons, 1 January to 28 February 1944), although his MI.9 report says No.22 OTU, Pershore. With No.1659 HCU (Halifaxes, 28 February to 29 April 1944). Reported to No.432 Squadron, April 1944 to become familiarized with bomber operations, commencing operations on 29 April 1944. To No.432 Squadron as Wing Commander and CO, 30 May 1944. Shot down by night fighter, 26/27 July 1944, evaded, regaining Allied lines on 14 August 1944; returned to UK, 20 August 1944. To No.6 Group Headquarters, September 1944. Although entitled to leave in Canada, he declined this for early return to operations. There being nothing in his escape that prevented this, he was returned to No.432 Squadron, October 1944, continuing on operations until February 1945 when he was appointed Base Operations Officer, No.63 Base, and subsequently CO Station Middleton St.George. To Canada, July 1945. DFC presented 2 November 1946. Remained in postwar RCAF; reverting from Group Captain to Wing Commander. At No.2 Air Command, Winnipeg, November 1945 to March 1947. Attended RCAF Staff College. In September 1947 he was posted to North West Air Command Headquarters, Edmonton (Staff Officer Personnel Administration). To Station Sea Island, May 1949. To NWAC as Staff Officer Selection and Manning, July 1949. To AFHQ (Director, Senior Appointments, Air Force), July 1964 to July 1965. Promoted to Air Commodore and assigned supervisory duties over training. To Training Command Headquarters, Winnipeg, January 1966 (Chief of Staff Support Services); to Maritime Command Headquarters, January 1967 (Commander, Maritime Operation Test and Evaluation Unit); Commenced released proceedings, May 1969; honourably released, 5 January 1970. Died in Antigonish, Nova Scotia, 14 January 1986 as per Airforce Magazine of July-August-September 1986. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 6 November 1953. RCAF photo PL-42511 (ex UK-19620 dated 16 March 1945) is captioned as follows: "Discussing the last RCAF Bomber Group attack on Cologne before the fall of that city are, left to right, W/C Lawrence MacKinnon, DSO, DFC, Ponoka, Alberta, G/C J.K. MacDonald, DFC, Antigonish, Nova Scotia, and Major John Nicholson, London England. MacDonald commands the station from which the Moose and Ghost squadrons fly, while MacKinnon is in charge of operations on the same base. Nicholson, a British army officer though he sports an air gunner badge, and has flown on 13 sorties, is the flak expert of the group. The three have been interviewing fliers at interrogation." RCAF photo PL-44558 (ex UK-21883 dated 2 June 1945) shows him on hand to see 15 Lancasters off to Canada; he is at left; W/C M.W. Gall (Lachute, Quebec) who commanded the flight on right. No citation other than that in air operations he had "displayed outstanding bravery, fortitude and devotion to duty, setting an example of a high order." DHist file 181.009 D.1513 (RG.24 Vol.20600) has recommendation for immediate award dated 19 November 1944 when he had flown 22 sorties (98 hours 55 minutes).

On the night of 25/26 of July 1944, while flying on a bombing mission to Stuttgart, Wing Commander MacDonald and crew were attacked by an enemy fighter over France. Their aircraft was set on fire and the flying controls were so badly damaged that the aircraft was almost unmanageable. Wing Commander MacDonald, by superb pilotage, and despite intense heat from the fire, managed to keep the aircraft on an even keel before his crew took to their parachutes.

Before this operation, Wing Commander MacDonald has flown many sorties against some of the enemy's most heavily defended targets. He has led his squadron in an exemplary manner and has won, by his inspiring leadership, the confidence and great respect of all personnel associated with him.

After skilfully evading the enemy in France, he returned to this country. Waiving aside home leave, he elected to continue with his tour immediately. He is now once again commanding his old squadron and, as its commander, is an inspiring example and the personification of leadership and spirit.

NOTE: Public Record Officer WO 208/3349 has his MI.9 evasion report derived from interview of 20 August 1944. The crew were listed as P/O H. Chamberlain (engineer, baled out), F/L R. Kemley (navigator, baled out), F/O M. Grimsey (bomb aimer, baled out), F/O W. Calderwood (radio operator, baled out), Flight Sergeant B. Justavson (mid-upper gunner, baled out), and F/O Wright (tail gunner, bale out, killed on landing).

Under various headings he reported that he had departed Eastmoor at 2115 hours, 25 July 1944. He came down at Juvrainville at 0030 hours. He disposed of his parachute, harness and Mae West by hiding them in a cornfield. Secret documents and equipment were burned in the aircraft.

I was the pilot of a Halifax aircraft detailed to bomb Stuttgart on the night of 25/26 July 1944. We were routed over the East side of the Normandy bridgehead. When on track approximately ten miles northwest of Chateaudun we were attacked by a Junkers 88 without tracer bullets. The attack came from behind and level 10 degrees to port. The visibility was good. The enemy aircraft scored hits on both port engines and bomb bay. Both engines stopped and I believe one engine was knocked out of its mounting. The aircraft then became uncontrollable and a fire started in the rest position.

I gave the order to abandon aircraft on the intercom approximately a minute after we were hit. I heard the Rear Gunner say "Rear Gunner going", then my plug pulled out and I was unable to replace it. The rest of the forward crew took the necessary action. I was the fourth to leave the aircraft through the front hatch, the Flight Engineer having gone back to leave the aircraft from the rear exit. I left the aircraft successfully at approximately 7,500 feet and saw six other parachutes on my down. I followed my burning aircraft to the ground. It appeared to explode shortly before actually striking the ground. I landed on a ploughed field and severely strained my back. Owing to this injury I was unable to move and lay there for about three hours. As it was getting light I managed to crawl towards a cornfield where I dragged my parachute and Mae West, hiding them in the corner. I lay there until about midday and then succeeded in standing up. A farmer was working nearby and I approached him and disclosed myself. He pointed out a wood about one and one-half miles away and told me to hide myself in it. This I did.

At about 1800 hours he turned up with another Frenchman. They brought food and drink and told me to remain where I was until after dark when one of them would return to fetch me. At 2300 hours the second Welshman returned with a cart and took me to his farm which was about three miles west of Villamblain. Here I slept until 0330 hours when the farmer and myself left by bicycle for the village of Villamblain, my back was now easier. I was taken to a merchant's house who fed me. From this point my journey was arranged for me.

This was supplemented by another report based on an interview of 19 August 1944 and actually written up on 8 October 1944.

The merchant where I was taken on 27 July at Villamblain was about 33 years old, five feet eight inches in height and fair. I do not know his name but his shop was a small general store. He took me to a miller at about 0800 hours who lived just across the street from the church. He was about 45 years old, five feet eight inches in height, ruddy complexion, married with two daughters aged approximately 13 and 17. I do not know his name. He immediately gave me civilian clothes and fed me. About an hour later my mid-upper gunner, Flight Sergeant Justavson, arrived. He was quite fit.

At about 1100 hours a lad of about 20 arrived with instructions for Justavson and myself to accompany him on bicycles to Orgeres. We were taken to the home of M. and Mme. De Laubert, where I found Flying Officer Calderwood, my wireless operator, who had arrived the previous day. On our arrival at the De Laubert's I met Jean Bapiste Lecourier, who I gathered was chief of the local Resistance. About one hour later he took Justavson and myself to the house of Mme. Clare Malaure. These people were butchers and her brother Edouard Pinsard was running the business.

We stayed in this house for about 11 days. Whilst here I was told that arrangements were being made by M. Picourt in Chartres, a chemist who was an ex-French army officer, 44 years old. He told me he belonged to the French Intelligence and since 1940 had been instructed in passing information of value to Allied Intelligence by means of radio. It appears that he is now wanted by the Gestapo. On 9 August he stated he was leaving to take an active part in the organisation of the Maquis in Chartres area. I also gathered from him that the Maquis were very active in sabotaging German troop movements, lines of communication and ammunition dumps in the Chartres area. He was arranging to take us to Paris from where we were to be taken to England by air. The contact in Paris was a Belgian by nationality and was alive on 9 August.

On 2 August another airman was brought in by a gendarme from Orleans. His name was Sergeant Balfour, A., a flight engineer from a Lancaster aircraft shot down on route to Stuttgart on 24/25 July. On the 11th day M. Picourt arrived and told us that the contact through Paris had not materialised. He prepared now to take us near the lines as possible towards Mortagne which he understood was in American hands.

We moved to Chartres on bicycles, Calderwood and myself went ahead with Francois De Laubert (son) as guides, followed by Justavson, Balfour and Picourt starting half an hour later. Reaching a point three miles south of Chartres, we waited for Picourt. When he arrived he took us on to Chartres and Laubert returned to Orgeres. On the outskirts of Chartres we met M. Picourt's wife and two sons. The elder then took us to a house two miles west of Chartres where we stayed the night.

Next morning we were joined by Justavson and Balfour and then M. Picourt arrived at 1100 hours. That afternoon Calderwood and myself, together with an ex-air force officer whose name I do not know, left for Courville-sur-Eure followed an hour later by Picourt, Justavson and Balfour. We rendezvoused immediately west of Courville and the French air force officer returned to Chartres. Picourt returned to Courville and after being away an hour he picked us up where we had waited by the road, bringing with him a M. Chateau, an ex-French army officer who had the Croix de Guerre.

We then moved in the acknowledged method (i.e. separated in groups) to the village of Bille Blon. Here we were taken to the house of M. Chateau where we stayed until picked up by an American reconnaissance patrol on the evening of 14 August. They moved us to Le Mans and up north to St. James approximately 20 kilometres south of Auranches [Avranches ?]. Nowhere could we find any information as to where we should report.

From St. James, which was a fighter air strip, the operations officer on the advice of his intelligence officer sent us to Rennes (A.22 Air Strip). Calderwood succeeded in getting on to an aircraft at A.22 and so on to the UK presumably. I spent two nights at Rennes making enquiries as to where to report. I imagined the interrogation centre would be in London and I was looking for transport to get me there. Eventually I was taken to T.2 airfield northeast of Bayeux where we were directed to IS.9 (WEA) after having spent four days searching for it.

A further report based on "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire lists the crew - W/C J.K.F. MacDonald, F/L H.J.S. Kenley (navigator), F/O W. Calderwood (WOP), P/O O.H. Chamberlain (flight engineer), F/O N.F.C Grimsley or Gumsby, RCAF (bomb aimer), Flight Sergeant B.R. Justason, RCAF (mid-upper gunner, killed) and F/O S.P Wright (rear gunner, killed). The aircraft was Halifax NP687 (QO-A). This had a brief narrative:

All the informants made satisfactory descents and landed in fields near the village of Villainblanc and Jouvraunville, about 10-12 miles southeast of Chateaudun. Six of the nine 500-pound bombs including two long delay bombs carried did not go off in the crash. The pilot warned the French of the danger of these but they disregarded his advice and when the long delay bombs eventually went off six persons were killed.

MacDONALD, F/O John Robert (J16282) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.98 Squadron - Award effective 18 January 1945 as per London Gazette dated 26 January 1945 and AFRO 471/45 dated 16 March 1945. Born 12 November 1917 in Calgary; home there (bank employee); enlisted in Edmonton, 11 September 1940. To No.119 (BR) Squadron for non-flying duty, 8 October 1940. To No.1 ITS, 15 January 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 21 February 1941; posted that date to No.9 EFTS; graduated 22 April and posted to No.1 Manning Depot; to No.9 SFTS, 2 June 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 15 July 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 16 July 1941; to RAF overseas, 14 August 1941. Commissioned 2 December 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 2 June 1943. Flew two tours. Repatriated to Canada, 30 November 1943. To No.34 OTU, 13 December 1943. To "Y" Depot, 31 May 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 16 June 1944. Repatriated again, 27 November 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 2 December 1944. Released 1 March 1945. DFC presented 11 September 1946. RCAF photo PL-31254 (ex UK-13313, 10 August 1944) has the following caption: "F/O Freddie E.G. Carmichael, DFC (RAF 139386), 33-year old navigator of Sudbury, Ontario (left) and F/O J.R. MacDonald (J16282), 28-year old pilot of 10532 126th Street, Edmonton, who have rejoined their old RAF Mitchell medium bomber squadron of the AEF after one tour of operations. They were screened for a while - and MacDonald returned to Canada for a month - after their machine crashed in England returning from a sortie over enemy occupied territory and Carmichael was awarded his DFC for the gallantry and courage he displayed."

Throughout two tours of operational duty Flying Officer MacDonald has displayed outstanding ability and great courage. He has led many attacks against important and well defended targets, pressing home his attacks in the face of heavy enemy opposition. A reliable and courageous pilot, this officer has achieved many successes.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9045 has recommendation dated 10 November 1944 when he had flown 51 ½ sorties (138 hours 45 minutes) with some added details:

This officer has completed two tours of operations, the second of which lasted two months, during which period he carried out 32 ½ operations. Flying Officer MacDonald has led many attacks against important, well defended targets, in the course of which he has always shown great determination in pressing home the attacks, many times in the face of heavy enemy opposition. In view of this officer's outstanding ability and courage I strongly recommend him for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

To this, on 13 November 1944, G/C C.R. Dunlap adds:

This officer, throughout his second tour of operations, was employed on numerous occasions as Formation Leader. His ability to fulfil this role was second to none, and he was untiring in his efforts to achieve accuracy during attack, and to eliminate all possible causes of error. He at all times took a keen and watchful interest in those who flew under his leadership, and through his careful consideration in this direction he established a fine spirit of goodwill and loyalty amongst the members of the Flight. In recognition of his meritorious service I recommend him for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

RCAF Press Release No.2889 dated 5 October 1943, from a F/L Field, reads:

Prompt action, despite injuries, on the part of Flying Officer Freddie E.G. Carmichael, 31-year-old navigator of 189 Worthington Crescent, Sudbury, Ontario, was responsible for the saving from more serious injury, if not the lives, of his skipper and one of the air-gunners of his Mitchell bomber which was forced to crash land in England after a daylight raid on an ammunition dump in enemy occupied France.

A member of the RAF (139386), since he had crossed to Britain before the war to take up employment as a sheet metal worker, Freddie limped back to his station after refusing to spend more than one day in hospital. "The flak got on to us just as we were going in to bomb," he related. "I knew one of our engines had been hit because the aircraft suddenly went out of control. But just as quickly, MacDonald, our skipper, had it in hand again and we carried on. As I was bending over the bomb sight, the flak caught us again and shrapnel smashed through the Perspex nose ripping all around me and tearing off my goggles. But we bombed and then turned for home. As we crossed the Channel losing height, I knew we'd have to crash land. The rear-gunner came up forward and we braced ourselves for the impact. Our first touchdown was slight but the next moment, we were jumping across a small dyke and as soon as we hit for the second time, our port engine and wing burst into flames. The fire was sweeping back over the nose and MacDonald got stuck getting out. His helmet, I remember I noticed, was just beginning to singe. I pushed and pushed and got him clear. One of the gunners had been thrown clear of the aircraft as we crashed but as I walked away from the kite I saw the other gunner struggling to free himself. I rushed back and found his harness had caught. I wrenched him clear and that was that. I only damaged my ankle a little. There was nothing for me to stop in hospital with."

Pilot Officer J.R. MacDonald, the 25-year-old pilot, whose home is at 10532-128th Avenue, Edmonton (J16282), and known to many golfers for he used to coach at the Highlands Golf Club, also returned to the station a day or two afterwards admitting a burnt hand and a little burnt hair. "Freddie certainly got me out of a hot spot", he said. "The flak we caught over the target was very accurate and one hit put out our port engine for good. We were hit again as we were bombing which didn't improve our flying ability. I had hoped to reach base but, being unable to feather the propeller of the port engine, it was dragging us down. As the hydraulics had also been damaged and I could not get the wheels down, a crash landing was inevitable. The ditch we encountered put paid to a good touch down. Anyway, we all got clear save for a few burns and scratches and, in a few weeks our crew will be flying again. Freddie certainly did a good job pushing me clear and getting out the RAF air-gunner."

Flight Lieutenant Macdonald has completed 26 successful sorties, including attacks on Berlin (six times), Dusseldorf, Cologne, Hanover, Stuttgart, Augsburg, Brunswick and Munich. He has been actively engaged in operations for over a year, during the greater part of which time he has filled with outstanding success the appointment of Bombing Leader of the squadron.

He has always shown calm courage in pressing home his attacks and his skill and devotion to duty have been a fine example to his Section. For his unflinching enthusiasm and excellent leadership over a long period of operations, coupled with his skill and courage in the face of the enemy he is recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Public Records Office Air 2/9081 has recommendation dated 18 March 1945 when he had flown 40 sorties (203 hours). NOTE: Sortie sheet not sent from England.

Flight Lieutenant MacDonald has taken part in forty operations against Germany and enemy occupied territory. He has attacked such heavily defended targets as Chemnitz, Magdeburg, Saarbrucken, etc.

He is an excellent pilot who has shown throughout his tour a fine determination to reach his objective and press home his attack. His outstanding ability and strong sense of duty has set a fine example to his fellows. It is considered that his record and achievement merits the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

RCAF photo PL-42056, circa 20 February 1945, has the following caption: "With Canadians flying in the Royal Air Force. Flight Sergeant M.S. McGee, wireless operator, of North Devon, New Brunswick (200 St. Mary's Street), centre above, drives home his argument to four other Canadians flying in the same Halifax bomber squadron. His attentive listeners are, from left, F/L M.W. MacDonald, pilot, of Verdun, Quebec (488-First Avenue), P/O W.J. Law, wireless operator, of Brownsburg, Quebec, Warrant Officer J.D. MacDONALD, F/O Norman Daniel (J86993) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.640 Squadron - Award effective 12 November 1945 as per London Gazette dated 16 November 1945 and AFRO 133/46 dated 8 February 1946. Born 12 January 1916 in London, Ontario; home there (clerk). Formerly in Royal Canadian Artillery. Enlisted in London, Ontario, 14 May 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 SFTS (guard), 9 June 1941. To No.4 WS, 3 August 1941; promoted LAC, 4 September 1941; graduated 14 March 1942 when posted to No.3 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 3 April 1942. To "Y" Depot, 14 April 1942. To RAF overseas, 30 April 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 13 October 1942. Promoted WO2, 13 April 1943. Promoted WO1, 13 October 1943. Commissioned 28 June 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 20 December 1944. Repatriated 8 June 1945. To No.1 Air Command, 20 June 1945. To No.1 WS, 31 July 1945. Retired 1 October 1945. Medal presented 14 June 1949.

Flying Officer Macdonald has completed a large number of operational sorties. Many of his attacks have been made against strongly defended targets such as Cologne, Salerno, Taranto, Magdeburg, Essen and Duisburg. On one occasion during a night attack against Chemnitz his aircraft was damaged severely by anti-aircraft fire which rendered the rear turret and the inter-communication system unserviceable. His aircraft was intercepted by an enemy fighter which made repeated attacks. The fighter was beaten off largely owing to the vigilance and ability of this officer who handled his guns with cool determination and gave clear and concise directions to his captain. Throughout his operational career this officer has displayed a fine fighting spirit and his courage and skill have been worthy of the highest praise.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9137 has recommendation dated 4 May 1945 which has sortie list and a more extended description of his career. He had flown 62 sorties (379 hours 12 minutes). A first tour lasted from 1 January 1943 to 13 August 1943 (29 sorties, 174 hours 20 minutes) but is not itemized on the document. Remaining sorties are listed; those flown 2 October to 18 November were with No.424 Squadron; balance with No.640 Squadron:

No.424 Squadron

18 November 1943 - Salerno railway junctions (6.10)
12 December 1943 - Essen (5.14)
17 December 1943 - Duisburg (6.02)

No.640 Squadron

5 December 1944 - Soest (6.34)
14 January 1945 - Saarbrücken (6.37)
16 January 1945 - Magdeburg (5.34)
28 January 1945 - Stuttgart (7.33)
27 December 1944 - Opladen (5.15)

29 December 1944 - Koblenz (6.01)
2 February 1945 - Wanne Eickel (5.25)
4 February 1945 - Gelsenkirchen (5.15)
13 February 1945 - Bohlen (7.57)
14 February 1945 - Chemnitz (8.21)
27 February 1945 - Mainz (6.25)
3 March 1945 - Kamen (6.14)
5 March 1945 - Chemnitz (8.44)
15 March 1945 - Hagen (5.57)
24 March 1945 - Gladbeck (5.44)

Flying Officer MacDonald has now completed 62 major operations as a Wireless Operator/Air Gunner in Bomber Command. Forty-six of these sorties were flown from Great Britain, and 16 when he was based in North Africa, these latter sorties being made against Italy's most strongly fortified targets such as Bologna, Salerno, Taranto, Ortona, etc.

He has completed 17 sorties with No.640 Squadron, consisting of attacks on such distant and heavily defended targets in Germany as Stuttgart, Chemnitz (twice), Magdeburg, Essen, Duisburg, etc. Throughout his operational career this officer has displayed a fine offensive spirit, and his courage, skill and determination in action have been an inspiration to his squadron.

During a night attack on Chemnitz in February 1945, Flying Officer MacDonald was flying as mid-upper gunner when his Halifax aircraft was severely damaged by an anti-aircraft fire [burst] which rendered the rear turret and intercommunication system unserviceable. Shortly after leaving the target his aircraft was intercepted by an enemy fighter which made repeated attacks, but due entirely to the vigilance and ability of Flying Officer MacDonald, who handled his guns with cool determination and gave clear and concise directions to his captain by means of the emergency system, the fighter was beaten off.

For his fine record of achievement, dogged determination and devotion to duty, it is recommended that Flying Officer MacDonald be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Flying Officer MacDonald has completed 33 sorties against heavily defended targets in Germany, including Stuttgart four times, Konigsberg twice, Munchen Gladbach twice, Darmstadt, Karlsruhe, Bremerhaven, also against targets by day and by night in enemy occupied territory.

On all of these attacks he has shown himself to be an outstanding pilot and captain of aircraft. On two occasions the aircraft in which he was flying was coned by searchlights while on its bombing run up to the target. Nevertheless, Flying Officer MacDonald continued his bombing run and photographic evidence shows that on both occasions he successfully bombed the aiming point. Other photographs show that on nearly every occasion he has successfully bombed the target for which he has been detailed.

This officer has been an outstanding captain of aircraft. He has always taken a keen interest in his crew and has personally supervised their training and physical fitness. Due to his enthusiasm and interest in his crew, Flying Officer MacDonald has completed a very successful tour of operations without any outstanding incidents. His devotion to duty and determination to press home attacks on every occasion have been an inspiration to other captains in the squadron. He is strongly recommended for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Retired 7 November 1945. Medal sent by registered mail.

More than half of the sorties completed by this airman have been raids on the heavily defended industrial centres in the Ruhr area. He has proved himself throughout to be a keen and capable air gunner whose vigilance and devotion to duty have helped not only to ensure the safety of his crew and aircraft but also to achieve success on many sorties by careful and determined attention to his guns. Both before and during operations he has taken pains to ensure that no failure should occur.

MacDONALD, WO2 (now P/O) Robert William (R64946/J37357) - Mention in Despatches - No.10 Squadron (Canada) - Award effective 1 January 1944 as per Canada Gazette and London Gazette of that date and AFRO 113/44 dated 21 January 1944. Born 10 April 1922 at Jacksonville, New Brunswick (RCAF press release 2659 announcing award). Home in Woodstock, New Brunswick; attended Vocational School for one year but had no employment record; enlisted in Moncton, 24 August 1940. Posted to No.1 Manning Depot on enlistment; to No.1 Equipment Depot, Toronto, 10 December 1940; to No.1 WS, Montreal, 5 January 1941. Promoted LAC, 3 February 1941; graduated 26 May 1941 and posted to No.3 BGS, Macdonald. Graduated and promoted Sergeant on 24 June 1941. To No.119 Squadron, Yarmouth, 11 July 1941. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 5 September 1943. Commissioned with effect from that date (APR List of 8 November 1943). Killed in flying accident, Liberator 3701 of No.10 (BR) Squadron, 20 October 1943.

Warrant Officer MacDonald by his great skill and perseverance has established a reputation as an outstanding Wireless Operator. His operational record is extensive and he has at all times displayed keenness, devotion to duty and willingness to work under any and all conditions.

He was recommended for an Air Force Medal on 24 August 1943. The form has "Medal" struck out and "Cross" substituted. At the time he had flown 1,100 hours (258 hours in previous six months), of which 781 operational hours (152 sorties). The original submission by S/L J.M. Young read:

WO2 MacDonald has served as a Wireless Operator and Air Gunner on the East Coast since early 1941. During this time he has participated in many operational sorties. He has succeeded in surmounting numerous odds by his great skill, keenness and perseverance. His untiring efforts to better himself and his fellow members have earned him the praise, admiration and respect of all who contact him.

On 1 September 1943, G/C Clair Annis (Station Commander) wrote:

This Non-Commissioned Officer came to the VLR Squadron from a unit which had been equipped with Bolingbroke, then with Hudson aircraft. In spite of the poor communication equipment of these aircraft he was able to establish for himself a reputation as an outstanding wireless operator. His operational record is extensive and marked by a very high order of keenness, devotion to duty and willingness to work and fly under any or all conditions.

On 10 September 1943, Air Vice-Marshal G.O. Johnson (Air Officer Commanding, Eastern Air Command) wrote, "Recommended for DFC." However, on 11 October 1943 at AFHQ, G/C D.E. MacKell (Director of Personnel) wrote the decision of the Honours in War Committee: "It was not considered that the DFC was warranted. Recommended for Mention in Despatches". Air Marshal L.S. Breadner concurred, 12 October 1943.

MacDONALD, F/L Roderick Wray (J9156) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.418 Squadron - Award effective 20 June 1945 as per London Gazette dated 29 June 1945 and AFRO 1453/45 dated 14 September 1945. Born 4 August 1921 in Victoria but raised in Ottawa; home in Toronto (lab assistant). Formerly in Royal Canadian Engineers. Enlisted in Toronto, 6 November 1940. To Rockcliffe, 15 December 1940. To No.1 ITS, 17 March 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 10 April 1941 when posted to No.1 EFTS; ceased training and posted to Trenton, 13 May 1941; to No.3 AOS, 23 June 1941; graduated 15 September 1941 when posted to No.2 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 27 October 1941; posted next day to No.1 ANS; graduated and commissioned, 25 November 1941. To No.1 AOS, 19 December 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. To "Y" Depot, 25 October 1942. To RAF overseas, 31 October 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 24 November 1943. Repatriated 18 June 1945. To No.14 SFTS, 21 August 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 1 September 1945. Retired 6 October 1945. Obituary stated he had flown 63 sorties. Graduated from University of British Columbia with a degree in Law and practiced for over 50 years. He was president of the UBC Alumni in 1966 and received the Transportation Lawyers Association Lifetime Achievement Award. Died in West Vancouver, 21 August 2008. Invested with DFC by Lieutenant Governor of British Columbia, in Vancouver, 29 January 1947. RCAF photo PL-40814 (ex UK-16678 dated 4 December 1944) is captioned as follows: "Li'l Abner, Pansy Yokum, and the rest of Al Capp's favourites occupy an honoured place on the fuselage of the RCAF's City of Edmonton Squadron's Mosquitos. Drawn by one of the ground crew they are clever adaptations of the famous comic strip. Here Mammy Yokum has Hitler on a tray all ready to be served up to some fate or other. The airmen admiring the cartoon on their aircraft from left to right are F/O R.D. Thomas of Vancouver, pilot, and F/L Wray MacDonald of Toronto, navigator."

As navigator, Flight Lieutenant MacDonald has taken part in a large number of operational missions. On one occasion in October 1944, during an attack on an airfield in Czechoslovakia, he shared with his pilot in the destruction of three enemy aircraft and damaged three others. In addition he has participated in the destruction of one flying bomb and twenty-two transport vehicles as well as causing considerable damage to the enemy's lines of communication. Throughout his operational career this officer has displayed outstanding navigational ability and a fine fighting spirit.

Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 11 July 1944 (actually the date he embarked at Halifax). Disembarked in Britain, 18 July 1944. To No.6 Group Headquarters, 4 August 1944. Attached to No.63 Base and No.429 Squadron, 5-17 August 1944. Attached to Wombleton, 17-31 August 1944. To No.61 Base, 31 August 1944. Embarked for Canada again, 22 October 1944. Repatriated 28 October 1944. To No.3 Release Centre, 1 January 1945. Retired 9 January 1945. Minutes of the Tenth Meeting, Awards Coordination Committee, held in Ottawa on 23 July 1943 indicate the award of this medal was approved at that time to F/L S.G.K. MacDonald, Canadian Liaison Officer to Norwegian Air Force Training Centre, Toronto, and to his assistant, Corporal T.L. Hardwell (DND Naval Services file 1078-15-5, National Archives of Canada RG.24, Volume 4059. Died in Edmonton, 9 February 1984 as per Legion Magazine of September 1984.

MacDONALD, F/L Shirley Graeme Kenny (C3564) - King Haakon VII's Medal of Liberation (Norway) - Awarded as per Canada Gazette dated 12 June 1948 and AFRO 384/48 dated 18 June 1948. Administrative Officer.

Notes: As of 28 May 1941, in recommending officers for promotion, A/C G.E. Brookes (No.1 Training Command), wrote:

Recommended for appointment to Acting Flight Lieutenant and for confirmation of rank in due course. This officer, though technically not on the strength of this Headquarters, is carrying out the duties of Liaison Officer with the Royal Norwegian Air Force to entire satisfaction, and it is felt that his appointment, as above recommended, would be in the best interests of the service and would substantiate his position in view of the nature of his duties.

An undated assessment (but circa April 1942) describes him as "Good type of officer He has worked exceptionally hard at his job. Well liked by Norwegian personnel who have at times agitated for his promotion, in a verbal manner, to the rank of Squadron Leader.”

On 7 September 1943, G/C A. Ap Elliis (No.34 SFTS, Medicine Hat) wrote: “I should like to express my thanks for the excellent liaison that has been carried out by the RCAF Liaison Officer, F/L S.G.K. MacDonald, with this unit. Without his assistance and personality I feel that such an efficient working between your Headquarters and this unit would not have existed.”

On 16 September 1943, Lieutenant Colonel Ole Reistad (AOC NAF Training Centre) wrote to AFHQ, “The Air Officer Commanding the RCAF Training Command in Canada wishes to express his great appreciation for the most valuable work which Flight Lieutenant MacDonald has performed during his period of service with the Royal Norwegian Air Force.”

Letter, 28 February 1944, Lieutenant-Colonel O. Reistad (Air Officer Commanding, RCAF Training Centre in Canada) to Commanding Officer, No.16 SFTS, Hagersville re “Conferring of King Haakon VII’s 70-years Commemorative Medal to F/L S.G.K. MacDonald:

Flight Lieutenant S.G.K. MacDonald, who was attached to the Royal Norwegian Air Force Training Centre in the capacity of RCAF Liaison Officer, on King Haakon VII’s 70th birthday on August 3rd, 1942, has, along with all Norwegian military personnel in service on that day, been awarded King Haakon VII’s 70-years Commemorative Medal.

As F/L MacDonald is at present attached to your unit, four ribbons for the mentioned medal is inclosed herewith, and it is requested, please, that these ribbons be handed to F/L MacDonald with the compliments of the Royal Norwegian Air Force. The medal itself is not yet available, but will be forthcoming after the war.

Permission for F/L MacDonald to accept the medal and wear the ribbon has been granted by the Canadian Authorities.

As of 11 September 1944, the Department of Trade and Commerce (Finlay Sim, Acting Deputy Minister) wrote to James A. Sharpe (Assistant Deputy Minister, National Defence for Air) as per following:

The above mentioned officer was employed in the Department of Trade and Commerce as Assistant Trade Commissioner at Oslo, Norway, during which time he became thoroughly familiar with the language and the customs of the people.

He enlisted in December 1940, and was, I believe, liaison officer between the Norwegian Air Force and the RCAF at "Little Norway" in Toronto. The Norwegian Government in exile is planning an early return to Norway and we have to complete the Canadian personnel. It is our desire that Mr. MacDonald be released from the Air Force immediately in order that he may be prepared to return to Norway on exceedingly short notice. Anything you can do to expedite this would be much appreciated.

MacDONALD, F/O Stewart (J36834) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.428 Squadron - Award effective 5 July 1945 as per London Gazette dated 20 July 1945 and AFRO 1619/45 dated 19 October 1945. Born 12 March 1912 in Little Sands, Prince Edward Island; home there (teacher); enlisted in Truro, Nova Scotia, 19 August 1942. To No.1 Manning Depot, 24 August 1942. To No.1 BGS, 22 October 1942 (guard). To No.1 ITS, 20 February 1943; graduated and promoted LAC, 30 April 1943 but not posted to No.1 AOS until 5 June 1943; graduated and commissioned, 15 October 1943. To "Y" Depot, 29 October 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 31 October 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 15 April 1944. Repatriated 18 April 1945. To Moncton, 30 April 1945. To No.1 RNS. 2 June 1945. Retired 12 September 1945. Presented 7 April 1948. RCAF photo PL-40373 (ex UK-17137 dated 5 December 1944) shows three members of No.428 Squadron being debriefed by intelligence officer (back to camera) following raid on synthetic oil plant in the Ruhr. They are F/O W.M. Robinson (navigator, London, Ontario, F/O Stewart MacDonald (navigator, Little Sands, P.E.I.) and F/O J.K. Gibson (bomb aimer, Regina). No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.1941 (RG.24 Vol.20612) has recommendation by W/C M.W. Gall dated 21 March 1945 when he had flown 31 sorties (191 hours 45 minutes), 27 August 1944 to 21 February 1945. Died in Charlottetown, 8 July 2001 as per Legion Magazine of November 2001.

The dauntless courage, determination and great devotion to duty shown by this officer have been an inspiration to all. Despite suffering from air sickness on every operation he has insisted on carrying on and has displayed a high degree of skill and ability as a navigator and by his efforts contributed to a major degree to the successful bombing by his crew of many heavily defended and extremely important targets. During his thirty-one operations his main objective was to press on and further the interest of the squadron, ignoring his personal feelings.

For extreme devotion to duty and great determination, I recommend the non-immediate award of the D.F.C.

This officer has completed numerous missions against heavily defended targets in Germany and enemy occupied territory. In October 1944, while returning from a sortie against Cologne, his aircraft was attacked by an enemy fighter. Flying Officer MacDonald displayed outstanding skill in outmanoeuvring the attacker but was shortly afterwards engaged by another enemy aircraft. Although the guns in both of the turrets were unserviceable, this gallant and resourceful officer took violent evasive action and one more outwitted the hostile aircraft. On another occasion when his bomber had been damaged by anti-aircraft fire and the windshield shattered, despite the intense cold, Flying Officer MacDonald returned safely to base where he executed a masterly landing. At all times during an outstanding tour this officer has displayed exceptional skill and courage.

DHH file 181.009 (D.1510), in National Archives of Canada RG.24 Volume 20600 has recommendation drafted by W/C W.G. Phelan on 16 January 1945 when he had flown 34 sorties (181 hours 20 minutes):

On the return journey from a sortie on Cologne, on the night of October 30, 1944, Flying Officer MacDonald was attacked by a fighter while flying at 14,000 feet. During the evasive action that followed, this gallant officer outmanoeuvred the fighter and finally lost him at 10,000 feet, where shortly after they were picked up by another attacker. Despite the fact that all guns in both turrets were unserviceable, with daring skill, Flying Officer MacDonald again outwitted the fighter, finally losing him at 5,000 feet.

On another occasion, while over the target, Flying Officer MacDonald was engaged by extremely accurate flak which smashed the windscreen and shot off the astro dome. Despite the bitter cold, this officer flew his bomber back to base where he completed a masterly landing.

At all times during an outstanding tour, Flying Officer MacDonald has displayed exceptional skill and courage. For this reason I recommend Flying Officer MacDonald for the Immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacDONNELL, F/L Peter Logie Parkin (J6164) - Mention in Despatches - No.223 Squadron -

Award effective 14 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 874/44 dated 21 April 1944. Born 7 October 1919. Home in Toronto; enlisted there 28 October 1940. To "B", 19 December 1940. To No.2 ITS, 26 January 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 16 March 1941 when posted to No.5 EFTS; graduated 3 May 1941 when posted to No.7 SFTS; graduated and commissioned, 16 July 1941. To RAF overseas, 5 August 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 16 July 1943. Repatriated 11 July 1944. Retired 20 June 1946. Called to the Ontario Bar, 1947 and to the Alberta Bar, 1950. Rejoined RCAF Auxiliary in Edmonton, 10 May 1951 as Administrative Officer (60445); released 3 July 1956. Officer, Order of Canada, 17 December 1979. Died 1 January 1996.

RCAF Press Release 11507 dated 29 March 1946 from F/L R. Lawrence, transcribed by Huguette Oates, reads:

LONDON: -- The Cambridge Boat crew, who will match stroke for stroke with the gentlemen of the darker blue from Oxford in the Battle of the Tideway this year, will have the Dominions well represented with them in the services of F/L Pete MacDonnell of Toronto, Ontario, and F/L Jimmy Cosse of the RAAF.

F/L Pete MacDonnell, who served with the RAF squadrons 162 and 223 in the Middle East, has been attending Cambridge since he finished operations in November of 1944. He has the distinction of being the second Canadian to participate in this famous race since its inauguration early in the nineteenth century, the other Canuck who won a place on the rowing teams was H.V. Massey, the son of the High Commissioner the R. Hon. Vincent Massey Coxswain for Oxford in 1937.

F/L Pete MacDonnell, who, incidently, has been interested in rowing for a period of only eighteen months, had his first experience with the Trinity Hall crew last year. He is the first crewman in the history of Cambridge to make the Varsity Squad in the second year of rowing. He will complete his studies in June of this year.

F/L Jimmy Cosse on the other hand is an old timer at the game, having rowed for the blue of Cambridge pre-war. He discontinued his studies in 1941, joined the RAAF, finished operations and then returned to Australia, returning to England last fall to continue his studies. Jimmy is the only married man to row in the race and his wife, an Australian girl, will be watching the better half work out as stroke man.

MacDOUGALL, W/C Gordon Archibald (C2151) - Member, Order of the British Empire - RCAF Overseas Headquarters - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Born 25 July 1907. Home in Toronto; enlisted there, 10 July 1940 in Accounts Branch. Flight Lieutenant as of 15 June 1941. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 July 1942. To "Y" Depot, 11 January 1943. To RAF overseas, 25 January 1943. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 10 March 1943. Promoted Wing Commander, 16 February 1944. Repatriated 5 September 1945. Retired 15 October 1945. Living in Dundas, Ontario, 1947. Presented 29 May 1947. RCAF photo PL-27794 (ex UK-15246 dated 23 September 1944) taken on roof of building in Bombay housing RCAF Accounts Office; on left is S/L J.M. Wynn (C2246, Montreal, commanding the Base Accounts Office), in centre is W/C G.A. MacDougall (Toronto, Senior Account Liaison Officer at RCAF Overseas Headquarters) and on right is F/L J.R. Heald (C5422, St.Lambert, Quebec); MacDougall on an inspection tour of Base Accounts Offices in Egypt, Malta, Italy, Gibraltar, Ceylon and India. Caption says that Wynn and Heald worked for same accountancy firm in civilian life (Riddell, Stead, Graham and Hutchinson, Toronto). RCAF photo PL-29065 (ex UK-9668 dated 17 April 1944) is captioned as follows: "Up until the 1st of April Wing Commander Gordon MacDougall, Toronto, was head of the United Kingdom Base Accounts Unit. He leaves shortly to take up a new position as Senior Accounts Liaison Officer. Wing Commander MacDougall was one of the leading lights in the formation of Base Accounts when Canada decided to take over responsibility for the pay and allowances of the RCAF overseas."

As Senior Accountant Officer of the Royal Canadian Air Force United Kingdom Base Accounts Unit, this officer was primarily responsible for the initial organization of the pay accounts at that unit, in such a manner that an efficient and sympathetic service to Royal Canadian Air Force personnel serving overseas was achieved. Recently, as Senior Accountant Liaison Officer, his efforts have resulted in the institution of a uniform organization in the various accounting formations overseas. His conscientiousness and effective efforts are of exceptional merit.

MACELWAIN, F/L James Robert (J20004) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.2 Squadron - Award effective 27 April 1945 as per London Gazette dated 8 May 1945 and AFRO 966/45 dated 8 June 1945. Born 16 January 1923 in Chipman, New Brunswick; home in Saint John, New Brunswick; enlisted in Moncton, 5 May 1941 as Radio Mechanic and posted to Halifax. To No.119 (BR) Squadron, date uncertain. To University of New Brunswick, 30 May 1941. To No.4 Manning Depot, 22 September 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 14 October 1941. Remustered to aircrew and posted to No.1 ITS, 21 December 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 13 February 1942 but not posted to No.1 EFTS until 28 February 1942; may have graduated 24

April 1942 but not posted to No.13 SFTS until 8 May 1942; graduated and commissioned, 28 August 1942. To "Y" Depot, 11 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 24 September 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 28 February 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 28 August 1944. Repatriated 14 May 1945. To Moncton, 27 May 1945. To No.1 Release Centre, 14 September 1945. Retired 17 September 1945. DFC presented 17 August 1949. Died in Moncton, 26 June 2003 as per Legion Magazine of November 2003.

Flight Lieutenant Macelwain has successfully completed numerous low level photographic sorties and tactical reconnaissances. In the course of these operations he has inflicted considerable damage on the enemy's river transport, trains and mechanical transport and destroyed two flying bombs. His aircraft has been hit on seven occasions but he has never let either enemy opposition or adverse weather deter him from completing his mission. At dawn on D-Day Flight Lieutenant Macelwain completed several naval bombardment shots [shoots ?] at low level over the French coast despite continuous anti-aircraft fire for more than two hours. He neutralized three guns and only returned to base through lack of fuel. Soon after landing this officer took off again and flew another two hours over the heavily defended coast where he neutralized more enemy guns. Throughout his operational career this officer has displayed a high standard of efficiency and a fine fighting spirit.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9078 has recommendation (not sure of date) stating he had flown 120 sorties (174 hours 30 minutes). The recommendation is somewhat more detailed and worthy quoting for comparative reasons.

Flight Lieutenant Macelwain is in every way an outstanding operational pilot. He has successfully led numerous low level photographic sorties of aerodromes, Noball targets, beach defences, bridges on the Seine and Maas, taking his photographs whatever the opposition with a complete disregard for his personal safety.

He has flown a number of Ranger operations. Over half of his sorties have been Tactical Reconnaissances. These he carried out with meticulous care, and much enemy material has been destroyed as a result of his reports. He himself has destroyed or damaged five ships and barges, eight trains, two flying bombs and over thirty mechanical transport.

On over eighty of his sorties he has met flak or fighter opposition but not once have they prevented him from completing his tasks. He has been hit on no less than seven occasions but has brought his aircraft back to base, landing it without further damage.

At dawn on D-Day Flight Lieutenant Macelwain took off to carry out naval bombardment shoots on the French coast; his No.2 had to return to base shortly after takeoff. Nevertheless he went on alone. Owing to low cloud, he flew at 1,500 feet over the coast directing the gunfire in spite of continuous flak for more than two hours. He neutralized three guns and only returned through lack of fuel. Soon after he had landed he took off again and flew another two hours over the coast and neutralized more guns again, in spite of continuous flak.

Flight Lieutenant Macelwain has displayed a standard of efficiency and offensive spirit of the highest order.

per Legion Last Post. Photo PL-45016 shows him. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1941 (RG.24 Vol.20612) has recommendation by W/C M.W. Gall dated 18 January 1945 when he had flown 32 sorties (187 hours five minutes), 1 August 1944 to 15 January 1945.

Flying Officer MacFadden has shown exceptional skill and ability as a navigator together with great courage, determination and devotion to duty. His courage, determination and skill were an inspiration to his crew and contributed to a major degree in their operational efficiency and the completion of a successful tour of operations.

Flying Officer MacFadden has participated in 32 sorties, the majority of which were on heavily defended targets, and he has achieved a fine record. Each target was reached and bombed successfully, despite opposition and failure in some instances of navigational aids.

For his all round ability and devotion to duty I recommend the Non-Immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This officer has participated in many sorties and has destroyed four enemy aircraft and damaged several more. He has displayed great skill and courage throughout his tour and his example of keenness and determination has been most commendable.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9156 has recommendation drafted by S/L H.S. Lisson, 30 March 1944 when he had flown 18 sorties (65 operational hours).

Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen joined this squadron on the 6th December 1943, and since then has completed 18 sorties. The majority of these have been in support of Bomber Command. During these sorties Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen has destroyed four enemy aircraft, probably destroyed another and damaged yet another nine.

On the night of December 22nd, 1943, while making his third trip over enemy territory, Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen probably destroyed an enemy aircraft and damaged another at Orleans. On February 24th while intruding on enemy night fighter bases well inside Germany he destroyed a Messerschmitt 410 at Wurzburg. On March 21st, Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen, along with Lieutenant Luma, penetrated enemy territory to Strasbourg on a Day Ranger. This entailed a trip of 500 miles from base, all of it being done at extremely low level. On this sortie, Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen destroyed a Bucker 131 at Luxeuil and destroyed a Dornier 217 and a Gotha 242 at Hagenau. He also damaged eight other Gotha 242s on the ground at Hagenau.

During Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen's entire operational career, he has shown a great keenness and a strict devotion to duty. He can be depended upon to carry out his duty to the letter. His knowledge of operational matters is very large and he takes great pains to increase and verify this knowledge. For the last two months Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen has been acting as Deputy Flight Commander. He has set a very high standard for all those under him and as a result has in no small way contributed to the high standards of the squadron as it is today.

This was endorsed by the Commanding Officer, No.418 Squadron, 6 April 1944.

MacFADYEN, F/L Donald Aikins, DFC (J3103) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.406 Squadron - Award effective 19 April 1945 as per London Gazette dated 27 April 1945 and AFRO 918/45 dated 1 June 1945.

Since the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross this officer has taken part in many operational sorties. Throughout, his skill and initiative have been of the highest order. He has destroyed at least a further five enemy aircraft bringing his total victories to at least nine hostile aircraft destroyed and many others damaged. In addition he has shot down five flying bombs apart from these successes. Flight Lieutenant MacFadyen has given great assistance to new crews in planning their missions and by his untiring efforts and fine example has materially contributed to the operational efficiency of his squadron.

MacFADYEN, S/L Donald Aikins, DFC (J3103) - Distinguished Service Order - No.406 Squadron - Award effective 9 October 1945 as per London Gazette of 19 October 1945 and AFRO 1822/45 dated 7 December 1945.

Since the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Flying Cross this officer has continued to operate against the enemy with conspicuous success, destroying three enemy aircraft and damaging five. During a patrol over Czechoslovakia in March 1945, an enemy landing ground was sighted and one enemy aircraft was destroyed on the ground and four were damaged. On another occasion in April 1945, he successfully destroyed two hostile aircraft in the air. Squadron Leader MacFadyen's total victories are at least thirteen enemy aircraft destroyed and seventeen damaged. Throughout his two tours he has displayed outstanding keenness, efficiency, courage and determination and has at all times set a fine example of loyal and devoted service.

MacFARLANE, F/O Murray Cowan (J29615) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.61 Squadron - Award effective 5 February 1945 as per London Gazette dated 20 February 1945 and AFRO 563/45 dated 29 March 1945. Born 3 December 1912 in Welland, Ontario; home in Toronto. Formerly in COTC. Enlisted in Toronto, 10 July 1942 and granted Leave Without Pay. To No.1

ITS, 9 January 1943; graduated and promoted LAC on 19 March 1943; to No.1 AOS, 3 April 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 20 August 1943. Subsequently commissioned with effect from that date. To "Y" Depot, 3 September 1943. To RAF overseas, 12 September 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 20 February 1944. Repatriated 27 November 1944. To No.1 Air Command, 15 January 1945. To Release Centre, 8 February 1945. Released 23 February 1945. DFC sent by registered mail. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." Public Records Office Air 2/8830 has recommendation dated 10 November 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (180 hours 15 minutes).

Flying Officer MacFarlane has completed thirty-two successful sorties including attacks on Kiel, Stuttgart, Koenigsburg (twice), Darmstadt (twice), Karlsruhe, Kaiserlauten and Wilhelmshaven and a number of tactical targets in Western Europe.

His navigation throughout his tour of operations has been of a very high standard and has undoubtedly contributed largely to the highly successful tour of his crew. His plotting and log keeping, often carried through in the face of heavy enemy opposition, have always been careful and accurate and have been an excellent example to his fellow navigators.

For his outstanding skill, cool courage in the face of the enemy and devotion to duty, and for the high personal example he has at all times set, Flying Officer MacFarlane is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacFARLANE, FS Ronald Ernest (R92109) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.101 Squadron - Award effective 10 February 1943 as per London Gazette dated 12 February 1943 and AFRO 373/43 dated 5 March 1943. Born in Chilliwack, British Columbia, 28 December 1921; home there; enlisted in Vancouver, 7 February 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon, 9 February 1941. To No.4 SFTS, Saskatoon, 3 March 1941 (non-flying duty). To No.2 ITS, Regina, 11 April 1941; graduated and promoted LAC on 14 May 1941; to No.8 EFTS, Vancouver, 15 May 1941; to No.3 SFTS, Calgary, 3 July 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant on 20 September 1941. To "Y" Depot, 22 September 1941; to RAF Trainee Pool, 6 October 1941. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 19 October 1941. To No.2 SFTS, date not shown. To No.22 OTU, 20 January 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 20 March 1942. To No.101 Squadron, 4 August 1942. Commissioned 15 December 1942 (J16696). To No.1662 Conversion Unit, 25 January 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 15 June 1943. To No.101 Squadron again, 25 October 1943. Invested with DFC at Buckingham Palace, 30 November 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 December 1943. Killed in action 16 December 1943 (Lancaster DV300 shot down off Dutch coast).

One night in January 1943, Flight Sergeant MacFarlane was captain of an aircraft which was attacked by three Junkers 88. When returning from an operational sortie the mid-upper gunner was killed, the rear gunner severely wounded and the aircraft was badly damaged. Flight Sergeant MacFarlane took violent evasive action and succeeded in shaking off the enemy aircraft. Shortly afterwards the bomber was held by searchlights and engaged by intense anti-aircraft fire, and height was lost down to 4,000 feet in avoiding further damage. Soon afterwards a formation of five hostile fighters was sighted but when they attempted to attack Flight Sergeant MacFarlane skilfully avoided them. By masterly airmanship this airman extricated his aircraft from a perilous situation and flew it safely back to this country.

Dave Wallace provides the following information on his DFM sortie. The Form 540 entry reads:

21 January 1943- five air tests were flown in "A" Flight in the morning and in the evening five aircraft took off to attack Essen captained by F/L T.D. Misselbrook, Sgt Wiltshire, P.T.W., Sgt. Gilmore, J.H., F/S MacFarlane, RE. and Sgt. Hazard, R.H., F/L Misselbrook and Sgt Hazard were forced to return early owing to severe icing. F/S MacFarlane was attacked by a ME 110 on his return, his mid-upper gunner, Sgt. Singleton, R.A. being killed and his rear gunner Sgt. O'Brien, WOG wounded. He was able to take evasive action and escape but forced to land at East Wretham. This engagement was rewarded by the IMMEDIATE award of the DFM to F/S MacFarlane.

The Form 541 provides the following:

21 January 1943 - Target: ESSEN
Lancaster I, W 4833 "C"
Flight Sergeant MacFarlane, RE
Sgt. Rowe, W.J.
P/O Gordon, W.C.
F/S Baxter, C.A.
F/S Brydon, N.R.
Sgt. Singleton, RA.
Sgt O'Brien W.O.G.

Up: 16:55; Down: 22:15

Load: 1 x 4000 lb & 12 S.B.C's (4 lb incendiaries)

Bombs were dropped on target, but on way back over Zuider Zee aircraft was attacked by two or three night fighters and mid- upper Gunner was killed and the Rear Gunner wounded. The Captain was able to get his aircraft back to East Wretham.

Public Record Office Air 50/292 has the following Combat Report which differs from Form 541 account by identifying one crewman as a Sergeant Patterson:

1. Serial No.27 - Night 21/22 January 1943. Lancaster I, C/101 Squadron - Essen.
2. Zuider Zee (5225/0535) - 2047 - 19,000 - 180. I.A.S. - 311 Magnetuc.
3. Good visibility - 10-20 miles, no cloud - Bright moonlight.
4. None [believed to refer to defences]
5. None [not sure what this refers to].
6. Ju,88 - 3 - formation uncertain, considered to be line abreast astern of Lanc I.
7. None [believed to refer to hostile aircraft lights]
8. Cannon and machine gun.
9. Port astern, 200 yards, slightly below.
10. Possibly more than one attack, or three enemy aircraft attacking, first attack dead astern.
11. After first attack steep diving turn to starboard down to 14,000 feet, levelled out for five minutes, and with nose down, lost height to 9,000 feet.
12. Attacked at 200 yards, replied 200 yards.
13. Mid-upper Gunner killed, Rear Gunner wounded both legs.
 - (a) Rudder and aileron trimming tab damaged.
 - (b) Hydraulics oil pipes shot away - R/T and M/V unserviceable and front turret unserviceable after starboard inner motor was hit and caught fire. Propellor was immediately feathered.
 - (c) Fuselage centre to rear and whole underbelly badly holed.
14. Rear turret 100 rounds.
 - (a) Rear gunner Sergeant Patterson - No.6 BGS, Mountain View, Ontario, No.22 OTU, Wellesbourne, No.7 AGS, Stoney Down.
 - (b) Sergeant Singleton, M/U Gunner.

Comment by F/L Rogers, G.G.L.

As the Mid-Upper Gunner was killed and Rear Gunner wounded in the opening attack. There was no chance of any fire control being carried out except if Wireless Operator was in Astro Dome. No indication is given of this. Aircraft lucky to get away with it.

Comment of S/I Foster, G.T.O. [Gunnery Training Officer]

I concur with F/L Rogers' remarks and have nothing to add.

NOTE: When interviewed on 12 August 1940, the officer meeting him (signature looks like "P/O C.F.D. Evans) recommended him for Observer training and wrote one of the most remarkable of assessments:

Rather odd, matter of fact and more deliberate than quick. Shows little emotion and is reflective. Very keen to fly and on RCAF. Will prove amenable to discipline and responsive to instruction.

Plays a lot of golf and other sports. Has little civil experience outside of father's farm and he reflects this environment. Father is strict and dour Scotch descent.

Boy will prove courageous and phlegmatic in his attitude toward danger.

Probably dawn on him later. Is not quick enough for fighter but should do well in bombing or reconnaissance.

At 0047 hours on 7 July 1942 he was pilot under training of Wellington R1293, No.22 OTU. The instructor was P/O R.H. Lowe. MacFarlane had 45 hours on type, 185 hours on all types. Approach normal but into wind leg he allowed airspeed to drop and did not check earlier enough. The landing was very heavy and the aircraft bounced, then came down on starboard wheel which collapsed; damage to wing as aircraft swung right. Judged to be "an error in judgement on the part of an inexperienced pilot."

At 1930 hours of 2 December 1942, preparing to take off on cross-country non-operational flight, captain of Lancaster W4275 damaged Category "A". He had eleven hours (day) and 175 hours (night) on type, A truck driven by an Army ranker of local anti-aircraft battery ran into aircraft from behind, crumpling port elevator and port rudder; driver blamed.

At 1125 hours of 20 January 1943, Lancaster ED379, landed at Holme-on-Spalding when tail wheel locked causing shimmying which damaged tail wheel assembly. Technical fault. Crew on this occasion included Flight Sergeant N.R. Brydon (bomb aimer, later commissioned, DFC and Mention in Despatches) and P/O W.C. Gordon (navigator, DFC with No.101 Squadron).

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his last sortie. Lancaster DV300, No.101 Squadron (SR-W), target Berlin, 16/17 December 1943. It was a Mk.I, delivered to No.32

Maintenance Unit in September 1943 and delivered to No.101 Squadron (ABC-equipped) on 8 November 1943. DV300 took part in the following operations - Berlin, 18/19 November 1943; Berlin, 2/3 December 1943; Berlin, 16/17 December 1943 (lost). When lost this aircraft had total of 48 hours. It was one of four No.101 Squadron Lancasters to be lost on this operation; the others were DV299, DV283 and LM389. Airborne at 1625 hours, 16 December 1943 from Ludford Magna. Shot down by a night- fighter (Oblt Heinz-Wolfgang Schnaufer, 1V./NJG1) and exploded at 1815 over the Banco Polder some 2 km NE of Tacoziyl (Friesland) and close to Lemmer, Holland. Crew (all killed) were F/L R.E.MacFarlane, DFM, RCAF; Sergeant J.E.Clark; Sergeant L.D.Wilson; Sergeant F.R.Westall; Sergeant D.B.Harvey; F/O L.E.Thompson, RCAF; Sergeant J.Ireland; Sergeant E.R.E.Jordan.

MacFARLANE, G/C Thomas Crawford (C1114) - Officer, Order of the British Empire - AFHQ - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/45 dated 25 January 1946. Joined RCAF as an Airman (Number 73), 25 July 1927. As of 1 September 1939 he was a Warrant Officer. Commissioned in Ottawa, 15 September 1939 (Administrative Branch). Promoted Acting Wing Commander, 1 June 1941. Promoted Group Captain, 15 January 1942. Posted to No.1 "Y" Depot, 27 April 1944. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 3 May 1944. Repatriated 13 February 1945. To AFHQ again, 25 February 1945. To No.2 Release Centre, 2 September 1946. Retired 28 January 1947 to Vancouver. Insignia presented 21 February 1948. RCAF photo PL-1298 taken 1940 as Flight Lieutenant.

As Director of Postings and Careers this officer has been charged with highly complex matters of promotion, retirement, and the assignment of officers to duties best suited to their capabilities. He has discharged these duties in a most admirable manner, displaying a high degree of intelligence, tact, initiative and foresight. His wide knowledge of the service and experience gained through his previous appointments have made him an invaluable support to his superior officers. His devotion to duty, discretion and the manner in which he has handled the many delicate and confidential matters inherent with his responsibilities have been of the highest order.

MacGILLIVRAY, WO (now P/O) Donald Keith (R152382/J48290) - Mention in Despatches - No.428 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 379/45 dated 2 March 1945. Born 15 September 1921. Home in Niagara Falls, Ontario; enlisted in Hamilton, 2 February 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay until 9 March 1942 when posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 SFTS (non-flying duty), 7 May 1942. To No.6 ITS, 15

August 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 9 October 1942; posted next day to No.4 BGS; to No.4 AOS, 5 December 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 22 January 1943; to No.1 BGS, 6 February 1943; to "Y" Depot, 19 March 1943; to RAF overseas, 27 March 1943. Further trained at No.24 OTU. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 22 July 1943. Commissioned 31 May 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 2 July 1944; to Mountain View, 27 October 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 December 1944. To Release Centre, 10 January 1945. Retired 19 February 1945. Applied for Operational Wings, 17 August 1944 while at No.1 Repatriation Depot; checked by H.H. Thompson, 30 August 1944; sent to AMAS/D/Ops, 30 August 1944; returned from AMAS/D/Ops 20 September 1944. Application not approved as per letter dated 20 September 1944.

As bomb aimer, shot down 19/20 November 1943 in Halifax LK956 (NA-S) of No.428 Squadron, taken Leverkusen. Airborne at 1606 hours, 19 November 1943 from Middleton St.George. While homebound, encountered radar predicted flak in the vicinity of Bonn, sustaining very severe damage. With great skill, Flight Sergeant H.C. Shepherd flew his aircraft clear of these defences, but after reaching Dutch airspace the situation became so critical that the only course of action was to abandon the aircraft. Flight Sergeant Shepherd (RCAF) became a POW, as did Sergeant J.M.C.Walker (RAF, flight engineer), F/O D.R.Knight (RCAF, navigator), Sergeant S.J.Stevens (RAF, WOP). Other members of the crew (MacGillivray, Sergeant N.H.Michie, RCAF mid-upper gunner, Sergeant S.Munns, RAF rear gunner), evaded. F/O .Knight was interned in Camp L1, POW No.1550. Flight Sergeant H.C.Shepherd initially evaded until captured in Brussels 26 January 1944. Imprisoned in St.Gilles until 22 March 1944 and then interned in Camps L6/357, POW No.3207. Sergeant Stevens in Camp 4B, POW No.263629. Sergeant J.M.C.Walker in Camp L3.

His MI.9 report stated he had left Gibraltar on 13 January 1944, arrived Whitechurch 14 January 1944 and was interviewed the day of his arrival.

I was a member of the crew of a Halifax Mark 2 1a aircraft which took off from Middleton St. George about 1615 hours on 19 November 1943 for Leverkusen. On the return flight we were hit by flak over Bonn and lost the rudder control and port inner engine, the mid-upper turret being also smashed. We lost height and over Aachen were again badly hit by flak. We lost further height, and the pilot gave the order to bale out.

I came down about 1945 hours on the edge of the perimeter of the aerodrome on the North West outskirts of Eindhoven (Holland) (N.W. Europe, 1:250,000, Sheet 3, E 41). I saw no sign of any Germans, beyond one aircraft, probably a Me.110, which was taking off. My parachute was caught in barbed wire behind me. I got out of my harness and left it and the parachute, taking only my mae west with me. After trying in three different places I at length climbed a wire fence and got out of the aerodrome. I hid for a little in a trench and, after getting my bearings with my compass, I set off South West across fields until I came to a road.

On the road I hid several times from a man on a bicycle who passed and re-passed me, flashing a torch. Further along the road I reached a farm house. The man was standing at the door. He flashed his light and walked into the house. Deciding that I must find out where I was, I followed him into the house.

I think this man had been trying to attract my attention. He proved to be the son of the farmer. I was given a cup of tea and went to sleep in a chair, having ascertained that I was in Holland. The son fetched another man who produced a written message from Sergeant Walker, the flight engineer of my crew. The message, which I am pretty sure was in Walker's own handwriting, said that he was a P/W in Holland. I was shown this message only about an hour after we had baled out.

I was allowed to spend the night in a bed in an attack where other members of the family slept. Next morning (20 November) I was given a pair of overalls, a civilian cap and a pair of shoes. I was also given a small map of the area and shown the best route - along the canal - to Tilberg, and also some Dutch silver coins (value unknown). The people at the farm were obviously nervous, and indicated that there were many Germans in the district, the troops from Eindhoven aerodrome being billeted in the same street as the farm was in. At 0600 hours I was set on my way by the farmer's son and the man he had brought in the previous night. They did not accompany me.

I went North West till I reached the Wilhelmina Canal. I followed the canal, but lost my way several times, finally reaching Best (Sheet 3A, E 3826) which was in the opposite direction from Eindhoven. Here I got my directions from a signpost, crossed to the North bank of the canal, and followed it West. There were a good many people passing along the canal bank, mostly on bicycles, and because of this I was unable to get down to the canal for water.

I reached Tilburg (Sheet 3A, E 13) about 1730 hours and found the railway station. There were, however, so many Germans about that I felt it would be impossible to travel by train. Also, although I made two visits to the station, I could not find an indicator showing train departures for Turnhout for which I had been advised at the farm to make. I saw a number of buses leaving for Turnhout, but considered them dangerous also, because of the number of Germans travelling.

I found the main road for Turnhout. The shoes I had been given at the farm was full of nails, and I had to walk slowly. Before I had got clear of Tilburg I met a man coming out of his house. I said, "R.A.F." He took me in at once, gave me some ginger ale and water, and fetched another man who brought a Dutch-English dictionary. I showed them on my escape map that I wanted to get to Turnhout. Another map was produced, and my helpers tried to explain the position of the frontier and the location of the guards.

I slept the night in a bedroom in this house, and next morning (21 November) was taken by my host and his son to a farm at Goirle (Sheet 3A, E 1527). Here I was given addresses in Poppel (Belgium) (Sheet 3, E 1220), where I was told I could get help. On 22 November I was told this arrangement had had to be cancelled because of arrests by the Gestapo in Poppel and Turnhout. I was given 25 Belgian francs and told to continue my journey alone.

I left the farm at 0800 hours, heading for Turnhout. Using my compass, I worked through woods and crossed the frontier just North of Poppel. I saw no sign of guards till I was almost in Poppel itself.

Being too early for the train, I had been advised to catch, I walked on through Weelde (Sheet 3, E 0916). About 1030 hours two young Belgians passed on bicycles. They stopped about 200 yards along the road and spoke to me when I reached them. One of them said, "Are you English?" When I admitted my identity they took me to a shack on their farm. Later in the day I was put in touch with an organisation, and the rest of my journey was arranged for me.

Flight Lieutenant MacGregor, a Canadian captain of aircraft, has completed 29 sorties on his first tour of operations, comprising 186.14 operational hours. These operations include attacks on such heavily defended targets as Nuremburg, Munich, Dresden, Dortmund, Essen and Kiel.

This outstanding captain of aircraft has set a fine example of skill in airmanship and outstanding fortitude throughout his tour of operations. On several occasions he has extricated his crew from perilous situations of intense flak and fighter opposition. Nevertheless he has always set his mind on the task in hand, fearlessly and with a fine offensive spirit which has permeated the rest of the flight. His praiseworthy disregard for danger is responsible for the high morale which prevails in his crew.

Pilot Officer MacGregor has completed 43 operational sorties, 40 of which have been carried out with the Pathfinder Force, including 35 Marker sorties. The targets include many hotly contested areas such as Berlin, Schweinfurt and Stuttgart.

This officer is a cool and determined gunner who is unflinching in the face of enemy opposition. He has plenty of grit and tenacity, and possesses a fine zeal for operational work. He is an asset to any crew.

Pilot Officer MacGregor has shown a high standard of keenness, loyalty and devotion to duty, and I recommend him for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

McEwan, Princess Elizabeth and Queen Elizabeth. DHist file 181.009 D.2993 (RG.24 Vol.20634) has recommendation by A/C F.G. Wait for an OBE, undated but circa 2 August 1944. He had been on Active Service since 3 September 1939, had served 44 months in Canada and 14 months overseas.

Group Captain MacGregor served as a member of the Auxiliary Air Force from July 1936 until the outbreak of the present war, at which time he accepted a call to active service. He successfully commanded several units in Canada, and upon arrival in England in the spring of 1943, was appointed to command RCAF Station Croft, during the period No.1664 Heavy Conversion Unit was in the course of formation. Largely due to his inspiration and leadership, this unit reached an excellent state of efficiency during the first few months of operation.

In November 1943, Group Captain MacGregor was placed in command of RCAF Station Wombleton. Notwithstanding the many difficulties associated with a new station, by his energetic drive, enthusiasm and outstanding organizing ability, he has developed a station second to none in this Group. By personal example he has raised the morale of personnel under his command to a very high standard. Through his efforts and spirited determination, No.1666 Heavy Conversion Unit, functioning at Wombleton, has forged to the front in many departments.

I confidently feel that Group Captain MacGregor's contribution to the service fully merits his selection as an Officer of the Order of the British Empire.

Recommended for the CBE, 22 June 1945 by A/C J.G. Kerr, Base Commander, No.76 Base. Described as "formerly Station Commander" Document with recommendation held in DHH files (precise document not identified when photocopy made). Although no further award was approved, the recommendation is transcribed for the historical record.

This officer possessed excellent ideas regarding training and by his cheerful yet firm leadership, he encouraged and developed initiative in his officers and other ranks alike. He was a brilliant leader who contributed in an inestimable degree toward the high standard of training at his unit.

I strongly recommend that this officer, for outstanding service, be awarded the CBE.

Flight Lieutenant MacHale has completed a large number of sorties against the enemy and has invariably displayed outstanding energy and coolness. On one mission in November 1944 he was detailed to attack Bochum. Over the target severe damage to the aircraft was caused by anti-aircraft fire, the ailerons were seriously damaged and the aircraft became difficult to control. The target was bombed most effectively and the damaged aircraft flown safely to base. This officer has always performed his duties with great efficiency and has contributed much to the successes attained by his squadron.

Notes: Application for Operational Wing dated 19 March 1945 stated he had flown 36 sorties (233 hours 25 minutes 6 October 1944 to 19 March 1945).

Repatriation form dated 20 April 1945 stated he had flown 36 sorties (233.45) plus 250.50 non-operational time. Last sortie given as 18 March 1945. Types flown overseas were Oxford (85.05), Wellington III and X (74.10), Halifax II (43.30) and Halifax III and IIIA (281.30).

Training: Interviewed by F/O Evres in Vancouver, 16 August 1941. "An American candidate of good experience. Has had considerable flying training and solo work. Well mannered. Courteous. Should make good aircrew material."

MACHAN, AC2 Earl Glenwood (R152815) - British Empire Medal - No.8 SFTS - Award effective 2 March 1943 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 513/43 dated 26 March 1943. Born 7 March 1919. Home in Bagot, Manitoba; enlisted in Winnipeg, 17 January 1942. Served in postwar forces (26036) retiring 16 October 1969 to North Burnaby, British Columbia. Medal presented 26 March 1944.

Aircraftman 2nd Class Machan was a passenger on an Anson aircraft when it crashed into the side of a mountain. After the impact he was thrown clear of the wreckage without sustaining any injuries. The other occupants of the aircraft were unable to extricate themselves. AC2 Machan, at great risk to his own life, courageously entered the burning aircraft and made every effort to rescue his companions, desisting only when burned very critically about the face, chest, hands and arms. He then made his way through twelve miles of difficult mountainous country to obtain help.

MACHIN, F/O Samuel (C37930) - Mention in Despatches - No.4 Repair Depot - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born 14 July 1895. Home in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island; enlisted there 13 March 1941 as Service Policeman and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To Trenton, 17 May 1941. Promoted Corporal, 5 July 1941 when posted to No.8 SFTS. To No.3 Training Command, 5 September

1942. Promoted Sergeant, 12 November 1942. To No.1 Officer School, 13 October 1943; commissioned with effect from 14 October 1943. To No.3 Training Command, 11 November 1943. To No.10 BGS, date uncertain. Promoted Flying Officer, 14 April 1944. To No.4 Repair Depot, 24 April 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 5 July 1945. To Scoudouc, 14 July 1945. To "K", 18 September 1945. Retired 17 October 1945. Deceased as of 2 June 1965.

This officer has served as Deputy Assistant Provost Marshall on this depot for the past year and during that time he has shown, often under trying conditions, zeal and devotion to duty that is praiseworthy. An officer of outstanding character, he has at all times set a fine example of discipline and deportment both while on and off duty. Consequently he has at all times enjoyed the fullest co-operation and respect from both his superiors and juniors that has been an example to all.

MACHUM, WO2 Donald Blair (R153082) - Mention in Despatches - No.82 OTU (deceased) - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 726/46 dated 26 July 1946. Born in Halifax, 4 February 1924. Home in Halifax, Nova Scotia; attended Nova Scotia College of Art. Enlisted in Halifax, 9 February 1942. To No.5 Manning Depot, Lachine, 2 March 1942. To No.31 OTU, Debert, 29 March 1942 (non-flying duty). To No.5 ITS, Belleville, 6 June 1942; graduated and promoted LAC on 15 August 1942 but not posted to No.13 EFTS (St. Eugene) until 27 September 1942; to No.1 SFTS, Camp Borden, 20 November 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 30 April 1943. To "Y" Depot, 15 May 1943; disembarked in Britain, 4 June 1943 and posted to No.3 PRC. To No.5 (P) AFU, 20 July 1943. To No.14 (P) AFU, 14 December 1943. To No.82 OTU, 28 March 1944. Reported killed in action, 29 May 1944 (Wellington HE199); buried in Brookwood, UK. DHist file 181.009 D.3386 (RG.24 Vol.20638) has entry dated 2 April 1945:

File MR153082 P.1d An enquiry was received from a relative of W.O. D.B. Machum R.153082 (Deceased) who was killed in an aircraft accident on 29th May, 1944 while he was acting as pilot of a Wellington aircraft that was shot down by a friendly fighter on returning to the United Kingdom from an operation in France. The query raised concerned the possibility of an award to this airman. Complete details were sought from various sources and after consideration of the whole case, it was thought by this section that W.O. Machum had, indeed, deserved some recognition, as it was brought out in the evidence of the Court of Inquiry held at R.A.F. Station, Ossington, 30th May 1944, that W.O. Machum held the aircraft steady to enable the crew to bale out. On presenting this case to Air Ministry, it was pointed out that W.O. Machum did not complete his training at the time he became a casualty, and it was felt that in following out the best traditions of the service at a period when his operational experience was no doubt limited, should merit some recognition.

Air Ministry advised 25.4.45 that the Honours and Awards Committee have decided to award a Mention in Despatches to W.O. Machum, and same would appear in New Years Honours List, 1945.

His brother, AC1 Ian Thompson Machum, had died of injuries following a flying accident in Canada, 16 January 1943 (Harvard 3238, No.14 Squadron).

This award had a tortured history. A Form 765, "Report on Flying Accident or Forced Landing Not Attributable to Enemy Action", gives the time and place of the aircraft loss (0230 hours, Sweets Farm and Stower Farm at Gillingham, Dorset. The crew were Flight Sergeant (then) Machum (pilot, killed), J19043 P/O C.I. McFarlane (navigator, injured), R185623 Sergeant W.B. Davidson (air bomber, uninjured), R118243 WO1 L.F. Davey (WOP, killed), R213862 Sergeant W.H. McGuigan (mid-upper gunner, killed), and R217636 Sergeant J.A. Bugley (rear gunner, injured). The form gave few details, but did note that a Court of Inquiry was under way. It also noted, "It appears that this aircraft was shot down by ADGB [Air Defence Great Britain] while returning from a Nickel raid."

On 11 June 1944, Sergeant Davidson wrote to Machum's mother: The letter read, in part:

Before I start, Mrs. Machum, let me offer my sincerest sympathies in the loss of your son. I only knew Don for eight weeks, the amount of time we spent flying together at OTU, but I regarded Don as one of my best and truest friends, and his loss to me was like that of a brother. His popularity around the station was unquestionable, and the whole camp was stunned at the news of his death. I don't know whether Don mentioned it or not, but I was the Bombardier in his crew. We had one of the grandest crews imaginable. Frank Davey, the WAG, was a great boy; Bill McGuigan, the tail gunner was loads of fun. Our old navigator was fortunate enough to be in the hospital with a bad appendix, so he missed the ill-fated trip.

The rest of us - Jim Bugley, the mid-upper, the replacement Navigator and myself - all owe our lives to Don for his cool headedness and great nerve in holding the plane steady as long as he could so we could jump out. We were hit by an unidentified aircraft, and the controls were shot away completely. I was sitting beside him in the co-pilot's seat at the time, and immediately we were hit, he grabbed my arm and said, "Jump, Davy, I'll hold the kite for you and the crew, get my chute ready and I'll follow you out." I jumped at 15,000 feet, and when I left he was giving instructions to the rest of the crew, and helping them as best he could. In my opinion, when they speak of heroes, I think of Don. It's very few men who will hold the plane and think of the safety of the crew above himself.

The family apparently learned that the shoot-down had been a "friendly fire" incident (there may have been two Wellingtons shot down that night), as related in a letter from RCAF Headquarters (Ottawa) to the Canadian Casualty Branch at Air Ministry (22 October 1944), although the family may have believed it to have British anti-aircraft fire rather than a fighter; they were annoyed that full details had not been provided which would have given them assurances that their son had not been at fault.

No talk of an award appears to have been recorded until 26 March 1945, when W. Stewart Thompson (Edinburgh) wrote to the RAF Central Depository respecting items being returned to next-of-kin. Thompson was Machum's great uncle, and in the second half of his letter he wrote:

I have been wondering if some posthumous award could not be made to my grand-nephew, Sergeant Donald B. Machum for the brave and gallant way in which he brought his 'plane back after it had been so badly shot up, and for the way in which he saw to the saving of his crew before thinking of his own safety, and in doing so he lost his life. I enclose a letter from one of his crew, Sergeant Davidson, which will give you some information with regard to this. I will be glad to have your views on the matter and if you think I should write to anyone else about it I will be glad to have the address of the officer who is in charge of this matter.

This letter appears to have set in motion the process of raising a Mention in Despatches, and it seems to have gone forward quickly. The RCAF was informed on 16 April 1945 that he had been recommended for a Mention in Despatches, to appear in the New Years Honours List of 1946 (Bomber Command Headquarters to Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, RCAF Overseas Headquarters).

The family was so informed by letter dated 1 May 1945, but through some oversight the name was not published in the New Year Honours List of 1946, and on 7 January 1946 his father (Ralph Machum) wrote to a Mr. Wishart (possibly a Member of Parliament) raising both this issue and the fact that his son had not been commissioned. His impression of what had happened that night may not be completely accurate, but bears recording:

Our younger son, Donald, R153082) was Sergeant Pilot of a Wellington bomber. On the return trip from a mission over Northwest France his plane was shot down by a night fighter. Two of his crew were killed in his plane by gun-fire but Don stayed at his controls, thus permitting three of his crew to escape. We had a letter from one of these survivors telling us the story and lauding Don's coolness and courage and crediting his devotion to duty with the survival of the three members of his crew. We had so little word directly from the RCAF that this letter gave us a wonderful moral uplift. It seems that two Wellingtons were shot down in quick succession by the same British night fighter after they had crossed the coast and were headed on the proper course for their station. It was a hard pill for us to swallow, as you may imagine, yet I realize that errors can take place, particularly at night.

This spurred matters along and the Mention in Despatches was gazetted the following June.

NOTE: Notwithstanding the statements respecting a night fighter, Chorley in his book on Bomber Command training losses describes the loss of HE199 as follows. Aircraft left Ossington at 2153, dropped leaflets at Nantes, and was returning to base. Shortly after crossing the south coast it was engaged by anti-aircraft guns in the Gillingham area of Dorset. Crashed at 0225, Sweets Farm, between hamlets of Woodville and Stour Row, four miles southwest of Shaftsbury. Another Wellington of No.82 OTU (LN443) was similarly on a Nickel raid and shot down by the same guns at 0230, crashing near Hazelbury Bryan, four miles south-southwest of Sturminster Newton, Dorset (all six crew, members of the RCAF, killed).

Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Vol.59, file 190-I, dossier 7) has citation.

This officer rendered unusually outstanding service as the first Royal Canadian Air Force Public Relations Officer to proceed to the United Kingdom and subsequently as Director of Public Relations, Overseas. Under his tireless guidance the Public Relations service in Great Britain and in theatres of operations in the Mediterranean, the East and Far East, was built up to a high state of efficiency. He commanded with distinction the Royal Canadian Air Force Public Relations unit in the Mediterranean prior and subsequent to the invasion of Sicily. He again served as Director of Public Relations, Overseas, during the early stages of the invasion of France and the outstanding efficiency of his organization work is reflected in the excellent coverage of Royal Canadian Air Force operations provided by Canadian newspapers, periodicals and radio. As Chief Public Relations Officer at Air Force Headquarters, he has continued to display extraordinary ability in his work of ensuring that the Royal Canadian Air Force is presented in its proper light to the people of this country. Throughout, his devotion to duty has set a splendid example, Technical/Aero Engineer Branch, 24 April 1950 (200709); promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 July 1956. DFC sent by registered mail, 21 December 1949. Died in Ottawa, 22 January 2012. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1730 (RG.24 Vol.20607) has recommendation dated 23 August 1944 when he had flown 34 sorties (195 hours five minutes) in tour from 16 August 1943 to 7 August 1944.

Flying Officer MacInnis as a navigator has now completed his first tour of operations. His tour includes targets in Italy during the Sicilian campaign and heavily defended areas in both Germany and France. As a navigator Flying Officer MacInnis's ability is outstanding and the successful completion of so many sorties by his crew is due in no small measure to his initiative, resourcefulness and skilful navigation. For this officer's fine record of achievement, his outstanding ability and strong sense of duty, it is strongly recommended that he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows:

In May 1943, Flying Officer McIntosh took part in a heavy attack on Essen. While over the target his aircraft sustained severe damage which put two engines out of action. With the greatest skill and determination this officer managed to complete the North Sea crossing and landed safely in this country. He has always evinced great eagerness to engage the enemy and take part in any operation however hazardous and has secured many excellent photographs.

Note: On 30 July 1942 at No.14 OTU (No.92 Group) he was on a night training flight in Hampden AE192 with J10056 P/O A.D. Walker (later killed in action) as observer. At Windsor Castle Farm, near the village of Langtoft, he collided with Hampden P5397, 0315 hours. He was conducting a cross-country exercise when he was caught in British searchlights (enemy aircraft were about) at 4,000 feet, and in taking avoiding action he saw the other aircraft approaching on port side. It hit the top of his machine (damage category "A"). He regained control at 2,000 feet and landed safely at base. No injuries.

F/L MacIntosh is the son of Dr. F.H. MacIntosh and Mrs. MacIntosh of Lindsay, Ontario. He has been overseas since July 1942 and was a member of one of the original crews of the Canadian Group, completing a tour of operations in November 1944 with the Bison Squadron. Before enlistment, F/L MacIntosh attended Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario, and entered the pulp and paper industry in New Brunswick and British Columbia." No citation other than "completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.5524 (RG.25 Vol.20667) has recommendation dated 8 October 1943 when he had flown 25 1/2 sorties (136 hours 40 minutes), 21 January to 27 September 1943. Spelled McIntosh in document.

This bomb aimer has been outstanding in the performance of his duties. His coolness under fire and his exceptional qualities of leadership have inspired his crew. He has pressed home the attack through the heaviest defences and bombed his target under the most difficult conditions.

I consider that this officer's keenness for the offensive and his example deserve the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

To Eastern Air Command, 17 December 1945. Retired 9 January 1946. The Halifax bomber mentioned below was later raised from the lake and sent to the RAF Museum, Hendon. For his personal account, see Flypast, October 1982. Medal presented 15 April 1944. Died in Toronto 23 January 2006.

One night in April 1942, Flying Officer MacIntyre and Pilot Officer Hewitt (RAFVR) were captain and navigator respectively of an aircraft detailed to carry out a low level attack on the German Naval Base at Trondheim. The target was located and in the face of intense opposition from the enemy's ground defences the attack was pressed home with great coolness and determination from a low level. During this operation the aircraft was hit. The outer portion of the wing caught fire and the fuselage and cockpit were filled with smoke. Soon the aircraft was well alight and, as it had become uncontrollable, Flying Officer MacIntyre decided to descend onto a lake to which he was directed by Pilot Officer Hewitt.

This he achieved by a feat of superb airmanship. The crew then manned their dinghy and made their way to the side of the lake. After a perilous journey and suffering great hardships, Flying Officer MacIntyre and his crew eventually reached England. The greatest credit is due to both these officers for their calm efficiency and courageous devotion to duty.

MacINTYRE, F/O Donald Phillip, DFC (J5998) - Distinguished Flying Cross (United States) - No.160 Squadron - Distinguished Flying Cross - Award effective 13 March 1943 as per AFRO 616/43 dated 9 April 1943.

For distinguished service as heavy bomber pilot, particularly on the 15th of November 1942, when he lost one engine while bombing Benghazi Harbour, but remained in action and started five fires.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9599 has more detailed citation as transmitted 10 January 1943.

For distinguished achievement as a pilot of heavy bombardment aircraft on operational missions. On the night of November 16/16, 1942, while participating in a raid on Benghazi harbour installations, he lost one engine. Using his skill as a pilot and his determination and zeal to accomplish his mission, he remained in action and succeeded in bombing his target, starting five fires. His accomplishments on this and other occasions exemplify the fine spirit and morale of 160 Squadron.

MacINTYRE, F/L Donald Philip, DFC (J5998) - Mention in Despatches - No.178 Squadron - Award effective 14 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 874/44 dated 21 April 1944. No citation to MiD.

MacINTYRE, S/L Donald Philip, DFC (J5998) - Air Force Cross - No.5 OTU - Award effective 11 August 1945 as per London Gazette dated 14 August 1945 and AFRO 1453/45 dated 14th September 1945. As of AFC recommendation he had flown 1,354 hours, of which 334 were as instructor, 129 in previous six months.

This officer has proved himself to be an outstanding Chief Flying Instructor of this Operational Training Unit. Through his general knowledge, tenacity and resourcefulness he has raised the flying on this unit to a very high standard. He is a natural leader both in the air and on the ground and has shown himself capable of tackling any job. His outstanding ability, perseverance and tireless devotion to duty on this unit are worthy of the highest praise.

NOTE: In January 1997 the Royal Air Forces Escaping Society (Canadian Branch) presented to the National Aviation Museum a "dossier" (actually more like an album) with extended autobiographical notes on members (catalogued in the museum as D.805 C3 L96 1995 NMM). This included much information on MacIntyre although very little about his evasion which was relatively uneventful.

RCAF Press Release No. 2442 dated 24 July 1943 reads:

Bomb doors shot away, gasoline feeder lines cut, hydraulic system disabled and the aircraft generally in a colander-like condition from scores of flak holes, including 40 in the engines, F/L Donald P. MacIntyre, DFC (J5998) of East St. John, N.B., piloted a Liberator back from a bombing raid on Tripoli during the African campaign and landed it safely near Tobruk.

The story has just been told by Sergeant N.H. Dalton, Rhodesian wireless operator-air gunner, who has arrived back in Britain from his tour in the Mediterranean theatre.

This action-packed flight early in the year was only one of many flights, the Liberator having operated from Palestine, Egypt and then Benghazi. It had taken part in attacks on Crete and other Mediterranean ports, including Benghazi, prior to its occupation by the Eighth Army.

As the aircraft made its run-up on the night attack on Tripoli, the enemy threw a box of flak around it, and although he took quick action, MacIntyre couldn't evade it.

"I was sitting in the bomb-bay to check off the bombs, when I realized that the sound of bursting flak wasn't the only noise" said Sergeant Dalton. "There was the sound of shells ripping holes in us, and I thought it was funny when I heard one of the gunners say 'I think there's flak coming in here'. The seat the gunner had been sitting on had been blown away by a direct hit, but his only injury was a cut on the hand and some bits blown off his flying boots.

"Another direct hit blew the rear hatch in" continued Dalton. "We dropped our bombs except one which stuck in the rack. There were so many holes in the bomb doors by this time that they fell off, and a shell came in and burst near the remaining bomb but didn't explode it. I got a shell fragment in the knee, after which for a little while, I wasn't terribly interested in anything else.

“Our pilot turned out to see and stuck his nose down,” Dalton continued. “When we were well away and could check the damage, we found that we couldn’t get to the rear of the aircraft because the lines had been cut, and the escaping petrol was blinding. Despite this, the Australian rear gunner walked along the catwalk with his eyes shut and kicked away the remaining bomb. His sight was temporarily affected but he recovered rapidly.”

With its wireless disabled, the Liberator was coast-hopped basewards, the crew momentarily expecting to be ordered to bail out, but it was able to make landing near Tobruk.

“When we came down, it was still dark and our petrol was nearly exhausted” Dalton said. “As the hydraulic apparatus had been shot away, we had to use the manual gear to get the front and starboard wheels down, but the machinery for the port wheel having bits of flak in the works, would only half open, MacIntyre, always a splendid pilot, then did a marvellous job. He bounced the Liberator on the starboard wheel, which shock down the port wheel, and then made a perfect landing. Although there were 40 flak holes in the engines alone, none of them failed. There were also 20 holes near the seat of the gunner who ‘thought flak was coming in’.”

In addition to the Canadian skipper and the Rhodesian wireless operator – air gunner, the crew was composed of two Englishmen, two Australians, an Irishman and a Frenchman. Previously, it had been made up of the Canadian, the Rhodesian, five Englishmen and the Irishman. The Englishmen included a Cockney, aged 32, father of four children who was nicknamed ‘the old man’, a particularly reliable gunner.

MacIVER, F/L Norman (J22945) - Air Force Cross - No.19 SFTS - Award effective 21 April 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 802/45 dated 11 May 1945. Born 30 May 1914. Enlisted in Calgary, 13 March 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.10 Repair Depot, 2 May 1941. To No.2 ITS, 8 June 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 14 July 1941; posted that date to No.5 EFTS; to No.3 SFTS, 12 September 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 5 December 1941. To Trenton, 6 December 1941. To No.7 SFTS, 1 March 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 5 June 1942. To No.15 SFTS, 6 August 1942. Promoted WO2, 5 December 1942. Subsequently commissioned with effect from 6 October 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 6 April 1943. To No.19 SFTS, 2 May 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 April 1944. To No.3 SFTS, 27

February 1945. To No.7 Release Centre, 21 September 1945. Retired 28 September 1945. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Vol.58, file 190-I, dossier 6) has citation; when recommended he had flown 2,000 hours of which 1,800 were as instructor, 200 in previous six months.

This officer has been instrumental in greatly improving twin-engine bombing training at this Service Flying Training School. This entailed a great deal of experimental flying and additional work beyond that which is normally expected. He has carried out this work and in fact all his duties in an exemplary manner and by his initiative and energy he has set a high standard in both armament and flying training at this unit. This officer's devotion to duty has been highly meritorious.

DFC and Bar sent to him by registered mail, 28 June 1948. For additional details see H.A. Halliday, The Tumbling Sky. Logbooks held by Cold Lake Air Force Museum.

This officer has shown outstanding ability in operations against enemy transport, both in the Battle of the Falaise Gap and in the Arnhem battle. Most of these attacks were pressed home in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire. In January 1946 Flight Lieutenant Mackay led his section in an attack against enemy aircraft which were circling his airfield. He successfully destroyed one of the attackers and after expending the remainder of his ammunition on a second, pursued it so closely that he forced the pilot to crash. A few minutes later he repeated this brilliant feat and forced another enemy pilot to crash, thus destroying three enemy aircraft in one sortie. Flight Lieutenant Mackay has always displayed outstanding skill, determination and courage.

MACKAY, F/L John, DFC (J12635) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.401 Squadron - Award effective 15 May 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1085/45 dated 29 June 1945.

Since being awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, Flight Lieutenant Mackay has participated in very many sorties. Throughout he has displayed the greatest keenness and has been responsible for the destruction of much enemy equipment. He is a highly skilled and fearless fighter, whose devotion to duty has been outstanding. Flight Lieutenant Mackay has destroyed ten enemy aircraft in air fighting.

Further Notes: He flew about 300 sorties during the war. Later in his career, attached to RAF Station Manby, he took part in a round-the-world flight with Lincoln bombers.

As of 1 January 1952 he reported having flown 213 hours dual by day, 20 hours 30 minutes dual by night, 2,101 hours solo or as captain by day, 166 hours solo or as captain by night. His types included the Tiger Moth (107.45), Spitfire (403.10) and Tempest (15.55)

As of 31 December 1964 he listed the following types and hours flown: Sabre (882), T-33 (813), Harvard (1,459), C-45 (166), Hunter (13), Lightning (four), CF-100 (69), Athena (74), Mitchell (13), Lincoln (83), Meteor (144), Valetta (61), Vampire (61).

Died in Sardis, British Columbia, 7 August 1980 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. No citation other than "completed ...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.1941 (RG.24 Vol.20612) has recommendation dated 24 January 1945 when he had flown 30 sorties (187 hours 20 minutes), 28 July 1944 to 27 November 1944.

This Air Bomber has completed 30 operations and throughout his tour has shown great determination and devotion to duty.

On a daylight operation on Duisburg on 14th October 1944, while on the bombing run, his aircraft was hit by flak, smashing the perspex nose and one piece of flak striking his helmet. He pressed home the attack giving calm and cool instructions to the captain and successfully bombed the target. His results have always been most gratifying, having had no less than eight photographs plotted on the target.

As H2S leader, his patient instruction and example was an inspiration to all his section.

The sortie list was as follows:

28 July 1944 - Hamburg (6.25)
1 August 1944 - Acquet (5.40)
4 August 1944 - Bois de Cassan (6.05)
5 August 1944 - St. Leu d'Esserent (5.20)

1 November 1944 - Oberhausen (6.15)
16 November 1944 - Julich (5.25)
18 November 1944 - Munster (5.30)
21 November 1944 - Castrop Rauxel (6.10)
27 November 1944 - Neuss (5.15)

Training: Interviewed in Vancouver, date uncertain. "Has the necessary spirit and desire to fly and should do well in Aircrew. Mature, steady and responsible."

At No.5 EFTS he requested discontinuance of pilot training. "A quiet, defendable airman who is mature and reliable; did not do well as a pilot and prefers to reselect to some other branch of aircrew where he will be more valuable. A hard worker with a good attitude, should do well as Air Bomber. Conduct very good." (S/L W.W. Smith, 12 February 1942). He had flown six hours dual on Cornells.

Course at No.7 BGS was 8 March to 28 May 1943. Trained on bombing on Anson (47.55 day, 7.35 night); carried out 22 exercises, dropping 116 bombs (usually five per exercise). Described as "average air bomber." Trained in gunnery on Bolingbroke (23.10, day). In gunnery tests he executed five exercises, fired 4,350 rounds, scoring about ten percent hits. Spent 15 hours on turret manipulation, six hours in practical turret work (harmonisation, arming). Assessed as "above average" Air Gunner. General courses were Bombing (written), 233/250, Bombing (oral), 198/250, Proficiency as Bomb Aimer, 265/400, Gunnery (written), 89/100, Gunnery (oral), 84/100, Proficiency as Air Gunner, 150/200, Aircraft and Ship Recognition, 47/50, Signals, 48/50. Placed eighth in a class of 45.

Course at No.1 AOS was 31 May to 9 July 1943. Anson aircraft (26.10 day, 20.20 night). Examined in Navigation, Air Work (354/500), Bombing, Air Work (201/300), Photography, Air Work (130/200), Elements of Navigation (119/200), Signals, Practical (250/250), Photography (90/150), Reconnaissance (142/150) and Aircraft Recognition (204/250). Placed 29th in a class of 40. Assessed under the following headings - Navigation, "Air work consistently good. Pinpointing ability good. Ground work just average. A practical rather than a theoretical man." Armament - "Well above average in aircraft recognition. Slightly below average in bombing but as he is a very steady and reliable man he will make an excellent Air Bomber." General - "Keen type who impressed well on first appearance. Dependable and trustworthy. Works hard and proved quite capable in the air. Should make a good Air Bomber. Marks are no indication of his ability."

Course at No.9 (Observer) AFU was 2 November 1943 to 3 January 1944. Flew in Anson aircraft - 15.05 by day (map reading), 2.40 on "other" work by day, 6.20 by night (map reading). Described as "Very good and keen Air Bomber". Dropped 12 bombs with CSBS (two exercises, average error of 98 yards). Air Work marks were as follows - Map Reading, Day (305/400), Map Reading, Night (213/300). Ground courses in Map Reading (295/400), Recognition (95/100), Bombing Revision (60/150), Signals (30/50). "Progress during course fairly good. Bombing exam results below average - could have done much better."

Course at No.22 OTU was 12 January to 18 April 1944. Wellington aircraft. Day flying as follows - Local Bombing (11.40), Local Gunnery (4.05), Cross-Country Exercises (39.15), Other (2.00). Night flying as follows - Local Bombing (10.40), Local Gunnery (1.55), Cross-Country Exercises

(26.55), Other (3.10). Daylight Bombing Exercises as follows - High Level (two exercises, 16 bombs), Medium Level (one exercise, eight bombs), Stick (six exercises, 12 bombs), Simulation by Photography (six exercises). Night Bombing Exercises as follows - High Level (three exercises, 24 bombs), Stick (ten exercises, 20 bombs), Simulation by Infra-Red (nine exercises of which four were successful). Conducted two gunnery exercises, air-to-sea (1,000 rounds). Assessment of Cross-Country exercises was that his bombing was fair and map-reading good. Overall Air Work assessed under the following headings - Bombing, Day (92/150), Bombing, Night (109/150), Map Reading, Day (145/200), Map Reading, Night (150/200), Photography, Day (82/100), Photography, Night (86/100), and Gunnery (68/100). Ground Work assessed under following headings - Bombing Theory (40/50), Bombing Drill, Panel Manipulation (180/200), Map Reading, AMBT (165/200), Photography (43/50), Operational Bomb Loads (42/50), Pyrotechnics (35/50), Gunnery, Practical (135/150), Aircraft Recognition (43/50), Bombs and GMPs (32/50), Emergency Crew Drills (40/50). "Good type of officer. Steady and reliable at his work. Showed sound improvement while at this Unit. Air Work good.'

Notes: On repatriation form he stated he had flown 30 sorties (189.45 operational hours) and 156.10 non-operational.

DFC presented in Halifax, 27 July 1949. Died in New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, 12 February 1991 as per Legion Magazine of May 1991.

Flying Officer Mackay has completed a large number of successful sorties as air bomber. He has taken part in many operational missions against some of the most heavily defended targets in Germany, including Berlin, Stuttgart, and Nuremberg, and in three attacks on the battleship Tirpitz. On one sortie to the Kembs barrage the aircraft was badly hit in the bomb aimer's compartment. In spite of the extensive damage this officer displayed outstanding skill and coolness and greatly assisted his pilot to complete the mission successfully. His coolness and determination have always been an inspiration to his crew.

RCAF photo PL-42623 (19 March 1945) is captioned as follows: "He has dropped upwards of 500,000 pounds of high explosives on selected targets in more than 45 bombing trips. F/L M.L. MacKay, air bomber, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, was on all three trips against the battleship Tirpitz which ended in its sinking under the weight of 12,000 pound 'earthquake' bombs. He's disappointed that his operational career ended before he had a chance to drop the new British 22,000 pounder."

Notes: Application for Operational Wing dated 28 February 1945 stated he had flown eleven sorties with No.630 Squadron (79 hours) and 34 with No.617 Squadron (195 hours), 30 January 1944 to 22 February 1945.

On Repatriation Form dated 1 April 1945 he stated he had flown 46 sorties (264 hours 40 minutes), the last on 24 February 1945. Had also flown 351 hours 30 minutes non-operational. Types experienced were Anson (16.55), Botha (1.20), Wellington (80.35), Halifax (1.50) and Lancaster (515.30). Had shot down one FW.190 (possibly 20 May 1944) and been part of attacks on Tirpitz.

A report from No.630 Squadron dated 18 March 1944 stated that to date he had flown 47 hours 37 minutes operational and 286.16 non-operational. Sorties listed on this form as follows:

30 January 1944 - Berlin
24 February 1944 - Schweinfurt
28 February 1944 - Augsburg - shot up by FW.190
1 March 1944 - Stuttgart
10 March 1944 - Clermont-Ferrand
16 March 1944 - Stuttgart

Training: Interviewed 9 December 1941 in New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, 9 December 1941. "Desirous of flying. Wants to be in the service. Clean cut and seems of good character. Should make good aircrew."

Course at No.6 ITS was 25 May to 17 July 1942. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline,

Navigation, General Studies, Anti-Gas, Armament, Aircraft Recognition, Drill, and Signals and Meteorology. Scored 740 out of possible 1,000 points. Placed 80th in a class of 93. "Rather reticent and slow to learn. Pleasing appearance and personality. He can do well if he applies himself but seems to lack ability to concentrate, Second aircrew recommendation - Air Bomber."

Trained at No.20 EFTS, 17 August to 9 October 1942. Flew Tiger Moths - 12 hours 30 minutes dual and 20 minutes solo (30 minutes on instruments); logged five hours in Link. "Takeoffs below average, landings poor. Gliding speeds at times dangerous - stretching glides - Judgement of height and distance poor - Recommended for Air Observer." The report of the Chief Flying Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, General Studies, Airmanship, Armament (practical and written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill, and Signals. Scored 700 out of possible 1,000 points. Placed 30th in a class of 33 Instructor was explicit - "Flew this trainee 45 minutes during which time he proved his ability to fly and land but very timid and lacks initiative. I soloed him and he blew up - approached to land at 50 - 55 mph, recovery from bounce showed plainly that the man is temperamentally unsuited for service flying."

Course at No.5 BGS was 12 October to 2 December 1942. Battle and Anson aircraft; bombing training was 23.00 day and 5.50 night; gunnery training was 9.50 by day. Dropped 46 bombs high level and 12 low level. In gunnery scored 2.5 percent hits in Beam Test, 8.6 percent hits in Beam Relative Speed Test, six percent hits in Under Tail Test. Fired 1,600 rounds air-to-air and 600 rounds tracer. Spent five hours 55 minutes in turret manipulation. Spent 40 minutes in turret harmonization and arming. Examined in bombing, written (146/250), bombing, practical (197/250), Gunnery, written (79/100) and Gunnery, practical (68/100). "Above average in air work. Average in ground subjects." Placed 46th in a class of 49.

Course at No.1 AOS was 7 December 1942 to 22 January 1943. Anson aircraft - 22 hours 45 minutes by day, 14 hours 30 minutes by night. Graded in Air Navigation Air Work (71/100), Bombing Air Work (64/100), Photography Air Work (72/100), Elements of Navigation (43/50), Practical Signals (54/75), Phonography (45/50), Reconnaissance (36/50), Aircraft Recognition (59/75). Placed 13th in a class of 17. Described under following headings: Navigation: "Appeared to have no difficulty in learning to map read." Armament: "Aircraft recognition below average but this student is good worker in all Armament subjects." General: "Showed enthusiastic application to his ground work; should develop into a very good air bomber with further experience." (S/L W.C. Kent).

Course at No.4 AOS, RAF, was 19 May to 14 June 1943. Flew in Anson and Botha aircraft - 4.30 on bombing (day), 1.20 on gunnery (day), combined exercises (7.45 by day. 4.45 by night). Using CSBS dropped 11 bombs, day and night. Fired 400 rounds from Browning machine guns. "Above average theory. Practical results below average but should improve with more practice."

A very keen pupil with plenty of initiative, Did not complete course; extension refused by Air Ministry. Interviewed by Chief Instructor at end of course."

Course at No.14 OTU was 20 June to 14 September 1943. Flew 45.25 by day and 35.10 by night. Fired 500 rounds on ground and 500 air-to-air. Courses in bombs and components, pyrotechnics, bombing drill, panel manipulation, bombsights, bombing theory. "This pupil has had average results in his practice bombing exercises. He improved towards the end of the course but in his final assessment could only get average marks. He is keen, however, and should get on well at a squadron. Like the rest of his course has suffered from a break in training consequent on the change in stations."

MackAY, W/C Thomas Sutherland (C6540) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.6 Group Headquarters - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1219/45 dated 27 July 1945. Presented 29 May 1947. No citation in AFRO; DHist file 181.009 D.2629 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has only the following, provided for an investiture:

For meritorious and outstanding service at No.6 Group Headquarters.

Public Records Office Air 2/9056 has the following recommended citation:

Despite the abnormal strain of operational work brought about by D Day, Wing Commander MacKay, the Senior Intelligence Officer, immediately effected many far reaching changes in the Intelligence organization within the group. His keen, perceptive mind, unusual organizing ability and unflagging enthusiasm not only brought his own organization to its high peak of efficiency, but he was responsible for many suggestions which led to the improvement of the operational methods of the group. Wing Commander MacKay has made an outstanding contribution to the operational successes of this group.

Selected Assessments: “Although this officer has not had an administrative course, or any other specialized RCAF training, he carries out his duties in a satisfactory manner. He is very conscientious and pains taking.” (F/L J. Constabris, No.15 SFTS, 27 November 1941.)

“This officer has been carrying out the duties of an administrative officer and, temporarily, as Station Adjutant and his work is in every way satisfactory. He is very methodical, conscientious and hard working, and while he was at first handicapped by his lack of service knowledge, he has overcome this deficiency.” (W/C P.R. Hampton, 24 December 1941).

On posting from No.403 Squadron to No.11 Group, 5 August 1942. Duties were those of Intelligence Officer. “Pleasant personality who has travelled much and is conversationally very interesting. An Intelligence Officer with original ideas. His rendering of combat reports is excellent and his general interest in his work is a high standard.” (S/L A.C. Deere).

“An outstanding Intelligence Officer. Unexcelled for energy and keenness.” (G/C G.C. Truscott, 5 June 1944).

“Has a very pleasing personality, excellent qualities of leadership and his manner with subordinates is exemplary. Is a very capable Intelligence Officer; he has not only performed his tasks in a most satisfactory way but has accomplished many additional tasks of important nature." (S/L M. Adams, 8 August 1944).

"This officer is very interested in his own work and the reputation and efficiency of the RCAF as a whole. He has effected a great improvement in the Intelligence Branch since his arrival in the Group. An efficient and very satisfactory officer." (Air Commodore R.E. McBurney, 27 April 1945).

MackAY, F/O William (J39031) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.433 Squadron - Award effective 13 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2534/44 dated 24 November 1944. Born 23 January 1925 in Bagor, Northern Ireland; home in Toronto. Former Royal Canadian Artillery. Enlisted in Toronto, 15 December 1942 and granted Leave Without Pay until 3 May 1943 when posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.6 SFTS (non-flying duty), 22 June 1943. To Technical Training School, 27 June 1943. To No.2 Air Gunner Ground Training School, 3 September 1943. Promoted LAC, 16 October 1943 and posted to No.3 BGS; graduated and commissioned, 26 November 1943. To "Y" Depot, 10 December 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 20 January 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 26 May 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 27 November 1944. To Mountain View, 26 January 1945. To "Y" Depot again, 27 April 1945. To United Kingdom, 8 May 1945. This latter may have been a posting notice that was subsequently cancelled, as he was posted to Greenwood, 23 July 1945. To Release Centre, 3 September 1945. Released 10 September 1945. Award presented 22 June 1949.

This air gunner has displayed exceptional skill and his accurate shooting has on more than one occasion played a large part in the safe return of his aircraft to base. Flying Officer MacKay has contributed in the destruction of a Junkers 88.

DHH file 181.009 D.2611 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20627) has original recommendation drafted by S/L H.T. Patterson, 19 August 1944, when he had flown 20 sorties (95 hours 40 minutes). See also entry for A.L. Butler.

This officer, the Mid-Upper Gunner of the crew captained by Flying Officer Nixon, has to date made 20 operational sorties over enemy territory.

During the attack on Sautrecourt on the 16th of June 1944, Pilot Officer MacKay was the Mid-Upper Gunner of the aircraft which was attacked six times by enemy fighters. This officer, however, by his excellent teamwork with his Rear Gunner, was equally responsible in extricating his aircraft from a perilous situation.

On another occasion when detailed to attack Metz of the 28th of June 1944, this officer's aircraft was attacked by a Ju.88 just before reaching the target. His coolness, skill and determination resulted in the enemy aircraft being destroyed, thus once again extricating his crew and aircraft from a dangerous situation. His coolness in action has been a constant inspiration to his crew.

I consider that this officer, by his devotion to duty and gallant conduct, fully merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MACKELL, G/C David Edward (C1113) - Commander, Order of the British Empire - AFHQ, Director of Personnel - Award effective 1 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 113/44 dated 21 January 1944. Born in Ottawa, 12 March 1898 (RCAF Press Release 2659 announcing award) or 12 March 1897 (CEF attestation papers). Enlisted in 51st Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, Ottawa, 24 January 1916 (Canadian Artillery). To No.4 Company, Canadian Army Service Corps, Divisional Train, 18 April 1916. Embarked for England, 28 June 1916; arrived 6 July 1916. To Canadian Army Service Corps, 8 August 1916. To 4th Divisional Train, 9 August 1916. To France, 10 August 1916 as a Driver. Attached to 11 Canadian Field Ambulance, 4 January 1917. To England, 10 May 1919. To Canada, 6 June 1919. Discharged in Halifax, 21 June 1919. Enlisted in RCAF 1 April 1924; as of 1 April 1939 he was a Warrant Officer. Commissioned in Administration Branch, 15 September 1939. As of 1 June 1941 he was a Wing Commander in AFHQ. Promoted Group Captain, 1 November 1943. Promoted Air Commodore, 3 April 1944. Retired in Ottawa, 22 July 1950. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 23 October 1953 when he was an Air Commodore (retired). Helped organize RCAF hockey teams including the 1948 Olympic champion "Flyers". Died in Ottawa, 5 September 1972. RCAF photo PL-1263 taken as a Flight Lieutenant. Photo PL-48162 shows him after investiture, posed with W/C R.M. Winter, MBE.

This officer has served with distinction as Director of Personnel since July 1942, during which time he has been responsible for framing and implementing the many policies which devolve upon this Directorate. His unfailing loyalty and devotion to duty, his outstanding efficiency and great capacity to get things done, as well as his depth of perception and co-operative attitude, have made him a tower of strength to his superior officers. During the early stages of the war he was largely responsible for compiling and editing the numerous publications and orders under which personnel matters are now administered, as well as the development of suitable administrative procedures. His application to his many tasks has been an inspiration to all who have associated with him.

MACKELL, S/L Thomas Emmett (C2915) - Mention in Despatches - No.9 Construction and Maintenance Unit - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Home in Westmount; enlisted in Montreal, 11 October 1940 in Signals Branch; Flying Officer as of 18 March 1941. To Western Air Command, 17 March 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 5 July 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 April 1944. Classified as Landlines Specialist, 18 August 1944. To be Works and Buildings Officer, 15 June 1945. To No.2 Release Centre, 2 November 1945; retired 7 November 1945.

This officer has been in charge of construction of communication and telephone projects throughout the Command for the past three years. He has displayed exceptional ability and skill in this regard; he has accepted and completed projects far beyond the scope of the normal duties of his trade, and has instilled high morale and discipline in the men under his command. Numerous urgent telephone and signal projects have been directed to him to a speedy conclusion, in the face of great difficulty and trouble. It is due to his efforts that many essential services within this command were put into operation before schedule and to full efficiency.

posted to No.2 ANS; promoted Sergeant, 18 August 1941; to No.31 OTU, 8 October 1941; to RAF overseas, 9 December 1941. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace, 30 March 1943. Shot down and taken prisoner, 31 August 1943; while serving in No.419 Squadron Halifax JD331); POW for 20 months; returned to United Kingdom, 16 May 1945; repatriated 1 June 1945; released in Toronto, 27 August 1945 (WO1). Living in Vancouver in 1950.

Flight Sergeant MacKenzie has participated in many attacks on the enemy as air bomber. He has always shown great determination to press home his attack and hit the primary target. On many occasions excellent photographs have been obtained, which reflect great credit to him. He took part in the daylight raids on Le Creusot and Milan, and also in the night raid on Genoa. On the 22nd October, 1942, in the raid on Milan, the aircraft flew at a very low altitude and Flight Sergeant MacKenzie released his bombs with unerring skill in the middle of a large factory, which was left in flames. He has set a high standard in bomb aiming and has always displayed great devotion to duty.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his being shot down. Halifax JD331 of No.419 Squadron (VR-K), target Berlin, 31 August/1 September 1943. This was one of three Halifaxes of No.419 lost this night; the others were JD270 and JD464. Airborne at 1946 hours, 31 August 1943 from Middleton St.George. Shot down by a night-fighter and crashed at Hillentrup, 7 km ENE of Lemgo. Crew consisted of F/L D.J.Corcoran, RCAF (POW, held in L.3, POW number 2537), Sergeant D.W.Sweet (killed), WO1 A.G.MacKenzie, RCAF (POW, held in Camp 4B, POW number 222619), Flight Sergeant A.C.Harris (killed), WO2 H, de Aperng, RCAF (killed), Sergeant W.E.Greensides, RCAF (POW, held in Camps L.3 and 357, POW number 512), F/O D.E.Larlee, RCAF (POW, held in same canps as Corcoran, POW number 2371).

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire based on interview of 17 May 1945. He stated he had flown 45 sorties as navigator.

Took off from Middleton St. George. Aircraft on track. Winds good and steady. Ten to 15 minutes before target saw Halifax shot down on starboard. Two minutes later hit by flak fragments from below, then fighter attacked us. Intercom went dead, so told the pilot to go on reciprocal course for home as I thought we were badly hit. Then went back to table to work out new course. Engineer saw fire in fuselage and two port engines. Aircraft well on fire. I went up to pilot who said to bale out. Baled out and bomb aimer was waiting his turn.

Believe no evasive action taken and no return fire, unable to jettison bombs. Bomb doors would not open. Front hatch jettisoned. Wounded in legs by flak.

Windoe being dropped.

MACKENZIE, F/O Andrew Robert (J10976) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.421 Squadron - Award effective 15 January 1944 as per London Gazette dated 25 January 1944 and AFRO 410/44 dated 25 February 1944. Born in Montreal, 10 August 1920; home there; enlisted there 6 June 1940. To No.1 ITS, Toronto, 24 June 1940; graduated, promoted LAC and posted to No.4 EFTS, 21 July 1940. To No.31 SFTS, 6 October 1940; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 30 December 1941; to Central Flying School, Trenton, 8 January 1941 taking Flying Instructors Course No.30, 3 February to 22 March 1941. To No.11 SFTS, 10 April 1941; to CFS, Trenton, 30 July 1941 ; promoted WO2, 30 December 1941; commissioned, 31 March 1942; to No.16 SFTS, 24 April 1942. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 24 January 1943. To RAF overseas, 18 February 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. With No.421 Squadron, 10 August 1943 to 16 May 1943; No.403 Squadron, 16 May to 28 August 1944 (promoted Flight Lieutenant, 31 March 1944). Returned to Canada, flew Kittyhawks with No.133 Squadron (11 December 1944 to 28 January 1945) and No.135 Squadron (29 January to 7 September 1945). Transferred to Reserve, 1 October 1945; to Special Reserve (full employment), 3 April 1946; to Regular Force, October 1946. Promoted to Squadron Leader, 1 January 1951. Commanded No.441 Squadron (Sabres), 1 March 1951 to 6 November 1952. Flew in Korea, 51st Fighter Interceptor Wing. Shot down by friendly fire and held prisoner in China, 1952-1954. Subsequently an intelligence staff officer in NORAD. Last posting was Chief Administrative Office (CADO) at Rockcliffe. Retired 1967. Subsequently employed with the Canadian Pension Commission; a founder-member of the Korean Veterans Association Capital Unit, first president of the Canadian Fighter Pilots Association and a director of Sabre Pilots Association Air Division (SPAADS). Active in Canadian Legion and POW Association. Died in Kempville, Ontario, 21 September 2009 (Citizen obituary). Credited with the following victories: 26 August 1943, one Bf.109 destroyed (shared with three others); 22 October 1943, one FW.190 destroyed; 20 December 1943, two FW.190s and one Bf.109 destroyed; 28 June 1944, one FW.190 destroyed; 2 July 1944, one Bf.109 destroyed and one Bf.109 damaged; 16 July 1944, two Bf.109s destroyed. Photo PL-22152 shows him signing documents; PL-28492 (ex UK-9384 dated 1 April 1944) taken on occasion of his marriage to Corporal Joyce Svene (WD from Montreal); PL-75594 is a postwar portrait.

This officer has participated in numerous sorties and has destroyed four enemy aircraft, three of which he shot down during a sweep over northern France in December 1943. Flying Officer Mackenzie is a skilful and resolute fighter whose determination to destroy the enemy has always been evident.

Logbook Notes: His first flight at No.4 EFTS was 23 July 1940 with B. Stevenson (30 minutes, Finch 4482); second flight was same day with Stevenson, same aircraft, 45 minutes. First solo (25 minutes) was 5 August 1940 when he had logged ten hours 35 minutes dual. Instructors were B. Stevenson, J. Hogarth, A.T. Chesson, F/O Sharp and T. Marshall (instruments). First cross-country was 21 August 1940 to Montreal (with J. Hogarth). First solo cross country was 23 September 1940 (two hours 40 minutes to St. Hubert-Sorel-Cartierville. When he left No.4 EFTS he had flown 41.40 dual, 38.50 solo; of these totals he logged 10.15 on instruments.

On 23 October 1940 he first flew in a Harvard at No.31 SFTS (aircraft 2553, P/O Beaumont) for air experience, cockpit drill and effects of controls (30 minutes). Second flight was 29 October 1940, AH193, P/O W.R.L Beaumont (one hour) in taxiing, straight and level flight, climbs, gliding, stalls, medium turns, takeoff into wind, powered approach and landing. His third trip was 31 October 1940 (Harvard 2552), again with Beaumont (one hour 25 minutes) - climbs, gliding, stalling, medium turns, takeoff into wind, powered approach and landing; also spinning, action in case of fire, and abandoning aircraft. On 1 November 1940 he again went up with Beaumont, then took a solo test with F/O Rendle (30 minutes) and finally went solo (30 minutes). In short, he soloed after 4.40 of dual instruction. On 2 November 1940 he performed first aerobatics with Beaumont (one hour 20 minutes.)

Friendly Fire

The Ottawa Citizen of 20 April 2002 carried the following story by Kelly Egan under the title "These Things Happen in War" (following the death of four Canadian soldiers in Afghanistan when bombed by an American pilot).

The first time the Americans shot down Andy Mackenzie, it was June 1944, and he was piloting a Spitfire, a plane he loved, 1,000 metres over Utah Beach, only five days after D Day.

He and the offending officer on the ground, a U.S. colonel carrying a pair of pearl-handled pistols and a large misapprehension, managed to patch things up over a bottle of scotch.

The second time it happened he wasn't as lucky. In December 1952, in the blue skies over North Korea, he had to eject from an F-86 Sabrejet at 14,000 metres, as high as a commercial jet flies.

Drifting in and out of consciousness it took him 33 minutes to drift to the ground, where an enemy posse awaited. His next stop was a prison camp.

Mr. Mackenzie, now retired in an 1830s stone house near Oxford Station, spent the next 18 months in solitary confinement, emerging with 120 pounds on his skeleton. All because an American pilot, misidentifying his aircraft, thought he was on the other side and opened fire.

“These things happen in war”, Mr. Mackenzie, 81, said one afternoon this week, sipping on a rum and coke in his sun room, without a trace of resentment.

“We bombed our own troops at Caen, just about wiped out the Winnipeg Rifles. It’s not just the Americans. Sometimes there are unavoidable errors.”

He is right, of course. Friendly fire disasters, like the one that killed four Canadians in Afghanistan this week, are as old as war itself. Allied bombs, indeed, Canadian bombs, killed not four but dozens of our own ground troops during the Second World War.

Mr. Mackenzie, a native of Montreal, joined the air force when he was 19. He had never been in an airplane before but was desperate to fly. He got his wings on December 15, 1940 and became a flying instructor.

By 1943 he was overseas and by the next year he was a flight commander of 403 Squadron. He was first shot down shortly after the Allied invasion of Normandy, as he flew in a formation of six aircraft.

“The Americans must have thought we were the enemy. They blasted the hell out of us”, says Mr. Mackenzie, who still has his log books from his war days.

His radiator took direct hit of “ack-ack”, as he calls it, and within seconds the engine began to seize up and the propellor stopped. He was lucky enough to spot a crude airfield the Americans were constructing in the French countryside and was able to land his aircraft.

He was greeting by a racing Jeep, from which a colonel emerged brandishing the guns in a cloud of dust.

“I’m the man who shot you down. The war’s over for you, son,” the American said, thinking Mr. Mackenzie, under the layer of dirt, was an enemy pilot.

“That’s a Canada patch on my shoulder, that’s a Spitfire and you’re an asshole,” was Mr. Mackenzie’s retort. When the confusion was sorted out, Mr. Mackenzie said they retired and downed a bottle of scotch.

The times were different.

Though he was married with four children, Mr. Mackenzie volunteered to go to Korea and was seconded to the U.S. air force.

On December 4, 1952, he was flying on a mission up the west coast of Korea, toward the mouth of the Yalu River. He spotted two enemy MiG-15s below. He notified his commander he was going to give chase.

The message got garbled and he became separated from the U.S. squadron. As he tried to rejoin them, he took a hit from a distant American plane, perhaps five kilometres away. One of the plane's ailerons was struck, the electrical system was fried and the jet began corkscrewing out of control. He had no option but to bail.

Pulling on two levers, he exploded into the air. Travelling perhaps 800 km/hr, he flapped around like a rag doll, his gloves and helmet flying off. For a moment, he said, he thought his limbs were going to tear off.

He was able to remove his seat buckle and pull the ever activating the parachute. When he landed, he found himself on a hill, not far from a spot where an old woman was gathering sticks.

"You'd have thought this kind of thing happened every day. The woman barely looked up. She was the most stoic person I've ever seen."

It wasn't long before he was surrounded by Korean and Chinese soldiers. Mr. Mackenzie was detained, even after the war had ended, finally arriving home in Canada in December 1954.

The following year Mr. Mackenzie was invited to spend the weekend at the temporary home of U.S. General Glenn Barcus, who had commanded the air force in Korea. General Barcus said the pilot who shot Mr. Mackenzie was a religious man who struggled with the fact that he had gunned down one of his own. The pilot was transferred to less dangerous duties but died when he crashed his plane into the side of a mountain.

Mr. Mackenzie isn't sure to this day if the story is true.

"General Barcus told me the pilot admitted to shooting me down and he apologized on behalf of the United States air force," says Mr. Mackenzie. "I don't even know his name. I didn't want to know."

The retired pilot bears no grudge against the Americans and is philosophical about the four Canadians killed in Afghanistan this week. "It happens in war. You can't justify it but you can't dismiss it either. It's lucky in a way that only four were killed."

Promoted Flight Sergeant, 10 October 1942; to "S", 17 October 1942, still with No.125 Squadron including move to Torbay. Commissioned 12 December 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 12 June 1943. To "Y" Depot, late 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 20 January 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 12 December 1944. Repatriated 3 May 1945. Retired 6 July 1945. Graduated in Dentistry from University of Alberta; with his wife operated pediatric dental clinics in Edmonton and Victoria. Died in Victoria, 26 June 2017. Obituary said he had flown a total of 852 hours, operations including D Day and Market Garden. Public Records Office Air 2/9645 has citation.

Flying Officer MacKenzie served with his squadron in the forward area prior to the liberation of France. During this time Flying Officer MacKenzie completed much operational flying and rendered very valuable service. On the 15th June, 1944, the squadron moved to Normandy to one of the first airfields prepared to cover the army movements. From that date to the liberation of Paris Flying Officer MacKenzie participated in many sorties during which he dive bombed and machine gunned the enemy wherever he could be found; in addition Flying Officer MacKenzie destroyed 50 enemy road transport vehicles. Later, Flying Officer MacKenzie participated in operations in support of the army prior to the liberation of Northern France.

NOTE: No.441 files at Directorate of History and Heritage have the original recommendation by S/L Walker dated 8 January 1945 which gives total sorties as 130 (199 hours 30 minutes). He is credited with 50 MET destroyed, one aircraft destroyed and one damaged. The sorties are classified as follows - figures in brackets are those flown before liberation of Paris: Patrols: 53 (41); Armed reconnaissance: 29 (28); Escorts: 22 (six); Dive Bombing: 13 (13); Sweeps: eight (seven); Anti-Shipping: two (two); Air/Sea Rescue: two (two); Scramble: one (one). The recommendation then went on:

Flying Officer MacKenzie started his first tour of operations from England on March 28th, 1944, and for a period of two months carried out sweeps and escort to bombers who were neutralizing the Hun's defences on the invasion beaches. Then on June 15th, 1944, he moved into Normandy with the squadron to one of the first airfields prepared to cover the army movements. From then this officer strafed and dive bombed the enemy wherever he could be found, destroying 50 enemy road transport before the liberation of Paris. On July 5th, 1944 he damaged a FW.190 in the Gace area and again on July 13th, 1944 destroyed a FW.190 in the Argentan area.

After the liberation of Paris, Flying Officer Mackenzie moved to Beauvais, then Douai and finally to Antwerp covering the army in the final liberation of the Northern area of France. From the end of September, when the squadron returned to England he finished his tour on long range escort to the Ruhr area.

Flying Officer Mackenzie is a very keen and intrepid fighter pilot and has done a fine job of work, mostly during the liberation of France.

In view of the above mentioned facts, I strongly recommend the award of the Croix de Guerre to this officer.

MackENZIE, FS Gordon Thompson (R83959, later C18435) - Distinguished Flying Medal -

No.156 Squadron - Award effective 16 October 1942 as per London Gazette dated 27 October 1942 and AFRO 1783/42 dated 6 November 1942. Born in Ferhurst, Sussex, England, 27 April 1919. A ledger keeper in Toronto when he enlisted there, 10 December 1940; posted that date to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 Training Command, 7 January 1941. To No.3 ITS, date uncertain; graduated and promoted LAC, 21 April 1941 when posted to No.10 EFTS; to No.6 SFTS, 9 June 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 20 August 1941. Posted next day to Embarkation Depot. To RAF overseas, 17 September 1941. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 20 July 1942. Award presented at Buckingham Palace, 23 February 1943. Reclassified for "General Duties" (Administration), 5 June 1943. Commissioned 23 September 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 23 March 1944. Repatriated 9 July 1945. Retired 10 October 1945. Following the war he became a teacher with the North York Board of Education, was an enthusiastic ham radio operator and naturalist. After the war he worked as a science teacher at high schools in the Toronto suburb of North York. He married wife Mary in 1947 and they had a son and two daughters. Died in Toronto, 11 September 2002. RCAF photo PL-33085 (ex UK-15283 dated 26 September 1944) shows F/O Gordon MacKenzie, DFM (Toronto) saying goodbye to F/O Vince Forbes, Vancouver, acting Adjutant of the station where MacKenzie had been serving a non-operational tour as an Intelligence Officer. MacKenzie returning to flying duties. Forbes' duties described as including Salvage, Welfare, Entertainment and Sports.

Flight Sergeant MacKenzie has participated in many attacks on the enemy. On the night of the 28th July, 1942, he took control of a badly damaged aircraft from his wounded captain. By his courage and skilful handling he saved a valuable aircraft.

His obituary in the Globe and Mail describes the incident in more detail:

Flight Sergeant MacKenzie was second pilot of a Wellington when it was attacked and severely damaged over the Dutch coast. He took the controls from his wounded captain, only to discover the bomber's starboard elevator was missing and its starboard tailplane was damaged. As the plane neared the English coast, the engines began to sputter from a lack of fuel. The captain ordered the crew to parachute out. Even so, Flight Sergeant MacKenzie elected to stay with the aircraft and coaxed it down to a safe landing.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9600 has recommendation dated 22 August 1942 when he had flown on ten sorties (51 operational hours):

Flight Sergeant MacKenzie has carried out ten operational sorties in the past two months.

On the night of 28th/29th July 1942, when flying as second pilot, he took over controls of a badly damaged aircraft from his wounded captain near the Dutch coast.

Despite the fact that his starboard elevator was missing and his starboard tailplane damaged, making the aircraft very difficult to handle, Flight Sergeant MacKenzie brought it safely to the English coast. The engines were then misfiring due to shortage of petrol, and the captain gave orders to abandon by parachute.

Flight Sergeant MacKenzie, however, continued to fly the aircraft and effected a safe landing without further damage. By his courage and skilful handling of his aircraft, he saved a valuable aircraft and was largely responsible for the safe descent by parachute of his captain and crew.

To this the Officer Commanding, RAF Station Wyton, Hunts, added:

Is strongly recommended for the award of the DFM. His actions on the night of 28th/29th July, described above, were, in my opinion, extremely courageous and determined and in addition displayed a high degree of skill in handling the aircraft. He is a most reliable captain of aircraft and deserves recognition.

On 28 August 1942 the Air Officer Commanding, No.3 Group, added:

I most strongly support the above recommendation and the determination that this Non-Commissioned Officer displayed in endeavouring to save a valuable aircraft after he had assisted the wounded captain and crew who escaped by parachute, is typical of his behaviour during all his operational sorties. For the last two he has been appointed captain of aircraft after his behaviour on the night of 28/29th July and he has already proved his ability as such.

MackENZIE, F/O Kenneth Alexander (J5050) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.9 Squadron - Award effective 31 December as per London Gazette dated 12 January 1943 and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Born in Toronto, 17 October 1912; home there; educated at Humewood Public School (1920-1926), Oakwood Collegiate Institute (1926-1931) and also University of Toronto extension courses in traffic and transportation. Employed in the summers of 1927-1932 by CPR Great Lakes Service, Port McNicoll (cable watch), Upper St. Lawrence Steamships (Toronto, 1935-1936, watchman) and Toronto Grain Elevator Company (Toronto, watchman, 1936-1940)/ Enlisted in Toronto, 16 October 1940 and taken on strength of No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 ITS, date not shown; graduated and promoted LAC on 15 December 1940 when posted to No.1 EFTS; graduated 28 January 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 SFTS, 7 February 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant on 28 April 1941. Commissioned 30 April 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 11 May 1941; to RAF overseas, 31 May 1941. Disembarked in Britain 20 June 1941 and taken on strength of No.3 PRC. To No.12 OTU, 28 June 1941. To No.9 Squadron, 20 September 1941. Admitted to hospital, 21 November 1941 following automobile accident (cracked left wrist and ribs). To Station Honington, 6 December 1941 but still undergoing treatment. Assessed as fit for flying duty, 2 April 1942 though in need of refresher flying after a six month absence from air duties. To No.9 Squadron again, 6 April 1942. To Station Honington, 19 April 1942. To No.9 Squadron again, 29 May 1942. Killed in action, 8 November 1942 with No.9 Squadron (Lancaster R5916)..

As captain of aircraft this officer has displayed outstanding keenness and determination to achieve success. One night in September 1942. in appalling weather, he attacked a target in northern Germany. Although his aircraft was heavily engaged and hit by anti-aircraft fire, Flying Officer MacKenzie pressed home his attack. He flew with distinction on the daylight raid on Le Creusot and on the more recent raid on Milan.

Interviewed 22 August 1940 by F/O C.S. Stonehouse who described him as "Excellent type young man. Nice personality. Keen to fly. Applied to RCAF in November 1939. Consider above average intelligent. Believe to be officer material." At No.1 ITS he placed 40th in a class of 154. At No.1 EFTS he placed 10th in a class of 31, flying 21 hours 15 minutes dual and 25 hours five minutes solo in Fleet Finch (plus four hours in Link); described as "Steady, dependable type. Has ability to learn. Possible instructor material." At No.1 SFTS he was generally regarded as slow but keen and persevering.

Particulars of death: Lancaster R5916, returning to base after operations, collided with Lancaster W4265. Inquiry reported, "The accident occurred at night over base aerodrome. Neither aircraft had contacted base. Just before the collision occurred a Lancaster was observed immediately over the Watch Office at an estimated height of 1,500 feet, travelling in a southerly direction with navigation lights burning. Aircraft returning from operations would be flying in a northerly direction and it is thought the collision occurred head-on. As both aircraft were destroyed and there were no survivors, nothing further is known." Killed in this crew were MacKenzie (reported to have flown 131 hours ten minutes on type and 533 hours 30 minutes all types) plus 1216892 Sergeant J.J. Taafe (flight engineer), 1317547 Sergeant A.R. Billinton (navigator), 657341 Sergeant K.T.J. Adams (air bomber), 930590 Sergeant R.E. Werren (WOP), 1281297 Sergeant D.J. Wicks (mid-upper gunner) and 1378115 Sergeant H.R. Willacy (rear gunner). The website "Lost Bombers" provided the following additional details. Delivered new to No.49 Squadron 8 September 1942, R5916 took part in the following operations:

Dusseldorf, 10/11 September 1942; With No.9 Squadron, Bremen, 13/14 September 1942; Wismar, 23/24 September 1942; Gardening, Geraniums, 29/30 September 1942; Back to No.49 Squadron, raided Wismar, 1/2 October 1942; With No.9 Squadron, Le Creusot, 17 October 1942 (daylight); Genoa, 6/7 November 1942 (crashed). Airborne from Waddington at 1746 hours, 7 November 1942. On return to base, and while preparing to land, collided with another No.9 Squadron Lancaster (W4265) and crashed 0200 hours, 8 November 1942 in the airfield circuit.

MackENZIE, F/O Malcom Graham (J15492) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.148 Squadron - Award effective 17 March 1943 as per London Gazette dated 23 March 1943 and AFRO 757/43 dated 30 April 1943. Born in Manitoba, 8 August 1916; home in Kenora, Ontario; enlisted in Fort William, 9 November 1940. To "H", 15 December 1940. To No.1 ITS, 17 March 1941; graduated and promoted LAC on 10 April 1941; to No.7 EFTS that day; graduated 28 May 1941 and posted to No.5 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant 8 August 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 9 August 1941; to RAF overseas, 27 August 1941. Commissioned 22 May 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 22 November 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 21 May 1943. Invested at Buckingham Palace, 23 May 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 22 January 1945. To No.2 Air Command, 2 February 1945. To No.12 (Communications) Squadron, 8 May 1945. To Release Centre, 16 October 1945. Released 22 October 1945.

Flying Officer MacKenzie has been engaged in operational flights since June 1942. One night in August 1942 he was detailed to bomb an advanced enemy landing ground and following a violent explosion, started a large fire. Later in the same month and again in September 1942, he participated in successful double sorties against enemy transport concentrations in the battle area. Invariably he has exhibited a spirit of quiet determination, attacking heavily defended areas with coolness and precision too.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/8940 has recommendation sent by Headquarters, RAF Middle East to Air Ministry, 12 February 1943; copy courtesy of Sean Morrison.

The following recommendation for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross to Pilot Officer Malcolm Graham MacKenzie (J.15492) of No.148 Squadron is forwarded.

This officer joined the squadron on 28th June 1942, and has now completed 41 operations totalling 252 hours.

Throughout his tour he has exhibited a spirit of quiet determination to carry through the job in hand, attacking heavily defended areas with coolness and precision.

On the night of the 8th August this officer was detailed to bomb ALG.104 and started a large fire following a violent explosion. On 31st August during the critical period in which the Axis armies had started their offensive against Egypt, he was detailed to carry out a double sortie against enemy motor transport concentrations in the battle area. Both these sorties were carried out with good results, three fires being started. On the 2nd September he again carried out a double sortie on enemy motor transport concentrations, pressing home his attacks with vigour and starting two fires.

This Canadian officer has now completed 30 1/3 faultless attacks on enemy targets, ranging from Germany to occupied territory. He has consistently shown himself to be a pilot of great skill and has displayed high qualities of leadership and courage. He has been determined to press home his attack regardless of the opposition and has always been successful. His tenacity of purpose was magnificently displayed on his last sortie on the 16th August 1944, when, on proceeding to the target, an engine failed. He made no less than three runs over the target, despite heavy flak, to ensure that his bombs fell in the target area.

On the ground, as Deputy Flight Commander, he has shown willingness and enthusiasm which have been an inspiration to the whole squadron. For his determination and devotion to duty he is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

To "Y" Depot, 25 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 27 October 1942.. Repatriated 29 January 1945. To Western Air Command, 7 February 1945. To Release Centre, 28 May 1945. Released 21 August 1945. DFC presented 27 November 1948. Died in Edmonton, 8 January 2008.

This officer has captained his aircraft on a large number of operational sorties during the Sicilian and Italian campaigns. He has displayed determination, courage and devotion to duty. His attacks have invariably been accurate and his leadership outstanding.

RCAF Press Release 2681 dated 6 January 1944 has the following about him:

With the RCAF Bomber Command Overseas: The first time P/O Roy Ernest MacKenzie, DFC, ever flew over Germany his twin-engined bomber was hit by flak and one motor set ablaze. Despite this the skipper managed to get the crippled aircraft home and the crew have been praising him ever since.

That was 37 operations ago and in the interim the 26-year old pilot from Regina has been busily engaged in helping drive the Nazis out of Sicily and Italy. He recently returned to the United Kingdom from six months in North Africa to find the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross awaiting him.

Pilot Officer MacKenzie was cited for displaying "determination, courage and devotion to duty" and for invariably accurate attacks and outstanding leadership.

Mackenzie worked in Regina with an oil company, and later in Vancouver. After joining the RCAF he was engaged in clerical duties for two years before remustering to aircrew and graduating as a Sergeant pilot from No.4 SFTS, Saskatoon.

Posted overseas in November 1942, he soon joined his present squadron and managed to get in trips to Duisburg and Mannheim before the squadron moved to North Africa. It was over Duisburg that flak nearly put an end to his then infant flying career.

"We were hit while over the target", he relates, "and had to come home on one engine. The other caught fire, but I managed to throttle back and eventually it went out. Guess I lost twenty pounds that night."

After that experience, Africa was easier. "We didn't have any trouble there", he recalls. "Weather was nice and a lot of our flying was straight and level over the sea - none of this weaving you have to do over Germany."

Pilot Officer MacKenzie has logged 38 trips over enemy territory, but he still has a score to settle with an anti-aircraft crew around Duisburg. Some assistance may be forthcoming from a brother who is training to be a pilot in Canada. Another brother is in the YMCA in the United Kingdom. His parents live in Regina at Suite 14, Sellar Block.

MACKENZIE, Corporal (now Sergeant) William John (R51924) - Mention in Despatches - No.427 Squadron (AFRO gives unit as Station Leeming) - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1647/45 dated 26 October 1945. Born 24 September 1917. Home in Windsor, Ontario, enlisted there 24 October 1939 as aero engine mechanic. Promoted AC1, 29 February 1940. Promoted LAC, 1 December 1940. To No.1 ANS, 21 November 1941. To Prince Rupert, 13 December 1941. Promoted Corporal, 1 February 1942. To "Y" Depot, 1 February 1943. To RAF overseas, 8 March 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 April 1943. Repatriated July 1945. Released 14 September 1945. No citation in AFRO. DHist file 181.009 D.2619 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has recommendation forwarded to No.6 Group HQ, 12 February 1945 when he was a Fitter in "B" Flight, No.427 Squadron. Had served 39 months in Canada, 23 months in UK.

Corporal Mackenzie is a keen and capable fitter who has prevented many a non-starter by clear thinking and quick remedial action when "last minute" unserviceabilities have occurred. Devoted to duty and efficient in his trade, he is a real asset to the service and merits commendation.

The website <http://www.yorkshire-aircraft.co.uk/aircraft/yorkshire/york44/np703b.html> has the following incident recorded:

HALIFAX NP703 DAMAGED BY FLAK, RETURNED TO EAST MOOR AIRFIELD

On 14th October 1944 432 Squadron and 415 Squadron were instructed supply aircraft for two raids on Duisburg, one during the day and the second overnight. 432 Squadron supplied sixteen for the first and seventeen for the second. Halifax NP703 took part in the first and was hit by flak causing damage to the port outer mainplane. The pilot was able to fly the aircraft back to the UK, believed to be back to base and landed safely. The aircraft did not take part in the second raid but it's crew did using Halifax NP803. Pilot - F/Lt Francis Joseph Horan RCAF (J.10491), of Kenora, Ontario - awarded DFC; Navigator - F/O Kenneth Urban Lunny RCAF (J.36682) - Mentioned in Despatches; Bomb Aimer - F/O Robert East MacKerrow RCAF (J.36233), of Toronto, Ontario - awarded DFC and Mentioned in Despatches; Wireless Operator/Air Gunner - F/O Charles John Traynor RCAF (J.22854) - awarded DFC; Air Gunner - F/Sgt J. H. Fraser RCAF (R.213160); Air Gunner - F/Sgt D.J. Nicholson RCAF (R.183281); Flight Engineer - Sgt G. D. Davison RAF (1633395).

On the night of 2nd / 3rd December 1944 F/Lt Horan and crew were flying an operational flight when their aircraft was hit by flak injuring the navigator. With the ground forces making progress after the months after D-Day this crew landed at Antwerp due to a fuel shortage which would have prevented their crossing the North Sea. They returned to England soon after.

As Captain and pilot, Flight Lieutenant Mackett has completed 32 operations against the enemy. He has attacked such heavily defended targets as Hamburg and Mannheim and in addition has carried out a great number of special missions.

His tour of operations is remarkable for the consistent number of successes he has achieved. He has proved himself a daring and skilful pilot whose devotion to duty has always been of the highest order in the face of enemy opposition.

As a captain of aircraft he has led his crew with admirable keenness and enthusiasm, which has set a fine example to the rest of the squadron.

I therefore strongly recommend that Flight Lieutenant Mackett be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, a recognition he has well earned.

MACKIE, F/O Alan James (J9689) - Distinguished Flying Cross (United States) - 9th USAAF (AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas") - Award effective 20 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1861/44 dated 25 August 1944. Born 28 February 1919 in Toronto. Home in Regina; enlisted there 14 April 1941. Trained at No.2 ITS (graduated 3 August 1941), No.14 EFTS (graduated 10 October 1941) and No.11 SFTS (graduated 30 December 1941). Remained in postwar RCAF (22684), retiring in Ottawa, 6 October 1968. Died 15 June 2002 in Chilliwack. Photo PL-32470 shows him as a Squadron Leader, posing with F/O Ron Churchill (Prince Albert, Saskatchewan) at a Conversion Unit in the Middle East. Photo PL-32467 shows him; caption says he "didn't know this picture was being taken or he might have smiled more prettily for the camera. He had just finished his stint in a relay race at a swimming pool somewhere in Palestine." PL-32469 shows him as a Squadron Leader outside his Flight Office at the Middle East Operational Training Unit. RCAF photo PL-32470 (ex UK-14502 dated 1 September 1944) shows S/L A.J. Mackie in conversation with F/O Ron Churchill, Prince Albert - "Both have done an operational tour and are now spending their non-operational tour instructing." Public Records Office Air 2/9599 has citation from General Order No.31, HQ US Army Air Forces in the Middle East, 28 April 1944.

For extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flights during the successful invasion of Sicily by Allied Forces. These operations, which included the destruction of strategic enemy targets, were conducted despite intensive anti-aircraft fire of enemy ground targets, strong fighter opposition by enemy aircraft, and adverse weather and field conditions. The outstanding performance of his duties contributed in a marked degree to the successes achieved by his squadron on operational missions while with the Ninth United States Air Force in the Middle East prior to 24 July 1943.

Public Record Office Air 2/8973 has another text for his American DFC, identifying his unit as No.178 Squadron.

For distinguished achievement as pilot while participating in aerial flight during the successful invasion of Sicily by Allied forces, which included the destruction of strategic enemy targets in Sicily and Italy. These operations were conducted despite intensive anti-aircraft fire of ground installations of the enemy, strong fighter opposition by enemy aircraft, and notwithstanding adverse weather and field conditions. His outstanding performance of his duties contributed greatly to the successes of his squadron on operational missions.

Flying Officer Mackie has completed 28 very successful sorties over enemy territory and waters. This officer, captain of a very highly trained crew, has been selected on numerous occasions to attack targets which required an exceptional high degree of courage. On all these special targets he has, by his coolness and determination, accomplished great success, often against unexpected difficulties. Flying Officer Mackie has set a fine example of leadership, equalled by few on the squadron, and he is greatly admired by all members of this unit.

Knowing the courage and tenacity of this pilot, I very strongly recommend that Flying Officer Mackie be granted the Non-Immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

NOTE: His service documents at the National Library and Archives (Ottawa) include his logbook, a copy of which has now been deposited with the Canada Aviation Museum. The following items are taken from the logbook:

Classified as Link Trainer Instructor, 18 February 1942. To No.2 ITS, 26 March 1942 for Link Instructor Course . To No.32 EFTS, 9 May 1942. To No.3 Manning Depot, 13 June 1943; to No.4 ITS, 27 June 1943; to No.24 EFTS, 9 September 1943; to No.19 SFTS, 13

November 1943. Graduated and commissioned, 7 April 1944. To No.2 Aircrew Graduated Training School, 21 April 1944. To No.6 OTU, 16 June 1944. To "Y" Depot, 17 September 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 4 October 1944 although he did not disembark in UK until 12 October 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 7 October 1944. To No.229 Group, 7 November 1944. To No.435 Squadron, 26 November 1944. To United Kingdom, 21 August 1945. Repatriated 1 April 1946. Retired 30 May 1946. Died in Victoria, British Columbia, 14 August 1991 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. DHist file 181.009 D.1124 (RG.24 Vol.20595) has recommendation for AFC dated 4 April 1946. He had flown 1,500 hours, of which 1,230 hours were operational and 200 had been in previous six months.

Flying Officer Mackie has been with [this] unit since its formation in India where he flew 700 hours in close support of the 14th Army over perilous country and in inconceivable weather conditions. He remained in the unit when it reformed in the United Kingdom and has done invaluable work in setting a high standard over the air routes in Europe.

Notes: A report dated 11 February 1943 indicates how closely Link Instructors were monitored. He was checked by the Central Flying School while at No.32 EFTS, Bowden. This noted he had 50 hours of Link Flying, 800 hours instructing at desk, and 32 hours of instrument flying in the air. He was assessed as an Instructor ("Average"), performance in Link ("Average"), knowledge of pattern and sequence ("High average"), Manner ("determined, anxious"), Voice ("good"), Ability to Impart Knowledge ("Average") and Knowledge of Equipment and Instruments ("Good"). Described thus, "Shows remarkable improvement since tested in October 1942, a result of conscientious effort to make good through study and application. A capable instructor."

He had one accident with an Anson, No.19 SFTS, 18 March 1944 causing serious damage (landing while under standard beam approach instruction).

Course at No.6 OTU was 19 June to 25 August 1944 on Expeditor (14.25 day dual, 22.30 day as first pilot, 5.15 day as second pilot, 5.50 night dual, 13.25 as first pilot at night) and Dakota (9.45 day dual, 19.35 as first pilot by day, 7.50 as second pilot by day, 8.15 night dual, 11.55 as first pilot by night, 3.20 as second pilot by night plus 25 hours in Link. Ground training in Engineering (234/300), Navigation (77/100), Signals (72/100), Meteorology (160/200), Ship or Aircraft Recognition (80/100).

Assessments: As of 8 July 1945 he had flown 1,0020 hours. "Safe but not a natural pilot, though keen on transport operations. Not a service type. Recommended for Ferry duties." (S/L R.J. Clement, concurred in by W/C T.P. Harnett).

On 13 March 1946, described as "A captain of a hard working and reliable crew" (W/C C.N.

McVeigh).

Application for operational wing (19 September 1944) stated he had flown 214 sorties (701 hours 35 minutes).

Narratives: The following anecdotes add to his story. The first is from The RCAF Overseas: The Sixth Year, page 426:

There was little variety from routine for the Chinthes in July [1945], large quantities of rice being still carried into Northern Burma. One aircraft carried a cargo of 20,000 rupees but, unable to find the dropping zone, had to take the money back again. Towards the end of the month F/O E.J. Mackie had a harrowing experience when rice was being dropped from his aircraft at Falam. The sacks of rice had been tied together in pairs, one of which, on being thrown out, wrapped itself around the tail of the aircraft but the pilot got back to base and made a safe landing. F/O T. Kiez of the Elephant Squadron [No.436] had a similar experience at Taungup when two bales got wedged in his tail plane. He, too, after jettisoning his load, had got back safely.

The second narrative appeared in Determined to Deliver: The War-Time Story of the Chinthe Squadron by F/O David Martin (pp.24-25):

There was one extraordinary personal adventure that had nothing to do with weather or enemy fire or engine failure or any of the normal hazards of flying. F/O John Mackie of Chaplain, Saskatchewan, was the pilot of the aircraft. He himself was sitting in the co-pilot's seat while his co-pilot, F/O Manley Spencer of Midland, Ontario, was sitting in the first pilot's seat. They were flying along serenely at 10,000 feet. The navigator, F/O Norman Collins, of Rossland, Ontario, came forward to give them an alteration of course. As he poked his head into the pilot's compartment something moved underneath the automatic pilot, which is situated in the central part of the instrument panel.

"Holy Moses", ejaculated Collins. "You've got a snake riding with you."

As he said this the snake slithered out from behind the throttle quadrant, wrapped itself around Spencer's right rudder pedal, and looked up at him questioningly.

Spencer froze. This was the wisest thing to do, although during the first few seconds at least, wisdom had little to do with his freezing. For a minute that seemed like an aeon, Spencer sat there looking down at the snake, while the snake looked up at him from the rudder pedal with its cold, unblinking eyes. "Take over while I get out of here", he said quietly to Mackie. In the second pilot's seat Mackie was safely out of range. He took the controls and Spencer eased himself slowly out of his seat, his eyes fixed at all times on the rudder pedal.

At this point Collins, who had been rummaging around for a suitable weapon, came forward with a large jungle knife. He reached gingerly around behind the rudder pedal and slashed at the snake. He slashed some half dozen times before the snake relaxed its hold on the pedal and fell to the floor, coiling and twisting in its death agonies.

When the crew arrived home, they were informed that their uninvited passenger was a Russell's Viper, one of the most aggressive and deadly snakes in India. How the Viper succeeded in climbing up into the fuselage is something that has never been figured out.

Headquarters, He appears to have joined the postwar RAF, for F/L L. Mackinnon, DSO is awarded the Queen's Commendation for Valuable Services in the Air in June 1956. No citation other than "completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." Public Records Office Air 2/8780 has recommendation by W/C R.J. Lane dated 23 March 1944 when he had flown 31 sorties (190 hours 44 minutes) as follows:

15 September 1943 - Montlucon (5.27)
22 September 1943 - Hanover (5.34)
23 September 1943 - Mannheim (5.35)
1 October 1943 - Hagen (4.55)

15 February 1944 - Frankfurt-on-Oder (7.05)
19 February 1944 - Leipzig (6.22)
20 February 1944 - Stuttgart (5.47)
24 February 1944 - Schweinfurt (6.40)
15 March 1944 - Stuttgart (6.20)
18 March 1944 - Frankfurt (4.40)

This officer is a very capable pilot and captain. He has carried out 31 operational sorties, some of which have been against the enemy's most heavily defended targets such as Berlin, Hanover and Munich. The determination, skill and devotion to duty displayed by this officer has done much to keep the morale of the aircrew of this squadron at a high standard. Strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MACKINNON, S/L Lawrence Leroy, DFC (J19268) - Distinguished Service Order - No.405 Squadron - Award effective 29 September 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2373/44 dated 3 November 1944.

This officer has completed a second tour of operational duty during which he has successfully attacked a variety of targets, many of them in Northern France. He is an outstanding pilot, a dauntless captain and inspiring leader. His example has been well illustrated in the fine fighting spirit of the squadron.

Public Record Office Air 2/9159 had recommendation drafted by W/C R.J. Lane, 20 July 1944 when he had flown 50 sorties (252 hours 45 minutes) of which 19 sorties (62 hours) had been since his previous award. Additional sorties and submission as follows:

24 March 1944 - Berlin (6.25)
30 March 1944 - Nuremburg (6.10)
3 May 1944 - Montdidier (2.55)
6 May 1944 - Nantes (2.45)
10 May 1944 - Ghent (2.20)
11 May 1944 - Boulogne (2.20)
19 May 1944 - Mont Couple (1.45)
22 May 1944 - Le Mans (3.40)
27 May 1944 - Rennes (3.40)
10 June 1944 - Versailles (3.50)
12 June 1944 - Amiens (3.35)
14 June 1944 - Cambrai (2.50)
15 June 1944 - Lens (2.15)
16 June 1944 - Sterkrade (3.40)
17 June 1944 - Oisemont-au-Bois (2.35)
21 June 1944 - Oisemont-au-Bois (2.15, daylight)
24 June 1944 - Bonnetot (2.10, daylight)
28 June 1944 - Wizerne (1.35)
29 June 1944 - Metz (5.15)

This officer is an outstanding pilot and captain who has completed two tours of operations, most of his sorties having been directed against strongly defended

German targets. Squadron Leader MacKinnon is an exceptional leader who, by his personal example of fearlessness and extreme devotion to duty, has inspired his crew with the same unquenchable spirit. Undoubtedly, the fine example set by this officer in the performance of his duties has had a salutary effect on all members of this squadron. Strongly recommended for the immediate award of the Distinguished Service Order.

This was endorsed by Group Captain G.P. Dunlop (Officer Commanding, Station Gransden Lodge) on 23 July 1944 and by Air Vice-Marshal C.M. McEwen (Air Officer Commanding, No.6 Group) on 29 July 1944. It was approved on 17 August 1944 by Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris..

Public Record Office Air 50/248 has a Combat Report from his career (27/28 January 1944). Full crew was J19268 P/O L.L. MacKinnon, RCAF (captain), J22484 P/O W.D. Renton (navigator/plts), 1383981 Flight Sergeant V.E. Bowden (navigator/set operator), 1077021 Sergeant G. Connell (WOP/Air), 1563699 Sergeant J.S. Pennie (mid-upper gunner), 1533602 Sergeant T. Waters (rerar gunner) and R58024 Sergeant E.W. Chappell (Flight Engineer).

Whilst on operations the night of 27/28 January 1944, on Berlin, Lancaster "G" (JB183) of 405 Squadron, RCAF, was attacked by an Me.110 on the way home from the target at a position 50.27N 0500W at 2255 hours heading 282 M, 160 knots I.A.S. at a height of 20,500 feet, visibility fair, 6/10 cloud, 7,000 feet.

The enemy aircraft was first sighted at 700 yards on the starboard beam down. Enemy aircraft made his attack from port bow up and broke away starboard quarter up. Evasive action was taken, a diving turn to port. Mid-Upper Gunner opened fire at 250 yards and ceased fire at 300 yards. Enemy aircraft did not open fire. No damage to our aircraft. Mid-Upper gunner fired about twenty rounds without any stoppages. No claim is made as far as enemy aircraft is concerned.

RCAF Press Release No. 6317 dated 23 August 1944 from S/L T.C. McCall, transcribed by Huguette Mondor Oates, reads:

WITH THE RCAF BOMBER OVERSEAS: -- You can take it from a lad who knows, the toughest trip of them all is the last one; the one that goes down in the logbook as the end of two complete tours. Squadron Leader Lawrence MacKinnon has been to Berlin 13 times. He has sat in the cockpit of a four-engined Lancaster and watched nearly every other important city of the Reich blasted and burned by Allied bombers. In his 50 odd operational sorties he has mixed with fighters, flak and weather. But the trip that causes him the most unpleasant reflection is the one he made to Metz.

"I'll never forget that one," the 22-year-old Ponoka, Alberta pilot says. "Before I took off, I knew it would be the last one and I really had a bad case of stage fright --- I guess you'd call it. Couldn't help but wonder, a little more than I usually did, if I'd get back."

Bomber Command took what Squadron Leader MacKinnon describes as "quite a licking" that night too, but he completed his own mission without event and marked finis to two complete operational tours. Today the stocky youngster wears the ribbons of the Distinguished Service Order and the Distinguished Flying Cross on his tunic and holds a post at headquarters of the RCAF Bomber Group where Canada's heavy bomber offensive against the Nazis is directed.

The war plucked him from a job in a Ponoka garage back in September, 1941. He had graduated from High School in the town where his father, Neil MacKinnon is a government farm superintendent, and although enlisting in the spring of the year, was not called for service until September. Winning his pilot's wings in October, 1942, he was posted overseas without delay as a sergeant, and joined the first Canadian heavy bomber squadron. He did all of his operational trips with that squadron which has been adopted by the City of Vancouver.

Although he regards Berlin as sufficiently well defended to stay in any airman's memory, it is Lepsig that he recalls as a particularly difficult spot for allied airmen to attack. "Somehow or other we always got into trouble there," he says. "We'd have one engine quit on us, or maybe two, and there'd be fighters or icing or some other trouble. But we were lucky. I don't know what a good flak or fighter lacing is like; but I don't want to shoot a line about that. I had good gunners --- that's the reason, and the whole reason --- and although we had plenty of fighters making passes at us, we got away."

Squadron Leader MacKinnon has his own theories about the role of gunners in a bomber. "In my opinion a really good gunner doesn't fire his guns. He keeps you away from the other fellows' fire. If a gunner in a bomber sees a fighter first, then the fighter should never get close enough to hack away at you."

In the veteran skipper's crew during most of his two tours on Lancasters, a Scotsman and a Yorkshireman manned the guns. His navigator was Flight Lieutenant Doug Renton of Victoria, B.C., his bomb-aimer Flight Lieutenant Ross Baroni, Arnprior, Ontario; and his flight engineer, Sergeant Eddie Chappell of Vancouver. Squadron Leader George Sweany, DSO, DFC of Sudbury and Toronto, Ontario also flew in the same crew for seven sorties.

Commissioned in June, 1943, the present squadron leader wore an N.C.O.'s uniform for six months before he learned that he was an officer. He was awarded the DFC in February of this year, and the DSO followed in August. He would like to fly after the war but is doubtful if there will be much opportunity for young men such as himself to keep their hands in as pilots.

Another member of his family, LAC Lloyd MacKinnon recently returned to Canada after two years of service overseas as a wireless electrical mechanic. He has another brother and sister living at home.

This officer is a pilot of outstanding skill and determination who has taken part in numerous attacks against heavily defended targets in Germany. On one occasion in October 1944 he was detailed for an attack against Wanne Eickel. En route to the target, engine trouble was experienced and while over the target very heavy anti-aircraft fire was encountered which caused severe damage to the aircraft. Undeterred, Flight Lieutenant MacKinnon pressed home a telling attack. Throughout this trying experience this officer's cool efficiency and dogged determination were a source of encouragement and confidence to the other members of his crew.

DHH file 181.009 D.1510 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Vol.20600) has recommendation drafted by S/L J.E.G. St. Jean (acting Commanding Officer), 11 January 1945 when he had flown 25 sorties (152 hours 40 minutes); no sortie list:

Flight Lieutenant MacKinnon is a pilot of outstanding skill and determination. On October 12th, 1944, the crew of which Flight Lieutenant MacKinnon is pilot was detailed to bomb Wanne Eickel, Germany. On the trip to the target, engine trouble was experienced. This caused the aircraft to be delayed and necessitated it taking its place at the tail end of the bombing stream.

The aircraft was subjected to a very heavy flak attack and sustained 18 major holes. Flak shot away the aileron control and making evasive action impossible and also severed one of the oil pipe lines.

Determined to drive home his attack, this courageous pilot pressed on to the target and bombed it successfully. The aircraft limped back to base. Under these adverse conditions Flight Lieutenant MacKinnon's cool efficiency and dogged determination were a source of encouragement and confidence to the remainder of the crew.

This officer, by his skill and efficiency, carried out his missions over heavily defended targets such as Berlin (three times), Leipzig, Wilhelmshaven, Duisburg, and Ludwigshaven. His keenness, vigilance and remarkable airmanship are worthy of the highest praise. It is for these reasons that I recommend Flight Lieutenant MacKinnon for the Immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Training: Course at No.2 ITS was 9 June to 9 July 1941. Courses in Mathematics (83/100), Armament, practical and oral (76/100), Signals (93/100), Hygiene and Sanitation (20/40), Drill (74/100), Law and Discipline (43/60). Graded 80/100 in Link. Placed 149th in a class of 250. Noted that he had a brother in the RCAF and another in the Navy.

Course at No.5 EFTS was 15 July to September 1941. Tiger Moth aircraft (28.50 dual, 25.00 solo, of which 8.15 on instruments. Also logged ten hours in Link. Considered average in the air - "This student should be checked on all flying sequences." Ground training marks were Airmanship (185/200), Airframes (59/100), Aero Engines (69/100), Signals, practical (92/100), Theory of Flight (62/100), Air Navigation (182/200), Armament, oral (110/200). Placed 44th in a class of 64. "Good average student, bright, aggressive, rather sure of himself, argumentative type, conduct good."

Course at No.10 SFTS was 1 September to 21 November 1941. Crane aircraft (43.35 day dual, 35.25 day solo, 7.40 night dual, 2.20 night solo). Spent 16.25 on instruments and logged 22 hours in Link. "Very slow to learn. Instruments need watching. Also night flying." (F/L B.C. Andrew). Ground courses in Airmanship and Maintenance (134/200), Armament, written (67/100), Armament, practical (82/100), Navigation (115/150), Meteorology (27/50), Signals, written (33/50) and Signals, practical (65/100). Placed 22nd in class of 57.

Selected Assessments: "A satisfactory officer whose work at this unit was always conscientiously carried out. He has a pleasant disposition and should do well as an operational pilot." (W/C J.G. Gien, 13 May 1944; he had flown 642 hours, 112 in previous six months).

"A consistently capable captain who has been a definite asset to the squadron." (W/C H.C. Ledoux, 14 April 1945; he had logged 1,127 hours, 243 in previous six months.)

"This officer is exceptionally well qualified, both professionally and temperamentally, for the position of Senior Public Relations Officer. He cheerfully undertakes all tasks and responsibilities assigned to him and is at all times a hard and conscientious worker. He takes a keen interest in the welfare of those serving under him. It will be extremely difficult to find a comparable replacement when this officer is posted to other duties." (R.V. Dodds, Director of Public Relations, 25 October 1948).

MackIRDY, F/L Daniel Harvey (J89429) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.158 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 22 May 1945 and AFRO 1147/45 dated 13 July 1945. Born 23 July 1914 in Mirror, Alberta; home in Vancouver (teacher); enlisted there 5 August 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay until 30 August 1942 when posted to No.3 Manning Depot. To No.2 ITS, 2 November 1942. Graduated and promoted LAC, 20 March 1943; to No.2 AOS, 3 April 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 20 August 1943. To "Y" Depot, 3 September 1943. To United Kingdom, 12 September 1943. Disembarked in Britain, 19 September 1943. To No.1 (Observer) AFU, 2 November 1943. To No.29 OTU, 11 January 1944. To No.41 Base, 4 May 1944. To No.1658 Conversion Unit, 12 May 1944. To No.158 Squadron, 22 June 1944. Commissioned 25 August 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 25 February 1945. Repatriated 23 April 1945. Retired 12 June 1945. Lived for much of the postwar period in Fort St. John and Abbotsford, British Columbia (teacher and elementary school principal). Enrolled in RCAF Primary Reserve, 10 October 1953 as Air Observer, serving to 30 December 1958, working in recruiting field. Died in Duncan, British Columbia, 28 January 1985 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. Photo PL-41776 show FS R. Bower, MacKirby and FS A.H. Delorie.

Throughout numerous operational sorties during which he has participated in attacks against some of the most heavily defended targets in Germany, this officer has displayed outstanding navigational ability. In addition he has invariably shown great courage under fire and coolness and initiative in times of stress. On three occasions he has taken part in actions against night fighters which have ended in the destruction of the enemy aircraft. Flight Lieutenant MacKirby as flight navigation leader has been untiring in his efforts in the training of navigators.

Note: On 9 April 1945 he filed a form stating he had flown 38 sorties (184 operational hours) plus 171 non-operational hours. Overseas flying had been on Ansons (56.30), Wellington (63.00), Halifax II (27.30) and Halifax III (208.00). He described his experiences briefly: "Five months experience as Flight Navigation Leader, also carried out duties of squadron Navigation Officer when necessity arose." He added, "Three enemy fighters shot down (confirmed) by crew."

Application for Operational Wing dated 28 March 1945 stated he had flown 38 sorties, (184 hours 15 minutes), 27 June 1944 to 14 March 1945.

Assessment by W/C G.B. Read, No.158 Squadron, 9 April 1945 covered period 25 August 1944 to 9 April 1945 (did not cover NCO service): "A very capable navigator and a steady officer of smart appearance and pleasant manner who is popular with his fellows. He is persevering and always gives of his best, setting a good example at all times."

MACKLIN, S/L Douglas Irving (C2361) - Air Force Cross - Conversion Training Squadron, Rockcliffe - Award effective 20 October 1942 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1830/42 dated 13 November 1942. Born in Sarnia, 14 May 1906. Home in Sarnia, Ontario (florist and flying instructor). Attended Culver Military Academy, Indiana, 1923-1924. Attended Parks Air College, St. Louis, Missouri, March to August 1930. Enlisted London, Ontario, 22 February 1940 as Sergeant Pilot and posted to Trenton. Commissioned 30 May 1940 as Flying Officer. To No.4 SFTS, 22 June 1940. To No.10 SFTS, 22 March 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 August 1941. To No.6 SFTS, 13 October 1941. To Conversion Training Squadron, Rockcliffe, 17 March 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 15 August 1942. To AFHQ, 8 August 1943. Embarked from Canada, 26 August 1943. Disembarked in Britain, 1 September 1943. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 7 September 1943, Attached to Empire Central Flying School, 22 September 1943. Temporary Duty at No.14 (Pilots) AFU, 1-2 October 1943. Attached to No.6 (Coastal) OTU, 8-9 October 1943. Attachments to Stations Riscal, Wittering, North Coates and Derby. In all at ECFS he flew 113 hours 45 minutes on a wide variety of aircraft - Oxford, Master, Magister, Wellington, Spitfire, Hurricane, Blenheim, Anson, Hotspur, Harvard and Lancaster - described as "A capable pilot on all types, cheerful and willing. Should do well as Chief Instructor at an SFTS in Canada." To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 27 December 1943. Embarked from Britain that day; disembarked in New York, 5 January 1944. To No.1 Central Flying School, Trenton, 23 January 1944. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 August 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 19 March 1945. Retired 20 March 1945. Award presented 3 December 1942. Died in Sarnia, Ontario, 15 December 1985 as per Airforce Magazine of April-May-June 1986.

This officer received his wings at RCAF Station Trenton on April 24, 1940, and his Instructor Category "B" and was commissioned as Flying Officer on May 30, 1940. Since, he has acted as Flying Instructor, Flight Commander, Examining Officer, and Chief Instructor at various stations. He was categorized an A1 Flying Instructor on November 29, 1941, and has completed 1,160 hours as an instructor. During one period in 1940, due to the shortage of instructors, he instructed for 80 hours in 16 consecutive days. Throughout his service career, his unfailing cheerfulness and his devotion to duty under trying conditions in addition to his skill and precision as a pilot, has inspired his students and all personnel who served with him. This officer's total flying time is 1,238 hours 20 minutes.

Recommendation raised 7 July 1942 by W/C J.C. Huggard; text as above. Supported at all levels, clearing AFHQ on 2 September 1942.

Notes: Applying to join the RCAF he stated he had flown Travellaire Biplane (28 hours), Barling monoplane (two hours), Gypsy Moth (40 hours), Avro Avian (240 hours), Fleet (four hours) and Stinson (six hours).

Assessed as Instructor, 15 April 1941 by which time he had flown 443 hours 20 minutes solo and 38 hours 20 minutes dual on single engine aircraft, 140 hours solo and five hours 25 minutes dual on twin engine aircraft. He was then category "B" instructor. Tested on a Harvard and described under following headings - Sequence (Good), Voice (Good), Manner (Confident), Ability to Impart Knowledge (Above Average), Ability as Pilot (Above Average), and Remarks ("Above average instructional ability and has proved by his work to warrant a raise in category"). Raised to "A-2" Category.

Assessed as Instructor by S/L William M. Foster, 27 November 1941 by which time he had flown 836 hours solo and 66 hours 15 minutes dual on single engine aircraft, 160 hours solo and five hours 25 minutes dual on twin engine aircraft. by which time he had flown 443 hours 20 minutes solo and 38 hours 20 minutes dual on single engine aircraft, 140 hours solo and five hours 25 minutes dual on twin engine aircraft. Tested on a Harvard and described under following headings - Sequence (Above Average), Voice (Clear), Manner (Phlegmatic), Ability to Impart Knowledge (Above Average), Ability as Pilot (Above Average in all respects), and Remarks ("An above average pilot who can demonstrate flying manoeuvres with skill and precision. His manner in the air instills confidence. He has a good knowledge of sequence and can describe each phase of a manoeuver in an instructive fashion. Ability and experience warrant the highest category.") Reclassified "A-1" Instructor.

Selected Assessments: "This officer is Squadron Examining Officer. He flies well and discharges his duties in an efficient manner. As an officer he could show more keenness and alertness and be more punctual." (W/C A.H. Wilson, No.10 SFTS, 15 June 1941).

"This officer has taken over as Officer Commanding, Conversion Training Squadron from former position as Chief Instructor. Will require guidance and checking in the running of his squadron. Most cooperative officer with welfare of station at heart. Should do well." (G/C J.L. Hurley, Station Rockcliffe, 2 November 1942)

"S/L Macklin has run his unit (Conversion Training Squadron) with obvious ease and efficiency.

He has been well provided for in personnel and equipment but has a cooperative spirit which reacts on his troops." (G/C J.G. Bryans, Station Rockcliffe, 19 February 1943.)

"S/L Macklin has been filling a Wing Commander's post for almost four months as Officer Commanding the Bombing and Gunnery Visiting Flight. He has been doing a most satisfactory job as evidenced by letters from stations he has visited, commending the value and good work of his flight. Strongly recommended for promotion to Acting Wing Commander." (S/L E.B. Gale, No.1 Central Flying School, 15 May 1944).

MACKLIN, F/O Ewart Vernon (J24560) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.434 Squadron - Award effective 1 December 1944 as per London Gazette dated 12 December 1944 and AFRO 337/45 dated 23 February 1945. Born 24 May 1917. Home at Scarborough Junction, Ontario; enlisted in Toronto, 28 January 1942. To No.1 Manning Depot, 1 March 1942. To No.6 ITS, 29 August 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 6 November 1942; to No.9 AOS, 21 November 1942; graduated and commissioned, 19 March 1943. To "Y" Depot, 3 April 1943. To RAF overseas, 13 April 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 19 September 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 19 March 1945. Repatriated 13 June 1945. Retired 30 August 1945. Presented 22 June 1949. Postwar he worked with Massey-Ferguson. Died in Toronto, 7 October 1998. No citation other than "...in recognition of gallantry and devotion to duty in the execution of air operations against the enemy." DHist file 181.009 D.3080 (RG.24 Vol.20636) has recommendation (undated) when he had flown 37 1/2 sorties (184 hours 25 minutes), 29 March to 31 August 1944.

This officer, a navigator, has completed 37 sorties against the enemy and by his outstanding ability has successfully navigated his aircraft to such distant and heavily defended targets as Brest, Stuttgart, Hamburg and Montzen. His co-operation, coolness and devotion to duty inspired confidence to all, whether on the ground or in the air. An efficient navigator, he has been largely responsible that his crew have always pressed home the attack to the utmost. In recognition of this officer's bravery and devotion to duty I strongly recommend that he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacLAURIN, F/O Donald James (C2112) - Mention in Despatches - No.407 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1943 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Home in Kapuskasing, Ontario. Enlisted in Ottawa, 22 May 1940 or 4 June 1940 in Engineer Branch. Flying Officer as of 6 December 1940. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 9 September 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 July 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1

August 1943. Repatriated 14 January 1944. To Western Air Command, 23 February 1944. To Patricia Bay, 28 February 1944. To No.32 OTU, 5 April 1944. To No.6 OTU, 31 May 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 12 December 1944. Resigned commission, 20 December 1944. Living in Wisconsin in 1950. DHH file 181.009 D.2620 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20628) has recommendation for an MBE drafted 17 August 1942 as follows:

Flying Officer D.J. MacLaurin has now served eleven months with this unit as Engineer Officer. In this capacity he has produced first and foremost an exceptionally good record of serviceability throughout a period of extensive operational service when the aircraft were called upon to withstand the most rigorous treatment from both the pilots and from the weather. By virtue of his personality, knowledge of men, and by his own example he commands both the respect and the very good will of the entire squadron and has thereby instilled in all his men the will to work without complaint under the most exacting and trying conditions. Having a sound specialized and general knowledge of service life and regulations together with a remarkable sense of balance, he has proved himself to be a most trustworthy guide on many matters of squadron administration and discipline. In this manner he has made a large contribution to the general smoothness with which this squadron has been able to operate.

Before proceeding overseas, Flying Officer MacLaurin served nine months at Service Flying Training Schools in Canada.

NOTE: On 11 November 1943 W/C W.H. Swetman, CO of Station Linton-on-Ouse, recommended him for the Canada Medal. At the time he noted that MacLaurin (now a S/L and Station Engineer Officer) had been posted to England in September 1941, serving as Engineer Officer to No.407 Squadron, then Station Dunsfold (January to June 1943) and then No.62 Base (June 1943 to that date). "Squadron Leader MacLaurin's dogged determination, skill and devotion to duty and his ability as a leader has been instrumental in obtaining the highest efficiency in his work."

RCAF Press Release No. 714 dated 2 September 1942 reads:

One of the three oldest members of the Demon Squadron, and certainly one of the most popular, is the officer who goes about in work humming or whistling Scotch tunes for, although a 100% Canadian, he can't forget his Highland ancestry.

The officer concerned, even now spending his leave cycling through the Highlands and Lowlands of Scotland, is F/O D.J. MacLaurin, better known to the whole squadron and station as "Mac".

"Mac" is engineer officer of the Demons and in that capacity, and as leader of the "boys who keep 'em flying," the ground crews, has done a magnificent job of maintaining the squadron's Hudsons always in shape for the tremendously important task allotted to the Demons, that of harassing enemy shipping in the North Sea.

The "engineer bloke" is held in the highest regard by everyone in the squadron from W/C A. Coatsworth Brown, DFC, of Winnipeg, the C.O., down to the newest AC2. Cheery, fun-loving "Mac" is a friend of everyone on the squadron and no party, whether in the airmen's, sergeants' or officers' mess is complete without him.

"Mac," the son of Dr. D.L. MacLaurin, Assistant Superintendent of Education for British Columbia, and Mrs. MacLaurin, was born in Revelstoke, B.C. and brought up in Victoria where he attended public and high school. While at Victoria High, the future RCAF officer was a member of the Cadet Corps and commanded the 112th Battalion, Cadet Services of Canada, with the rank of Cadet-Major.

Young "Mac" decided upon engineering as a career and so entered the University of British Columbia, graduating in 1932 with the degree of Bachelor of Applied Science.

While at University of British Columbia, "Mac" was one of the prime movers in organizing the disbanded Canadian Officers Training Corps contingent which had lapsed following the Great War. He, with several other students, notably the now Wing Commander Johnny Plant, officer commanding a Canadian Catalina Squadron in Ceylon, induced the authorities to permit the contingent to come into existence again and then whipped up enough enthusiasm among the students, although strenuously opposed by many of the student body, to guarantee success.

From University of British Columbia, the young graduate went as engineer to the B.C. Pulp and Paper Co., being stationed at both Good Fiber and Port Ellis. "Mac" then returned to school, attending the post-graduate school at the University of Washington at Seattle, there becoming a member of the world-famous crew, and later entering University of Wisconsin, graduating in the spring of 1927 with the degree of Master of Science.

While at University of Wisconsin, he met a young lady named Julia Hinz, to whom he now writes regularly although he addresses his letter to Mrs. D.J. MacLaurin, for he married her in 1938 and they are the parents of a handsome, blonde three-year-old youngster named Donald.

Upon the receipt of his Masters in Science, "Mac" went to work for the Kimberly-Clark Corporation and travelled extensively throughout the state of Wisconsin, making Appleton, his wife's home town, his headquarters.

A year later, he returned to Canada as engineer with the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. Ltd., an affiliate of his former employers. The young family set up housekeeping at Kapuskasing in Northern Ontario and there entered wholeheartedly into the life of that thriving community.

"Mac" claims to be a member of practically every club and organization in "Kap", notably the Board of Trade, Community Club and Golf Club, while Mrs. "Mac" is now secretary-treasurer of the local Horticultural Society. "Mac" is also a member of the Association of Professional engineers of British Columbia.

Although a whole-hearted booster for the "Kap", MacLaurin would like to re-visit Victoria which he hasn't seen, nor his parents, since his honeymoon trip there in 1938.

In May 1940, "Mac", then 31, joined the RCAF in Ottawa and after a brief period at Toronto Manning Pool attended No.1 Aeronautical Engineering School at Montreal and then went west where he helped open No.7 S.F.T.S. at Macleod, Alberta, and No.12 S.F.T.S. at Brandon, Manitoba.

He was posted overseas in September 1941, and immediately upon his arrival here joined the all-Canadian Demon Squadron as Engineer Officer, and from that first day "Mac" was seen one of the best liked men on the station, or, as P/O Lloyd Ellam, Montreal, the Demon punster puts it:

"The Demons think a hell of a lot of that young devil."

So "Mac" goes smilingly along, humming or whistling his beloved Scotch airs, doing a thorough job of work when work is to be done, taking part in all the social life of the station or playing snooker pool with everybody from the group captain commanding the station down.

There are rumours of "Mac" leaving the Demons but unless the move means a boost up the ladder for him, the Demons will get together and find some means of keeping him around for the squadron thinks a lot of "Mac" MacLaurin, the engineer bloke from Kapuskasing and points west.

Text of RCAF Press Release No. 1506, London, 28 April 1943

"Aeroplanes are no use to anyone on the ground," according to Flight Lieutenant Donald MacLaurin, Engineer Officer of an R.C.A.F. Coastal Command Squadron, whose job is to "keep 'em flying".

"I've been with this squadron for 16 months," said F/L MacLaurin, "and during that time, almost daily reconnaissance and many attacks on enemy shipping off the Dutch and Norwegian coasts have been made. I'm proud of the way my ground crews have kept those aircraft flying."

Throughout these months, this particular squadron of Lockheed Hudsons has always had a very high percentage of its aircraft serviceable and prepared to take off at a moment's notice.

"I swear by Hudsons and the Wright engine," said F/L MacLaurin. "Sometimes an aircraft will come back as full of holes as a colander. We go to work on it immediately, and I have known more than a score of holes patched so rapidly that the aircraft was in the air and the next day on a normal patrol".

The engineer officer gave high praise to Wright Motors. "I have never known one of them to go 'screwy' except from enemy action," he said. "And we've run them hard, too. In action, the boys have had to push their engines often for as much as 20 to 25 minutes at full boost. When we examined them they showed no signs of abnormal wear.

"An extremely rapid repair job was done on one Hudson, which came back badly damaged from a raid on a Nazi convoy, off the Frisian Islands. There were cannon-shell holes all over it. The pilot's cockpit had 40 to 50 of them. An armour-piercing bullet had ripped through the instrument panel, and one bullet had penetrated the seat cushion, wounding the pilot slightly in one leg. We got to work on that Hudson immediately, changing instruments, patching up holes, and generally checking everything. Four days later it was back in service again."

F/L MacLaurin, who comes from Kapuskasing, Ontario, studied engineering at the University of British Columbia and at the Universities of Washington and Wisconsin.

"I am a chemical and mechanical engineer," he said, "but before the war, I had gone into the administrative side. When war broke out, however, I took an intensive six months' course in aeronautical engineering and came over here."

Oancia - all with the following citation:

On the night of the 16th May, 1943, a force of Lancaster bombers was detailed to attack the Moehne, Eder and Sorpe dams in Germany. The operation was one of great difficulty and hazard, demanding a high degree of skill and courage and close co-operation between the crews of the aircraft engaged. Nevertheless, a telling blow was struck at the enemy by the successful breaching of the Moehne and Eder dams. This outstanding success reflects the greatest credit on the efforts of the above mentioned personnel who participated in the operation, in various capacities as members of aircraft crew.

MacLEAN, S/L Donald Cameron (J6286) - Mention in Despatches - No.79 Squadron (AFRO gives only "Overseas" as unit) - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 322/46 dated 29 March 1946. Born 28 November 1920. Home in Victoria; enlisted in Vancouver, 10 October 1940. To No.2 SFTS (guard), 9 November 1940. To No.1 ITS, 3 January 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 8 February 1941 but not posted to No.9 EFTS until 21 February 1941; graduated 21 April 1941 when posted to No.9 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 15 July 1941 when posted to Trenton. Commissioned 16 July 1941. To No.1 BGS, date uncertain; promoted Flying Officer, 15 March 1942; to Eastern Air Command, 27 June 1942. To No.126 Squadron, 1 July 1942. To No.128 Squadron, 19 July 1942. To No.1 "Y" Depot, 14 March 1943; to RAF, 2 April 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 16 July 1943. Repatriated 22 December 1945. Released 25 February 1946. Rejoined in RCAF Auxiliary, 4 September 1947 with No.424 Squadron, serving until 31 March 1958. Certificate sent 20 June 1949.

As of January 1945 there were at least six RCAF pilots in No.79 Squadron. Press Releases give snippets of information about his operations. One for 9 January 1945., drawn from the Operational Record Book, described the following:

Flight Lieutenant D.C. MacLean, J6286, Canadian, led six aircraft on a strafing mission to Meitkilla airfield. The strafing run was made from west to east; two aircraft were seen in pens, one Tojo and the other unidentified. Strikes were seen on both aircraft and they are claimed as probably destroyed though they were not on fire when last seen. Another aircraft was seen to the north of these without an engine. Though strikes were seen, no claim is made. It is thought there were other aircraft in the pens, types unknown. Moderate Bofors or low H.A.A. fire was encountered and though one aircraft was holed, it is thought that this was due to a ricochet. The aircraft returned safely and the pilot was unhurt.

It was also mentioned that on 19 January Flight Lieutenant MacLean had led eleven Thunderbolts to bomb Chaunggyi "for the second time today" and stated that only two bombs had fallen outside the target area.

At all times this officer has displayed a cheerful disregard of his own personal safety in the fulfilment of his task of pressing home every attack to a successful conclusion. Never has he failed to make the utmost endeavour to attack his target, even in the face of intense opposition, and his outstanding pilotage and general airmanship have on several occasions been instrumental in bringing his aircraft and crew in safety to base. As the leader of his crew he has, by his own personal example, quiet humour and cool courage, succeeding in moulding his crew into an efficient operational unit, losing no opportunity to improve their knowledge and performance. This young officer's contribution to the war effort has been one of considerable magnitude, involving a high degree of unselfish and unswerving devotion to duty. I recommend the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Notes: On repatriation form dated 23 January 1945 he stated he had flown 34 sorties (166 hours 30 minutes), the last on 5 December 1944; also 215 hours 30 minutes training and 14 hours 45 minutes "Miscellaneous Flying Time."

Report on course at No.1 Officer School, 14 July to 8 August 1952 - "Flying Officer McLean has had sufficient experience in civilian life as a supervisor to realize the realities of life and thus has been able to accommodate his reasoning to Service lines. A certain bluntness may leave one with the erroneous impression that he is not interested. He has proved himself to have the courage of his convictions and will stick stubbornly to a task until it is completed, Flying Officer Maclean should prove to be a capable officer."

Assessed 16 December 1955 - "Has accepted considerable responsibility as senior in the runway construction and maintenance section and has represented the directorate on Airdrome Development Project Committee creditably." (W/C J.D. Shannon).

Training: Course at No.1 ITS was 25 January to 2 April 1943. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, Navigation, General Studies, Anti-Gas, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill, Signals (written) and Meteorology. Scored 715 out of a possible 1,000 points, Placed 59th in a class of 64. "A reliable airman but handicapped by inadequate education. Service spirit and deportment good. Second Aircrew Recommendation - Air Bomber."

Course at No.7 EFTS was 5 April to 28 May 1943. Tiger Moth aircraft - 29 hours 50 minutes day dual (ten hours dual to first solo), 29.45 day solo, one hour night dual. Was 8.05 on instruments; logged ten hours in Link. "This student has a tendency to rely too much on his instructor's judgement in the air, lacks self confidence. Discipline good - Link 65 percent." (S/L G.A. Tambling, Chief Flying Instructor). Ground courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition and Signals (practical). Scored 468 out of possible 700 points, placed 17th in a class of 20.

Course at No.6 SFTS was 31 May to 17 September 1943. Harvard aircraft - 7.45 day dual to first day solo, total 79.00 day dual and 57.55 day solo. Was 14.10 in formation and 35.30 on instruments. Flew 1.15 night dual to first night solo, total nine hours night dual, eleven hours night solo. Logged 25 hours in Link. "Flying good average - forgetful at times." Air work assessed under following heads - General Flying (205/300), Instrument Flying (134/200), Navigation (95/150), Armament (93/150), Night Flying (70/100), Formation (35/50) and Link (38/50), Ground courses in Airmanship (134/200), Armament (137/200), Navigation (112/200), Signals (121/200), Aircraft Recognition (64/100) and Meteorology (78/100).

Course at No.18 (Pilots) AFU was 23 November 1943 to 24 February 1944. Oxford aircraft - four hours day dual to first day solo, total 19.45 day dual and 27.50 day solo (50 minutes in formation); 2.45 night dual to first night solo, total 4.50 night dual, 7.45 night solo. Also logged 15.10 in Link, Flying assessed as follows - General Flying (240/400), Applied Flying (130/200), Instrument Flying (160/250), Night Flying (60/100), and Link (30/50). "Has worked hard to finish a good average pilot who should become a useful captain of crew."

At No.1513 Beam Approach Training Flight, 4-17 January 1944. Oxford aircraft - 16 hours five minutes (all instrument and beam flying) plus eight hours in Link. Graded in Beam Approach Procedure and "Q" Codes, Link (110/200), Receiver Operation (65/100), Instrument Flying (170/250), Cloud and Night Flying (170/250) and General Application of Beam Approach Procedure (115/200), "Instrument Flying average. Quite steady and has no outstanding faults, A little slow in grasping procedure but made satisfactory progress, Should prove capable of using system in an emergency."

Course at No.12 OTU was 22 February to 19 May 1944 (note apparent overlap with AFU). Wellington aircraft - 5.15 day dual to first day solo, total 12.15 day dual and 23.25 day solo; 3.00 night dual to first night solo, total 6.05 night dual, 35.15 night solo. Was 7.15 on instruments. Also logged 12.35 in Link, Flying assessed as follows - General Flying (240/400), Applied Flying (110/200), Instrument Flying (125/250), Night Flying (50/100), and Link (27/50). Ground courses in Airmanship (238/300), Armament (231/300), Navigation (130/200), Signals (74/100) and Meteorology (80/100). "Good average pilot and captain with good crew. All keen and work well together under the captain. Captain rather a quiet type and perhaps not quite sufficiently self assertive but should improve steadily in this respect."

Course at No.1653 Conversion Unit was 26 May to 13 July 1944. Flew 24 hours 45 minutes by day and 19 hours 20 minutes by night. These included Day Cross Country with Air Firing and Bombing (4.35), Day Cross Country with Loaded Climb (5.30), Night Cross Country and Bullseye (3.15, early return), Day Fighter Affiliation (3.3), Night Fighter Affiliation (5.40). "Very keen and smart captain with good control of his crew, Navigator slightly above average. Engineer good and whole crew formed a sound team."

Course at No.3 Lancaster Finishing School was 13 July to 23 July 1944. Full crew identified - R112294 Sergeant D.E. MacLean, R190620 Sergeant J.J. Williams (navigator, later DFC), R165365 Sergeant R.G. Clarke (bomb aimer, later DFC), 1825516 Sergeant J. Wright (flight engineer), 2206841 Sergeant F. Friak (WOP), 1644287 Sergeant F. Barnes (air gunner) and 1196333 Sergeant D.A. Love (mid-upper gunner). They flew 2.55 day dual, 2.45 day solo, 2.00 night dual, one hour night; also 3.20 "special exercise" - did a loaded climb and a fighter affiliation exercise, MacLeod did an instrument flying check. Flight Commander Assessed him as follows - "Average pilot, had difficulty at first with approach and landing. Fighter affiliation very good." Engineer Leader assessed him as follows - "GROUND - Knowledge of checks, drills and engine handling only fair. Layout, systems, and general knowledge average. AIR - Cooperation between himself and Engineer average. Checks and drills should be improved greatly."

MacLEAN, F/L Donald Hector (J19336) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.419 Squadron - Award effective 22 August 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2274/44 dated 20 October 1944. Born 9 January 1920 in Sparling, Manitoba; home there (farming) and store clerk; enlisted in Winnipeg, 27 June 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot, 31 August 1941, Brandon (tents in Exhibition Grounds). To No.5 Personnel Holding Unit, Paulson., 24 October 1941. To No.10 SFTS (guard), 20 December 1941. To No.7 ITS, 17 January 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 11 April 1942 after having being set back by a bout of scarlet fever; posted that date to No.16 EFTS; may have graduated 19 June 1942 after being delayed by mumps; not posted to No.7 SFTS until 4 July 1942; injured 23 October 1942 after a night flying crash that left him unconscious for three days. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 18 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, 1 January 1943. To RAF overseas, 6 January 1943. To No.14 (P) AFU, 14 April 1943 (Oxfords). Promoted Flight Sergeant, 18 June 1943. Commissioned 30 October 1943. To OTU at Stratford-on-Avon, after which he went to No.419 Squadron. Flew 36 sorties (the first two as second pilot), the last on 15 June 1944. Subsequently an instructor. Promoted Flying Officer, 30 April 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 May 1944. Repatriated by air, 18 June 1945. To Greenwood, 31 July 1945. Retired 7 September 1945. DFC presented 9 April 1949. Postwar he studied Agriculture, worked as a field representative for Federated Co-Op and Red River Co-Op, then farmed from 1953 to 1960. Extensive biography in Manitoba Beaver (Beausejour, Manitoba), 28 April 1993, provided courtesy of Master Warrant Officer J. Bill Dalke, Victoria, British Columbia. Died 29 October 2000 in Beausejour, Manitoba, as per Legion Magazine of March 2001.

This officer has completed many sorties. He has at all times displayed the greatest determination in pressing home his attacks and his gallant example has greatly inspired his crew. He is an outstanding captain and his services have been of great value.

DHist file 181.009 D.1634 (RG.24 Volume 20604) has recommendation by W/C W.P. Pleasance dated 28 June 1944 when he had flown 36 sorties (215 hours 25 minutes), 26 July 1943 to 15 June 1944, as follows:

Flight Lieutenant MacLean has completed a tour of operations which included many attacks on the main German targets. During his tour he has displayed outstanding Captaincy and a burning desire to attack the enemy.

On the night of March 4th, when detailed for mine laying in Brest Harbour, his rear turret became unserviceable but, despite this, he carried on to the Gardening area. On approaching the target, his aircraft was attacked by an enemy night fighter but this was successfully evaded. Later his aircraft was coned by searchlights but he proceeded to the Gardening area and dropped his mines as briefed.

During his whole tour Flight Lieutenant MacLean has shown outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty, and the example he has set, in my opinion, fully merits the immediate award of the DFC.

The sortie list (on Halifaxes to 12 April, Lancasters thereafter) was as follows:

26 July 1943 - North Sea dingy search (4.45 in a Wellington)
27 September 1943 - Hanover (5.50, second pilot)
29 September 1943 - Bochum (5.35, second pilot)
3 October 1943 - Kassel (7.20)
4 October 1943 - Frankfurt (7.45)
8 October 1943 - Hanover (5.30)
22 October 1943 - Kassel (6.20)
26 November 1943 - Stuttgart (8.05)

MacLEAN, S/L Donald James (C4004) - Air Force Cross - No.1 Flying Instructor School - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born in Chicago, Illinois, 16 March 1918 (RCAF press release announcing award); educated in New Brunswick (St. Joseph's and St. Martin's Separate Schools); employed prewar with Mara Bread Limited. Enlisted in London, Ontario, 22 February 1940 as Sergeant Pilot and posted to Trenton. Commissioned 12 February 1941 with rank of Flying Officer. To No.1 EFTS, 16 March 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 June 1942. To No.1 Training Command, 5 July 1942. To No.12 EFTS, 30 August 1942. To No.14 SFTS, 28 December 1942. To No.1 Flying Instructor School, 22 August 1943. To No.3 Training Command, 31 January 1944. To No.1 Flying Instructor School again, 8 March 1944. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 October 1944. To Central Flying School, Trenton, 31 January 1945. Retired 21 February 1946. Award presented 27 January 1946. Rejoined as pilot, 20 August 1950 in rank of Flight Lieutenant (46092); still serving as of 1955. No citation in AFRO or biographical file. DHist file 181.009 D.1721 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation dated 20 December 1944 when he had flown 1,995 hours, of which 1,850 were instructional hours and 175 hours flown in past six months. Credited with one trans-Atlantic delivery flight.

Squadron Leader MacLean, since joining the RCAF in February 1940, has been employed as a flying instructor for 51 months, and has held the position of Deputy Flight Commander, Flight Commander, and for the past eleven months has been an Examining Officer at the unit. He has also been employed at No.1 Training Command or TF.2 [?] for the past two and one half months and Chief Supervisory Officer at No.12 Elementary Flying Training School, Goderich, Ontario for six months. Squadron Leader MacLean has shown exceptional keenness for his job and has made a great contribution to the efficiency of No.1 Flying Instructor School. During his career he has rendered extremely devoted and valuable service as Flying Instructor and Examining Officer.

Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26 Volume 59, file 190-I, dossier 7) has citation, which differs slightly from the above.

Squadron Leader MacLean has been employed as a flying instructor for fifty-one months and has held the positions of deputy flight commander, flight commander, and for the past eleven months of examining officer at this unit. This officer has shown exceptional keenness for his job and has made a great contribution to the efficiency of No.1 Flying Instructor School. During his career he has rendered extremely devoted and valuable service as flying instructor and examining officer.

MacLEAN, F/L Gordon Stewart (C39197) - Mention in Despatches - No.3 Repair Depot) - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Born 22 May 1920. Home in Vancouver; enlisted there 7 July 1941 as Clerk (General) and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To Trenton, 19 July 1941. To "B", 30 August 1941. Promoted AC1, 7 October 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 April 1942. Promoted Corporal, 1 August 1942. Promoted Sergeant, 1 January 1943. To No.2 RDF/MU, 28 April 1943. Reverted to Corporal, 1 May 1943. To No.3 RD, 30 August 1943. To No.1 Officer School, 10 November 1943. Commissioned with effect from 11 November 1943 in "N.L.S." Branch, which may provide a clue to his postings. To No.3 Training Command, 9 December 1943. To Western Air Command, 21 April 1944. To No.3 RD, 26 April 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 11 May 1944. Promoted Flight

Lieutenant, 1 December 1944. To No.7 Reserve Equipment and Maintenance Unit, 1 November 1945. Retired 6 May 1946. NOTE: It is hard to square the citation to the unit. Although AFRO and DHist documents agree that it is No.3 Repair Depot, the citation suggests a Repatriation unit.

This officer, by his devotion to duty, has been an inspiration at all times to those that serve under him. His quiet, efficient and capable handling of the huge drafts of Australians and New Zealanders has been favourably commented on by the United States Transit Board, and the Australian Air Mission. His keen common sense and business acumen has been of inestimable value to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Active in postwar reserve, he was awarded the Queen's Coronation Medal (February 1954). Postwar Member of Parliament, Cabinet Minister, and Premier of Prince Edward Island. Died at Belle Creek, Prince Edward Island, 15 February 2000.

One night in September, Flight Lieutenant MacLean was captain of an aircraft engaged in an attack on a target in the Ruhr. During the bombing run heavy anti-aircraft fire was encountered. The aircraft sustained damage, the aileron became jammed, and when another shell burst immediately below the port wing the aircraft turned on its back and went into an inverted spiral dive. Flight Lieutenant MacLean recovered control of the aircraft and released his bombs on the target. On the return flight the aircraft was attacked from below by an enemy fighter. Further damage was sustained. Shortly afterwards both the port engines failed, as the fuel system had been shot away. Despite great efforts on the part of Flight Lieutenant MacLean the bomber eventually became completely uncontrollable and both he and his crew were compelled to leave it by parachute. Throughout this hazardous operation this officer displayed great gallantry, fortitude and devotion to duty.

MacLEAN, F/L John Angus (C1107) - Mention in Despatches - No.405 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1943 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Shot down 8/9 June 1942 during raid on Essen but later reported safe in England, 10 September 1942. No citation in Canadian sources. Public Records Centre Air 2/5684 has recommendation.

The above officer was the captain of the crew of an aircraft which was shot down over Holland on 8th June 1942 while returning from a raid on Essen.

Although his back was injured on landing and despite the loss of one boot he evaded capture and immediately started his journey southwards.

Finding he was leaving a trail of foot prints behind him he rounded up some cattle and drove them before him to obliterate all traces of his route, and obtained sustenance by milking them.

A period of hiding followed after which he made for the Belgian frontier, crossing this by attaching himself to an old woman pushing a pram cart over a bridge.

By now his back injuries compelled him to go once more into hiding and obtain treatment. Upon recovery he succeeded in passing into France, finally reaching Spain, when he was repatriated on 29th August 1942.

NOTE: Public Record Office WO 208/3310 has his MI.9 report of evasion, noting he had left Gibraltar on 29 August 1942 and arrived at Gourock, 8 September 1942.

I was pilot of an aircraft which left Pockington, Yorkshire about 2300 hours on 8 June 1942 to bomb the Krupp works at Essen. The aircraft was damaged by flak over the target and was later shot down by a night fighter and we all baled out. The other members of the crew were:-

F/O J. Wernham (navigator)
Sergeant Kerr, William (wireless operator)
Sergeant Shields (engineer)
Sergeant Forbes (bomb aimer)
Sergeant Olsen (rear gunner) and Sergeant Porter (mid gunner)

I was informed later by Dutch people that F/O Wernham, Sergeant Shields, Sergeant Forbes and one other Sergeant were captured about 0600 hours on 9 June after having been betrayed by a Dutch boy. The Dutch stated that the two other Sergeants escaped from the area to Rotterdam on a lorry and that one of the captured Sergeants had an injured leg. As far as I know all the crew were uninjured when they left the aircraft. I did not find any of them after landing.

I myself landed about 0400 hours on 9 June about one a half kilometres south of Zaltbommel (Holland), a town to the north of s'Hertogenbosch on the railway to Utrecht and Amsterdam. The aircraft had been fairly low when I baled out and my parachute opened just in time. I landed flat and injured my back. The aircraft crashed 150 yards away in the next field. The aircraft was burning, and my first thought was to destroy my equipment on the fire, but I saw objects running round the fire, so I threw my parachute and Mae West into an irrigation ditch and put clods of earth on top of them. I was near a railway with a small canal running parallel, and I had to follow the canal for a half a kilometre before I could cross it by a road bridge. I continued along the road at right angles to the canal. I had lost a flying boot when I baled out and walking was difficult. After a short distance I saw an orchard, for which I made. The grass fields were wet with dew, and I was leaving a trail behind me. I rounded up some cows and drove them before me so that my foot-prints would not be visible. After crossing the field I milked a cow, drank the milk, and went to sleep under a hedge round the orchard. Although I had walked considerably further, I was still only about a mile in a straight line from the crashed aircraft. I woke about noon, but, as there were workers in the field, I remained under the hedge all afternoon. I got out my silk map and managed to pin-point what I thought was my position.

About 1900 hours I saw two girls picking strawberries in a garden near me and went over and spoke to them. They were delighted when they realised I was a British airman. They showed my position on the map, and their brother brought me a bottle of ersatz coffee. Their grandfather then arrived and wanted to take me with him. I was rather dubious, as he seemed to be talking angrily to the girls. One of them, who understood my broken German, assured me that he was merely cross with them for having talked to me too openly. The old man gave me ten gulden and took me across fields and along side-roads for three or four miles to another orchard. On the way we met several people, and eventually I was accompanied by about a dozen Dutchmen. A boy on a bicycle patrolled back and forward on the road. When he reported the approach of two Germans I was hidden in a small outhouse with a goat. After a bit the old Dutchman returned and took me to an orchard nearby. There was a young man with him and he told me to remain in the orchard till next evening when clothes would be brought to me.

I stayed in the orchard, which was north-west of Kerk Driel, till about 1300 hours next day (10 June). During the forenoon two labourers came to cut grass and I spoke to one of them, who gave me some lunch and water. As none of my previous helpers came near me, I set off alone, still wearing my flying kit and one boot. I made my way across country along hedges and ditches for three or four kilometres till I reached a small farmhouse on the edge of a group of houses near Veld Driel. I hid in some tall grass and an old farmer came from the house towards me. I let him find me and he hid beside me in the grass and talked to me. He fetched me hot milk, and old suit of clothes, and a pair of shoes from the house.

I then set off towards the main road. My difficulty was to get out of the district in which I had come down and which was practically an island. I went to the village of Hedel and got onto the main road. I walked through the village, and at the last house saw one man in the yard. I went in to speak to him, but there were a number of people there and I was chased off. I said I was going to Zambommel, and once I had got clear of the village I hid in some bushes for about three hours, during which time three Germans passed separately on motorcycles. I thought they might have been searching for me, though they were perhaps only Despatch Riders. I then went on to an isolated signal box on the railway line. There was only one man in the box and I tried to explain to him that I wanted to jump a freight train and get off the island. I could not make him understand me clearly, and probably he thought I wanted to know whether passenger trains stopped there. I did, however, manage to gather that while there were German guards on the railway bridge, there were none on the road bridge. I had just got back to the road when a freight train going south stopped at the signal box, but it was too late for me to try to get on to it.

I decided to chance the road bridge and walked back through Hedel. The ordinary road bridge had been blown up and there was a pontoon bridge, and I could not see whether or not the bridge was guarded. As I went across the approach I could see a large group of people and a Dutch policeman. Shuffling alongside a woman who was pushing a baby carriage, I went up to the group and found the centre section of the bridge was open to allow a boat to go through. The policeman was on the opposite side of the gap. When the bridge was closed we all trooped across, and the policeman did not stop anyone.

I continued walking alongside the woman and several German officers in cars passed me, going north. To avoid s'Hertogenbosch I took a turning to the right, but the road reached a small river which I could not cross, and then turned again back to the main road. On the river I saw a houseboat, on the deck of which were an old woman and a young man. After making sure that the road was clear and that there was no telephone, I went to the houseboat. When they realised who I was, they took me in, gave me food and a bed, and offered to keep me indefinitely. As my back was hurting severely I accepted their offer and remained on the houseboat from 10 June to 18 July.

During this time my hosts got in touch with an organisation which arranged for my journey to this country.

As an air gunner, Pilot Officer MacLean has displayed exceptional skill, courage and initiative. His ability to think quickly and clearly in an emergency proved of inestimable value to his pilot and contributed in a large measure to the operational efficiency of his crew and to their completion of a successful tour. His quiet, cheerful confidence inspired a high degree of morale in his crew and his devotion to duty was an inspiration to all.

On the ground Pilot Officer MacLean showed fine leadership, great co-operation and exceptional administrative qualities and acted as Deputy Gunnery Leader with unqualified success. His manner and example did much to build up the section to the betterment of the squadron.

18 October 1943 - Hanover (4.45)
17 November 1943 - Mannheim (4.47)

Flight Lieutenant MacLean has completed 44 operational sorties against most of the enemy's most heavily defended targets. On all occasions he has displayed skill and determination of the highest order. His exceptional keenness and devotion to duty have been an inspiration to the squadron and he has carried out the duties of Squadron Flight Engineer Leader with marked success. Flight Lieutenant MacLean is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacLENNAN, F/O Alistair Norman (J19396) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.427 Squadron - Award effective 2 October 1944 as per London Gazette dated 13 October 1944 and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 7 July 1920 in Montreal. Educated at Teaneck High School, New Jersey. Home in Glen Ridge, New Jersey; enlisted in Halifax, 24 September 1940.

To No.2 ITS, 14 October 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 4 November 1940 when posted to No.8 EFTS; may have graduated 23 December 1940 but not posted to No.4 SFTS until 3 January 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 17 March 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 27 March 1941; to RAF overseas, 5 April 1941. Attended No.21 OTU (Moreton-in-Marsh, Wellington aircraft). To RAF Driffield for a blind approach training course on Whitley Mk III aircraft. Posted to No. 405 Squadron, Pocklington, Yorkshire. Of note in his log book, is the entry for August 31, 1941 when his Wellington Mk II caught fire and crashed shortly after take off; luckily, he escaped unharmed, but the aircraft was destroyed. During this period he also took part in the first RCAF raid on Berlin. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 April 1942. After 14 sorties, posted to No. 3 Flight Instructor School, Hullavington and Babdown to train to become a flying instructor. Once qualified, he was posted to No. 15 OTU at RAF Harwell as a Flight Instructor. Commissioned 30 November 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 30 May 1944. To No.1664 Heavy Conversion Unit (Handley Page Halifax); bomber to No. 427 Squadron (Leeming) in June 1944. On the night of 12/13 August his aircraft (Halifax III, serial MZ755 coded ZL-R) was attacked by a Ju.88 near Brunswick. The aircraft received damage to the starboard inner prop but was able to return safely. The aircraft was repaired that day and flew again that night. Left No.427 Squadron in mid September 1944. Repatriated 3 November 1944. To No.168 (Heavy Transport) Squadron, 9 December 1944. To No.6 OTU, 9 November 1945. To No.6 OTU at Greenwood, 15 January 1946. To Patricia Bay, 16 January 1946. Retired 31 January 1946. Medal forwarded to Government House, 18 November 1954 for forwarding to Air Ministry as he was then working for BOAC in UK (Lockheed Constellations and other types). Settled in Chichester, West Sussex, UK and continued to fly until his untimely death on 10 January 1973. No citation in AFRO other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.1729 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20607) has recommendation forwarded from squadron, date uncertain but apparently early July 1944 when he had flown 25 sorties (138 hours 35 minutes). First tour was only fourteen trips (27 June 1941 to 26 January 1942); second tour began 14 June 1944.

This captain has completed one tour and eleven operational bombing sorties of his second tour. His work in general is of a very high calibre and his ability to make instant decisions in emergency, skilful pilotage and cool judgement has gained for him the confidence of his crew.

The sortie list was as follows:

27 June 1941 - Paris (2.30)
7 August 1941 - Dortmund (4.55)
12 August 1941 - Berlin (6.55)

MacLENNAN, F/O David Bruce (J39392) - Mention in Despatches - No.432 Squadron - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1478/45 dated 21 September 1945. Born 12 November 1914. Home in Upper Montague, Prince Edward Island; enlisted in Charlottetown, 30 December 1940 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1A Manning Depot, 14 January 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot again, 18 March 1941. To No.1 Equipment Depot, 10 April 1941. To No.4 WS, 5 July 1941; promoted LAC, 6 August 1941; to No.4 BGS, 22 November 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 22 December 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 23 December 1941; to No.119 (BR) Squadron, 27 December 1941. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 22 June 1942. Promoted WO2, 22 December 1942. Commissioned 8 December 1943. To "Y" Depot, 22 December 1943. Taken on strength of no.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 20 January 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 8 June 1944. Repatriated 5 August 1945. Retired 14 September 1945. Unit identified in AFRO only as "Overseas"; proper unit identified in DHist file 181.009 D.1725 (PAC RG.24 Box 2067). DHist file 181.009 D.5557 (RG.24 Vol.20668) had recommendation for a Non-Immediate DFC dated 7 February 1945 when he had flown 13 sorties (76 hours 10 minutes), 25 September 1944 to 16 January 1945.

This officer has completed thirteen operational sorties over enemy territory after having qualified for the award of the Operational Wing by completing 165 operational sorties with a coastal squadron in Canada.

Flying Officer MacLennan has displayed outstanding ability. His co-operation, coolness and devotion to duty contributed in a large measure to the success of these operations.

His splendid record and outstanding ability warrant a strong recommendation for the Distinguished Flying Cross (Non-Immediate).

The sortie list with this was as follows:

25 September 1944 - Calais (4.35, day)
26 September 1944 - Calais (3.35, day)
27 September 1944 - Bottrop (4.30, day)
6 October 1944 - Dortmund (6.40)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (5.50)
6 November 1944 - Gelsenkirchen (5.10, day)
16 November 1944 - Julich (5.10, day)
30 November 1944 - Duisburg (6.10)
30 December 1944 - Cologne (6.35, day)
2 January 1945 - Ludwigshaven (7.20, day)
6 January 1945 - Hanay (7.25, day)
14 January 1945 - Grevenbroich (6.10, day)
16 January 1945 - Magdeburg (7.00)

However, it is far more likely that his MiD came about through a recommendation submitted on 9 October 1944 for a specific act of gallantry (see F/O G.A. Fox for details).

MacLENNAN, S/L Ian Armstrong (C4681) - Mention in Despatches - Station Gander - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Home in Moncton, New Brunswick. Enlisted in Montreal, 16 November 1940 in Medical Branch with rank of Flight Lieutenant. To No.31 OTU, 8 October 1941. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 January 1943. To Moncton, 31 January 1945. To "Y" Depot, 1 February 1945. Retired 20 October 1945; subsequently in Moncton City Hospital.

This officer established the Pathological Division at Gander, Newfoundland in 1941. For more than three years he has given his whole time to this type of work in this Command, holding himself in readiness for duty any hour of the day or night. He has always been a loyal, co-operative medical officer, strengthening the hand of the Senior Medical Officer.

MacLENNAN, FS Ian Roy (R70978) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.1435 Flight - Award effective 22 October 1942 as per London Gazette dated 3 November 1942 and AFRO 1962/42 dated 4 December 1942. Born in Regina, 4 April 1919; home in Gull Lake, Saskatchewan (student); enlisted in Regina 23 October 1940. To No.34 SFTS (guard), 27 November 1940. To No.2 ITS, 4 January 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 8 February 1941 when posted to No.6 EFTS; graduated 30 March 1941 when posted to No.2 Manning Depot; to No.10 SFTS, 9 April 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 22 June 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 8 July 1941. To RAF overseas, 20 July 1941. Served in No.610 Squadron, February to April 1942, No.401 Squadron from April to the end of May when posted to Malta, arriving via HMS Eagle on 9 June 1942. Taken on strength of No.1435 Flight, 11 September 1942 (also commissioned that date). Promoted Flying Officer, 3 November 1942. To Station Luqa, 13 December 1942. Returned to England in December 1942. Posted to Turnhouse, 6 January 1943; promoted Flight Lieutenant that date. At Drem he was a qualified gunnery instructor and in charge of the Gunnery Flight for eight months. A report dated 7 December 1943 stated, "Highly recommended by his Commanding Officer as a Flight Commander." Subsequently given home leave, 3 December 1943. Returned overseas, 14 February 1944 and posted to No.443 Squadron that month. Shot down 7 June 1944 and taken prisoner. Repatriated 7 July 1945. To No.10 Repair Depot, 20 July 1945. Retired 23 October 1945. Postwar architect. Died in White Rock, British Columbia, 6 November 2013 (see below for obituary). Medal sent by registered mail 16 November 1948. Photos PMR 78-191, PMR 78-194 and PMR 78-201 show him. Chris Shores, Aces High (2nd edition) not only lists his victories but information on most aircraft flown by him as follows: 24 May 1942 one FW.190 damaged (No.401 Squadron); 25 July 1942, one Ju.88 damaged (No.1435 Flight, Malta); 10 August 1942, one Bf.109 destroyed (No.1435 Squadron, with which unit all the following were claimed); 14 August 1942, one Re.2001 claimed destroyed (actually an MC.202); 11 October 1942, two Bf.109s damaged (Spitfire EP203, "G"); two Ju.88s destroyed plus one Ju.88 damaged on another sortie (EP717 "D"); 12 October 1942, one Bf.109 destroyed plus one damaged (EP203 "G"); 14 October 1942, one Ju.88 damaged; 16 October 1942, one Ju.88 damaged (BP860 "X"); 26 October 1942, one Bf.109 destroyed (BR591 "R"); 14 November 1942, one S.75 destroyed (identified mistakenly as and S.82; EP915 "V") See magazine High Flight, Volume II, Nos.2 and 3 (1982).

One day in October 1942, this airman destroyed two of a force of thirty Junkers

88 which attempted to attack Malta. The next day he destroyed a Messerschmitt 109. Flight Sergeant MacLennan has displayed great courage and tenacity. He has destroyed four and damaged several more enemy aircraft.

TRAINING: Notes transcribed from his logbook about 1980 state that his first flight was on 9 February 1941 (Tiger Moth 4168, Sergeant Glass instructing, 20 minutes duration). Having flown eight hours 10 minutes with Glass, he went solo on 19 February 1941 (Tiger Moth 4095). His last flight at No.6 EFTS was on 28 March 1941; as of that date he had logged 36 hours 35 minutes dual, 49 hours 30 minutes solo, five hours 35 minutes cloud flying.

His first flight at No.10 SFTS, Dauphin, was 9 April 1941 (50 minutes, P/O Patterson) and his first solo on a Harvard was 21 April 1941. He made several cross-country flights without mentioning his destination; the entry for 1 June 1941 (two hours 30 minutes) stated he had flown to Rivers. He took his final navigation test on 14 June 1941 (Sergeant McLaren, two hours), and final wings test on 15 June 1941 (F/L Macklin, 55 minutes). His last flight at No.10 SFTS was 17 June 1941. During his time there he had logged 42 hours 25 minutes (day dual), 39 hours 50 minutes (day solo), four hours 55 minutes (night dual) and five hours 35 minutes (night solo). His totals to date were 69 hours (day dual), 89 hours 20 minutes (day solo), four hours 55 minutes (night dual) and five hours 35 minutes (night solo). He has also logged 22 hours 30 minutes in Link trainer (15 hours of that at No.10 SFTS).

Overseas at No.52 OTU, Aston Down, his first flight was 30 August 1941 (F/L McDowall, Master 8692, 45 minutes). The next day he soloed on Master 8767. While there he flew Hurricanes 3186 and 9138; Spitfires "227" (first flown on 7 December 1941), "239", 4624, 4685, 6719, 7114, and 9510. Flights included a squadron formation exercise on 28 January 1941 (Spitfire "6719", 95 minutes). At OTU he flew three hours 35 minutes dual on Masters, six hours 55 minutes solo on Masters, and 32 hours 25 minutes on Spitfires.

The following obituary was published in the Ottawa Citizen of 22 November 2013 and several other papers:

Ian Roy MacLennan, DFM, B. Arch, FRAIC, MTPIC

Wednesday, 6 November, 2013, in White Rock, BC, age 94. Born in Regina, Saskatchewan, one of seven children, Ian took Engineering at the University of Saskatchewan prior to enlisting in the RCAF. Trained as a Spitfire pilot, he was stationed with the RAF in Malta with Squadron 401 [sic] where he shot down 7 enemy aircraft and damaged several others, and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal. Celebrated as a Canadian Ace, he took part, in the last few years, in two documentaries produced by the History Channel, "The Siege of Malta" and

"Canadian Aces", which featured the famed Buzz Beurling, Canada's most prolific fighter pilot. Ian was shot down on D-Day plus 1, 7 June, 1944, and imprisoned at Stalag Luft III. Transferred to Austria after the Long March, he escaped, hitchhiking and walking into Paris as the war ended.

In 1945, he enrolled in Architecture at the University of Toronto. Mentored there by the distinguished Dean of Architecture, Eric Arthur, he shared with Eric a belief in the importance of low cost housing in Canada. Ian first worked with an international architectural firm, first in New York and then Caracas, before returning to Canada to become Chief Architect at the fledgling Central and Mortgage Housing Corporation. In his book, "Beyond Habitat by 20 Years", Moshe Safdie, designer of the award winning Habitat complex, built as part of the Expo 67 exhibition, says of Ian, "Ian MacLennan is one of those men who make Canada tick. Without him there would never have been a Habitat. He charges into meetings with the fervor of a college debating champion....he is aggressive, frank, and unlike many civil servants, very outspoken." In 1961, Ian was made a Fellow of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, one the youngest architects ever to be nominated. Carl Cannon, then Chair of the Canadian Housing Design Council, described him as "a distinguished architect who has done much to improve the quality of housing design in Canada."

Subsequent to retiring as Senior Vice President at CMHC in 1977, Ian and his wife, Nina, moved to White Rock, BC, where he was appointed by the Canadian Government as a Trustee on the development of Granville Island, then a derelict industrial area in False Creek, Vancouver. Ian was a strong voice in the Trust to keep some industrial use for the island that has since become a world-renowned site. In addition to this work, he served as juror on the Massey Medal Awards for Architecture, and sat as a Board member on other housing projects for special needs adults. His consuming passions after retirement included duplicate bridge, he was a Life Master and boating in France on the family barge, where he spent summers for the past 20 years, including this past year. As the Great War pilots were quoted as saying, "He has flown west."

Ian was predeceased by his wife, Nina, on 17 May, 2013, and his brothers and sisters. He is survived by his daughter, Joss, son, Bruce, daughter-in-law, Lorna, grandchildren, Ellie and Sam, sister-in-law, Kay, and numerous nephews and nieces in Canada, United States and United Kingdom. A special thanks to Beta Dulay for her loving care and compassion.

MacLENNAN, W/C John McMillan, DFC (C1973) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 322/46 dated 29 March 1946. Born in Pictou, Nova Scotia, 15 May 1896. First World War veteran whose DFC dates from that conflict. Appointed Flying Officer, Canadian Air Force, 23 December 1920. Under refresher flying instruction at No.1 Wing, Camp Borden, 3 January to 12 February 1921. Granted Leave Without Pay, 16 February 1921. Posted to No.11 Squadron British Columbia, 31 March 1922 as being inactive and unpaid. Employed by Commissary Department, White Pass and Yukon Railway, 1920; with Alberta Pacific Lumber Company, Huilan Elevator Company, and Vancouver Terminal Company, 1923-1930; fruit farmer at Kelowna from 1930 to enlistment. Enlisted in RCAF, Vancouver, 31 May 1940 in Administrative Branch. To Trenton for Administration course, 1 June 1940. To Western Air Command Headquarters, 29 June 1940. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 August 1941. To Embarkation Point, Halifax, 15 August 1941. Posted overseas, August 1941 Reported to No.406 Squadron as Intelligence Officer, 22 October 1941; to Station Digby, 30 December 1942; to Headquarters, No.39 Wing, 9 July 1943; to Headquarters, No.83 Group, 30 August 1943; promoted to Squadron Leader, 23 October 1943; on strength of RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 28 October 1943 while performing liaison duty with No.83 Group and more particularly at Headquarters, Second Tactical Air Force from 18 May 1944 onwards. Promoted Wing Commander with effect from 1 May 1944; repatriated 21 October 1945; released 7 December 1945 to return to fruit farming. Died in Kelowna, 18 June 1980 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

Administrative Training: The course which he took at Trenton - typical of Administrative instruction - was 3 June to 29 June 1940. Courses and marks were in Air Force Law (85 %), Central Registry (93 %), Orderly Room Procedure (74 %), Drill (68 %), Messes and Canteens (80 %), Equipment and Supply (82 %) and Organization, Discipline, Administration and Oral Skills (86 %). He was 24th in a class of 42. W/C F.J. Mawdesley wrote, "A reliable and hard working officer. He should develop into a good Adjutant."

Assessments: Although no recommendation can be found for the award, the following assessments describe the nature and quality of his work:

"This officer, employed at Western Air Command Headquarters since 1 July 1940. As Personnel (Administrative) officer has applied himself diligently, is extremely loyal and conscientious. He possesses a retiring but pleasant personality. Willing and cheerful in the performance of extra duties. In view of the responsibility of his position promotion to the rank of Flight Lieutenant is recommended." (S/L M.R. Maxwell, Western Air Command Headquarters, 3 June 1941).

"This officer has only recently taken over the duties of Squadron Intelligence Officer. He is working hard to obtain the necessary knowledge in his branch and I'm sure will turn out a good intelligence officer." (W/C D.G. Morris, Commanding Officer, No.406 Squadron, 21 November 1941).

"In the present war and whilst with No.406 Squadron he has also had considerable flying experience as a passenger. He is an active officer and it is felt not only by himself but by his Squadron Commander and this Headquarters that his ability and experience are not by any means being utilised to anything like full advantage in the post he is now filling. It is strongly recommended that he be transferred for Controller duties at a Station in this Group where it is proposed to post him into a Flight Lieutenant Controller post where his flying and other experience would be best utilized." (F/L T.J. Wilson, No.13 Group Headquarters, to RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 28 June 1942).

"Quiet officer with dry sense of humour. Has an unobtrusive talent for organization. A last war fighter pilot still keenly interested in operational flying. Has been affected by lack of activity in his branch and volunteered for Controller (Operations) Course. He should make an average Controller." (W/C R.H. Wills, No.406 Squadron, 6 January 1943 on his posting from Intelligence Officer duties with the squadron,)

"Has been RCAF Liaison Officer with Second Tactical Air Force. This post has been amended to read RCAF Staff Officer and upgraded to Wing Commander. Recommend conformation of acting rank and appointment to Acting Wing Command. This officer because of establishment was delayed in appointment to Acting Squadron Leader; therefore confirmation to Temporary Squadron Leader is strongly recommended." (W/C F.W. Hammond, RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 8 May 1944.)

"Duties, staff officer, RCAF Overseas Headquarters. Has the complete confidence of senior RAF officers in Second Tactical Air Force and has represented RCAF exceedingly well in this Command. Is a hard worker and gets things done." (G/C F.R. West, RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 26 April 1945).

Liaison Duties:

A memo dated 18 May 1944 from Air Marshal Lloyd Breadner (Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, RCAF Overseas Headquarters) to Squadron Leader [sic] J.M. MacLennan, DFC, details his duties and hence those of other liaison officers:

TERMS OF REFERENCE TO COMMAND STAFF OFFICERS

1. Air Ministry Order No.A.367/44, Para 2 makes provision for the appointment of certain RCAF Staff Officers at Air Ministry (Director General of Personnel) and at certain RAF Command Headquarters for the purposes mentioned therein.

2. In accordance with the terms of such Air Ministry Order, I hereby appoint you as Staff Officer to represent me at Headquarters, Second Tactical Air Force, and I hereby delegate to you authority to:-

(a) receive and post by name RCAF aircrew of the rank of Wing Commander and below, and all airmen aircrew upon the completion of an operational tour, a non-operational tour or upon being withdrawn from either of such tours for any reason whatsoever.

(b) further delegate authority to RCAF Subordinate Staff Officers appointed to RAF Groups, or to RAF Nominees in RAF Groups, to post, within the limits laid down in Air Ministry Order A.419/43, as amended by Air Ministry letter A.513157/43.DGP, dated 11th June 1943 (addressed to the Air Officers Commanding-in-Chief Bomber and Coastal Commands only) RCAF aircrew available for disposal in accordance with sub-paragraph (a) above.

3. Upon receiving aircrew in my behalf for disposal under the terms of Para.1 of Air Ministry Order A.367/44, you are to proceed in accordance with Para. 4 of said Air Ministry Order, and are to ensure that the proportion of RCAF Instructors in Heavy Conversion Units and Operational Training Units is the same proportion as that of RCAF aircrew in front line squadrons.

4. You will have direct access to the Air Marshal Commanding of Second Tactical Air Force. The RCAF Subordinate Staff Officers or RAF Nominees at RAF Groups within the jurisdiction of Second Tactical Air Force will be directly responsible to you for all matters pertaining to their duties as applicable to RCAF personnel coming within the terms of the aforementioned Air Ministry Order.

5. Second Tactical Air Force Headquarters have been notified of your appointment in my behalf, and suitable instructions (Air Ministry letter S.100026/S.8, dated 14th April 1944) have been given to Second Tactical Air Force Headquarters, outlining the broad terms incorporated in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan as a result of recent discussions between representatives of Governments of the United Kingdom and Canada. You will be expected to use tact and a wise but firm discretion in carrying out your duties. Inasmuch as I have delegated these powers to you, you will be acting in my stead in respect of the matters stated. I will expect you, therefore, to keep me advised on all important matters, and to report on the 1st and 15th of each month on the progress of your work.

6. The Director of Personnel will provide you with detailed information and instructions about specific points relating to your duties.

MacLEOD, F/O Arthur James (J35524) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.156 Squadron - Award effective 19 February 1945 as per London Gazette dated 1 March 1946 and AFRO 418/46 dated 18 April 1946. Born 10 April 1915 in Sydney, Nova Scotia; home there; enlisted in Halifax, 11 August 1942. To No.5 Manning Depot, 14 November 1942. To Mountain View, 21 January 1943. To No.6 ITS, 6 February 1943; graduated and promoted LAC, 16 April 1943 but not posted to No.1 BGS until 15 May 1943; graduated 7 August 1943 when posted to No.1 AOS; graduated and commissioned 17 September 1943. To "Y" Depot, 1 October 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 21 October 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 17 March 1944. Reported missing, 21 February 1945 (POW). Reported safe in United Kingdom, 14 May 1945. Repatriated 1 June 1945. To "K", 13 June 1945. To No.1 Release Centre, 26 August 1945; retired 31 August 1945. . Medal presented 12 November 1948. Postwar employed in Halifax by Department of Veterans Affairs.

This officer completed, as navigator, numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which he has invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his being shot down. Lancaster PB701 (GT-Q) of No.156 Squadron, target Dusseldorf, 20/21 February 1945. The aircraft was delivered to No.156 Squadron from No.32 Movements Unit in October 1944. No operational history traced. Airborne 2242 hours, 20 February 1945 from Upwood to mark the Rhenania Ossag oil refinery in the Reisholz district. Shot down by a night-fighter (Hptm.Breves, 1V./NJG1). Crew consisted of F/O D.F. Sinfield, DFC (an Exhibitioner at Bedford Modern school and at nineteen years of age one of the youngest decorated navigators to be killed on bombing operations), F/L A.D. Pelly (injured), Flight Sergeant R. Morgan (injured), , F/O A.J. MacLeod, RCAF (navigator and set operator, injured), Sergeant R.J. Routledge (injured), Warrant Officer W.G. Pearce, RAAF (POW), Flight Sergeant E.C. Bangs (gunner, killed), Flight Sergeant T.S. Carr (gunner, killed). Injured personnel were confined in hospital until liberation and returned to the United Kingdom on 11 May 1945. Warrant Officer Pearce was held in Camps 13D/7A. POW number 11454. This was his 42nd operation.

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire based on interview of 16 May 1945. In spite of Lost Bomber entry, he stated he had flown 40 sorties.

The trip went very well except we had to make up a bit of time so increased the airspeed for a while and cut a bit off at the corner turning on for the run-up onto the target. We were due at +8 with raid to open at 0120. The skipper reported the first Target Indicators going down in front of us and that we were well in the centre of the stream; very shortly after we were hit by approximately ten shells. The skipper had also mentioned fighter attacking planes in front of us. The fighter came in from the starboard below firing into our tanks as he passed under to port (pilot's observation). The skipper gave the order to bale out a minute or so later when he saw the extent of the fire. The Bomb Aimer and Engineer baled out in front of myself with the Navigator following me.

MacLEOD, Harold Morris, F/L (J24949) - Bronze Cross of the Netherlands - No.190 Squadron - Awarded as per Canada Gazette dated 12 September 1949 and AFRO 413/49. Born 25 September 1922. Enlisted 11 February 1942. A pilot who, in the latter part of the war, was employed at Station Dartmouth (inferred from November 1945 application for Operational Wings, turned down 23 November 1945 for "insufficient number of operational sorties". Remained in postwar RCAF (20245), retiring 9 May 1970 and settling in Sydney, Nova Scotia. Died 22 July 2008 in Canning, Nova Scotia as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of November/December 2008. Public Records Office Air 2/9642 has recommendation dated 29 October 1945 which noted he had flown 14 sorties and 70 operational hours.

This officer not only took part in the major airborne operations on the Continent up to and including the Battle of Arnhem, but also made flights alone deep into enemy occupied territory to deliver arms and food to resistance movements. On several occasions he dropped members of the armed forces far behind the enemy lines.

His tenacity of purpose and skill when operating alone at night enabled him to produce a very high percentage of success on supply missions. This was never more clearly shown than at Arnhem where on his third flight to the battle area he was shot down when flying at low altitude in daylight over the heavily defended area.

At all times Flying Officer MacLeod displayed excellent powers of leadership which were accentuated when flying on operations against the enemy.

Air 2/9642 also has an official citation:

Flying Officer MacLeod as captain of aircraft took part in the major airborne operations at Arnhem, and also made flights deep into enemy territory to deliver arms and food to resistance movements. On several occasions he dropped members of the armed forces far behind the enemy lines successfully. Flying Officer MacLeod's skill and tenacity when operating alone, at night, enabled him to obtain a very high percentage of success during supply missions. Flying Officer MacLeod was made prisoner of war when his aircraft was shot down during his third sortie to Arnhem.

NOTE: Notwithstanding the unit identified above, on 21 September 1944 he was piloting Stirling LJ830 of No.620 Squadron which was airborne at 1230 hours and shot down close to Arnhem. Crash landing executed. The crew were J24949 F/O H.M. McLeod or MacLeod (POW), J26361 F/O R. Newton (navigator, evaded ?), J24015 F/O H. Bate (bomb aimer, POW), 1821449 Sergeant H. Haig (flight engineer, evaded), 157923 F/O C.C. King (WOP/Air, evaded ?) And J29874 F/O J.R. Thomas (air gunner, killed).

MacLEOD, F/O John Leslie (J24399) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.160 (Bomber Reconnaissance) Squadron - Award effective 1 December 1945 as per Canada Gazette dated 15 December 1945 and AFRO 183/46 dated 22 February 1946. Born in Alexandria, Ontario, 24 April 1919. Attended Public Schools in Ontario, 1925-1931, Glen Nevis High School, 1931-1935, Kingston Collegiate, 1935-1936, Queens University, 1936-1940 (B.Commerce). Home in Kingston, Ontario; enlisted in Toronto, 21 January 1942 where he had been an auditor. Posted to No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto on enlistment. To Technical Training School, St. Thomas, 28 March 1942. To No.6 ITS, Toronto, 7 June 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 31 July 1942 but not posted to No.12 EFTS, Goderich until 30 August 1942; graduated 23 October 1942 when posted to No.9 SFTS, Centralia; graduated and commissioned 19 March 1943. To No.1 GRS, Charlottetown, 20 March 1943. To No.160 (BR) Squadron, 12 June 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 12 September 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 12 March 1945. To Station Torbay, 1 June 1945. To No.5 Equipment Depot, Moncton, 1 December 1945. To Eastern Air Command Headquarters, 30 November 1945. To AFHQ, 1 February 1946. Assigned postwar number of 20052. Assigned to No.413 (Photographic) Squadron, 9 September 1947; missing on a flight on 18 October 1947 (No.413 Squadron, Mitchell 894). Wreckage located 8 October 1952. Aircraft had crashed at 6,200 foot level in a horse shoe enclosure on the east slope of Mount Glory (nine miles north of Rossland, British Columbia). As of recommendation he had flown 1,380 hours, 865 operational (105 sorties). Sent by registered mail to next-of-kin, 7 November 1949.

This pilot and captain has completed most successfully many operational sorties. His ability to handle his crew resulted in their being selected as one of the best in the squadron. His steadiness in undertaking all task, his courage and cool efficiency have made him an excellent pilot whose service in operational flying is most praiseworthy.

Originally recommended for Mention in Despatches by the Commanding Officer of No.160 Squadron, June 1945. The submission read:

In a quiet and unassuming way Flying Officer MacLeod has successfully completed many operational sorties. His ability to handle his crew resulted in the crew being selected as one of the best in the squadron.

Group Captain R.S. Grandy concurred (25 June 1945) but on 13 September 1945 Air Vice Marshal Morfee noted "Recommend DFC" on the form. Air Commodore Martin Costello also wrote, "Recommend for DFC" (23 October 1945) and this went on to approval.

This officer, as captain of an aircraft, has participated in 31 1/2 trips against the enemy, including such heavily defended targets as Bremen, Hamburg, Essen, Karlsruhe and Dusseldorf. At all times, Flight Lieutenant MacLeod's outstanding leadership has enabled his crew to press home the attack to the utmost. On one occasion, on 12th June, 1944, over Arras, this officer's aircraft was attacked by an enemy fighter, just prior to the target run. By excellent evasive action, this captain evaded the attacker and carried on to the target. In recognition of Flight Lieutenant MacLeod's cool courage and tenacity of purpose and for his contribution to a most successful crew, I strongly recommend that he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Notes: Piloted Halifax LL173, No.431 Squadron, 12 March 1944 on return from mining sortie. Incident at 0053 hours. Hydraulics failed after undercarriage came down and flaps had to be pumped down. Starboard undercarriage collapsed after landing. Crew included P/O L. Peters (navigator, later DFC).

Application for Operational Wing dated 8 October 1944 stated he had flown 36 sorties (172 hours 45 minutes), 12 February to 6 October 1944.

Training: Course at No.1 ITS was 22 June to 14 August 1942. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, General Studies, Airmanship, Armament (practical and written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill, and Signals. Scored 700 out of possible 1,000 points. Placed 30th in a class of 33. "Keen, alert, reliable and aggressive airman whose conduct and deportment at this Unit has been excellent. He is liable to be a little slow in assimilating instruction, but is a plugger."

Course at No.7 EFTS was 14 September to 6 November 1942. Tiger Moth aircraft - 40.20 day dual (10.10 dual to first solo), 33.45 day solo, 4.00 night dual, 45 minutes night solo. Was 9.40 on instruments and logged ten hours in Link. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament, Aircraft Recognition. Received 412 points out of possible 700. Placed 28th in a class of 30. "Fair average pupil pilot who tries hard and is cooperative. Discipline and leadership good."

Course at No.9 SFTS was 23 November 1942 to 6 April 1943. Anson aircraft - 74.10 day dual (8.05 dual to first solo), 52.05 day solo, 8.40 night dual, 9.00 night solo. Flew 12.45 in formation, 26.10 on instruments, Link time not clear. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament, Aircraft Recognition, Signals and Meteorology. Placed 47th in a class of 56. "An average pilot who is inclined to be forgetful."

Course at No.18 (Pilots) AFU was 22 June to 7 September 1943. Oxford aircraft (5.20 day dual to first day solo, 20.10 total day dual, 29.10 day solo, 1.45 night dual to first night solo, 9.45 total night dual, 15.10 night solo. Flew 40 minutes in formation, 4.50 on instruments, 5.35 in Link. Flying Test grades were in General Flying (260/400), Instrument Flying (150/250), Night Flying (60/100) and Link (31/50). "A sound and steady pilot, and an efficient and reliable officer." (G/C F.G. Argyle Robinson, 7 September 1943)

Course at No.1513 Beam Approach Training Flight was 27 July to 2 August 1943. Oxford I aircraft (10 hours five minutes, all dual beam flying) plus 5.15 in Link. Graded in Beam Approach Procedure and Q Code, Link Trainer (100/200), Receiver Operation (60/100), Instrument Flying (135/250), Cloud and Night Flying (135/250) and General Application of Beam Approach Procedure, flying (120/200). "Instrument flying average. Needs more practice at controlled descent. A keen pupil whose knowledge and application of S.B.A. is satisfactory. Could use system in emergency.

Course at No.24 OTU was 7 September to 16 November 1943. Whitley V aircraft - 2.40 day dual to first day solo, 7.40 total day dual, 9.00 day with a captain at controls, 29.00 day as captain, 2.15 night dual to first night solo, 3.25 total night dual, 4.10 night with a captain at controls, 30.15 night at captain, logged 15.05 in Link. Flying Test grades as follows: General Flying (340/400), Applied Flying (170/200), Instrument Flying (200/250), Night Flying (80/100) and Link (40/50). Ground courses in Airmanship (204/300) and Signals (63/100). Described as "above average ability. He is a very good captain and has full control of his crew." Completed four day and four night cross-country flights, one Bullseye (average height 13,000 feet), one War Load Climb and one Fighter Affiliation (with a Tomahawk).

Course at Flying Instructor School was 29 November 1944 to 17 January 1945. Oxford aircraft (17.15 day dual, 1.30 night dual, 21.40 day solo, 1.20 night solo. Ground courses in Principles of Flight (83/100), Airmanship (84/100) and Technical Subjects (88/100 written, 77/100 oral). Average pilot, below average as potential instructor. "His demonstrations are not up to standard and his pattern is sketchy. His manner and voice are uninteresting and monotonous." (S/L W.D.K. Franklin). Nevertheless, a report on him as instructor at No. 1666 CU dated 4 July 1945 rated him as average in all categories. He had flown 40 hours as a Lancaster instructor (35 day, five night)."A capable pilot and good instructor. He should try to improve his general technical knowledge but has no particular faults." (F/L S. Bulford).

To No.5 Release Centre, 16 September 1945. Retired 18 September 1945. TCA pilot for one year after the war. Attended University of British Columbia (pharmacy) and then ran a partnership in Prince George. Retired in 1986 and moved to Vancouver Island. Continued private flying (Beechcraft Bonanza) until age 80. Died in Nanaimo, 16 August 2012.

This officer, throughout his period of duty on operational flying in the North Atlantic area, has displayed outstanding skill and devotion to duty. His keenness and tireless devotion to duty are worthy of high praise. He is an excellent leader and by his example has been an inspiration to those associated with him.

MACLISE, F/L Douglas James (J10295) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.11 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 7 July 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date, London Gazette dated 10 July 1945 and AFRO 1291/45 dated 10 August 1945. As of recommendation he had flown 1,819 hours, including 934 operational hours (155 sorties). Presented with medal 24 February 1950. No citation in AFRO other than "in recognition of valuable services in the air." Following from DHist files:

Flight Lieutenant Maclise has completed two length tours of operations against the enemy over the North Atlantic. Despite adverse weather conditions and hazardous circumstances, this aircraft captain has at all times shown the greatest keenness to seek out the enemy. The cheerful and willing manner in which he has carried out his assignments has been a splendid example to all members of his squadron. Throughout his operational career he has displayed splendid leadership and outstanding devotion to duty.

MACLURE, W/C Kenneth Cecil (C1511) - Air Force Cross - Empire Air Navigation School - Award effective 7 September 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1647/45 dated 26 October 1945. Born in Montreal, 14 October 1914; home in Westmount. Educated at McGill University (pre-war B.Sc.; M.Sc. in 1950 and Ph.D in 1952); COTC, 1931-32. Employed by Sun Life before war. Enlisted 15 December 1939. Instructed in navigation in Canada early in the war; served at No.31 ANS (Port Albert, Ontario) as well as Trenton and No.1 ANS, Rivers. Squadron Leader as of 1 September 1941. To overseas, 30 September 1942. Repatriated 29 August 1943. To Rockcliffe, 28 September 1943. In February 1944 sent to Central Navigation School, Cranage, returning to Canada in July 1944. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 October 1944. Posted on 7 November 1944 to Empire Air Navigation School in post of Director, Test and Development. In May 1945 a specially modified Lancaster bomber aircraft, named "Aries", undertook a series of flights to both the North Geographic and North Magnetic Poles. These flights, involving 110 hours flying time between May 17 and 26, established the Greenwich Grid as a fully practical and safe routing navigation technique. One of the flights also established that the North Magnetic Pole was about 480 kilometers north-northwest of its charted position, further emphasizing the failure of the magnetic compass as a steering reference. To obtain his instrument readings, Wing Commander Maclure worked under extreme conditions, spending up to nineteen hours at a time confined to the rear of the Lancaster's fuselage where inside temperatures were almost as cold as outside - often down to minus 65 degrees. On a flight destined for Whitehorse, Yukon the Aries stopped briefly at the RCAF Central Navigation School in Rivers, Manitoba, where the staff was briefed on the success of the Aries flights and the utility of the Greenwich Grid. Following a stopover in Whitehorse, a direct flight was made back to the EANS at Shawbury, once again successfully employing the Greenwich Grid navigation technique. Thus Maclure was the first Canadian to fly over the North Geographic Pole. Repatriated August 1946. Seconded to the Arctic Section of the Defence Research Board to work on arctic navigation problems. Retained rank of Wing Commander in postwar RCAF (1994). 1946 winner of American Institute of Navigation award. During the early 1950's he returned to the field of research as Senior Test Engineer at the Central Experimental and Proving Establishment (CEPE) at RCAF Station Rockcliffe. Promoted Group Captain, 1 January 1954. Served at Air Force Headquarters as Director of Armament Engineering. He was later posted as the Canadian Military Attache to Warsaw, Poland (August 1958 to September 1961). When he returned to Canada in 1961, he was again seconded to the Defence Research Board, this time to the Pacific Naval Laboratory at Esquimalt, B.C. as head of the Electro-Magnetic Research Group. He was engaged in acoustic and electromagnetic research in ice-filled waters, a matter of extreme importance to RCAF anti-submarine operations. Retired from the RCAF in November 1969 but continued as head of the Electro-Magnetic Research Group at Esquimalt conducting research in the Arctic on under-sea and ice experiments out of Resolute Bay, NWT. He also served as a part time lecturer in Physics at the University of Victoria. In 1971 he was appointed Chief of Defence Research Staff at the Canadian High Commission, London, a position he held for four years. In 1974 he was elected Vice President of the Royal Institute of Navigation. He returned to Canada in 1975, to the Defence Research Board as senior research and development planning officer. He was elected Fellow of the Canadian Aeronautics and Space Institute (CASI) in 1976. He retired in October 1979 and continued to live in Ottawa. Died 24 March 1988 as per Airforce Magazine of January-February-March 1989. Inducted into Canada's Aviation Hall of Fame, 2005 with following citation: "During an illustrious military career, navigation expert, focussed on solving problems with navigation in north polar regions where the magnetic compass was of little use. Developed the Greenwich Grid overlay system which has become the norm of navigating in high latitudes and is now in worldwide use.." Photo PL-102866 refers.

Wing Commander Maclure is a navigator and has been employed on navigation test and development duties. He acted as chief research officer during the flights made in the Lancaster aircraft "Aries" between the 17th and 26th May 1945, involving 110 hours flying, in the course of which a scientific survey was made over the North Geographic and Magnetic poles. The peculiar problems of navigation at high speed over these regions where, in the extreme case, all directions become south and where traditional methods of orientation by magnetic instruments inevitably fail, have been exhaustively studied by this officer. Over a period of the last two years he has perfected a system of navigation based upon entirely new conceptions of orientation and he has taken the lead in making the necessary technical arrangements by which the accurate execution of these first polar flights of the Royal Air Force were assured. The contribution which he has thus made to the accomplishment of the flights and the scientific data he was able to collect will undoubtedly have far-reaching effects. To obtain his readings, Wing Commander Maclure worked in the virtually unheated rear of the aircraft where temperatures down to 65 degrees of front were experienced for periods of eighteen to nineteen hours at a time without intermission. Without Wing Commander Maclure's extreme devotion to duty, the valuable scientific information would not have been obtained. The ingenuity and industry with which this officer has always applied himself to furtherance of air navigation has been most praiseworthy.

MacMILLAN, F/L Arthur (C15711) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.426 Squadron - Award effective 30 November 1943 as per London Gazette dated 7 December 1943 and AFRO 166/44 dated 28 January 1944. Born in Glasgow, Scotland, 14 January 1921; home in Cardiff, South Wales; enlisted in Winnipeg, 8 June 1939 as Master Mechanic (Transport). To No.110 (Army Cooperation) Squadron, 18 December 1939. Proceeded overseas with them; reclassified as Aero Engine Mechanic, 1 February 1940; promoted AC1, 1 May 1940 on remuster to Air Gunner. Promoted LAC, 1 August 1942. Commissioned 15 July 1942. Posted from No.419 Squadron to No.426 Squadron on formation of latter, 20 October 1942. Promoted Flying Officer and Flight Lieutenant, 30 October 1942. Squadron Gunnery Officer. Flew often with S/L (later W/C) L.Crooks. Repatriated 14 November 1943. To No.2 OTS, 1 January 1944. To No.14 EFTS, 10 March 1944. To No.10 SFTS, 11 August 1944. Qualified as pilot, 20 January 1945. To No.7 BGS, 15 April 1945. To Central Flying School, 5 May 1945. Reverted to Flying Officer in postwar RCAF, 1 October 1946 (19816). Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 January 1949. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 January 1953. Presented with medal 5 November 1946. Killed during flying operations in Canada, 31 December 1954 (with F/L H.W. Mitchell, DFC).

This officer has completed many successful operations against the enemy in which he has displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty.

Circumstances of Death: CF-100 18115 - 19816 S/L Arthur MacMillian, DFC(student) and 35682 F/L Harold Wallace Mitchell, DFC (instructor) were on an authorized instrument exercise as outlined in the OTU Instrument Conversion Syllabus of Training. Airborne at 1416 hours, 31

December 1954 in IFR conditions. At 1425 a radio transmission received requesting check bearings and steers. They were given six steers and two bearings. This was last radio contact. At 1530 hours the aircraft was seen to fly comparatively straight and then dive steeply and crash. Investigation showed that starboard engine was not running although there was no pre-impact fire. There may have been radio failure. Cause of accident (loss of control) obscure but contravention of flying procedure not considered.

MacMILLAN, F/L Robert Percival (J89274) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.420 Squadron - Award effective 8 September 1945 as per London Gazette dated 21 September and AFRO 1704/45 dated 9 November 1945. Born 24 July 1923 in Victoria, British Columbia; home given variously as Victoria and Ottawa (student); enlisted in Vancouver, 29 April 1942 and posted to No.3 Manning Depot. To No.4 ITS, 15 August 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 9 October 1942 but not posted to No.5 EFTS until 7 November 1942; graduated 9 January 1943 when posted to No.3 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 30 April 1943. To "Y" Depot, 14 May 1943; to RAF overseas, 26 May 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 30 October 1943. Commissioned 28 August 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 28 February 1945. Repatriated 8 June 1945. Retired 24 July 1945. Medal sent by registered mail 24 February 1950.

This officer has taken part in many operations against such heavily defended targets as Cologne, Dusseldorf and Hanover, and he has invariably pressed home his attack with the utmost determination. On one occasion, whilst en route to Hanover, ice formed rapidly on the wings and fuselage soon after the take-off and control became difficult. In spite of this, Flight Lieutenant MacMillan pressed on and attacked the target. During the return journey the aircraft encountered adverse weather. Nevertheless, this officer flew the aircraft safely back to base. At all times he has proved himself to be a pilot of great capability and has set a fine example to the members of the squadron.

DHH file 181.009 D.2618 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20627) had the original recommendation, drafted by W/C F.S. McCarthy, 19 April 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (202 hours 20 minutes):

30 October 1944 - Cologne (6.25, second pilot)
4 November 1944 - Bochum (4.45)
6 November 1944 - Gelsenkirchen (5.25)
18 November 1944 - Munster (6.00)
21 November 1944 - Castrop Rauxel (6.55)
27 November 1944 - Neuss (5.40)
18 December 1944 - Duisburg (5.40)
24 December 1944 - Dusseldorf (4.35)
29 December 1944 - Spich (6.50)
30 December 1944 - Cologne (5.45)
2 January 1945 - Ludwigshaven (7.20)
5 January 1945 - Hanover (5.00)
6 January 1945 - Hanau (6.55)
28 January 1945 - Stuttgart (7.00)
4 February 1945 - Bonn (6.30)
7 February 1945 - Goch (6.05)
8 February 1945 - Wanne Eickel (6.15)
13 February 1945 - Bohlen (8.00)
20 February 1945 - Monheim (7.10)
21 February 1945 - Worms (7.10)
23 February 1945 - Essen (6.15)
24 February 1945 - Kamen (6.15)
1 March 1945 - Mannheim (7.00)
5 March 1945 - Chemnitz (8.45)
7 March 1945 - Hemmingstedt (6.20)
21 March 1945 - Rheine (5.10)
22 March 1945 - Dorstein (4.55)
24 March 1945 - Gladbeck (5.35)
31 March 1945 - Hamburg (5.20)
8 April 1945 - Hamburg (6.05)
10 April 1945 - Leipzig (7.45)
13 April 1945 - Kiel (6.50)

Flight Lieutenant MacMillan has completed a successful operational tour. Many of his missions have been against very heavily defended targets, such as Cologne, Dusseldorf, Ludwigshaven, Hanover and Stuttgart. He has displayed commendable skill and courage, and has invariably pressed home his attacks to good advantage. On a raid to Hanover, the aircraft gathered a heavy load of ice after take-off, which remained on the aircraft, rendering control extremely difficult and doubtful. In spite of this, and very high petrol consumption, Flight Lieutenant MacMillan pressed home a very accurate bombing attack and returned to this country through heavy rain and sleet, at a low altitude, which the aircraft condition made necessary.

He has at all times proved himself to be a captain of the highest capabilities, and by his crew discipline and eagerness to participate in operations, has set a very fine example to the rest of the squadron. It is strongly recommended that he be awarded the non-immediate Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacMILLAN, F/L William Grant Douglas (C8837) - Member, Order of the British Empire - Station Lachine - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946. Home in Port Hope, Ontario. Enlisted in Toronto, 14 November 1941 as Administrative Officer and commissioned. To RAF overseas, 24 December 1941. Repatriated at uncertain date but likely 20 May 1942 when shown as being posted to a Personnel Transit Unit. Promoted Flying Officer, 14 May 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 May 1943. To No.31 Personnel Depot, 31 January 1944. To No.1 Training Command, 15 March 1944. To No.1 Air Command, 15 January 1945. To Lachine, 6 April 1945. Retired 11 February 1946. Presented with medal in Toronto, 18 October 1947. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Volume 60, File 190-I, dossier 9) has citation to MBE.

All through the periods of heavy drafts of repatriated personnel from overseas, this officer has been most efficient in the performance of his duties and the expeditious manner in which transportation for such personnel was provided was largely due to his efforts. He has been conspicuous by his courteous attitude towards all personnel, his fine co-operative spirit and by his cheerful manner to all ranks, often under heavy pressure of work. The hours of duty required from this officer have been long and arduous, yet they have been performed in an exceptional way and have earned for him the respect and admiration of all who have been associated with him.

In December 1942, Flight Sergeant MacMonagle and Flight Sergeant Warren were captain and mid-upper gunner, respectively, of an aircraft detailed to attack an airfield in Germany. When approaching the target their aircraft was intercepted and severely damaged by fire from two Messerschmitt 110s. Flight Sergeant Warren, although seriously wounded, shot one of the fighters down in flames by skilful evasive tactics. The remaining attacker was driven off and the target successfully bombed. On the return flight another Messerschmitt 110 attacked and further damage was inflicted on the bomber. The attacker was again beaten off and Flight Sergeant MacMonagle flew the disabled aircraft safely back to base. Throughout this hazardous operation these airmen displayed great coolness and courage.

To Station Summerside, 30 October 1945. Retired 7 January 1946. Certificate sent to Station Sydney, 4 July 1945. Died in Ottawa, 1992.

A conscientious and highly principled officer, and has worked untiringly and well within her duties as Messing Officer. Despite labour shortage and adverse situations she has, through her organizing ability and kindly firmness, overcome many difficult problems and to the admiration of all the standard of messing has been kept at a very high level.

Recommendation raised 11 January 1945 by G/C A.J. Hatchett-Taylor, Station Sydney, as follows:

A conscientious, highly principled officer who has worked untiringly and well in her duties as Messing Officer. Cheerfully overcoming labour shortages and adverse situations which would have daunted a less doughty soul, she has through her organising abilities and kindly firmness overcome difficulties so that the standard of messing might be kept high and has, in consequence, won the admiration and thanks of all ranks.

Note: Interviewed, 24 September 1941 by F/L R.H, Masterman - "Excellent experience (six years) as a Dietitian in the Royal Ottawa Sanitarium. Known to Flight Officer O. Jeffs of AMS-D SA. Looks the part. Would recommend."

Assessed 15 February 1944 on posting from Station Yarmouth - "Section Officer MacMurphy is indefatigable. No effort is too great, if the welfare of Station personnel is concerned. She is frequently on duty at. an early hour and also late in the evening, Thoroughly competent and reliable." (S/L J.F. Grant, Station Yarmouth).

Pilot Officer MacNair is an outstanding Air Gunner in a very successful crew. He is of a quiet nature, but possesses a fine offensive spirit and keenness for operational duty, which has inspired his crew to greater achievements.

Although placed in extreme personal danger he has disregarded this, and completed his duties to the fullest extent. His extreme devotion to duty and very cheerful manner are most commendable.

MacNEIL, F/O Dan Thomas (J85961) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.419 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 25 May 1945 and AFRO 1291/45 dated 10 August 1945. Born 17 October 1915 in St.Margaret's Village, Nova Scotia; home there (teacher); enlisted in Halifax, 17 July 1940. To "R", 20 August 1940. To No.2 ITS, 31 August 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 22 October 1940 when posted to No.1 EFTS; ceased training and posted to No.1 Manning Depot, 4 December 1940; to No.1 AOS, 31 March 1941; may have graduated 22 July 1941 but not posted to No.1 BGS until 30 July 1941; graduated 30 August 1941, promoted Sergeant and posted to No.2 ANS; graduated 28 September 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 30 September 1941. To RAF overseas, 19 October 1941. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 28 February 1942. Promoted WO2, 28 August 1942. Promoted WO1, 1 November 1942. Commissioned 29 March 1944. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 20 May 1944. Appears to have been returned to Canada for leave. Returned to Britain, 11 July 1944 (date of being taken on strength of No.3 PRC). Promoted Flying Officer, 29 September 1944. Repatriated 2 August 1945. Retired 2 October 1945. RCAF photo PL-33715 (ex UK-15731, 11 October 1944) shows F/L Art Bishop, AFC, DFM with navigator, P/O Don [sic, Dan] MacNeil, St. Margaret's, Nova Scotia. RCAF photo PL-40791 (ex UK-17173 dated 5 December 1944) shows three off-duty navigators of No.419 Squadron, viz F/L P.C. Thompson (Inisfree, Alberta), F/O Dan MacNeil (St. Margaret's, Nova Scotia (described as on his second tour), and F/O J.H. McKellar (Glencoe, Ontario). No citation other than "completed ...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1941 (RG.24 Vol.20612) has recommendation by W/C M.E. Ferguson dated 15 February 1945 when he had flown 47 sorties (268 hours 20 minutes). First tour was on Stirlings, 27 sorties (28 July 1942 to 29 March 1943); second tour was 20 sorties (27 September 1944 to 5 January 1945). Medal presented in Halifax, 27 July 1949.

This navigator has completed his second tour while on 419 Squadron and during this time has shown a very high standard of efficiency. Throughout his second tour the results of his work and leadership made possible the completion of what, on the surface, appeared quite an uneventful tour.

Flying Officer MacNeil's work in the air was of a very high standard showing precision of timing and track keeping. By his example, through his work in the air and his constructive ideas and suggestions on the ground, he became very valuable to the section and an inspiration to all new navigators.

As a result of his individual endeavours I have no hesitation in recommending this officer for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows; first tour on Stirlings, second on Lancasters:

28 July 1943 - Hamburg (1.35, duty not carried out)
31 July 1943 - Dusseldorf (4.20)
12 August 1943 - Mainz (6.10)

MacNEIL, F/L Donald Stewart (J25133) - Air Force Cross - No.519 Squadron (AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas") - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 155/46 dated 15 February 1946. Born 20 November 1920. Enlisted in Halifax, 18 June 1940. To No.2 ITS, 30 June 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 17 August 1940; posted that date to No.1 WS; to No.1 BGS, 20 December 1940. Graduated as WAG, 18 January 1941 and promoted Sergeant. To Embarkation Depot, 30 January 1941; to RAF overseas, 2 March 1941. Repatriated to Rockcliffe, 3 August 1941. Reclassified asw Aircraft Hand General Duties, 26 September 1941 and reduced to AC2. To No.5 Manning Depot, 29 April 1942; to No.5 ITS, 6 June 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 1 August 1942; to No.2 EFTS, 12 September 1942; to No.1 SFTS, 7 November 1942. Graduated and promoted commissioned, 2 April 1943. To No.1 GRS, 16 April 1943. To No.31 OTU, 18 June 1943. To "Y" Depot, 21 September 1943. Taken on strength of \No.3 PRC, 8 October 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 2 October 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 2 April 1945. Repatriated via Debert, 23 July 1945. Retired 11 September 1945. Died 24 March 2006 in New Glasgow, Nova Scotia as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of November/December 2006. No citation in AFRO. Public Records Office Air 2/9144 gives unit and has recommendation prepared when he had flown 920 hours, 450 on present duties and 300 in previous six months.

During the last twelve months, Flight Lieutenant MacNeil has completed 52 meteorological flights, many of them in extremely adverse weather. On one occasion he was flying north of the Arctic Circle when his aircraft was struck by lightning and sustained extensive damage, making it almost uncontrollable. On another occasion, at night, his aircraft was hit by anti-aircraft fire. One wing was holed, whilst the controls to one engine were severed, causing total failure of the electrical circuits, the hydraulic and the oxygen systems and flying instruments. On yet a third occasion he experienced engine failure when flying in low cloud and severe icing conditions. In each instance Flight Lieutenant MacNeil flew safely to base. This officer has shown the greatest coolness in the face of danger and his example of courage and devotion to duty has been most inspiring.

MacNEIL, F/L John Joseph (J18500) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.427 Squadron - Award effective 5 July 1945 as per London Gazette dated 17 July 1945 and AFRO 1558/45 dated 5 October 1945. Born 18 February 1921 in Sydney, Nova Scotia; home there (shipping clerk); enlisted in Halifax, 29 August 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 21 September 1941. To No.8 BGS. 15 January 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 2 March 1942. To "Y" Depot, 17 March 1942; to RAF overseas, 30 April 1942. Commissioned 21 July 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 21 January 1944. Repatriated 2 August 1945. Retired 17 October 1945. Died in Sydney, Nova Scotia, 10 August 1983 as per Legion Magazine of December 1983. Medal sent by registered mail 7 August 1949. No citation other than "in recognition of gallantry and devotion to duty in the execution of air operations against the enemy". DHist file 181.009 D.1729 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20607) has recommendation dated 19 March 1945. It noted he had flown 41 sorties (265 hours ten minutes). First tour was as follows - No.428 Squadron (17 sorties between 16 February and 24 May 1943), No.419 Squadron (three sorties, 19-22 June 1943), No.428 Squadron (12 further sorties, 3 July to 30 August 1943) for a total of 195 hours 50 minutes. Second tour commenced 25 October 1944 with No.427. Recommendation read:

This officer has completed forty-one heavy operational bombing attacks against the enemy, eleven of them on his second tour. As Squadron Gunnery Leader, Flight Lieutenant MacNeil has set a splendid example to all gunners in his section, and although a member of a crew, has on several occasions replaced a gunner who has been hospitalized, thereby enabling the crew to participate in the bombing offensive against the enemy.

At all times he has displayed coolness and courage of the highest order, and has spent endless hours both in the air and on the ground improving the standard of all gunners in his section.

The sortie list was as follows:

He was described as having flown 19 sorties (125 hours 35 minutes) on his second tour plus five hours 40 minutes non-operational time. Squadron Gunnery Leader. Not approved by submission transcribed for the historical record:

Flight Lieutenant MacNeil has spent ten months at a Heavy Conversion Unit where, as Deputy Gunnery Leader, his aggressive spirit and technical ability was instrumental in raising the gunnery standard to a high level. His cheerful cooperation and determination to produce the maximum made him a valued member of the staff. The manner in which he carried out his many tasks has been an inspiration to all. I most strongly recommend that he be awarded the Air Force Cross.

MacNEIL, P/O Malcolm (J87594) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.83 Squadron - Award effective 17 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2534/44 dated 24 November 1944. Born 16 January 1920 in Glace Bay, Nova Scotia (obituary notice); home there and educated there (shipping clerk, member of the Volunteer Fire Department). Also known as a sprinter in the Maritimes. Joined Royal Canadian Artillery, May 1941. Transferred to RCAF in Halifax 16 December 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1 ITS, 28 March 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 22 May 1942 but not posted until 4 July 1942 when sent to No.12 EFTS; ceased training and sent to Trenton, 25 July 1942; to No.8 BGS, 29 August 1942; may have graduated 30 October 1942 but not sent to No.1 AOS until 17 November 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 18 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, 2 January 1943; to RAF overseas, 25 January 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 18 June 1943. On proceeding overseas he flew one tour with No.207 Squadron and a second with No.83 Squadron. Commissioned 14 June 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 2 August 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 31 December 1944. To Pennfield Ridge, 19 August 1945. To No.1 Release Centre, 4 September 1945. Retired 8 September 1945. Studied at St. Francis Xavier University and while supporting his family obtained a Masters Degree in Psychology, University of Ottawa, 1952. Joined the federal Public Service Commission from which he retired in 1985. Medal sent by registered mail 228 June 1949. Died in Ottawa, 29 October 2008. Formerly R137873. RCAF photo PL-33234 (ex UK-15513 dated 4 October 1944 is captioned as follows: "Grouped about the entrance of their dispersal bus are these young Canadians who are members of an RAF Bomber Command squadron overseas. Back row, F/O Tom Olsen, navigator of Toronto (DFC), FS Harry Loggin, navigator of Leduc, Alberta, F/O Jack Cartwright, pilot, of Toronto (DFC), P/O Harold Callon, air gunner, of Hamilton, Ontario; F/O Jack Beaton, bomb aimer, of Montreal (DFC); Front row, P/O Malcolm MacNeil, DFC, bomb aimer, of Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, FS Irving Simpson, air gunner, of Vancouver. (DFC)."

In August 1944 Pilot Officer MacNeil was bomb aimer of an aircraft detailed for a sortie against a target in France. During the operation the aircraft was intercepted by enemy fighters and in the ensuing engagement sustained severe damage. The front gunner was trapped in his turret and the rear gunner lay severely injured as the aircraft fell out of control. The pilot succeeded in regaining control, however, and Pilot Officer MacNeil, who had displayed great coolness throughout, promptly went to the assistance of the front gunner whom he freed. He then went to the rear turret where he released the other injured comrade and gave him first aid. This done, he manned the rear turret until the English coast was reached. He displayed outstanding coolness and determination under most harassing circumstances. Pilot Officer MacNeil has completed a large number of sorties against a wide range of targets.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9160 has recommendation from the Officer Commanding, Station Coningsby, drafted 12 August 1944 when he had flown 36 sorties (192 hours 50 minutes). This date must be in error (perhaps 22 August) given that the action described was on 15 August. The drafting is also odd, mentioning a sortie "on the night of the 15th August 1944" but "detailed for a daylight raid on Bois de Casson."

Pilot Officer MacNeil has now participated in 36 operational sorties against the enemy, many of which have been on major and heavily defended targets in Germany. Throughout these operations, Pilot Officer MacNeil has proved himself to be a skilful and determined Bomb Aimer who displays coolness and courage under fire. He is a first class set operator as well as bomb aimer and has set an excellent example by his work both in the air and on the ground. His reliability even under the most arduous conditions has inspired the confidence of his Captain and crew. All his work with the squadron has been most praiseworthy.

On the night of the 15th August 1944, Pilot Officer MacNeil was bomb aimer and set operator in a Lancaster which was detailed for a daylight raid on Bois de Casson. His Lancaster was severely damaged by enemy fighters. Owing to this damage, the aircraft fell out of control so that the Captain gave orders for the crew to abandon aircraft by parachute. However, all the crew members could not obey this order, as the front gunner was trapped in his turret and the rear gunner was severely injured in his turret. Pilot Officer MacNeil refused to leave his comrades quite helpless and with complete disregard for his own safety, he went first to the assistance of the front gunner whom he successfully freed, and then to the rear turret where he managed to release the rear gunner and applied first aid treatment. Fortunately the Captain had been able to regain control of the aircraft when he cancelled the order to abandon, so that Pilot Officer MacNeil's courageous self-sacrifice did not result in him losing his life. As the Lancaster was still over hostile territory, Pilot Officer MacNeil then manned the rear guns until the English coast had been reached.

This outstanding example of selfless devotion to duty is typical of the conduct of this bomb aimer. For his courage and devotion to duty he is strongly recommended for the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

As a Sergeant with No.207 Squadron he was involved in the ditching of Lancaster DV243 on the night of 22/23 October 1943. A summary of the incident listed the crew as P/O J.A. Kelly (pilot), Sergeant S.C. Burleigh (flight engineer), Sergeant D.. Beech (navigator), Sergeant S.R. Lambert (WOP), Flight Sergeant J.C.D. Dow (mid-upper gunner, missing), Flight Sergeant C.J. Duggin (rear gunner) and Sergeant M. MacNeil (air bomber). Report as follows:

Lancaster DV243 of No.207 Squadron with the above crew was engaged on an operational sortie to Kassel on the night of 22/23 October 1943. Through some, as yet unidentified fault, after having bombed the target, this aircraft was thought to have been somewhere over southern Denmark. The captain, P/O Kelly, decided, while yet east of Bremen, that he would have insufficient fuel to reach the English coast and immediately ordered the institution of distress procedure. The wireless operator switched the IFF to "distress" and attempted to contact the appropriate M/F D/F Section. Unfortunately the Wireless Operator, for some time, owing to weak signals (although at 20,000 feet) could not make contact. However, he persisted and over a period of approximately two hours worked continuously at his set on various M/F Sections, as and when they were available, obtained the amazing succession of eleven three-bearing fixes as well as passing to the M/F D/F Section three GEE fixes obtained by the Navigator. The pilot, although he realized he would not reach England, decided it was definitely to his advantage to make every effort to get as close to it as possible and reached a position approximately 25 miles from the English coast, having remained in the air for eight hours 15 minutes on 1,480 gallons of fuel.

As a crew this was their first operational flight, although some members had done one or two operations before. The captain wisely interrogated his crew on the descent as to their knowledge of ditching stations and put them right, where wrong.

The pilot realised that there was a heavy sea running and that the wind speed was high but it was not until he had descended to 500 feet that he could judge drift. At this height he turned into wind and ditched the aircraft. In actual fact, the height of the waves was estimated at between 12 and 15 feet, and the wind speed at between 25 and 30 miles per hour. The second impact of the aircraft on the water was described by the pilot as "horrible". The tail, aft of the mid-upper turret, was broken off, all four engines fell off, and the front turret was washed away. The crew were out of the aircraft and on the mainplane within 45 seconds, taking with them all their distress equipment and rations. It was unfortunately discovered that the dinghy was not attached to the aircraft and was, indeed, floating away. The captain jumped into the water in an attempt to bring the dinghy back to the aircraft, but was unsuccessful and the whole crew had to jump for it. The Flight Engineer and Mid-Upper Gunner were late in jumping, and finally decided to do so only when the starboard undercarriage wheel appeared floating on the surface. They jumped for this but were unable to reach it. The Flight Engineer was back-washed onto the starboard wing; unfortunately the Mid-Upper Gunner was washed out towards the wing tip and away from the aircraft, and was last seen flashing his electric torch. The Flight Engineer remained on the wing until rescued.

Within an hour and a half of ditching two destroyers were on the scene and one rescued those in the dinghy and the other within two hours picked up the Flight Engineer from the still-floating aircraft. This aircraft in spite of all the damage sustained floated for 14 ½ hours and finally sank during salvage operations.

Area Combined Headquarters with nearly two hours to sort out M/F fixes, GEE fixes and the broad beam IFF plot, were able to pass the ditching position 52-40 North 02-09 East to the Navy, and the crew was actually picked up at the position 52-39 North 02-08 East.

Conclusions:

If you institute distress procedure early, you increase your chances of rescue tremendously.

Regular dinghy drills and lectures on distress procedure enabled this crew to carry out a very successful ditching almost automatically.

There is no need to regard this ditching as lucky. One and all, you can do the same provided you have regular practice in drill and absolute knowledge of your procedure.

15 September 1944 - Kiel (1.30, duty not carried out)
17 September 1944 - Boulogne (3.50)
28 September 1944 - Calais (4.00)

One night in September 1944 this officer was captain on an aircraft detailed to attack Kiel. Shortly after leaving his base at approximately 2,000 feet the starboard outer engine failed. After consultation with the Flight Engineer, Pilot Officer MacNeil decided that it was still possible to continue to the target and accordingly course was set. Five minutes after setting the course the starboard inner engine began to give trouble and this development necessitated a decision being taken to divert from said course and head for sea in order that the bomb load could be jettisoned. Despite great difficulty being experienced in keeping his aircraft at safe height and the necessary airspeed maintained, Pilot Officer MacPhail succeeded in successfully completing the jettisoning of his bomb load, 50 miles out over [the] sea; after jettisoning he piloted his aircraft safely back over land and after making a normal two engine circuit successfully landed his aircraft at Carnaby. Pilot Officer MacNeil by his skill and coolness in this emergency was solely responsible for the safe return of his crew and aircraft. This officer has now completed 30 operational trips against a varied list of enemy targets and he has at all times displayed a high standard of courage, determination and skill during said trips. It is most strongly recommended that for this particularly brilliant display of flying skill that Pilot Officer MacNeil be rewarded by the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MacNEILL, F/L George Edmund (J17615) - Croix de Guerre (France) - No.437 Squadron (AFRO) identifies unit only as "Overseas") - Awarded as per AFRO 1619/45 dated 19 October 1945. Born 16 April 1918. Home in Burt's Corner, New Brunswick; enlisted in Moncton, 5 June 1941. Trained at No.4 WS (graduated 11 April 1942) and No.9 BGS (graduated 30 May 1942). Wartime postings uncertain, although DHist file 181.009 D.1637 (RG.24 Vol.1637) has application for 1939-1945 Star which confirms No.437 connection, states he had arrived in UK, 6 November 1942 and engaged in several flights between there and North Africa, to 15 October 1943. Rejoined RCAF as Air Cadet Officer, Prince Rupert (300921). Flying Officer on enlistment; promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 May 1955. Attended numerous Cadet Camps. Released 6 September 1961. DHist file 181.009 D.4855 (RG.24 Vol.20657) lists several nominees for this award, and ties him to No.437 Squadron. Public Records Office Air 2/9645 has citation.

Early on D-Day, this officer flew as wireless operator and jump master on the paratroop operation to Normandy, and returned on the evening of the same day to drop supplies to the airborne troops. On 20th August, 1944, his aircraft was detailed to drop supplies to an armoured division which had become isolated near Falaise. The aircraft was met with intense fire from the ground and all other members of the crew were wounded. The aircraft was so badly damaged that it had to be force landed. Flight Lieutenant MacNeil immediately gave first aid to the navigator, who was severely wounded, and supported him to prevent further injury during the landing. He completely ignored his own safety. Flight Lieutenant MacNeill has participated in all the airborne operations since D-Day and by his coolness and devotion to duty has inspired the whole of the squadron personnel.

MacNEILL, F/L Hamish Campbell (J11627) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.437 Squadron (AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas") - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 155/46 dated 15 February 1946. Born 22 July 1908 in Argyllshire, Scotland. Educated in Scotland. Stock clerk in London, Ontario, 1926-1929 where he was also in the Militia (London Scottish Regiment). Farm labourer, 1930 to 1933. Seasonal logger thereafter. Home in Vancouver when he enlisted there, 20 June 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon, 7 July 1941. To No.4 SFTS, Saskatoon (guard), 15 August 1941. To No.4 ITS, Edmonton, 26 September 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 23 November 1941; posted next day to No.2 AOS, Edmonton; graduated 28 February 1942 and posted next day to No.8 BGS, Lethbridge; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 11 April 1942; posted next day to No.1 ANS, Rivers; graduated and commissioned, 11 May 1942; to No.31 OTU, Debart, 26 May 1942. To Ferry Command, 1 July 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 11 November 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 11 May 1944. Numerous temporary duty movements as part of ferry operations. Attached from No.45 Group Headquarters to Headquarters, Transport Command, 28 May 1944 for undetermined time. Arrived in Britain on posting, 24 September 1944. To No.437 Squadron, 26 September 1944. Repatriated 22 October 1945. Retired 4 December 1945. No citation in AFRO or biographical file. DHist file 181.009 D.4855 (RG.24 Vol.20657) has recommendation from No.437 Squadron dated 9 June 1945. Unit navigation officer. RCAF photo PL-33815 (ex-UK-16161, 25 October 1944) show F/L H.C. MacNeill of Peachland, British Columbia, F/L J.L. Robertson of Montreal and F/O R.S. Coleman of Toronto. Medal presented 21 February 1948. Died in Kelowna, British Columbia, 30 June 1981 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

Flight Lieutenant MacNeill joined this unit on its formation in September 1944, as Squadron Navigation Officer. Prior to that he operated for a considerable length of time as a navigator on the trans-Atlantic ferry flights.

As Squadron Navigation Officer he is responsible for the navigational efficiency of some fifty crews. This work he has carried out in a most exemplary manner, often going beyond his normal call of duty to ensure that the navigators were trained to the highest standard. By his own cheerfulness, efficiency and keenness he built up a navigation section comparable to the best in the service.

Above his normal administrative duties he was called upon to act as Navigator in the Squadron Commander's crew and at all times by his cool courage, determination and devotion to duty was an inspiration to everyone who worked with him.

Notes: Reported 62 operational sorties with No.437 Squadron plus 19 trans-Atlantic flights; two of these involved deliveries from Montreal to Cairo and Karachi.

On form dated 9 October 1945 he stated he had flown the following types in all postings: Catalina (167.20); Hudson (40.05), Liberator (144.50); Lancaster (30.35); Wellington (44.10); Dakota (422.25), Hampden (24.25).

Selected Assessments: "A satisfactory officer. Recommended for promotion." (S/L F.M. Gobeil, 16 December 1942).

"Very good navigator who has completed nine transatlantic delivery flights. Steady, hard-working and dependable." (S/L W.G. Franklin, No.45 Group, 1 September 1943).

"This officer has made 15 transatlantic deliveries. His navigation has been exceptionally good throughout and he has had excellent reports from his captains." (F/L C.W. Roberts, No.45 Group, 24 April 1944; endorsed by W/C B.A. Coventry).

"A most capable navigator who worked extremely hard and achieved very good results. A very sound instructor and a well balanced and reliable officer." (Extract from a report of a Central Navigation School course in England, 1 September 1944).

MacPHERSON, P/O Bruce Edward (J7236) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 1 January 1943 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943.

Born 8 September 1920. Home in St.Thomas, Ontario; enlisted in London, Ontario, 19 December 1940. To No.1 Manning Depot, 19 December 1940. To No.1A Manning Depot, 8 January 1941. To No.1 BGS (non-flying duties), 8 February 1941. To No.3 ITS, 23 March 1941; promoted LAC, 4 May 1941. To No.4 EFTS, 4 May 1941. To No.9 SFTS, 21 June 1941; graduated and commissioned, 1 September 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 2 September 1941. To RAF overseas, 18 September 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 September 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 August 1943. Repatriated to Canada, 23 September 1943. To No.1 OTU, Bagotville, 1 November 1943. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 5 June 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 16 June 1944. Repatriated 1 June 1945. To No.1 Composite Training School, 12 June 1945. Released 18 September 1945. Died in Thunder Bay, Ontario, 25 October 1986 as per Legion Magazine of December 1986/January 1987. This may be an error or a case of mistaken identity as newsletter of the Central Wing, Canadian Fighter Pilots Association states that he had died on 10 January 2008. It further stated that he had served in No.412 Squadron in 1942, then with No.93 Squadron in North Africa. It further stated that he had "survived a voyage to Murmansk as a Hurricane pilot". He had then returned to No.412 Squadron. After the war he had attended University of Toronto Medical School, graduated in 1950, and practiced at Humber Memorial Hospital until 2000, aged 80. Photo PL-2767 taken at Initial Training School; shows Sergeant R.W. Follett (Toronto), AC2 K.R. Norman (St, Thomas). AC2 T.L. Wright (Collingwood), MacPherson, and H.M. Laflamme (Wales, Ontario). MacPHERSON, W/C Ewart Gladstone (C557) - Officer, Legion of Merit (United States) - Award effective 18 March 1946 as per Canada Gazette dated 4 May 1946 and AFRO 473/46 dated 10 May 1946. NOTE: This was originally announced in AFRO 388/46 dated 12 April 1946, reference Canada Gazette dated 6 April 1946. AFRO 473/46 dated 10 May 1946 cancels and re-instates. Born in Orangeville, Ontario, 18 April 1898; educated there and attended Militia Camp, 1913 and 1914 with Peel Regiment. . Enlisted 8 December 1915 in 164th Battalion, CEF, proceeded to England, 10 April 1916. Attained rank of Company Sergeant Major, 5 May 1916. Did not go to France. To No.2 Officer Cadet Wing, Winchester, 29 March 1917. Appointed Cadet, Royal Flying Corps, 29 August 1917. To No.1 Officer Cadet Wing, Denham, 8 September 1917. Commissioned as Temporary Second Lieutenant, 8 November 1917. To Central Flying School, Upavon, 17 November 1917. Graded as Flying Officer, 22 January 1918. Lieutenant, Royal Air Force, 1 April 1918. To No.3 Flying School, 28 October 1918. To No.201 Squadron, France, 2 November 1918. To Repatriation Camp, Winchester, 2 February 1919. To Repatriation Camp, Shorncliffe, 29 March 1919. Placed on Unemployed List, 20 May 1919. To School of Special Flying, Camp Borden, 19 November 1920. On 10 December 1920 F/O E.G. Fullerton wrote, " This officer did not require much dual on account of having flown all summer, and only required time to get the feel of the machine. His steep turns and landings were very good, and he has pretty good judgement in forced landings. He would make a good pilot on light machines." Reported to No.1 Wing, Camp Borden, 6 December 1920 for refresher flying on DH.9 aircraft but did not go solo owing to shortage of aircraft and poor weather. Between the wars worked in Saskatchewan in a number of companies listed as Rex Fruit Company (one year), Western Aeroplane Company, Moose Jaw (two years as pilot and manager), Caulder's Creamery, Moose Jaw (clerk, two years), Western Creameries, Moose Jaw (two years, manager), Saskatchewan Co-Op Creameries, Regina (two years, advertising manager), Crawford Harris Advertising, Regina (three years as manager) and J.J. Gibbons Advertising, Regina (three years). Joined RCAF Auxiliary, 5 October 1932 in rank of Flying Officer. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 November 1936. Awarded King's Coronation Medal, 29 September 1937. Served with No.20 (B) Squadron, 1 November 1936 with S/L R.A. Delhaye until mobilized to full-time duty, 6 September 1939, having meanwhile attended an Armament Course at Trenton, 11-22 October 1938 which was not completed. To Station Vancouver, 5 November 1939. To Western Air Command Headquarters; 3 January 1940; to No.4 Training Command Headquarters, 6 June 1940; to No.2 ITS (Regina, 13 June 1940; promoted Squadron Leader, 1 September 1940; to No.1 ITS (Toronto, 26 March 1941; to No.2 ITS again, 23 June 1941; promoted Wing Commander, 1 August 1941; to No.4 Training Command, Edmonton, 31 March 1943; to No.2 ITS, 3 April 1943; to No.4 ITS, 25 April 1943; to No.4 Training Command Headquarters, Calgary, 10 November 1944; to No.2 Air Command Headquarters, Winnipeg, 30 November 1944. Retired 19 January 1945. Died in Vancouver, 17 June 1989 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. RCAF photo PL1618 and PL-1619 shows S/L E.G. Macpherson and F/O C.W. McLeod, 1940. Award presented in Winnipeg, 11 April 1946 by Colonel Harry J. Keiling, Deputy Commander, Alaskan Division, Air Transport Command. Colonel Francis J. Graling, writing to AFHQ, 9 March 1946, provided citation.

Wing Commander Edward G. MacPherson performed outstanding services from April 1943 to November 1944 as Officer Commanding, No.4 Initial Training School, Royal Canadian Air Force, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. He gave unsparingly of his personal assistance, as well as the facilities and services of his organization, to aid the United States Forces in accomplishing their mission in northwest Canada.

Notes: Of his First World War flying, the following note was dated 12 November 1918 and signed by Lieutenant-Colonel J. Scott, MC (Commandant, Central Flying School):

This officer acted as Instructor at the Central Flying School for over six months, and has done excellent work in that capacity. He attended the Gosport course, being classed in Category B.1 signifying that he was a competent Scout Instructor. He is a good pilot, and a keen and hard working officer of an excellent type.

On a form of uncertain date he stated he had flown 75 hours as a pupil (50 on Avros and 25 on Pups), 200 hours as an Instructor (Avros), 150 hours on Camels (training and in France), one hour on Dolphins, and about 1,100 hours on JN-4s in barnstorming. In application for Commercial Air Pilot Certificate (12 May 1920) he gave more precise figures - Avro (329.10), Pup (26.10), Sopwith Two-Seater (2.30 at CFS), Dolphin (50 minutes) and Camel (51.30). Also on 12 May 1920, Examiner L.S. Breadner in a JN-4 administered his flying test - a flight from Moose Jaw to Regina and back (about 160 miles total), 1.35 to 4.10 p.m. Breadner also gave him a five-minute night test and noted that Macpherson had been "Bumpy - tail too high but saved OK off the bounce." The exam also included a Technical Examination which had the following headings:

(a) Theoretical knowledge of the resistance of the air as concerns its effects on wings and tail planes, rudders, elevators and propellers; functions on the different parts of the machine and of their controls ("Fairly Good").

(b) Assembling of flying machines and their different parts. ("Fair").

(c) Practical tests on rigging ("Fair")

(d) General knowledge of internal combustion engines, including functions of the various parts; a general knowledge of the construction, assembling, adjustment and characteristics of aero-engines ("Fair")

(e) Causes of the faulty running of engines and of breakdown. ("Fairly good")

(f) Practical tests in running repairs ("Fairly good.")

(g) Knowledge of rules as to lights and signals, rules of the air, and rules for traffic on and in the vicinity of aerodromes and seaplane station. ("Fair")

(h) Practical knowledge of special conditions of air traffic and of international air legislation ("Fair")

(i) Map reading, orientation, location of position, elementary meteorology ("Fair").

A telegram from Weyburn, 13 June 1921 signed "Goulding" stated that he had "Failed on rigging test for Air Engineer's Certificate."

In a letter dated 26 May 1928 to J.A. Wilson (asking to be appointed a Flying Club instructor) he described his commercial flying as follows:

I have approximately 1,500 hours flying to my credit, about 1,000 hours of which were put in since the war. Your records there will inform you regarding the activities of what was known as the Western Aeroplane Company Limited, which carried on commercial aviation in Moose Jaw during the years 1920, 1921 and 1922. I was Secretary-Treasurer and chief pilot for the Company. We flew three Curtiss machines, registered as G-CAACm G-CAAL and G-CABW - if I remember correctly. I flew for two or three summers, carrying hundreds of passengers in various parts of this province and did not meet with any accidents. I attended a refresher course at Camp Borden in the late fall of 1920.

Flying Accident: Letter dated 29 June 1937, F/L E.G. Macpherson to Commanding Officer, No.20 (Bomber) Squadron, Regina, re "Damage to Aircraft No.105":

1. With reference to Flight Report No.12 dated 23 June 1937, the following additional information concerning the damage to aircraft No.105 is tendered.

2. When at 1725 hours, 23 June 1937, I was flying in formation with aircraft Nos.105 and 65, over a dust cloud en route to Saskatoon, and the other two aircraft descended into the dust, fearing I might become involved in a collision, under conditions of poor visibility, I chose to continue flying the original course until, as I judged, I should be in the vicinity of the destination, Saskatoon. At 1755 hours the ground was still obscured by dust so I descended but was unable to pinpoint my position. I landed in a field adjacent to one in which a farmer was working. After I landed he came over and informed me that I was two miles east of Vonda. I requested him to assist me in taxiing by holding a wing tip. I taxied to the leeward end of the field and was about to make a left turn into wind preparatory to taking off when the farmer was assisting me suddenly let go the wing tip and departed to attend his horses, which were becoming restive on account of the proximity of the aircraft. I attempted to turn into wind unassisted. A strong gust of wind caught the left wing and the aeroplane went up on its nose. The engine was running slowly at the time and no appreciable shock or jolt was felt. The engine stopped with the airscrew parallel to the ground but in the earth. At the time a west wind of about 35 m.p.h. was blowing. Assisted by the farmer I righted the aircraft, pegged it down, and covered the airscrew, engine and cockpits. I requested the farmer to keep a lookout for the aircraft and proceeded to Vonda where I spent the night.

3. On the morning of June 24th I surveyed the damage and considered that the engine and airframe were serviceable but found that one blade of the airscrew was bowed, I enlisted the services of a local garage owner and by means of a jack and two chains straightened the airscrew. The engine was rough at idling speeds but at higher speeds there appeared to be no excessive vibration. I took off and flew to Saskatoon.

4. At Saskatoon the flying club air engineer checked over the aircraft and engine and said that he considered it in condition fit to fly. Weather conditions were unsuitable on the 24th June so I delayed my return to Regina until 25th June. During the flight from Saskatoon to Regina, the aircraft and engine performed in a normal manner.

Assessments: His report for 1937 was quite positive, although he flew only two hours 25 minutes dual and 18 hours 45 minutes solo on Moth aircraft. S/L Delhaye wrote, "This officer is smart in appearance, knows how to handle men and sets a good example to the other officers. He is efficient and very loyal. Has shown a great interest in the squadron and at all times has given me his very best effort.

In 1938 his business kept him away and he flew only nine hours 15 minutes as a pilot and three hours 35 minutes as a passenger.

He proved to be a difficult officer in wartime. In 1940 he indicated that he would rather serve in Regina to keep in touch with his business, but when given a choice - business or the air force - he chose the air force. He was nevertheless allowed to stay with No.2 ITS, Regina for an extended period, but on 18 April 1942 Air Commodore G.R. Howsam wrote that his continued connections, even informally through friends, did not set a good example for RCAF personnel. Howsam repeated this in an assessment dated 31 December 1942 - "A good Commanding Officer of a non-flying unit, but has now been stationed too long in his home town. He should therefore be moved in the interests of the service."

He was efficient, but not promoted beyond Wing Commander and never posted to a unit requiring higher rank. It is evident that he became more resentful, and on 22 November 1943 the Air Officer Commanding, No.4 Training Command, wrote:

The Commanding Officer, Wing Commander McPherson, is an aggressive, self-opinionated officer who has an exaggerated opinion of his own ability. He is not satisfied to abide by Service Regulations, and is frequently critical of Air Staff decisions, such as the wearing of Battle Dress off the station. Organization generally satisfactory except that innovations are made at times in a hurried manner, without proper authority and without thinking the matter out fully. Administration average; discipline satisfactory.

Coronation Medal: Routine Order No.42 dated 29 September 1937 (issued by S/L R.A. Delhaye) listed eight members of the squadron as receiving the Coronation Medal - F/L E.G. Macpherson, 656 Flight Sergeant L. Dawson, 12012NP Corporal T.M. Shadbolt, 1979 LAC E.E. O'Brien, 12029NP AC2 R.G. Brown, 12006NP AC2 C.W. Trevena, 12014NP AC2 . Vanchuk, and 12042NP AC2 P.R. Wright.

MacPHERSON, F/L Stanley Winslow (J9241) - Mention in Despatches - No.5 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 1 December 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 183/46 dated 22 February 1946. See Field of Honour (Bank of Montreal, c.1950). Born 17 March 1920. Home in Prince Alberta, Saskatchewan (bank employee) ; enlisted in Regina, 6 March 1941 and granted Leave Without Pay until 15 March 1941 when posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.36 SFTS (non-flying duties), 2 May 1941. To No.2 ITS, 9 June 1941; promoted LAC 25 July 1941; to No.6 EFTS, 26 July 1941; to No.4 SFTS, 12 September 1941; promoted Sergeant, 3 December 1941, although he may have been commissioned soon afterwards. To No.31 GRS, 26 December 1941. To No.113 (BR) Squadron, 2 March 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. To No.1 GRS, 14 July 1943. To No.3 OTU, 30 August 1943. To No.5 (BR) Squadron, 12 December 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 4 August 1944. To Halifax, 16 June 1945. To No.1 Technical Support Unit, 6 July 1945. Released 18 October 1945. Died in West Vancouver, 28 August 2012.

The enthusiastic manner in which this officer has discharged his duties throughout his tour of operations have set a fine example for other captains and resulted in an attack on an enemy U-boat. Although no evidence of damage was indicated the initiative displayed by this officer was most commendable and indicative of the type of work he has performed throughout his operational career.

MacQUEEN, Sergeant Adam Bruce (R54355) - British Empire Medal - No.2 Service Flying Training School. Award effective 8 June 1944 as per Canada Gazette of that date and RCAF Routine Order 1380/44 dated 30 June 1944. Born 28 February 1911 in Berwick, Ontario; educated there and worked as a carpenter. Enlisted in Ottawa 21 August 1940 as Airframe Mechanic. To Technical Training School, St. Thomas, 6 September 1940. Promoted AC1, 18 January 1941. To No.5 SFTS, 3 February 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 July 1941. To No.16 SFTS, 13 August 1941. To No.2 SFTS, 3 September 1941. This was a compassionate posting to enable to visit his mother (who lived alone in Berwick). Promoted Corporal, 1 May 1942. Promoted Sergeant, 1 March 1943. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 29 September 1944. Embarked from Halifax, 4 October 1944; disembarked in Britain, 12 October 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 13 October 1944. To No.62 Base, 9 December 1944. Attached to A.V. Roe, 28 January to 11 February 1945. Repatriated to Canada, 16 November 1945. To Mountain View, 21 December 1945. Released 25 January 1946. Died in Finch, Ontario, 1982. RCAF photo PL-41530 (ex UK-18383 dated 28 January 1945) taken on occasion of visit to No.6 Group by Hon. John Bracken (leader, Conservative Party), here shown talking to LAC N.D. Sim (aero engine mechanic, Lacombe, Alberta) and Sergeant A.B. MacQueen (airframe mechanic, Berwick, Ontario). RCAF photo PL-44954 (ex UK-22388 dated 29 June 1945) shows him following investiture of 26 June 1945 with friends F/L G.M. Cosselman and his wife in courtyard of Buckingham Palace.

Throughout this NCO's service in the Royal Canadian Air Force, his record has been one of hard work, an excellent knowledge of his trade and willing co-operation with his superiors. By his outstanding efficiency and devotion to duty, he has set an example to his men and contributed largely to the successful operation of the servicing squadron on his unit.

Recommendation raised 5 February 1944 by S/L T.P.L. Bellow, in charge of Maintenance, as follows:

Sergeant MacQueen has served in the RCAF since 1940. His record has been one of hard work, a high degree of knowledge in his trade and willing co-operation with his superiors. He has, in his devotion to duty, set an example to his men and contributed largely to the successful operation of Servicing Squadron>

MacQUOID, F/O Raymond Charles (J5801) - Mention in Despatches - No.414 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1943 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Born 11 April 1918. Home in St.Andrews, New Brunswick; enlisted in Moncton, 23 October 1940 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon. To No.1 ANS, Rivers (non-flying duties), 28 November 1940. To No.2 ITS, 23 December 1940. Promoted LAC, 7 February 1941 and posted that dated to No.8 EFTS; graduated 29 March 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot; to No.10 SFTS, 9 April 1941; graduated and commissioned 22 June 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 5 July 1941. To RAF overseas, 12 July 1941. To RAF overseas, 16 July 1941. Subsequently taken on strength of No.3 PRC. To No.41 OTU, date uncertain. To No.414 Squadron, 20 October 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 22 June 1942. Killed in action 1 April 1943 (Mustang AG525). No citation. NOTE: Unit identified in AFRO as No.400 Squadron. No published citation to award. Directorate of History and Heritage files have recommendation for MiD compiled by W/C R.F. Begg, Commanding Officer, No.414 Squadron on 23 August 1942.

During the Battle of Dieppe on 19th August 1942, this officer accompanied his Flight Commander on two low reconnaissances over the approaches to the battle area. During the second of these he showed great skill and complete disregard for personal safety in strafing anti-aircraft positions to protect the Flight Commander. In so doing, he silenced several guns, inflicted numerous casualties and damaged an RDF station. In this action his aircraft was badly damaged but with defective engine he returned to base and made a successful crash landing.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/8769 has recommendation for a Croix de Guerre from No.414 Squadron, dated 1 February 1943. The wording is identical to the above.

Letter, 9 April 1943 from Commanding Officer, No.414 Squadron to his father (excerpt):

At five minutes after four on the afternoon of the 1st April, your son took off as a leader of a section of two to carry out an operational sortie over France. He was accompanied by another officer of the squadron, F/O Chapman. They had crossed the Channel and the French coast when suddenly "Mac" as we called him, pulled up in a climbing turn apparently to attack a gun post. As he was in the turn, a shot from the ground apparently struck his ammunition box, and the wing was seen to blow off. As he was flying at only 3 or 400 feet, he had no time to get out, and his aircraft was seen to spin into the ground. Because I know that doubt in your mind over a long period is worse than definite word that your son has been killed, I felt that although it cannot be official stated as yet, I should tell you that there is little hope of your son being alive.

Mac had been with the squadron for a long time and was one of our most experienced pilots. We lost one of our most valuable officers when he failed to return. He was a Deputy Flight Commander and officer in charge of all armament in the squadron. He has [sic] made several sorties over France, and during the operation at Dieppe did some wonderful work for which he received honourable mention. Mac was always very popular with all the squadron, officer and airman alike, and was always keen and willing to do his share.

Letter, 16 April 1943 from RCAF Overseas Headquarters to his father (excerpt):

Your son, piloting a Mustang fighter aircraft, took off on an operational sortie over France. Shortly after crossing the English Channel, in the vicinity of St. Pierre, he pulled up in a climbing turn, apparently to attack a gun post. Anti-aircraft fire struck the plane as it was in the turn and it was seen to spin to earth and crash leaving little doubt that he could survive.

NOTE: Damaged Tomahawk II, AK163, (Allison V.1700 engine), Category "A", 1325 hours on 24 April 1942 at Gatwick. Non-Operation day sortie, "Beaver III" exercise. Report stated:

While flying on low reconnaissance during Exercise Beaver III the engine became rough, oil pressure seemed to be dropping and oil temperature became excessively high. By great good fortune, the pilot was near the aerodrome at Gatwick at the time and was able to land the aircraft wheels down without doing further damage.

Cause of these failures is unknown. However, this is the third such failure in this squadron in a short period of time. The engine in question had only been flown approximately nine hours after overhauling at Burtonwood.

I consider that the pilot in question acted in an entirely correct manner and that he showed good judgement and flying skill in preventing the aircraft from reaching further damage. I would like to re-emphasize my statement made in the last 765C from this squadron that further and immediate action be taken to either (a) find the cause and remedy for these failures or (b) replace the Tomahawk aircraft.

Damaged Mustang AC376, Category "A", 1140 hours, 19 March 1943 at Dunsfold. At the time he had flown 594 hours 40 minutes including 157 hours 40 minutes by night. His statement read:

I joined the circuit at 1,000 feet, radioed control, receiving permission to pancake. I turned into wind at about 800 feet to get a good view of landing run as the weather was quite hazy. I saw nothing of the machine struck until the impact which occurred immediately after touching down. This machine must have been below all the way around the circuit because I saw nothing ahead except the aircraft which had landed as I turned in.

However, he was not at fault as the following statement shows:

Airman stationed at end of runway with a Very light pistol had just returned from leave one hour before incident. He was not familiar with type of Very light pistol in use at that time and did not realize that there was a safety catch on it which was on at the time and which prevented him firing red cartridge. Personnel in control tower had their attention distracted by another aircraft in circuit which was having difficulty lowering its tail wheel.

October 1945. Medal presented 29 January 1947. Died in Port Moody, British Columbia, 19 October 1990 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

Warrant Officer Macritchie as air gunner has completed his first operational tour which has included attacks against such targets as Kiel, Essen and Cologne. On three occasions his aircraft has been in combat with enemy fighters, two of which made very persistent attacks. In June 1944, during a sortie against Trappes, his aircraft was subjected to three attacks by a Messerschmitt 109. By his speedy, decisive commentary and accurate counter fire Warrant Officer Macritchie successfully beat off the attacker. While engaged on another mission against Dusseldorf in November 1944, repeated attacks were made on his aircraft by an enemy fighter. A very prolonged engagement ensued and his aircraft was forced down to a height of 4,000 feet before eventually evading the fighter. Again by his excellent commentary and counter fire this Warrant Officer played a large part in the safe return of his aircraft and crew. At all times Warrant Officer Macritchie's coolness, courage and devotion to duty have been most noteworthy.

Notes: Application for Operational Wing dated 20 November 1944 stated he had flown 35 sorties (154 hours 45 minutes), 26 April to 19 November 1944.

Training: Course at No.2 ITS was 4 April to 11 June 1943. Courses in Mathematics (79/100), Law and Discipline (77/100), Navigation (81/100), General Studies (76/100), Anti-Gas (44/50), Armament (76/100), Aircraft Recognition (74/100), Drill (79/100), Signals (107/150) and Meteorology (47/50). Placed 63rd in a class of 107. "Having failed to qualify in Lamp, this airman was remustered to Air Gunner. He is youthful but has plenty of self-confidence. He is a good steady type of airman. He should do well as an Air Gunner."

Course at No.2 Advanced Ground Gunnery Training School was 28 June 1943 to 6 August 1943. Battle aircraft. Tested in Armament, oral (70/100), Armament, written (252/300), Anti-Gas (84/100), Aircraft Recognition (96/100), Mathematics (50/50), Navigation (90/100), Law, Administration, Hygiene (81/100), and Signals (85/100). "Above average student. A steady and reliable worker. Excellent aircrew material, neat appearance, conduct good." (F/O F.N. Shields, Chief Instructor).

Trained at No.3 BGS, 9 August to 17 September 1943. Battle and Anson aircraft (flew 25 hours ten minutes). Spent 15 hours in Turret Manipulation. Fired 735 rounds on 25-yard range, 1,100 rounds on 200-yard range, 600 rounds air-to-ground, 3,500 rounds air-to-air (five percent hits in air). Courses in Guns, Pyrotechnics and Ammunition (187/200), Guns, practical (80/100), Sighting (210/250), Turrets, practical (173/200), Aircraft Recognition (120/150) and Signals (95/100). "Average student; takes a keen interest in his work; good power of expression."

Course at No.24 OTU was 25 October 1943 to 7 February 1944. Whitley aircraft - 43 hours by day and 32.55 by night. Completed seven air cine exercises, scored 57 percent on cine gun assessment; took part in two day and three night air-to-air firing exercises (4.9 percent hits).

Rated in Aircraft recognition (168/200), Guns (146/200), Reporting, Fighting Control (120/200), Sighting including practices in GTST (170/200) and Turrets, drill and components (126/200)/ "A sound type of gunner who has worked well and obtained good results; keen and willing."

Combat Reports: Public Record Officer Air 50/194 has several Combat Reports relating to his service, summarized as follows:

3 June 1944 - target Trappes, Halifax III, D/77 (NA515) at 0110 hours, height 8,000 feet, heading 351 T; location was 48.46 North, 01.03 East on homeward flight. There was no moon but visibility was good; several flares seen. First warning was fire from an unseen fighter. Bomber corkscrewed to port. The first visual was obtained by Rear Gunner (Macritchie) at 400 yards who identified it as a Bf.109 but see narrative below). First attack was from port beam down and the fighter breaking away to starboard quarter down. The fighter opened fire first (at 400 yards down to 250 yards). Rear Gunner (Macritchie) opened fire at 300 yards (400 rounds); Mid-Upper Gunner (Pulchalski) opened fire at 300 yards (100 rounds). Damage to bomber was severe - navigation instruments destroyed, port inner hit, bomb aimer wounded (died 18 hours after action). Flight Engineer searched the dark side of the sky during action. Narrative read as follows:

ME.109 was first sighted by Mid-Upper Gunner, 600 yards, attacking from port quarter down. Rear Gunner ordered pilot to corkscrew to port and fighter broke away at 400 yards astern down.

The ME.109 was next sighted by Rear Gunner on port beam down, attacking with guns firing at 400 yards. The Rear Gunner ordered the pilot to corkscrew port and both Rear Gunner and Mid-Upper opened fire on the ME.109 which broke away at 250 yards on starboard quarter down. Halifax was hit and damaged in the nose and port inner engine. No hits observed on the fighter and no claim is made.

Five minutes later ME.109 was again sighted by Mid-Upper on the starboard quarter level at 600 yards who ordered pilot to corkscrew starboard, then the ME.109 broke away on the starboard quarter down.

12/13 August 1944 - target Brunswick, Halifax III, G/77 at 0052 hours, height 9,000 feet, heading 308 T; location was 53.28 North, 08.50 East. FISHPOND was serviceable. There was haze and no moon; searchlights playing but the aircraft was not coned. First warning was fire from an unseen aircraft. Immediate action was a diving turn to port with a loss of 1,000 feet. First visual obtained at 250 yards on the port side against the sky. This first visual was by the Wireless Operator - a single Bf.109 It carried no lights. Enemy attacked on port bow, opening fire at 250 yards and continuing to breakaway at 200 yards. Neither Macritchie (Rear Gunner) nor Sergeant Pulchalski (Mid-Upper Gunner) opened fire. There was no serious damage to the bomber although there was at least one strike on the nose; no casualties. The Squadron Gunnery Leader commented.

ME.109 sighted by Wireless Operator at 250 yards on port bow. Fighter turned in to attack and Pilot dived to port. Fighter fired, hitting the bomber in the nose, and was immediately lost to sight, direction of breakaway not being seen. It was impossible for either of the Gunners to see, or fire on, the fighter.

2 November 1944 - target Dusseldorf, Halifax III, G/77 (BZ359) at 1910 hours, height 17,300 feet, heading 110 T; location was 51.20 North, but Easterly position not clear (see narrative). FISHPOND was not used. The moon was astern, visibility 800 yards in haze. There was no flak, flares or fighters. The bomber corkscrewed to port. First visual was by the Rear Gunner (Macritchie) at 1,000 yards, port quarter against a light sky. The enemy aircraft was twin-engined, carrying two white lights. Fighter attacked from port quarter down, opening fire at 700 yards and continuing to 400 yards when it broke away to port quarter. The bomber corkscrewed to port, eventually ending up at 4,000 feet. Rear Gunner (Macritchie) fired 600 rounds (600 yards down to 400 yards) and had a No.2 stoppage which was cleared after the action. Mid-Upper Gunner (Puchalski) fired 600 rounds from 600 yards to 400 yards with no stoppages. While this went on, the Flight Engineer searched the dark side of the sky. One other enemy aircraft seen before the action. Damage to fighter described as "Hits observed but no damage assessed." No damage to bomber. The action further described as follows:

Rear Gunner saw two white lights on the port quarter down at approximately 1,000 yards, apparently closing, and reported same to Captain. At 600 yards both Rear and Mi-Upper Gunners distinguished it as a Twin-engined aircraft, type unrecognizable. Rear Gunner ordered corkscrew to port. Fighter then closed in and at 700 yards opened fire; both gunners opened fire at 600 yards with short bursts. Fighter closed to 400 yards and then decreased speed, falling back on the port quarter to 1,000 yards. After a short period attack was recommenced, the fighter opening fire at approximately 700 yards, at which range Gunners ordered corkscrew port. This attack closed to 400 yards when fighter again fell back to 1,000 yards. This type of attack kept continuing until 1945 hours, the latitude and longitude being 5032 N - 0440 E.

Gunners gave evasive action when necessary and opened fire when possible. Hits were seen on the fighter, but no damage. At the conclusion of the attacks the bomber had lost height to 4,000 feet. No claim made.

MacWILLIAM, F/L Dudley Lyell Sait (J10970) - Air Force Cross - No.1 IFS - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946 - Born in Quebec City, 9 February 1914. Enlisted at Quebec, 5 June 1940. To No.1 ITS, 24 June 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 21 July 1940 when posted to 4 EFTS; graduated 6 October 1940 when posted to No.31 SFTS, graduated and promoted Sergeant, 30 December 1940; to Trenton, 8 January 1941; to No.11 SFTS to instruct, 10 April 1941. Promoted WO2, 30 December 1941. Commissioned 30 March 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 September 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 March 1943. To No.18 SFTS, 30 November 1944. To No.1 Instrument Flying School, 5 December 1944. To Trenton, 12 August 1945. Re-engaged in postwar RCAF (19702). Instructed on instrument flying until 1949; to AFHQ, December 1949; to Staff College, September 1951. To flying duties, April 1954. By 1957 he was a Group Captain. Further details lacking. Recommended 13 August 1945 by S/L H.R. Studer, Chief Flying Instructor. As of recommendation he had flown 3,550 hours, of which 3,350 were instructor hours, 542 hours in past six months.

Since his attachment to this unit in December 1944, Flight Lieutenant MacWilliam has continually devoted his time and efforts to improving the efficiency and progress of flying at this school. His untiring efforts in compiling and rewriting pilots orders and conducting ground school classes have been of invaluable aid to his superiors. In loyalty, devotion to duty, responsibility and determination he has set a splendid example.

RCAF file 827-4-56 (National Archives of Canada RG.24 Volume 17797) has a letter dated 27 February 1957 from A/V/M L.E. Wray (Air Officer Commanding, Air Defence Command) to Chief of Air Staff, recommending W/C D.L.S. MacWilliam who was then Officer Commanding, No.3 All Weather (Fighter) OTU, Cold Lake. It read, in part:

This officer enrolled in the RCAF 6 June 1940, was awarded his pilot's wings in December 1940, and was employed as a flying instructor from March 1941 to 30 November 1944. During this four-year period he obtained his A2 instructor category and flew 740 hours per year, a very intensive rate considering the nature of the flights and the aircraft of the day.

In December 1944 W/C MacWilliam attended the first RCAF instrument rating course and was granted a standard instrument rating car in February 1945. He remained on staff of the Instrument Flying School as instrument flying instructor, examining officer, GIS lecturer in air regulations, flying procedure, and airmanship, and ultimately was appointed the check pilot for Training Command. The signal accomplishments of the Instrument Flying School during W/C MacWilliam's period on staff were attributed in large measure to his outstanding ability and devotion to duty. This was officially recognized when he was awarded the Air Force Cross, 1 January 1946.

Following eight months duty as Chief Ground Instructor at the FIS at Centralia, Ontario, he served in the Directorate of Air Staff Service at AFHQ and made a commendable contribution to the effectiveness of the Bases and Routes Branch activities, particularly in the preparation of the second edition of CAP 100, "Flying Regulations for the RCAF". After attending the RCAF Staff College he returned to AFHQ to serve in the Directorate of Air Training where he commanded the respect of all with whom he worked and was recognized as an outstanding authority and advisor on instrument flying matters.

W/C MacWilliam graduated from the AW (F) OTU in October 1954 and assumed command of 425 AW (F) Squadron, St. Hubert, Quebec. As a squadron commander he displayed exceptional ability and impressed his superior officers by his mature and sound judgement and his outstanding leadership and enthusiasm. In May 1955 he was appointed Officer Commanding 3 AW (F) OTU, co-incident with the move of this unit from North Bay to Cold Lake. Much of the credit for the smooth fashion in which this move was effected was due to W/C MacWilliam's exceptional competence and his knack for anticipating difficulties and his ability to meet them as they arose.

During 1956 the output of his unit exceeded that of 1955 by 77 %. Despite the increase in activity and production, under the continuous surveillance of W/C MacWilliam, the flying accident rate was 25 % lower than that prevailing in 1955. During 1956 the fighting potential of Air Defence Command increased far beyond the net increase in squadron crew strength. This rise in proficiency is ascribed to significant extent to the high standard attained by the crews during their training at the AW (F) OTU.

MADDEN, W/C Humphrey Oliver (C1047) - Air Force Cross - No.165 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1944 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 113/44 dated 21 January 1944. Born in Langford or Langford, England, 14 October 1906 (RCAF press release reporting award). Enlisted in Ottawa 23 September 1939 and posted to Rockcliffe. Flight Lieutenant as of 1 November 1940. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 February 1942. To Western Air Command, 30 April 1943. To No.165 Squadron, 15 July 1943. Promoted Wing Commander, 31 July 1943. To Transport Conversion Squadron, 7 July 1945. To No.164 Squadron, 31 August 1945. To No.165 Squadron, 2 September 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 30 September 1946. Retired 10 October 1946. A newsclipping, believed from an Ottawa paper, and dated 8 December 1942 describes a rescue by S/L H.O. Madden "yesterday". Madden is described as officer commanding the RCAF ferry flight at Rockcliffe. F/O Carl Hickerson (a Texan) had been part of a Hurricane ferry flight going through northern Ontario and had been forced down on Evelyn Lake near Haileybury. Hickerson was reported missing at 9.00 p.m.; Madden promptly took a Lockheed from the communications division, plus a pilot (F/O T.E. Daniels, another American), and headed to North Bay. They then began searching in bad weather, and at 11.30 p.m. spotted a light on a lake - a landing light that Hickerson had detached and was using to signal. Madden sized up the situation, dropped emergency rations, and went on to Kapaskasing, later returning on a ski-equipped Norseman to effect the rescue. DHist file 181.009 D.1753 (RG.24 Vol.20609) has recommendation dated 3 September 1943 when he had flown 1,634 hours to date, 409 hours in previous six months. He had previously been recommended for an AFC and was (in this document) being recommended for an MiD. AFC presented 15 April 1944. RCAF photo PL-916 shows him as Flying Officer, 1940.

This officer has displayed exceptional keenness and devotion to duty. He is a skilful pilot whose fine example and inspiring leadership have been worthy of high praise. Wing Commander Madden has been responsible for two successful rescues of pilots forced down in barren country. On one occasion, he rescued a pilot who had been forced down by landing aircraft equipped with skis on a small lake at night. On another occasion he located a pilot forced down and after dropping supplies to the injured pilot, directed the rescue party to the scene of the accident thereby saving the pilot's life.

WAC File C.122-7-1 (RG 24 Vol.20612) has a letter dated 13 May 1943 from G/C J.G. Bryans (CO, Rockcliffe) to AOC WAC stating that Madden was first recommended for AFC in February 1942, based on his work from 11 September 1939 to 31 October 1941. It was not granted then; Bryans was pushing it again. He wrote, "As Officer Commanding No.124 Ferry Squadron at this Station [Rockcliffe], S/L Madden displayed outstanding flying ability. He was also responsible for the training of the ferry pilots under his command and, as a result of this training, they became proficient in ferry work. S/L Madden was also responsible for the successful rescue of pilots who had been forced down in barren country on at least two or three occasions. On one occasion he rescued a pilot who had been forced down by landing an aircraft equipped with skis on a small lake at night. On another occasion he located a pilot who had been forced down and, after dropping supplies to the injured pilot, directed the rescue party to the scene of the accident and, as a result, the injured pilot was rescued and subsequently recovered. S/L Madden was responsible for the organization and expansion of No.124 Ferry Squadron and his devotion to duty at all times was of the highest degree."

Flying Officer Madder is a very efficient, keen Flight Engineer, now on his second tour of operations. He has participated in many sorties against such heavily defended German targets as Berlin, Dusseldorf and Hamburg. Invariably, this officer has display a high degree of courage and devotion to duty, even under the most adverse circumstances, thereby setting an inspiring example to all members of his crew. Undoubtedly, the fine fighting spirit evinced by Flying Officer Madder, along with his superior technical knowledge and how to apply it, ha contributed in no small way to the operational successes attained by his crew.

Maddock in Lethbridge, 26 February 1994 - almost certainly the same man despite juxtaposition of digits in service number. No citation other than "...in recognition of gallantry and devotion to duty in the execution of air operations against the enemy." DHist file 181.009 D.5557 (RG.24 Vol.20668) has recommendation dated 9 September 1944 when he had flown 34 ½ sorties (193 hours 34 minutes), 2 October 1943 to 28 July 1944.

Under a calm and quiet manner this officer has always maintained a fine offensive spirit in action which has inspired confidence in his crew and other crews in his flight. Eleven of his thirty-four and a half trips have been over some of the enemy's most heavily defended targets, such as Berlin, Schweinfurt, Stuttgart (twice), Frankfurt, Essen (twice), Nuremburg and Hamburg. His fine spirit of co-operation and devotion to duty warrant a strong recommendation for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MADDOCKS, F/L Donald William (J22527) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.149 Squadron - Award effective 6 January 1945 as per London Gazette dated 16 January 1945 and AFRO 508/45 dated 23 March 1945. Born 1 November 1910 in Toronto; home there (minister of unstated religion); enlisted in Hamilton 16 August 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.4 BGS as guard, 20 August 1941. To No.6 ITS, 27 October 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 19 December 1941 but not posted to No.5 AOS until 2 January 1942; graduated 11 April 1942 when posted to No.7 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 23 May 1942 when posted to No.1 ANS; graduated and commissioned on 3 July 1942; to No.1 BGS, 18 July 1942. To "Y" Depot, 29 August 1942. To RAF overseas, 3 September 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 3 January 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 23 September 1943. Repatriated 2 August 1945. Retired 21 September 1945. Commissioned 1942. Medal sent by registered mail 30 March 1949. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." Public Record Office Air 2/9038 has recommendation drafted 18 October 1944 when he had flown 19 sorties (100 hours 22 minutes).

Flight Lieutenant Maddocks has recently completed his first operational tour during which he has flown as Bomb Aimer on bombing, mining and Special operations. Some of his targets have been such heavily defended places as St. Nazaire, Wilhelmshaven and Berlin.

He has been with the squadron for 22 months and for the last 15 months he has been Squadron Bombing Leader. He has invariably proved himself a very able Leader and has taken considerable trouble over the instruction of new crews, paying meticulous attention to all details.

During the last six months he has carried out a total of 13 sorties with a wide variety of captains, some experienced and some newcomers to the squadron.

I therefore recommend that Flight Lieutenant Maddocks' ability as an Air Bomber and his zeal in the execution of his duties as Bombing Leader be recognized by the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This was endorsed on 19 October 1944 by the Officer Commanding, Station Methwold, who wrote:

Throughout his long and protracted tour as Squadron Bombing Leader, this officer has never spared himself in his efforts to instill into his section that "the best was not quite good enough." This meticulous attention to detail, his unlimited patience with new crews and, above all, the very high standard he set himself when operating, have been a source of inspiration to all air bombers.

MADDOX, FS John Lightfoot (R90215) - Mention in Despatches - No.61 Base - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 425/45 dated 9 March 1945. Born 28 February 1916; home in Toronto; enlisted there 18 November 1940. Originally classified as Nursing Orderly; Reclassified as Hospital Assistant, 1 December 1942. LAC on enlistment; Corporal on 1 July 1942; Flight Sergeant on 29 March 1944. To RAF, 19 June 1941; repatriated 9 November 1944; released 30 October 1945. Spent much of his early overseas service with No.400 Squadron. Died 2003. DHist file 181.009 D.2993 (RG.24 Vol.20634) has recommendation for a British Empire Medal dated 29 August 1944 when he was Wardmaster at Station Topcliffe.

During the three and one half-years that this Non-Commissioned Officer has been in service in Great Britain he has proven to be an outstanding and reliable medical Non-Commissioned Officer. His experience has been varied, and has been instrumental in the opening up of new sick quarters, viz, "R" Depot, Warrington, RCAF Eastmoor, RCAF Tholthorpe, as well as the changing over of sick quarters at Linton Station. This involved the setting up of the administrative procedure, and in each instance the routine of the hospital was in efficient operation in record time.

In April 1943, whilst a passenger in a Wellington aircraft, where he was injured himself, he was successful in removing two of the crew, resulting in their lives being saved. His knowledge and cool-headed performance in regard to aircraft casualties are outstanding, and his devotion to duty merits him worthy of the award of the British Empire Medal.

NOTE: He had also been recommended for a Mention in Despatches (27 July 1944) with the following citation:

This Non-Commissioned Officer who has been in the service in Great Britain for the last 3 ½ years, has proven to be an outstanding and reliable medical Non-Commissioned Officer. He has been called upon to perform unusually responsible duties under extenuating circumstances, especially in connection with aircraft casualties. His performance of duties is an outstanding example to others.

Notes: Repatriation Form dated 9 July 1945 stated he had flown 34 sorties (249 hours 25 minutes), the last on 23 April 1945. He had also flown 331 hours 20 minutes non-operational. Types of aircraft experienced had been Tiger Moth (10.35), Anson (30.00), Wellington (79.20) and Halifax (460.50).

Application for Operational Wing dated 31 July 1945 claimed 34 sorties (plus seven transport) for 429 hours; sorties from 23 February 1944 to 13 June 1945.

Training: Interviewed in Saskatoon, 1 April 1940. "Above average type of applicant. Has keen intelligence and very good personality and appearance. Keen and alert. Well spoken and well mannered. Should make a good pilot."

Attended No.7 ITS, 2 March to 24 April 1942. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, Navigation, General Studies, Anti-Gas, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill and Signals (written). Scored 860 points of a possible 1,000. Scored 51 percent in Visual Link. Placed 29th in a class of 97. "Conscientious, good spirit, sincere, steady. Not much zip. Average

Washed out at No.6 EFTS - “Progress test revealed this Airman’s flying ability to be below average. It was necessary to assist with landings. During circuit flying he was found to lack coordination of controls and carried out turns in a dangerous manner. This airman is keen to remain aircrew and it is recommended that he be re-selected as an Air Bomber. Conduct while at this school was very good,”

Attended No.7 AOS, 31 August to 18 December 1942. Anson aircraft - 24.05 as first navigator by day, 37.55 as second navigator by day, 24.50 as first navigator by night, 16.30 as second navigator by night. Graded in following areas - Navigation air work (532/700), Photography air work (86/100), Elements of Navigation (424/500), Magnetism and Compasses(82/100), Instruments (42/50), Signals, practical (95/100), Signals, written (41/50), Maps and Charts (38/50), Meteorology (68/100), Photography (33/50), Reconnaissance (38/50), Aircraft Recognition (75/100) and Armament (36/50). Placed fourth in a class of 25. “A confident navigator, not easily rattled.” Also, “His ground work has showed a steady upward trend, resulting in above average marks.” Also, “A very level headed individual who shows good judgement at all times. Has a very pleasing personality.”

Course at No.20 OTU was 20 July to 28 September 1943. Flew 24.55 as first navigator by day, 5.10 as second navigator by day, 29.15 as first navigator by night, 20.00 as second navigator by night. During ground training this navigator made good progress although he seemed rather weak in theory. In the Flight he did exceptionally well and showed the possibility of becoming an outstanding practical navigator, his astro air work was exceptionally good, and his general navigation very sound and accurate, Has attended Oxygen decompression chamber on this Unit. Recommended for Pathfinder Force.”

MADORE, F/L Andrew Francis (C2851) - Air Force Cross - No.19 EFTS, Virden, Manitoba - Award effective 20 October 1942 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1830/42 dated 13 November 1942. Born in North Bay, Ontario, 12 January 1907. Employed by Canadian Pacific Telegraphs, 1923-1932, Ontario Provincial Highways Department (surveys), 1932-1933, garage operator, 1933-1934, Brandon Flying Club, 1934-1937 (instructor from 1935 onwards), Saskatoon Flying Club, 1937-1939 (instructor) and pilot with Trans-Canada Airlines, 1939 to RCAF enlistment. Member of the Saskatoon Light Infantry (Second Lieutenant), February to September 1939. Enlisted in RCAF, in Winnipeg, 10 October 1940 and immediately granted commission as Flying Officer. To No.6 EFTS, Prince Albert, 23 October 1940. Granted Leave Without Pay on that date and retained at No.6 EFTS. To No.2 EFTS, Fort William, December 1940. Returned at uncertain date to No.6 EFTS; posted in April 1941 to No.19 EFTS. Recalled to RCAF active force, 1 December 1942, at which time he held rank of Flight Lieutenant (seniority from 1 July 1942). Promoted Squadron Leader, 15 May 1943. To No.2 Training Command, 15 November 1944. To Release Centre, 27 January 1945. Retired 7 February 1945. Died in New Westminster, British Columbia, 28 October 1990 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics . Presented by Governor General, 3 December 1942.

This officer has undoubtedly done more toward the successful organization and operation of the flying of Elementary Flying Training Schools than any other individual. He was Chief Flying Instructor at No.6 EFTS, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, from October to December, 1940, when he was sent to No.2 EFTS, Fort William, to organize the flying there. After completing his work there he went back to Prince Albert where he remained until April 1941, at which time No.19 EFTS, Virden, Manitoba was opened. He came to the school as Chief Flying Instructor and has since organized the flying so well that No.19 EFTS is now considered the premier double EFTS in Canada. His most recent achievement is the supervision of 7,047 instructional flying hours in January 1942 without a single accident. This officer has been employed at EFTS's since October 1940, and since that time has flown a total of 1,400 hours.

The recommendation was raised on 6 February 1942; wording as above. F/L A.J. Vincent (No.19 EFTS) supported it, and on 12 February 1942 it was approved by Headquarters, No.2 Training Command. AFHQ consideration and approval delayed until 2 September 1942.

Selected Assessments: "Employed as Chief Flying Instructor by operating company at No.6 EFTS. Professional, relatively above average." (5 December 1940).

"A former civilian instructor who has considerable experience as an elementary instructor. He has done a good job as chief flying instructor at No.19 EFTS as well as other schools in this command." (W/C E.M. Mitchell, No.2 Training Command Headquarters, 28 January 1943).

"This officer has natural qualities of leadership with uncanny knowledge of human psychology. Background, 15 years as Pilot - 8-9 years specializing in Elementary Instruction, two years in Canadian Militia with commissioned rank. Is a fine soldier, an outstanding EFTS CFI; logical and clear thinking and enjoys the confidence and respect of all associated with him." (J.B. Morgan, manager of No.19 EFTS, 5 May 1943).

"CFI, No.19 EFTS, Virden. Above average in most respects, but lacks service experience. Has never got away from civilian ideas and adapted service attitude." (A/V/M T.A. Lawrence, No.2 Training Command, 27 May 1944).

Notes: On 27 September 1940 he was interviewed by F/O A.B. Taylor in Winnipeg who described him thus: "RCAF 'A' category Instructors A and C Engines (Elementary). Graduated 16 Air Force Elementary 1939. Saskatoon Flying Club, 2,000 hours civilian instruction. Presentable. Good personality. Officer calibre in every respect. Firm manner. Good bearing. Should be an excellent instructor."

Letter dated 14 October 1940 (G/C A. De Niverville to DPR) indicates that he was being released from Canadian Airways [sic] specifically to be CFI at No.6 EFTS.

As of 12 December 1941 there was a report that he wished to be called to active service. On 16 December 1941 the Manager of the Virden Flying Training School Limited (No.19 EFTS), replied that such was not the case (letter to G/C F.A. Sampson, AFHQ, copy to No.2 Training Command Headquarters). He went on to say:

We, in turn, feel that it would be a big mistake to recall Mr. Madore to the service, as most of his experience in flying has been in Elementary Flying Instruction; he is a keen psychologist with a particular gift for analyzing students' and instructors' reactions and in our opinion, the multiplication of this knowledge through the pupils passing through his hands is the best contribution he can make to the CATP/

Mr Madore is an extremely capable leader, but he is of the practical type and we doubt he would be happy for long in an administrative or junior position.

For the above reasons we feel it would be a waste of fine material to recall him unless as "CFI" at a larger school, where there would be a further multiplication of his knowledge. If you have this in mind, no doubt Mr. Madore would be desirous of being recalled and we certainly would recommend the move, but as long as our school is one of the largest Elementary Schools, both he and we request that he be left with us.

On 12 October 1942 there was more correspondence on possible recall to active service, this time to ferry Hurricanes from Fort William (of possible interest as his brother had flown the type with No.242 Squadron before being killed). Again, the Manager of No.19 EFTS pleaded for his retention given that the school had recently experienced a high turnover of staff including lending the Assistant CFI to No.2 EFTS.

On 30 April 1943, W/C Z.L. Leigh suggested that Madore should be posted to No.12 (Communications) Squadron, Rockcliffe for refresher training in Radio Range flying and let-down procedure, on completion of which he would be posted to Eastern Air Command to instruct Bomber Reconnaissance pilots in instrument, radio range and let-down procedures. His background as a former TCA pilot was noted. G/C T.C, Macfarlane concurred (4 May 1943), describing him as a "very well qualified pilot." However, on 10 May 1943, G/C H.H. Atkinson (No.2 Training Command Headquarters) disagreed, noting Madore had little experience outside of training aircraft. He added, "Further, due to his personality and temperament, it is not felt that this officer might be entirely satisfactory in a position of considerable responsibility."

Tested 5 October 1943 at which time he held an A.2 Elementary category. He had taken a course, 7 September to 1 October 1943 at Trenton. At the time he had flown 3,391 hours 20 minutes on single-engine aircraft (solo) and 59 hours 50 minutes on single-engine aircraft (dual). In addition, on twin-engine aircraft he had 23 hours 15 minutes dual and 205 hours 45 minutes solo. "Has shown great keenness in his work throughout the course, but has found difficulty in converting to advanced instructional methods. His instructional manner is sound." Course had been mainly on Crane aircraft.

MAFFRE, F/O Gerald Frederick (J10973) - Belgian Croix de Guerre 1940 with Palm (deceased) - Awarded 17 July 1948 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 455/48 dated 23 July 1948. Born in Montreal, 8 August 1940. Home in Outremont (clerk). Enlisted in Montreal, 6 June 1940 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto. To No.1 ITS, Toronto, 24 June 1940. Promoted LAC, 21 July 1940 and posted to No.4 EFTS, Windsor. To No.31 SFTS, Kingston, 6 October 1940. Promoted Sergeant, 30 December 1940. To Station Trenton, 8 January 1941. To No.9 SFTS, Summerside, 23 March 1941 as instructor. Promoted WO2, 30 December 1941. Commissioned 31 March 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. To No.14 SFTS, Aylmer, 5 March 1943. To "Y" Depot, 29 June 1943. Embarked from Halifax, 21 July 1943. Disembarked in Britain, 29 July 1943. To No.21 (Pilot) AFU, 24 August 1943. Attached to No.1521 Beam Approach Training Flight, 21-28 September 1943. To No.23 OTU, 23 November 1943. To No.61 Base, 13 March 1944 and attached to No.1659 Conversion Unit. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 31 March 1944. To No.434 Squadron, 14 April 1944. Killed in action with No.434 Squadron, 27/28 April 1944, Halifax LL243. Buried in Holland.

He had been very restless as an instructor, with frequent breaches of discipline including leaving the flying area without permission (June 1942), failure to appear for duty on time (August 1942), partaking of alcohol within four hours of flying (December 1942), disregarding CO's instructions re "treating" in the mess (December 1942), taxi accident while speeding (December 1942), going on 48 hour pass without permission (February 1943) and slight damage to aircraft owing to dangerous flying and bad air discipline (February 1943). In no case did he receive any punishment more than "Reproved" but by February 1943 his superiors concluded that his lack of interest now made him useless as an instructor. He was warned that further trouble would jeopardize an overseas posting. He then went to No.14 SFTS, where he clearly "shaped up", was described as "an experienced, hard working pilot and quiet instructor." Accordingly, an overseas posting was arranged.

He was one of four brothers in the RCAF - James Cooper Maffre (Mentioned in Despatches), Gerald Frederick Mafre (Mentioned in Despatches, killed in action), Kenneth Reginald Maffre (killed in action) and John Malcolm Maffre.

Flight Lieutenant Magee has completed a first tour and volunteered to continue with an extended tour as captain of a Blind Marking crew. He has shown outstanding ability as a captain, and his keenness and energy in operating and improving his crew's capabilities are unsurpassed. He has shown himself to be an able and determined leader, undaunted by the heaviest opposition.

MAGEE, F/L Clyde Charles, DFC (J24264) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.582 Squadron - Award effective 15 March 1945 as per London Gazette dated 23 March 1945 and AFRO 721/45 dated 27 April 1945.

This officer has completed a large number of day and night missions during which he has successfully attacked a wide range of strongly defended targets. He has maintained an excellent standard of operational efficiency and has at all times shown courage and devotion to duty of a high order.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9050 has recommendation dated 21 December 1944 when he had flown 60 sorties (254 hours 25 minutes) of which 17 trips (60 hours) had been flown since previous award. Added sorties and unpublished citation as follows; statement that he had flown "20 more very successful sorties" cannot be resolved when checking actual sortie lists.

Since being recommended for his Distinguished Flying Cross Flight Lieutenant Magee has participated in 20 more very successful sorties as a Blind Marker, most of them being against the heavily defended targets in the Ruhr and Rhineland. He has set a fine example of captaincy and his keenness has been a source of inspiration throughout the squadron. He is strongly recommended for a non-immediate award of a Bar to the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Training: Had taken flying lessons before enlistment, Interviewed in Toronto, 27 August 1940 by F/O C.S. Stonehouse. "Good type young man, Splendid physique. Keen to fly. Average intelligence. Believe he may be officer material."

Course at No.1 BGS was 1-28 October 1940. Battle aircraft - four hours 15 minutes gunnery plus 7.10 as passenger. Tied for fourth place in a class of 58. "Above average, very interested in work, works very hard. Has shown promise in handling men."

Course at No.4 ITS was 11 May to 3 July 1942. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, Navigation, General Studies, Anti-Gas, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill and Signals. Scored 791 points of a possible 1,000. Placed 48th in a class of 81. "Father in RAF in Canada during the last war. Good material, very fine type, keen and able."

Course at No.19 EFTS was 30 August to 23 October 1942. Tiger Moth aircraft -27.45 day dual (8.05 dual to first solo), 54.20 day solo, 3.25 night dual, 35 minutes night solo. Was 10.30 on instruments and logged ten hours in Link. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (practical), Aircraft Recognition and Signals. Scored 579 points of a possible 700. Placed 13th in a class of 42. "Very keen and has shown good progress throughout his training. A little weak in aerobatics. Above average ability in Ground School work. Has a lot of ambition and does a good bit of work,"

Course at No.11 SFTS was 9 November 1942 to 5 March 1943. Crane aircraft - 81.50 day dual (7.20 dual to first solo), 67.50 day solo, 8.55 night dual, 9.45 night solo. Was 27.05 on instruments and 17.20 in formation. Logged 26.30 in Link. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written and practical), Signals (written and practical) and Meteorology. Scored 601 points of a possible 750. Placed 25th in a class of 50. "Conscientious, hard working pilot who is slow plodding type. He has been a good average student all the way through his course at Service School. Recommended for a commission, Link, 78 percent."

Notes: On repatriation form he stated he had flown 60 sorties (253.35 operational hours) plus 366.50 non-operational. In Canada he had flown about 280 hours as a Wireless Air Gunner.

Application for Operational Wing dated 16 December 1944 claimed four sorties with No.7 Squadron (21 hours 40 minutes), 19-31 March 1944 and 56 with No.582 Squadron (249.30), 31 March to 27 November 1944.

As of 31 December 1956 he listed his types and hours as follows - Tiger Moth (87.50), Crane (168.20), Oxford (81.45), Wellington (80.50), Stirling (38.35), Lancaster (624.05), Ventura (185.10), Mitchell (16.25), Mustang (50.45), Firefly (23.20), Barracuda (13.40), Martinet (1.15), Seafire (8.20), Sea Hornet (7.05), Sea Fury (123.20), Meteor (2.35), Vampire (28.50), Harvard (270.00), Dakota (15.45), Expeditor (106.25), T-33 (141.20), F-86 (346.20).

Selected Assessments: "Flight Lieutenant Magee has been employed for approximately one month as course officer in charge Aircrew Courses at the Air Weapons School. He appears to have a sound working knowledge of the job and has advanced several ideas for improving training, He has a tendency to build the importance of his work and is most ambitious regarding himself and his job. However, he is reliable and a diligent worker. Prior to this employment Flight Lieutenant Magee was Flight Commander of Bombing Flight and as such was outstanding." (S/L W.E. Tuller, Station Trenton, 8 August 1951).

"Squadron Leader Magee has been a Squadron Commander on this Wing for only four months and in that time has proven himself to be an excellent Squadron Commander. He gives full cooperation and support at all times and maintains his squadron in a high state of efficiency.

Highly recommended for promotion," (W/C J.F. Allan, No.4 Wing, 11 May 1956)

"Squadron Leader Magee has proven to be an excellent squadron commander. He is popular with his officers and men and has worked tirelessly to guide, help and counsel them. Tremendously enthusiastic about squadron life and squadron flying he has contributed greatly to the very high efficiency and morale of 422 Squadron. Active in all Wing activities, he was most conspicuous as a Chapel elder, as head of the Boy Scout Group and coach of the Squadron hockey team. He is very active socially and supported by his wife has proven to be a fine example to the younger officers. On occasions Magee has acted as Chief Operations Officer and has demonstrated his ability to take on greater responsibility. Very strongly recommended for promotion to Wing Commander." (G/C B.E. Christmas, No.4 Wing, 3 January 1957).

"Squadron Leader Magee has made an extremely favourable impression at 2 FTS, He has shown and keen and sincere desire to carry out his duties in an exemplary manner. His willingness to fly with students and share the work load of his staff has been a fine example to his subordinates and others, He has had no difficulty whatsoever in adapting to his new role, having qualified for a 'B' category and is attempting to gain his A2 category in June. In doing so, he has shown commendable energy, initiative and leadership qualities." (W/C Thomas, No.2 FTS, 5 May 1960).

DHist file 181.009 D.2610 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 18 April 1945 when he had completed 29 sorties (194 hours 55 minutes), 28 October 1944 to 16 April 1945.

This officer has carried out twenty-nine operational sorties against enemy targets. He is captain of a crew which was specially selected to undertake the most hazardous Gardening missions requiring the highest degree of airmanship and accuracy. Flight Lieutenant Magee has, on all occasions, displayed exceptional keenness for operational flying, and has pressed home his attacks with outstanding courage and determination despite strong enemy opposition. This pilot has set an outstanding example to other personnel of the squadron.

It is considered that this officer's ability and fortitude, coupled with his fine offensive spirit, fully merit the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows:

28 October 1944 - Cologne (5.20, second pilot)

MAGEE, LAC Gerald Richard (R272026) - British Empire Medal - RCAF Overseas Headquarters - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946. Born 3 October 1924. Home in Good Hope, Alberta; enlisted in Edmonton, 8 September 1943 as Driver (Motor Transport). To No.1 Manning Depot, 17 October 1943. To No.5 BGS, 5 January 1944. To "Y" Depot, 30 March 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 4 April 1944. Repatriated 3 August 1947. To Edmonton, 8 August 1947. Retired 22 September 1947.

This airman is the senior Air Force driver at the unit. For several months he has operated a vehicle to all parts of the Continent under circumstances of almost unsurmountable difficulties. In view of the conditions on the Continent, it has more often than not been impossible for him to obtain proper sleeping quarters or messing arrangements. It has been necessary to operate over a wide territory which presented new and difficult problems to complete the assignment. Notwithstanding the long hours which he has worked far in excess of his normal hours of duty, he has shown the utmost willingness and cheerfulness in his work. In the thousands of miles which he has driven, his keen devotion to duty has not been relaxed and he has operated without mishap or accident. He has willingly assumed, without direction or instructions, numerous other difficult tasks which have been encountered by the investigating teams being transported by him. His efforts have been an incentive to his fellow airmen and of assistance beyond assessment by the officers of the unit.

Flight Sergeant Magill has carried out 38 operations totalling 162.30 hours during which he has taken part in attacks on important targets such as Duisburg, Bochum, Munster and Kiel.

Throughout an extended tour of operations against a considerable variety of targets both by day and night, this fine Non-Commissioned Officer has fulfilled his duty as an Air Bomber with the utmost coolness and efficiency. He has demonstrated his ability by the high percentage of "Aiming Point" photographs which he has brought back from his many sorties into Germany and the occupied countries. A most conscientious crew member whose courage and cheerfulness have set a fine example to his crew and other members of the squadron.

For his exceptional tenacity of purpose and fine record he is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

MAGILL, FS William Hugh (R277564) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.429 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 22 May 1945 and AFRO 1147/45 dated 13 July 1945. Born 8 July 1925 in Toronto; home there (munitions worker); enlisted there 16 September 1943. To Technical Training School, 31 October 1943. To No.16 Explosives Depot, 12 December 1943. To No.10 BGS, 31 December 1943; promoted LAC, 14 February 1944; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 24 March 1944. To No.3 Aircrew Graduate Training School, 7 April 1944. To "Y" Depot, 6 May 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 25 May 1944. Repatriated 13 June 1945. Retired 7 September 1945. Medal sent by registered mail 14 March 1952. DHist file 181.009 D.5525 has recommendation dated 20 February 1945 when he had flown 15 sorties (108 hours five minutes), commencing 27 November 1944. Incident described was 16/17 January 1945 and recommendation suggests the enemy aircraft was shot down. Postwar employed by City of Toronto; died in Toronto 11 May 1996. RCAF photo PL-42912 (ex UK-19549 dated 30 March 1945) is captioned as follows: "Halfway through his first tour of operations, F/L H.W. MacDonald, Toronto, a pilot with the Bison squadron of the RCAF Bomber Group, has been awarded an immediate DFC. On one of his recent attacks on Wanne Eickel his mid-upper gunner, FS W.H. Magill, also of Toronto, claimed destruction of an unidentified enemy fighter." RCAF Photo PL-42958 (ex-UK-19417) of 19 March 1945 shows him. Photo PL-42959 (ex-UK-19418) of 19 March 1945 shows F/L H.W. MacDonald (pilot, Toronto) and FS W.H. Magill (Toronto).

This airman has participated in a number of operation missions against heavily defended targets in the Ruhr Valley. At all times he has proved himself to be a skilful and vigilant air gunner. His fine fighting spirit, determination and devotion to duty have always been outstanding. In January 1945 his aircraft was detailed to attack Magdeburg. While on the return flight an enemy aircraft was sighted. Flight Sergeant Magill's excellent directions enabled his captain to out-manoeuve the enemy fighter while his accurate return fire forced the hostile aircraft to break off the engagement.

DHH file 181.009 D.1502 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20599) has original recommendation drafted 25 February 1945 by W/C R.L. Bolduc when he has flown 15 sorties (108 hours five minutes):

On the night of 16/17 January 1945, the crew of which Flight Sergeant Magill was rear gunner was detailed to attack Magdeburg. While on the homeward journey after attacking the target, an enemy aircraft was sighted on the port beam slightly below. He immediately gave directions to his captain for evasive action, and opened fire. The enemy aircraft closed to 200 yards at which point two mild explosions were seen in the enemy aircraft and it broke away, dived and was seen to explode on hitting the ground.

This Non-Commissioned Officer has participated in fifteen attacks on enemy targets, most of which have been against the heavily defended targets of the Ruhr. He has at all time shown himself to be a keen and alert gunner with a fine offensive spirit who has always been of great assistance to his captain in avoiding combat and enabling him to reach his target and return safely to base.

It is considered that this Air Gunner's keenness, alertness and devotion to duty fully merit the award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.3260 (RG.24 Vol.20637) has recommendation dated 14 November 1944 when he had flown 37 sorties (169 hours 15 minutes), 24 December 1943 to 29 September 1944.

This officer has taken part in many operational sorties, including such heavily defended targets as Hamburg, Boulogne, Arras, and various targets in France. Whatever the dangers and difficulties over the target area, Pilot Officer Magnusson invariably remained quietly and efficiently at his post, setting an excellent example to less experienced members of his crew. He has displayed efficiency and ability in these duties and, being always alert and fearless, in any circumstances, was of the greatest value to this squadron. By his coolness and courage, Pilot Officer Magnusson has contributed to the success of thirty-four sorties. In recognition of this officer's high standard of operational efficiency, I strongly recommend that he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows:

This officer has completed a large number of sorties in an exemplary manner against nearly all of the major targets in Germany. As a navigator he has done a splendid job and has inspired his crew with great confidence. His devotion to duty and outstanding work as a navigator against such heavily defended targets has set a fine example. He has been constantly diligent and accurate in all his work. In recognition of Squadron Leader Magnusson's outstanding courage and devotion to duty, he is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAGNUSSON, S/L Norman Lawrence, DFC (J17168) - Mention in Despatches - No.64 Base (AFRO gives only "Overseas") - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1395/45 dated 31 August 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.4364 (RG.24 Vol.20648) has recommendation sent to No.6 Group Headquarters, from Middleton St.George, 2 February 1945 when he had served one year in Canada, 31 months overseas. Station Navigation Officer.

This officer since finishing his tour of operations has done an excellent job of work as Station Navigation Officer and his guidance has done much to bring up the standard of navigation in both squadrons.

RCAF Press Release No.4485 dated 9 April 1944 from Sergeant John Bagder reads:

WITH RCAF BOMBER GROUP OVERSEAS: A 350-mile-per-hour dive in a flak-shattered Wellington that should have fallen apart – but didn't – is one of two experiences that remain vividly in the mind of Flying Officer Norman Magnusson of Suite One, Hague Apts, Westminster Avenue, Winnipeg. The big blond navigator completed a tour of operations with the Canadian Bomber Group's Ghost Squadron, before it converted to Halifaxes.

His twin-engined Wellington had discharged its bomb-load on a Wilhelmshaven target one night and was flying out of the area when it was trapped in a box barrage. Flak-bursts engulfed it. Fragments smashed into a wing near the fuselage, weakening it. A big hunk narrowly missed Magnusson but wrecked his navigational instruments. Other pieces rendered rudder and fins partly unserviceable. The whole tail assembly was "just hanging on", in Magnusson's words. The devastated bomber nosed over, dived 900 feet earthward, its speed increasing to a screaming 350 miles per hour. Vibration was terrific. The crew, which had not been harmed, was unable to do anything except hang on and pray that the pilot could wrestle his control column back. Second Lieutenant Kingdon (correct) Knapp, DFC, Pittsburg USA, was captain of the aircraft. It took all his strength to pull the Wellington out of its plunge. A shaking wreck, the bomber levelled out at 3000 feet. Knapp sized up the damages, told the crew to reach for their parachutes. A conference over the intercom ensued. The boys decided that, rather than bail out, they would dare the risk of 'ditching' at sea and try to fly back. The Wellington limped home at 120 m.p.h. Fortunately, enemy defences did not molest it again. Magnusson navigated without instruments. He and the others expected to have to ditch, but the aircraft made it. Coming in to land, it hit an electric wire on the edge of the airfield due to its faulty controls. A blinding flash filled the bomber for an instant but Knapp did not allow it to distract him. The Wellington made a bumpy but adequate landing, under the circumstances. The engineering officer of the station was astounded that the wreck had been capable of the return flight.

Another 'shaky-do' that Magnusson will never forget took place on a minelaying expedition. Beneath its cliffs, Brest Harbor lay clear and beautiful in the moonlight when the lone Wellington swooped in low. It had laid its mines and was speeding out to sea by the time the defences were in action. Land ack-ack batteries and about half a dozen flak-ships poured searchlight beams and flak-bursts from many directions, converging in the wake of the Wellington. The aircraft was flying below the level of the cliffs, at a height of about 200 feet, when the unearthly glare of the beams blinded Knapp for a moment. He looked down to rest his dazzled eyes. Unconsciously, he must have put pressure on the control column. The Wellington slanted toward the dark waves. Knapp looked up, attracted by the fiery tracks of tracers shooting by his windshield. Seeing the danger, he yanked the stick back, yelled over the intercom that the boys must prepare to 'ditch'. As the bomber levelled out, its underside plowed the surface of the waves. It was a terrible moment for the crew. The aircraft was shuddering under the impact of water and flak. Outside in the moonlight, they could see bursting flak mingle with spray. Then the bomber skidded upward again, and Knapp quickly dodged it out of danger. The port propeller which had dipped into the waves had 18 inches sheared off each blade, the starboard engine was not functioning properly and the fuselage was shredded with flak-holes. The fliers were unharmed, though a big piece from one of the amputated blades had just missed Knapp and another had skimmed by Magnusson. But the American found he could keep that 200-foot layer of air between the Wellington and the sea, so he kept on going. Both engines were kept running, though the vibration caused by the ruined propeller was bound to damage its engine. The boys had reason to fear that the starboard one might quit at any minute. It didn't and Knapp brought them home safely again. Magnusson recalls proudly that his skipper was awarded an immediate DFC for the feat.

Magnusson is now instructing at a heavy conversion unit of RCAF Bomber Group Overseas.

MAGUIRE, P/O John Norman (J94106) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.408 Squadron - Award effective 5 July 1945 as per London Gazette dated 20 July 1945 and AFRO 1619/45 dated 19 October 1945. Born 25 May 1924 in Toronto; home there (clerk); enlisted there 14 January 1943 but not posted to No.1 Manning Depot until 31 March 1943. To No.2 Manning Depot, 27 April 1943. Promoted LAC, 23 March 1943. To No.2 WS, 28 May 1943; may have graduated 26 November 1943 but not posted to No.3 BGS until 10 December 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 12 March 1944. To No.4 Aircrew Graduate Training School, 26 March 1944. To "Y" Depot, 22 April 1944; taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 3 May 1944. Commissioned 6 February 1945. Repatriated 18 June 1945. To No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945 for "Tiger Force" training; to Greenwood, 31 July 1945. RCAF photo PL-43746 shows P/O J.N. Maguire (left) and P/O R.P. Garndner (Sudbury) stating that "they shared destruction of a FW.190 on the first mission of their tour." Retired 25 September 1945. Presented 22 June 1949. Postwar he worked for Manufacturer's Life Assurance. Moved to United States, 1956; died in Plantation, Florida, 20 September 2002.

In November 1944, during an attack on Dusseldorf, the aircraft in which Pilot Officer Maguire was rear gunner was attacked by enemy fighters. By his alertness and timely warnings he enabled his pilot to evade all attacks successfully. This officer has consistently displayed courage and devotion to duty of a high order.

DHH file 181.009 D.2618 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20627) had the original recommendation, drafted by W/C F.R. Sharp, 28 February 1945 when he was still an NCO and had flown 22 sorties (146 hours 58 minutes) as follows:

2 November 1944 - Dusseldorf (6.15)
4 November 1944 - Bochum (5.25)
6 November 1944 - Gelsenkirchen (5.00)
16 November 1944 - Julich (4.50)
18 November 1944 - Munster (5.55)
4 December 1944 - Karlsruhe (6.40)
6 December 1944 - Osnabruck (6.20)
18 December 1944 - Duisburg (5.45)
24 December 1944 - Dusseldorf (4.40)
28 December 1944 - Opladen (6.00)
29 December 1944 - Trois Dorf (7.00)
30 December 1944 - Cologne (6.20)
2 January 1945 - Ludwigshaven (7.15)
16 January 1945 - Magseburg (7.08)
1 February 1945 - Mainz (7.10)
2 February 1945 - Wanne Eickel (5.35)
4 February 1945 - Bonn (6.05)
7 February 1945 - Goch (6.25)
13 February 1945 - Bohlen (9.10)
14 February 1945 - Chemnitz (8.10)
17 February 1945 - Wesel (6.25)

On the night of November 2nd, 1944, while over the target of Dusseldorf, the aircraft in which Flight Sergeant Maguire was rear gunner was attacked in force by enemy fighters. By his alertness and timely warnings, Flight Sergeant Maguire enabled his pilot to successfully evade all attacks. The rear gunner sighted a FW.190 dead astern level at 350 yards and he immediately opened fire after ordering evasive action. The enemy aircraft also opened fire but its tracer passed over the top of the bomber. The fighter closed in to 200 yards and then broke away down and ahead on the port quarter. The mid-upper gunner was then in position to bring his guns to bear and he opened fire. The FW.190 was then seen to break into flame and dive down into cloud where it exploded.

Flight Sergeant Maguire has consistently the utmost in alertness, courage and devotion to duty, and he has participated in many sorties over heavily defended targets, including Cologne, Duisburg, Bochum and Dusseldorf. For his fine example and consistently high performance, Flight Sergeant Maguire is strongly recommended for the award of the Non-Immediate Distinguished Flying Medal.

In April 1943, this officer was engaged in escorting a bomber force during an operational sortie. Much fighter opposition was encountered and in the ensuing combat Flight Lieutenant Magwood shot down two enemy aircraft. The previous day he engaged a Focke Wulfe 190 from close range and his accurate fire caused the enemy aircraft to disintegrate in the air. Flight Lieutenant Magwood, who has completed fifty-one sorties, has invariably displayed great courage and devotion to duty.

The following appeared in the Globe and Mail, 8 August 2007:

TOLD HE WAS TOO OLD TO BE A PILOT, HE NEVERTHELESS BECAME AN ACE

by Max Hartley

For Charles Magwood, "shooting a line" was something a respectable war veteran just didn't do. The buyer for Simpson-Sears abhorred anyone who told tall tales that glorified the violence and brutality of the Second World War. For his part, the former Royal Canadian Air Force Spitfire pilot rarely spoke of his own experiences, even though he had been decorated for gallantry by George VI.

A talented and fearless flier, Mr. Magwood was credited with destroying five enemy aircraft and damaging 3½ others while serving with Nos. 403 and 421 Squadrons in England. At one point, he shot down three Nazi planes in two days -- something he never told his children.

Mr. Magwood grew up on Dovercourt Road in what was then Toronto's west end. His surgeon father was the head of obstetrics at Western Hospital and his mother was a well-known pianist and one of the first musicians in Canada to record for RCA Victor. Charles learned to play the piano at an early age and had a keen eye for mathematics.

As a teenager, he developed into a star athlete at the University of Toronto Schools, an academically elite boys school where he excelled in wrestling, basketball and track and field. He set a record in the 220-yard dash that stood for 24 years until it was bested by someone with the same name -- his nephew, Charles Johnston Magwood. Evenings were spent learning sonatas on the piano or playing basketball at the YMCA across the street from home.

After graduating with a bachelor's degree in commerce from the University of Toronto, Mr. Magwood went to work selling group insurance at Canada Life. There, he spied a red-haired secretary named Marion Cecilia King, who worked in another department on his floor. He engineered a meeting after discovering they had a mutual acquaintance, and a few days later, a "chance" encounter on the street set the course of a long relationship.

Their romance was interrupted by war. Even though he was 26, Mr. Magwood enlisted in the air force, where most of his fellow recruits were many years his junior.

Initially considered too old to fly, he was assigned to observer training. However, it wasn't long before the demand for pilots pushed him into the cockpit of a Spitfire. After training in Llandow, Wales, he was posted to RCAF 403 "Wolf" Squadron at Martlesham Heath airfield in Suffolk.

On April 4, 1943, the squadron was assigned to escort a formation of U.S. bombers sent to attack a German factory on the outskirts of Paris. Along the way, it was jumped by a flock of Luftwaffe Me 109s and Focke-Wulf 190s. Mr. Magwood attacked a group of the enemy fighters at close range, destroying two and forcing another to retreat. Each of his kills was recorded between the pale blue covers of his logbook. Every mission and every battle was recounted in painstaking detail. Small swastikas denoted hits, larger, circled swastikas were reserved for confirmed kills.

His preferred method of attack was to get in as close to the enemy as possible. An entry from April 17, 1943, the day he shot down two Germans, reads: "Blasted one with cannon shells in engine cockpit and fuselage from 500 yds and he spun down to the left pouring grey-white smoke. Chased two more back towards French coast."

About the kill the day before, he wrote: "It was one of those you dream of getting and before they knew what happened we got 5 destroyed, 1 prob. and 1 dam. I opened on mine from about 150 yds and he completely disintegrated, leaving only a black cloud."

The entries are marked by a large, dark swastikas ringed by nickel-sized circles.

On another mission to escort 60 B-17 bombers to France's Cherbourg Peninsula, he and another pilot attacked a German fighter: "[We] jumped a FW 190 out of the sun and plastered him from 350-10 yds., narrowly avoiding collision. He went down almost vertically, pouring white smoke. Last seen at 5-6,000 feet in same attitude, pouring black smoke. Given probable; shared letter of commendation for our efforts."

Not long afterward, he described having some "good fun with 20 FW 190s and Me 109s ... My section peeled off on 4 190s -- mine a flamer. Later saw FW 190 coming up fast on 3 Spits about 1,000 yards on port. Dashed over and knocked him down as he was firing ... bits and pieces came back from cannon burst of 3½ sec. He rolled over and went down vertically. Saw him at about 5,000 feet in same attitude, but can only claim a damaged."

Like many fighter pilots, Mr. Magwood would have received a higher score if not for the scrupulously high reporting standards set by the RCAF and allied air forces. Regulations required that a kill be confirmed by other pilots or observers on the ground, and then undergo scrutiny - he may have downed as many as 10 enemy aircraft. Even so, his five official kills qualified him as an ace.

Interestingly, the "old man" of the squadron never took a single hit in about 200 missions, while other pilots as much as 10 years his junior failed to return from their first sortie.

Mr. Magwood became a mainstay of the squadron, eventually rising to the rank of wing commander. He even designed the squadron's crest, with the words "Stalk and Strike" emblazoned across the bottom. On July 13, 1943, he was summoned to Buckingham Palace, where, in recognition of his three kills in two days, the king pinned on him the Distinguished Flying Cross.

In October of 1943, Mr. Magwood was transferred to RCAF 421 Squadron, where he took over as commanding officer and continued to lead missions. Two months later, he was grounded because of serious sinus problems that were probably caused by flying at high altitude; he never again went aloft in combat. He remained at his desk job, champing at the bit, until 1945.

After returning from the war, he and Marion were married at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church on Oct. 5, 1945. They had three children. Mr. Magwood returned to Canada Life for a time but soon left to work for a friend at the Robert Simpson Co. in Toronto, where he eventually became a buyer for Simpson-Sears catalogue. Because of his job, the family moved often, to the likes of London, Ont., and Montreal, but eventually returned to Toronto.

More than anything, Mr. Magwood was a family man who enjoyed nothing more than spending time with his children. "He travelled so much, but when he came home he wanted to catch up," daughter Mary recalled. "He'd ask me how I was liking my ballet lessons ... he was a very loving and understanding man."

However, he was haunted by memories of the war. Son John remembered being awakened at night by the sound of screaming; it was his father having nightmares. When John asked about the screaming over breakfast, his father refused to discuss it, but evidently reconsidered. A few mornings later, he looked at his 10-year-old son and felt compelled to explain. The screaming, he said, was over letters he had to write as wing commander - it was his job to tell families back home that their sons had been killed.

"It was still eating him up inside," John recalled. His father looked relieved to have talked about the dreams, and John told him he was not to have any more nightmares. John never heard the screams again.

While Mr. Magwood's logbook reveals much methodically recorded information, he didn't share it with his family. The horrors of war just weren't something he wanted to talk about.

"For Dad, it was inappropriate to dwell on the details," son Stephen said. "The war was a nasty piece of business that everybody was engaged in, and a kill was just an unfortunate circumstance of war. Claiming a kill was much less important."

A savvy money manager, Mr. Magwood returned from the war with nearly $10,000 to his name and continued to invest wisely through the years. By all accounts, he always knew a deal when there was one to be had. On one occasion, he took the family on a road trip across the United States in their 1964 Buick Wildcat. Arriving on the West Coast, he received an offer for the car he couldn't refuse. He sold it and the family flew back to Toronto. An astute real-estate investor, he often owned homes that were grander than those of his bosses.

In 1974, he retired from Sears to run a furniture-design business. Nine years later, he gave that up to spend more time with his family.

CHARLES MAGWOOD

Charles MacLachlan Magwood was born in Toronto on Nov. 27, 1913. He died of pneumonia at Sunnybrook War Veterans Residence in Toronto on July 9, 2007. He was 93. He is survived by his wife Marion and children John, Stephen and Mary. He also leaves seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

To Halifax, 13 September 1945. Discharged 21 September 1945. . DHist file 181.009 D.2993 (RG.24 Vol.20634) has recommendation forwarded from No.61 Base to Headquarters, No.6 Group, 11 September 1944. Notwithstanding the discrepancy of dates, this indicates the sort of work he was doing which would have merited award., stating he had served eight months in Canada, 17 months in England.

This airman while an ACH/GD was employed in the capacity of a Flying Control Assistant and carried out his duties in a highly efficient manner. During the time this station was below establishment in Flying Control Officers, Leading Aircraftman Maher assumed duties and responsibilities far beyond those which would normally be expected of him. He is still entrusted with considerable responsibility and has shown outstanding administrative ability and tact in performing his duties and directing the work of other assistants, some of whom are Non-Commissioned Officers.

No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.2610 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation by W/C G.A. Tambling dated 19 May 1945 when he had completed 29 sorties (145 hours ten minutes), 18 July 1944 to 10 May 1945 (including EXODUS flights on 8 and 10 May 1945).

This officer has now completed twenty-nine operational sorties over enemy territory, including such heavily defended areas as Hamburg (2), Dortmund (2), Kiel and Duisburg.

Flight Lieutenant Mahon has displayed outstanding ability and a strong sense of duty and holds a fine record of achievement on the squadron. He has acted as Bombing Leader with the squadron for the past eight months, and by his high degree of skill, courage and initiative has proven an inspiration to all personnel. He has handled his section in a most outstanding manner and by his example of cheerful courage has maintained a very high standard of morale, not only among his section members, but in the squadron in general.

The sortie list was as follows:

18 July 1944 - Caen (4.15)
20 July 1944 - Ferme de Forrestel (4.10)
23 July 1944 - Dagnes (6.05)

MAHONEY, P/O Daniel Carson (J19880) - Mention in Despatches - No.3 PRC - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 379/45 dated 2 March 1945. Born 2 June 1918. Home in Reswich or Keswich, Ontario; enlisted in Toronto, 27 August 1941 and posted to No.5A Manning Depot. To No.31 OTU (guard duty), 11 November 1941. To No.3 ITS, 22 November 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 17 January 1942 but not posted to No.12 EFTS until 1 February 1942; may have graduated 27 March 1942 but not posted to No.5 SFTS until 11 April 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 31 July 1942. To "Y" Depot, 19 August 1942; to RAF overseas, 20 August 1942. Commissioned 25 November 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 25 May 1944. Served in No.18 Squadron (Bostons - see entry for James Walter Borden). Repatriated 4 January 1945. To No.1 Air Command, 16 January 1945. To Transport Conversion Squadron, Pennfield Ridge, 16 February 1945. To No.165 Squadron, 5 May 1945. Remained in postwar RCAF (129036), retaining rank of Flying Officer but promoted to Flight Lieutenant on 1 June 1952.

RCAF press release 5152 issued 24 January 1945 deals with his navigator more than himself but theirs is likely a shared experience. It reads as follows:

The navigator of an RAF Boston watched blue electric sparks move down an Italian valley one night last spring. Carefully he sent a 500-pound bomb hurtling into the railway bed just in front of the electric train. Seconds later the sparks ended in a burst of flame as the locomotive smashed into the bomb crater and freight wagons piled up behind it.

“That’s the kind of bombing that really gives some satisfaction:, says F/O J.J.T. Harford, Montreal, who recently returned to Canada after a tour of operations as a navigator with a Boston squadron on intruder work in Italy. His pilot was F/O D.C. Mahoney of Reswick, Ontario, who returned to Canada at the same time as his navigator

Harford, who has done a large number of night patrols at low level, flying up Italian valleys to strafe and bomb enemy communications, says, “We never got into trouble, we were really lucky.”

When British paratroopers had cleared the first Greek airfield, Harford was assigned to communications work and with F/O Mahoney landed in the third Allied aircraft in to Greece.

“The people were wonderful in Athens”, said F/O Mahoney. “They were all cheering us as we rode by in our jeep. The city was lighted up as bright as a Canadian city because guerillas had protected the lighting plants from German demolition. It was the first lighted city we had seen since we left home.

“As much as any other thing, we appreciated being able to drink water. In Italy we could never find a drink of safe water, but the Athens water from the Marathon dam was pure and we really enjoyed it.”

RCAF Press Release No. 8102 dated 5 January 1945 from F/O George Sinclair reads:

WITH RCAF IN BRITAIN: -- One of the first Allied airmen to land in liberated Greece, Flying Officer D.C. Mahoney, Keswick, Ontario, is now at an RCAF repatriation depot on his way home. Flying intruder Bostons in Italy, Mahoney did a large number of low-level night patrols up and down Italian valleys harassing enemy transport. On one occasion, he bombed a railway line just in front of an enemy train and watched the locomotive burst into flames as it crashed into the crater with freight cars piling up behind them.

At the end of his operational tour, Mahoney was assigned to communications duties and flew the third aircraft into liberated Greece, landing at Athens just after British Paratroopers had opened the airfield. "The people were wonderful in Athens," he said. "They were all cheering us as we rode by in our jeep. The city was lighted up as bright as a Canadian city because guerrillas had protected the lighting plants from German demolition. It was the first lighted city we had seen since we left home." "As much as any other thing, we appreciated being able to drink water. In Italy, we could never find a drink of safe water, but the Athens water from the Marathon dam was pure and we really enjoyed it."

MAHONEY, F/O Gerald Maurice (J17806) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.428 Squadron - Award effective 15 March 1945 as per London Gazette dated 27 March 1945 and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born 5 October 1912 in Montreal; home in Lachute, Quebec (clerk); enlisted in London, England, 10 April 1942 with rank of Sergeant. Commissioned 19 June 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 19 December 1943. Repatriated 17 February 1945. Retired 12 September 1945 to Montreal. Presented 22 May 1946. RCAF photo PL-33801 (ex UK-16126, 1 November 1944) shows Cardinal Rodrigue Villeneuve blessing Mahoney before departing on a daylight raid to Cologne. No citation other than "completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.3260 (RG.24 Vol.20637) has recommendation dated 17 December 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (187 hours 25 minutes), 9 May to 6 December 1944.

As a navigator, Flying Officer Mahoney has displayed exceptional skill and great devotion to duty. On several occasions while high level mining, rather than drop his mines off the target, he navigated his aircraft on orbits and returned to the exact target to mine successfully. Under a quiet manner he has a fine offensive spirit in action which inspires confidence and he has contributed to a major degree in the operational efficiency of his crew and the squadron as a whole.

As well as precision manning his sorties include targets such as Stettin, Bremen, Emden, Kiel, Bottrop, Dortmund, Bochum, Wilhelmshaven, Cologne, Neuss, Duisburg, Karlsruhe, and Osnabruck. On each he has navigated his aircraft skilfully and reached the target as briefed.

For all around efficiency and great devotion to duty, I recommend the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAHONEY, F/L William Albert (J7679) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.162 Squadron - Award effective 26 October 1944 as per London Gazette dated 7 November and AFRO 1/45 dated 5 January 1945. Name in AFRO and Gazette incorrectly given as William Arthur Mahoney. Born 6 July 1918. Home in North Bend, British Columbia; enlisted in Vancouver, 24 January 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot; to No.2 BGS, 21 February 1941; to No.2 WS, 29 March 1941; promoted LAC, 1 May 1941; graduated 15 August 1941 when posted again to No.2 BGS; graduated and commissioned 15 September 1941. To No.31 OTU, 16 September 1941; to RAF overseas, 24 February 1942. Attained rank of Flight Lieutenant, 15 January 1943. Repatriated 29 March 1945. To Western Air Command, 14 April 1945. To Release Centre, 4 June 1945; retired 6 June 1945. Award presented 22 October 1949.

Now on his second tour of operational duty, this officer has taken part in many sorties. He has done much valuable work for the squadron on special operations and has at all times displayed outstanding skill, courage and devotion to duty. On one occasion Flight Lieutenant Mahoney obtained valuable information regarding the tactics of enemy night fighters. During this flight his aircraft was attacked by an enemy fighter five times and the rear gunner was killed. Regardless of the tracer bullets passing through the cockpit, Flight Lieutenant Mahoney completed his investigation and recorded the results.

MAHONY, P/O Edward Patrick Joseph (J89750) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.415 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 25 May 1945 and AFRO 1291/45 dated 10 August 1945. Born 5 August 1914 in Toronto; home there (proof reader); enlisted there 7 July 1942. To No.1 Manning Depot, 25 October 1942. To No.3 Flying Instructor School, 21 January 1943. Posted to No.5 ITS, 6 February 1943; graduated and promoted LAC, 17 April 1943 but not posted to No.4 AOS until 1 May 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 17 September 1943. To "Y" Depot, 1 October 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 8 October 1943. Commissioned 8 September 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 8 March 1945. Repatriated 26 September 1945. Retired 3 November 1945. Presented in Toronto, 30 November 1949. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 Vol.1761 (RG.24 Vol.20609) has recommendation dated 18 January 1945 when he had flown 32 sorties (164 hours five minutes), 24 July to 24 December 1944.

Throughout his tour this navigator has been consistently accurate in his work. He has navigated his aircraft to the targets and kept it out of trouble on every occasion. Highly skilled himself, Pilot Officer Mahoney has given unsparingly of his time to assist in the training of other members of his section. Both in the air and on the ground his services have been most valuable.

MAIN, Sergeant James Richard (R264224) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.415 Squadron - Award effective 24 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 4 July 1922 in Toronto; home there; spent one year in Army. Enlisted in Toronto, 15 June 1943 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.3 WS, 1 August 1943. To No.1 Air Gunner Ground Training School, 1 October 1943. Promoted LAC and posted to No.3 BGS, 12 November 1943. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 23 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, Lachine, 14 January 1944. To No.4 Aircrew Graduate Training School, 16 January 1944. To "Y" Depot, Lachine, again, 11 February 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 5 March 1944. Commissioned 13 September 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 13 March 1945. Repatriated 13 August 1945. Retired 1 October 1945. Presented 18 October 1947. Engaged in air actions on 10 August 1944 and 18 August 1944. RCAF photo PL-33659 (ex UK-15592, 2 October 1944) has the following caption: "Sergeant Jim Main, DFM, of Toronto, 322 Kinilworth Avenue, mid-upper gunner who shared in knocking an Me.109 out of the sky on a Bremen raid recently, points out the bombing record of his Halifax to Lieutenant C.L. Robinson of 311 Vaughan Street, Winnipeg, of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps. The army man spent a week with an RCAF Bomber Group squadron on liaison duties." Photo PL-33660 shows Main explaining turret to Robinson.

This airman has participated in many sorties as air gunner and has at all times displayed constant alertness and accuracy. On one occasion during an attack on Bremen his aircraft was attacked by three enemy fighters. By his skill and accurate shooting one of the enemy aircraft was compelled to break away with smoke trailing from the engine. The coolness and fine fighting spirit displayed by Sergeant Main have contributed greatly to the safety of his aircraft and crew and to the successful completion of many missions.

DHH file 181.009 D.1513 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 vol.20600) has recommendation raised by W/C J. Lecompte, 7 September 1944 when he had completed 13 sorties (61 hours 15 minutes). Submission as follows:

24 July 1944 - L'Hey (3.30)

28 July 1944 - Hamburg (5.35)

1 August 1944 - Ferme de Forretel (4.10, recalled at target; did not bomb)
3 August 1944 - Foret de Nieppe (4.20)
4 August 1944 - Bois de Casson (4.40)
5 August 1944 - St. Leu d'Esserent (4.40)
7 August 1944 - La Hogue (3.45)
9 August 1944 - Foret de Nieppe (3.45)
10 August 1944 - La Pallice (6.45)
14 August 1944 - Bons Tassily (4.30)
15 August 1944 - Melsbroeck/Brussels (4.05)
16 August 1944 - Kiel (5.40)
18 August 1944 - Bremen (5.50)

As a gunner this airman has completed numerous sorties including attacks on such targets as Hanburg, Kiel and Bremen. During an attack on the last-named target, Sergeant Main's aircraft was attacked by three fighters. However, from the mid-upper position, this Non-Commissioned Officer used his gun [guns ?] with such skill and accuracy as to cause one of the attacking aircraft to break away with smoke trailing from the engine. The aircraft was subsequently confirmed as destroyed. On two other occasions Sergeant Main has engaged the enemy with such determination as to frustrate the attackers. The Non-Commissioned Officer has proved himself to be an outstanding member of a gallant crew.

On 11 September 1944 the Commanding Officer of Station East Moor added his remarks:

On the attack on Bremen on the night of 18/19 August 1944, by his determined skill, Sergeant Main destroyed an ME.109, thereby ensuring the success of the mission and safety of his crew. He has always displayed this alertness and determination in action throughout his operational tour. The confidence he instilled in his crew has reflected on the whole squadron. For his fine record of achievement, Sergeant Main is recommended for the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAIN, F/O William Hunter (J9920) - Mention in Despatches - No.415 Squadron - Award effective 14 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 874/44 dated 21 April 1944. Born 11 September 1914. Home in Winnipeg; enlisted in North Bay, Ontario, 8 January 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1A Manning Depot, 29 January 1941. To No.12 Equipment Depot, 6 February 1941. To No.3 ITS, 22 April 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 28 May 1941; posted that date to No.13 EFTS; ceased training 30 June 1941 and posted next day to Trenton. To No.5 AOS, 17 August 1941; to No.7 BGS, 8 November 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 20 December 1941 and posted that date to No.1 ANS; graduated and commissioned 19 January 1942. To No.31 GRS, 13 February 1942; to No.32 OTU, 14 March 1942; to RAF overseas, 1 April 1942 via Ferry Command. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. Repatriated 25 November 1943. To No.31 OTU, 7 January 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 19 January 1944. To No.7 OTU, 30 June 1944. To "Y" Depot, 6 August 1944; to United Kingdom, 8 September 1944. Repatriated 8 August 1945. Retired 27 September 1945.

The award was probably related to a mission flown on 10 April 1943. Hampden Z/415 was one of five Hampdens airborne 1632 hours. The crew consisted of W/C G.H.D. Evans, F/O W.H. Main, P/O D.M. Fleming and Sergeant E.H. Smith (RNZAF, awarded DFM). Form 541 account read as follows:

Aircraft Z-J-P-V-F were airborne St.Eval in company on shipping strike. Load carried by each aircraft - one torpedo, 15-cwt. Made contact with escort Wellingtons but after flying in company with them for approximately one hour, leader in Z/415 estimated that aircraft had already passed turning position and Hampdens parted with Wellingtons. Convoy was sighted and attacked at 2031 hours. Enemy convoy was composed of Merchant Vessel approximately 8,000 tons escorted by one Narvik class destroyer and three T-19s. Intense and accurate heavy and light flak was encountered from all five ships and during the course of the attack, aircraft "P" was shot down near enemy force. All aircraft were hit considerably and "Z" was on fire and port engine was damaged. All aircraft set course for base and "Z" having sent S.O.S., aircraft "V" and "F" kept company with "Z" and ultimately rear gunner [Smith] managed to put fire out. Aircraft made landfall independently after dark and at 2330 "V" landed at St. Eval, 2344 "F" landed St.Eval, 2348 "Z" landed St.Eval, 2310 aircraft "J" landed Predannack.

The missing crew consisted of FS G.A. Cline, F/O W.B. Keown, Sergeant A.M.J. Kelly (RCAF, killed), and Sergeant J.M. Ryan.

MAINS, FS Walter Norman (R58448) - British Empire Medal - Canadian Joint Staff, Washington - Award effective 28 May 1943 as per London Gazette dated 28 May 1943 and AFRO 1459/43 dated 30 July 1943. Born 8 April 1916. Home in Vancouver; enlisted there 17 August 1940. Presented 29 February 1944. Remained in postwar RCAF (20601) and retired 26 December 1968, settling in Ottawa.

During the past year, Flight Sergeant Mains has been in charge of the Canadian Joint Staff Headquarters Signals and Cypher Officer in Washington. He has trained his Section up to and maintained a very high standard of accuracy and speed in cyphering and in handling traffic. This NCO has constantly set an example to his men by his extreme devotion to duty, initiative, trade skill and pride in the work of his Section. He maintains discipline and harmony and encourages the personnel under him to advance new ideas. The splendid manner in which a large volume of traffic has been handled at this office has only been possible through this NCO's organizing ability. His success has entailed long hours of arduous work.

This officer has participated in very many sorties involving attacks on a wide variety of important and well defended targets in Germany. Throughout his tour he has displayed great skill and determination, pressing home his attacks with vigour, often in the face of heavy opposition. On several occasions his aircraft has been damaged by enemy action but despite this, Wing Commander Mair has completed his mission successfully. He is a highly efficient flight commander whose gallant leadership and personal example have inspired all.

DHH file 181.009 D.1513 (Library and Archives RG.24 Vol. 20600) has recommendation drafted by G/C D. Edwards (Linton-on-Ouse), 22 November 1943 when he has flown eighteen sorties (104 hours 24 minutes):

Since joining the squadron in April 1943, this officer has carried out sorties against some of the most heavily defended targets in Germany including Essen, Cologne, Krefeld, Kassel and Berlin. He has filled the position of Flight Commander for the past four months and his leadership has contributed in no small measure to the continued success of the squadron and maintaining morale at a high standard. He now commands the squadron.

Throughout his tour Wing Commander Mair has set an example of skilful pilotage, cool judgement and determination, frequently in the face of strong enemy opposition. On three occasions his aircraft has been badly damaged by enemy flak. Two of his sorties have been completed even though enemy fighter attacks had rendered one engine unserviceable. In spite of these repeated evidences of enemy opposition he has retained his zest and eagerness to fly and his attitude has been an inspiration to the whole squadron. He is an ideal leader of men and has consistently shown great devotion to duty and fully merits the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This was endorsed on 24 November 1943 by Air Commodore C.M. McEwen (No.62 Base, Linton-on-Ouse) and duly approved on 9 December 1943.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his last sortie. Lancaster DS723, No.408 Squadron (EQ-B), target Berlin, 26/27 November 1944. Aircraft probably named "Our Beautiful Babe". DS723 was delivered to No.408 Squadron in October 1943 and took part in the following operations: Hannover, 18/19 October 1943; Berlin, 22/23 November 1943; Berlin, 26/27 November 1943 (lost). When lost this aircraft had a total of 24 hours. It was one of two No.408 Squadron Lancasters lost on this operation (the other was DS712). Airborne at 1716 hours, 26 November 1943 from Linton-on-Ouse. Lost without trace; crew commemorated on the Runnymede Memorial. They were W/C A.C.Mair, DFC, RCAF (Squadron Commanding Officer); Sergeant C.F.Kirsch (killed); F/O W.R.E.North, DFC (Squadron Navigation Leader); P/O A.W.Douglas; F/L S.A.H.Glasspool (Squadron Signals Leader); Flight Sergeant G.Fielding; Sergeant L.H.Matthews.

Website <http://www.yorkshire-aircraft.co.uk/aircraft/yorkshire/york43/jd107.html> relates the following incident:

HALIFAX JD107 DAMAGED BY FLAK, RETURNED TO LEEMING AIRFIELD

On the night of 13th/14th May 1943 the crew of this 408 Squadron aircraft was undertaking an operational flight to bomb Bochum when they were attacked, but not damaged, by a Junkers Ju-88. The pilot took evasive action and they managed to shake off their attacker. Before they left mainland Europe they were hit by flak which damaged the hydraulics. The pilot made the return to base of Leeming and landed at 05.26hrs.

One night in April 1945, Flight Lieutenant Mair piloted an aircraft engaged on sortie over an area of the Skaggerak and Kattegat. During the flight, a merchant ship escorted by a naval vessel was located. In spite of much opposing fire, Flight Lieutenant Mair came down to a low altitude to execute a straight and level bombing run. Two hits were obtained on the merchantman from which smoke began to issue in great clouds. This officer has taken part in many attacks on enemy shipping and has invariably displayed a high degree of skill and courage.

Excerpts from Coastal Command Operational Summaries (DHH 181/003 folio D.886):

Halifax U/502 - F/O Mair - 2152, 12th October 1944 - 58.15 N 08.31 E, Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol homed on a radar contact and sighted a merchant vessel believed 1,000 tons unescorted. Aircraft attacked from 1,500 feet in face of flak from merchant vessel and from the shore, dropping six 500-lb M.C. bombs. No results observed.

Halifax M/502 - Captain F/O Mair - 2205, 18th November 1944 - 57.33 N 11.06 E, Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol obtained a radar contact, homed and lost height to investigate when a white light was seen. Aircraft climbed to 4,000 feet and attacked the estimated position of vessel with six 500-lb M.C. bombs, air burst pistol. Bomb flashes seen, but no results. Evasive action taken and cloud entered.

Halifax M/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0305, 30th November 1944 - 58.25 N 08.54 E, off Tromso. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol obtained three radar contacts, investigated and experienced flak. Aircraft took evasive action and made attack on two of the contacts which had remained together, dropping six 500-lb M.C. bombs, air burst pistol from 4,000 feet. Bomb explosions were felt but no results were observed.

Halifax F/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0830, 13th December 1944 - 61.38 N 05.05 E, off Flore. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol sighted a convoy consisting of an M/V of 6/8,000 tons, two M/Vs of 2,000 tons each and two escort vessels on course 160 degrees, speed 10 knots. Aircraft attacked from 7,000 feet with six 500-lb M.C. bombs, air burst pistol, in pairs. Bombs exploded midway between the escort vessels (which were 150 yards apart) leading the convoy, and about 100 yards ahead of the M/Vs which were in line astern. No results were observed.

Light and medium inaccurate flak was experienced from the escort vessels but no damage was sustained.

Halifax D/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0008, 6th March 1945 - Sandefjord Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol sighted an M/V of 3,000 tons stationary in the fjord and attacked from 4,000 feet with seven 500-lb M.C. bombs, nose plugged .025 seconds tail delay. No results observed.

Halifax K/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0145, 11th March 1945 - 57.52 N 11.22 E, Kattegat. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol homed on radar contact and illuminated an M/V of 3,000 tons and two escort vessels, course 070 degrees 15 knots. "K" attacked the M/V from 4,000 feet with seven 500-lb M.C. bombs, nose plugged, .025 seconds tail delay, spaced 80 feet, estimating a near miss astern. No further results seen.

Halifax M/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 2348, 13th March 1945 - 58.52 N 10.52 E, Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol homed on radar contact ten miles and sighted tanker 5,000 tons with smaller tanker and escort vessel, course 040 degrees and attacked dropping seven 500-lb M.C. bombs, tail fused from 3,500 feet. Bombs estimated to have overshot.

Halifax L/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 2345, 30th March 1945 - 58.05 N 11.12 E, Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol following a radar contact sighted vaguely two M/Vs and an escort vessel on course 140 degrees five knots. Aircraft attacked one of the M/Vs estimated at 3,000 tons, releasing from 4,000 feet six 500-lb M.C. bombs, nose plugged, .04 seconds delay spaced at 80 feet. Navigator estimated a near miss to starboard of vessel. Bomb plumes were vaguely seen and what appeared to be smoke was also observed.

Halifax L/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0230, 5th April 1945 - 58.23 N, 09.25 E, Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol obtained radar contact indicating three vessels course 100 degrees, 10 knots. Identification of vessels by flares proved impossible. Aircraft attacked on radar, dropping seven 500-lb M.C. bombs tail fused from 2,100 feet with unobserved results.

Halifax L/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0345, 9th April 1945 - 58.00 N 11.00 E., Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol sighted one merchant vessel with one escort vessel and attacked merchant vessel of 2,500 tons, course 090 degrees, 15 knots, dropping seven 500-lb M.C. bombs tail fused from 2,500 feet. Two hits estimated, one on starboard bow, one on port quarter. Two columns of smoke merged into one column rising to 500 feet. Nothing further seen.

Halifax D/501 - Captain F/L Mair - 0310, 13th April 1945 - 58.58 N. 10.30 E., Skagerrak. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol homed on radar contacts and illuminated M/V 1,500 tons, course 180 degrees, 12 knots. Aircraft attacked dropping seven 500-lb M.C. bombs, tail fused, spaced 80 feet from 4,000 feet. No results seen. Flak from two unidentified vessels also present.

Halifax A/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0240, 21st April 1945 - 59.07 N 10.12 E, Sandefjord. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol sighted four very large ships including one of approximately 10,000 tons stationary and attacked from 5,000 feet with sev 500-lb M.C. bombs, nose plugged, .025 seconds tail delay, spaced 90 feet. No results observed owing to evasive action.

Halifax S/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0042, 24th April 1945 - 57.12 N 10.42 E, Kattegat. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol homed on radar contact and illuminated M/V 8,000 tons and two M/Vs, course 150, ten knots, "S" attacked M/V from 3,000 feet with seven 500-lb M.C. bombs, nose plugged, .04 seconds tail delay, spaced 60 feet. Two direct hits scored, with a possible third hit, which were followed by two fires, one being amidships. After attack columns of smoke were observed pouring from M/V.

Halifax B/502 - Captain F/L Mair - 0120, 27th April 1945 - 57.10 N 10.43 E, Kattegat. Aircraft on anti-shipping patrol homed on radar contact and illuminated one M/V, 4/5,000 tons, course and speed 210 five knots. "B" attacked with seven 500-lb M.C. bombs, nose plugged tail fused, spaced 80 feet from height of 3,500 feet. Crew reported seeing long column of whitish grey smoke from between amidships and stern. No actual hits observed and vessel left moving dead slow.

Notes: On Repatriation Form dated 9 July 1945 he stated he had flown 459 hours 35 minutes on operations and 327 hours 30 minutes non-operational. Claimed 47 sorties, the last on 22 May 1945. Claimed one ship (confirmed sunk) and three damaged or burning. Types flown overseas were Oxford (77.20), Anson (2.00) and Halifax (707.45).

When interviewed by DVA on release, it was noted, "Mr. Mair is a mature, sensible man of evident ability and ambition. He has considered his future carefully and there is every evidence that he will work hard. He wishes to change his profession from that of teaching because of the low salary that he experienced and that this would appear to be a very good reason. Service with the RCAF as a pilot and he was quoted as having outstanding learning ability and an excellent record in the Service. Letter on file from the University of Alberta states that he is acceptable for First Year Bachelor of Commerce commencing January 1946." Planned to become a Chartered Accountant.

Training: Interviewed 24 December 1941 by F/L J.E. Pugh - "Teacher by profession. Passenger flying for two hours, Played all sports, Father's occupation farming. No military training. Appears excellent type. Keen for aircrew duties."

Attended No.7 ITS, 6 July to 28 August 1942. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill, Signals (written) and Meteorology. Scored 81 percent in Visual Link. Scored 889 points of a possible 1,000. Placed 9th in a class of 80. "Mature, capable, conscientious. Varied interests; plenty of initiative. Steady, reliable, above average." (W/C L.C. Russell).

Attended No.6 EFTS, 12 October to 4 December 1942. Tiger Moth aircraft - 11.30 dual to first solo, 36.55 day dual, 39.35 day solo, 4.00 night dual, 1.00 night solo. Was eight hours on instruments. Logged ten hours in Link. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written and practical), Aircraft Recognition and Signals (written). Scored 609 points of a possible 700. Placed fifth in a class of 37. "Good average pilot. Sound progress throughout the course. Good type. Requires more practice in aerobatics and spins. Should do well."

Attended No.10 SFTS, 29 December 1942 to 16 April 1943. Crane aircraft - 62.35 day dual, 74.10 day solo, 10.15 night dual, 7.45 night solo. Was 26 hours on instruments. Logged 20 hours in Link. Ground examinations in Navigation, Airmanship (148/200), Armament (written and practical), Signals (written and practical), and Meteorology. Scored 653 points of a possible 750. Placed second in a class of 54. "Exceptional student. Reliable and dependable. Appearance very good. Service attitude excellent." (S/L C.H. Clark).

Attended No.1 GRS, 3 April to 2 July 1943. Navigation exercises in Anson aircraft (45.25 by day). DR Navigation Intermediate (172/300), DR Navigation Final (172/300), DR Navigation Air Work (204/300), Reconnaissance (140/200), Reconnaissance Air Work (76/100), Astro Navigation (65/100), Compasses and Instruments (170/200), Meteorology (137/200), Signals (83/100), Coding (63/100), Ship Recognition (167/200), Photography (81/100), Visual Signals (Pass). Placed eighth in a class of 24. "Logs and charts satisfactory. His knowledge of navigation is better than indicated by his marks, Good worker. Thorough and dependable." (F/L G.R. Forbes).

Attended No.20 (Pilots) Advanced Flying Unit, 17 August 1943 to 5 January 1944. Oxford aircraft - 2.40 dual for first day solo, 23.25 total day dual, 28.25 day solo, 4.15 dual to first night solo, 9.40 total night dual, 12.55 night solo. Was 13 hours on instruments. Logged 12.45 in Link. Flying tests in General Flying (210/400), Applied Flying (110/200), Instrument Flying (125/250), Night Flying (60/100) and Link (35/50). "An average pilot with no special faults."

Attended No.1519 Beam Approach Training Flight, 22-29 September 1943. Oxford aircraft - 13.45 dual on instruments; logged 5.40 in Link. Graded in Beam Approach and "Q" Codes, Link Trainer (112/200), Receiver Operation (65/100), Instrument Flying (150/200), Cloud and Night Flying (155/200) and General Application of Beam Approach Procedure, flying (108/200). "Instrument Flying average with no particular faults except when flying beam, then has difficulty in holding steady altitude. Beam procedure average and should experience no difficulty when having to use beam."

Attended No.1674 Heavy Conversion Unit, 26 April to 13 June 1944. Halifax aircraft - 30minutes dual to first day solo (which was total dual) and 20 hours day solo; 45 minutes dual to first night solo (which was total night dual) and 4.35 night solo. Was 2.30 on instruments and logged 1.10 in Link. Flying tests in General Flying (320/400), Applied Flying (156/200), Instrument Flying (195/250), Night Flying (78/100) and Link (42/50). Ground examinations in Airmanship (285/300), Armament (229.5/300), Navigation (148/200) and Signals (85/100). Considered above average in ground training. "A sound and capable Captain - a good average pilot -should be an asset to his squadron."

Assessments: "Has always carried out his duties in a satisfactory manner." (S/L C.A. Maton, 25 April 1944, when he had flown 519 hours, 187 in past six months; on posting to No.1674 Heavy Conversion Unit).

"A solid and dependable captain who commands confidence. Not brilliant in his thinking or expression but reliable as a pilot and captain. 253 total hours, 135 hours last six months." (S/L H.H.C. Holderness, 1 November 1944)

Report dated 5 May 1945 when he had flown 956 hours (246 in past six months). "Rugged personality, plenty of loyalty, common sense and physical stamina. His qualities are exceptionally suited to flying in operations, less to work involving abstract reasoning. Has been very successful both as pilot and captain on specialized anti-shipping operations." (W/C H.H.C. Holderness). On 10 May 1945 the following was added: "A reliable officer with personality. Has proved himself to be one of the most able captains in his squadron. A very pleasant, likeable officer with plenty of determination and very experienced." (G/C E.S. Moulton-Barrett).

MAIR, S/L William Mace (C7671) - Officer, Order of the British Empire - Missing Research and

Enquiry Service, British Air Forces of Occupation - Award effective 6 February 1948 as per AFRO 81/48 of that date. Born in Montreal, 26 August 1902; enlisted in RCAF, 4 October 1941 as Administrative Officer. At Station Trenton, 4 October to 2 November 1941; on staff of No.1 Manning Depot, 3 November 1941 to 31 May 1942; on staff of No.5 Manning Depot, 1 June to 11 August 1942. Posted to "Y" Depot, Halifax, 12 August 1942; taken on strength of No.3 Personnel Reception Centre, Bournemouth, 20 August 1942; on staff of RCAF Repatriation Depot, 7 December 1942 to 20 April 1944 (promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 November 1943); on staff of No.6 Group Headquarters, 20 April to 8 July 1944; loaned for part of this time to RAF Air Ministry Casualty Unit, York; on staff of BPSO [not sure what this signifies] 8 July 1944 to 5 January 1945; assigned to No.4885 Missing Research and Enquiries Section, 6 January 1945; to Missing Research and Enquiries Service (British Air Forces of Occupation), 15 October 1945; attached for duty to British and American Graves Commission, September 1946; repatriated August 1947; to No.10 Group, 24 August 1947 on which date he was confirmed in rank of Squadron Leader; to Station Toronto, 29 August 1947; released 18 September 1947. Medal sent by registered mail to his home in Willowdale, Ontario, 29 May 1948. As of date of award, RCAF policy had been to refrain from recommending personnel for the Periodic Honours List, and Mair was recommended by the RAF out of its own quota for awards. Mair himself wrote sometime in 1948 to describe his work as follows: "My main function with MRES was the identification of missing aircrew. In this connection I developed the general identification procedure and instructions adopted by Air Ministry (P.4, Cas), supervised the identification work and organized exhumation and identification of unknowns buried in cemeteries in northern Europe. Remained in this unit until demobilized in 1947; awarded OBE in January 1948 in recognition." Public Records Office Air 2/9816 has citation as approved by Air Ministry Honours and Awards Committee:

Squadron Leader Mair is Senior Officer in Charge of Exhumation and Identification work. He joined the Missing Research and Enquiry Service in December 1944 and has taken a large and responsible part in the initial organization of this Branch of the Service. He is entirely responsible for the exhumation procedure now in use, which he evolved from his own experience of research work in the field, and the application of his methods has enabled a large number of missing aircrew to be traced. Apart from being a most efficient officer, Squadron Leader Mair subordinates everything to his official duties and does not spare himself. He has continuously worked for long hours in an endeavour to perfect the organization and much of the success of the Missing Research and Inquiry Service is due to his foresight, planning and energy. The Missing Research Enquiry Units have a thankless and at times horrible task to perform but their importance cannot be too strongly emphasized. Squadron Leader Mair's work is particularly noteworthy.

MAITLAND, F/O John Oliver (J17060) - Commended for Valuable Services - No.113 South African Wing - Award effective 1 September 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 8 May 1920 in Moose Jaw. Spent a brief period on a farm in southern Ontario. One day, in 1927, he saw a biplane fly past, and he had heard that the pilot of that aircraft was on his way to Europe. At age seven, he decided that that was what he was going to do for a living. After the family moved to Winnipeg, he played Junior A and was drafted by the New York Rangers. By his own admission, he was a tough player. Enlisted in Winnipeg, 4 November 1940. Trained at No.2 ITS (graduated 26 March 1941), No.15 EFTS (graduated 16 May 1941) and No.34 SFTS (graduated 8 August 1941). Obituary notice stated that he was "a bomber pilot who served in Britain and North Africa, flying Wellingtons and Lancasters in Bomber Command. This was followed by Ferry Command and Training Command." Remained in postwar RCAF (19896), service including Search and Rescue in the North, followed by Transport Command, with peacekeeping missions to the Congo and a relief mission to Chile (made an honorary colonel in the Chilean Air Force). Reported to have flown the Atlantic over one thousand times. retiring in Ottawa, 27 December 1969 in rank of Wing Commander. Joined Transport Canada as a safety expert for the aviation industry - "Dad had an abiding love for large airplanes with many engines." Died in Ottawa, 15 July 2014. No citation in AFRO. Public Records Office Air 2/9019 has recommendation drafted when he had flown 1,288 hours, including 245 in previous six months.

This officer has carried out his duties in a commendable manner. He is a very devoted and capable flying instructor.

MAITLAND, Sergeant William John (R74901) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.420 Squadron - Award effective 29 May 1942 as per London Gazette dated 29 May 1942 and AFRO 880-881/42 dated 12 June 1942. Born in Vancouver, 29 November 1921; educated there with stints of summertime logging; home there (University of British Columbia student); enlisted there 26 October 1940 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon. To No.1 ANS, Rivers, 24 December 1940. To No.2 ITS, Regina, 22 February 1941. Promoted LAC, 8 April 1941 and posted to No.18 EFTS, Boundary Bay, British Columbia. To No 12 SFTS, Brandon, 20 June 1941. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 1 September 1941. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 3 September 1941. To RAF Trainee Pool, 17 September 1941. Embarked from Canada, 18 September 1941. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 28 September 1941. To No.16 OTU, 7 October 1941. To No.420 Squadron, 1 March 1942 (promoted Flight Sergeant as of that date). Commissioned 2 May 1942 (J15405). To Station Headquarters, Waddington, 22 July 1942. To No.420 Squadron again, 12 August 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 2 November 1942. Award presented at Buckingham Palace, 24 November 1942. To No.1535 Beam Approach Training Flight, 28 January 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 20 April 1943. To No.61 Base, 13 September 1943. To No.62 Base, 14 November 1943. To No.408 Squadron, 27 November 1943. Killed in action, 16 December 1943 (Lancaster LL676). German documents indicated it was shot down at 1915 hours at Heyrothsberge, about four miles northeast of Magdeburg. He was reported to have flown 28 sorties (135 operational hours) and to be one of the "ace" pilots of his squadron.

Sergeant Maitland was captain of an aircraft which attacked Stuttgart one night in May 1942. Whilst crossing the enemy's coast on his return his aircraft was caught in a cone of searchlights and hit by anti-aircraft fire. One engine was set on fire and Sergeant Maitland was wounded on the right side of the chest. Despite this he kept his aircraft well under control and by appropriate use of the fire extinguisher prevented fire from spreading. Although one engine was useless he skilfully flew his aircraft to an aerodrome in this country. Throughout this airman showed great presence of mind and courage.

At No.2 ITS he placed 103rd in a class of 163. Described as "somewhat shy and unassuming."

At No.18 EFTS he placed 30th in a class of 65, flying Tiger Moths (25.35 dual, 29.15 solo, of which 5.32 was on instruments, plus ten hours in Link).

At No.12 SFTS (Cranes) was considered above average (41.05 day dual, 33.40 day solo, 3.15 night dual, 6.45 night solo of which 15.15 on instruments) plus 20 hours in Link.

A message dated 6 May 1942 stated the aircraft in his DFM incident was Hampden P1314 carrying full operational equipment and pigeons; aircraft shot up over Ostend by flak and bombs were jettisoned in sea.

A medical report dated 22 July 1942 at Waddington assessed him as being in "Early Anxiety State".

This officer has completed 98.55 hours operational flying on Hampden aircraft. He makes no specific medical complaints but states that since May 4th, 1942 he has found it increasingly difficult to carry out his operational flying. On that date he had a shaky experience in which his aircraft was hit by flak causing the port engine to catch fire and patient himself was struck by a piece of shell on the chest, seriously denting a cigarette case he had in his pocket. He brought the aircraft home and landed at Martlesham Heath. He had 48 hours leave following this and then resumed flying. About three weeks ago he had an attack of vomiting immediately before a trip and as a result the sortie was abandoned.

During the past few weeks we have noted some deterioration in his physical condition and he has lost some weight - about ten pounds. He has a productive cough and as a result of the above he had his chest X-rayed on 23 June 1942. Result negative. Sleep normal; no nightmares. Appetite normal. No previous illnesses of note.

The specialist looking at him noted he flew seven sorties following that of 4 May 1942 "but each became more difficult. Is tired all the time, mildly anxious, depressed, alcohol and cigarette consumption has increased and he has lost weight. Only mildly predisposed to neurotic illness. Mother nervous. He is really an excellent chap with splendid motivation. The future outlook is good." Maitland applied for leave in Canada but this was not granted.

As of 28 August 1942 he was deemed to have recovered, was more fit, sleeping and eating well, "keen to get on flying". He was then converting to Wellingtons.". As of 31 December 1942 he again had flu symptoms (which may have reflected flying stress) and was medically boarded on 16 January 1943.

The website "Lost Bombers" gives the following on his last sortie. Lancaster LL676, No.408 Squadron (EQ-E), target Berlin, 16/17 December 1943. This aircraft was a Mark II (Hercules engines), delivered to No.408 Squadron on 12 December 1943. Lost on its first operation with a total of five hours flying. LL676 was one of two No.408 Squadron Lancasters lost on this operation; the other was DS737. Airborne at 1623 hours, 16 December 1943 from Linton-on-Ouse. Crew (commemorated on the Runnymede Memorial) were F/O W.J.Maitland, DFM, RCAF (flying first sortie of his second tour); Sergeant M.Maher; Flight Sergeant J.E.Saunders, RCAF; F/O T.C.Gierulski, RCAF; Sergeant J.J.Robertson; Flight Sergeant C.A.Besse, RCAF; Flight Sergeant R.Pettitt, RCAF.

This officer has completed his first operational tour, throughout which he has performed his duties as Air Bomber with commendable efficiency and outstanding success.

He has carried out many notable attacks on the more heavily defended targets with cool determination and his photographic record reveals tenacity of purpose of high merit. His keen interest in all aspects of his trade and his skilful application made him an obvious choice for mining operations.

Pilot Officer Major by his outstanding devotion to duty has contributed in no uncertain manner to the general operational success of this squadron and his record is one of sustained operational endeavour worthy of the highest praise and fully deserving an award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAKAREWICZ, WO (now P/O) Joseph John (R97584/J96536) - Member, Order of the British Empire - Overseas - Award effective 28 December 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 155/46 dated 15 February 1946. American in the RCAF; born 29 January 1917 in Saginaw, Michigan (although one document says 1911); home there. Enlisted in Vancouver, 11 March 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.2 ITS, 15 May 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 20 June 1941; posted that date to No.5 EFTS; graduated 8 August 1941 when posted to No.7 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 24 October 1941. To "Y" Depot, 25 October 1941. Shot down and taken prisoner, 26/27 June 1942 as a Sergeant Pilot of a Whitley, No.19 Operational Training Unit. Commissioned 24 April 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 29 October 1944. Safe in United Kingdom, 26 May 1945. Repatriated 6 July 1945. Retired 12 November 1945. Presented 9 January 1948. Died in Montreal, 18 June 1984 as per Airforce Magazine of January 1985. No citation in AFRO. DHist award card gives the following (same material in Public Records Office Air 2/9104).

For distinguished service while prisoner of war.

This Warrant Officer was head of the Escape Committee in Stalag 4B. Along with a few army personnel he concentrated on getting men out of the camp and back to England. He spent numerous days planning ways and means for prisoners to escape. He served as head of the Escape Committee for nine months. Naturally, with a large camp, many men escaped who did not contact the official club. When possible, Warrant Officer Makarewicz helped them also. Throughout his period of detention this Warrant Officer was untiring in his efforts to assist his fellow prisoners and he set a fine example by his fortitude and devotion to duty.

Volume 5 of RCAF file 46-19-15A, "Prisoners of War - Escape of - Interrogations" National Archives of Canada, Record Group 24, Volume 5373 has some notes on his imprisonment. He listed his camps as follows:

Dulag Luft - 27 June 1942 to 2 July 1942
Stalag Luft III, Sagan - 4 July 1942 to 8 June 1943
Stalag Luft VI, Memel (East Prussia) - 10 June to 24 July 1943
Stalag Luft I, Barth - 27 July to 9 August 1943
Stalag VIIA, Moosburg - 12-28 August 1943
Stalag IVA, Muhlberg - 30 August 1943 to 20 May 1945.

His narrative was as follows:

The escape organization at Luft 3 headed by Sergeant Jock Alexander and Sergeant Gibson, RAF, asked me to change identifications with another man for whom they planned and prepared an escape; this man was being transferred to another camp and that would spoil the plan so I took his place but was captured at the gate while leaving the camp. The men involved was R. Pukar (Pole) RAF and George Grimson, RAF. This happened on June 3, 1943.

At Luft VI on June 11, 1943, a day after our arrival at the new camp I attempted an escape by tunnel, but it was the morning before we were supposed to make the break it was discovered. Some of the men who worked on the tunnel were Len Tompkin, RAAF, Charlie Honeychurch, RCAF and others whose names I cannot recall.

At Stalag IVA immediately after our arrival we started to organize an escape committee - Walt Currier RCAF, Jack Seller, RAAF and myself. I was chief of the organization from August 1943 to July 1944 at which time Sergeant Joe Seddon, Royal Artillery became chief and I was in charge of security and worked in the camp leader's office. Camp Leader Jack Meyers, RCAF [NOTE: see entry for Jacques W. Meyers, awarded MBE].

While chief of the organization we helped a number of escapes; the following were the most outstanding ones.

Walt Currier and Pickens escaped in November 1943 with the cooperation of the French POWs; they were out for one month.

Stalag IVB was a camp with mixed nationals so we cooperated with them on all escapes.

Alfred Kuhn, Army private, Sergeant [J.L.N.] Warren RCAF [NOTE: see his BEM entry] and another RAF Sergeant whose name I cannot recall were out for three months and got to Holland after getting out of the camp with a party that was going out to work on the German office buildings.

Alfred Kuhn had about five attempts at escaping and he also helped the organization a great deal in getting help from the other nationals because he spoke several languages.

Also the hiding of Fred Ward in the camp until we were liberated. Details of his case may be found in Jack Meyers' camp report.

The changing of RAF men with Army personnel were the largest activity; this gave the RAF a chance to go out working which always proved good for escape. This also gave the Germans the most trouble.

In June 1945 after I returned to England I wrote out a detailed report and turned it over to M.I. 9; an RAF officer was in charge of Intelligence at Hotel Victoria and he took the report.

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 had his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire describing his being shot down, 26/27 June 1942, target Bremen, Whitley "P" of No.19 OTU. It was his first operation. Narrative as follows:

Took off from Abingdon and set course on the first leg, got over the coast all well, few searchlights on track. As we were approaching the target the clouds were increasing. Cloud cover opened at the target and we bombed. Arriving at target towards the end of the time allowed for our flight. After leaving target after a period of 15 minutes we ran into heavy flak which shook the aircraft. After five minutes when we got out of the flak we were attacked by a fighter from dead astern. I put the aircraft in a dive but the fighter got the first burst of fire in. I turned to port and starboard while losing height. In the attack I saw tracer pour by and noticed the engine on fire. The rear gunner got a burst in the fighter at the first attack. The fighter made a second attack but did not close in. I got into the cloud now and levelled out. The oil pressure on the port engine was increasing and the engine's heat temperature was increasing, the fire burning even when I throttled back, so I turned on the port engine fire extinguisher. It did not help the fire. We were losing height and the port wing was difficult to keep up. I gave the order to stand by for baling out soon after we broke cloud and saw the coast later. I gave the order to stand by for ditching, still losing height but managed to make the sea and ditched. All in order. The moon was full that night with 9/10 cloud.

Notes: Sea calm. Landed in three feet water. Aircraft was partly submerged. All crew took up ditching position. Dinghy OK. All got in dinghy and paddled it ashore and captured.

MALCOLMSON, Corporal Wilhelmina Muriel (W300072) - British Empire Medal - RCAF Detachment, Dayton, Ohio - Award effective 28 May 1943 as per London Gazette dated 28 May 1943 and AFRO 1459/43 dated 30 July 1943. Born in Carman, Manitoba.. Enlisted 28 November 1941 as Equipment Assistant. To CWFAC Depot, 26 December 1941. To No.6 SFTS, 24 January 1942. Promoted LAW, 1 July 1942. To Washington for attachment to Dayton, 19 October 1942. Promoted Corporal, 1 March 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 January 1944. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 April 1945. Retired 9 December 1946.

The unflagging zeal and devotion to duty of this NCO have at all times been highly commendable. He has displayed a thorough knowledge of her work and has performed her duties in an exceptionally meritorious manner. Her cheerful disposition and exemplary conduct have been an excellent example to all members of this Detachment. During the formative period of this unit, Corporal Malcolmson worked continuously for long periods of time. Her tact and liaison when dealing with U.S. personnel have produced excellent results.

RCAF Press Release 2862 dated 3 May 1944 reads as follows:

Dayton (RCAF News Service) - From teacher in a small prairies school to equipment clerk in the RCAF detachment at Dayton, Ohio, has been an exciting change for Sergeant Wilhelmina "Mac" Malcolmson, BEM.

Daughter of Mr. And Mrs. Albert Malcolmson of Carman, Manitoba, she was the first airwoman awarded the British Empire Medal. It was for "devotion to her work", her officers say.

One of the first "WDs" from Canada to be posted to the United States, in October 1942, she assisted with the establishment of the detachment where aircraft and flying equipment for Canada are tested and secured.

At Branson College, Sergeant Malcolmson majored in French, Latin and English. Graduating with her BA, she went to Normal School in Winnipeg and taught school in Manitoba rural districts for several years. Later, she worked with the Manitoba Department of Education.

Sergeant Malcolmson was a member of the fourth class of women selected for RCAF training and graduated as Equipment Clerk. Her first posting took her to No.6 Service Flying Training Station [sic], Dunnville, Ontario, where she was in charge of purchasing station supplies.

She has two brothers in the RCAF, of whom she is very proud. Flying Officer Herbert Malcolmson has been overseas since October 1942, and LAC Donald Malcolmson is at Macdonald, Manitoba.

Medal sent to next-of-kin from Government House, 7 November 1949 (does not appear to be a wartime casualty). No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 Vol.2610 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 20 November 1944 when he had flown 33 sorties (214 hours 25 minutes), 30 August 1943 to 11 September 1944.

Pilot Officer Malec has completed a large number of successful operational sorties over enemy territory as a rear gunner. These have included many raids on heavily defended targets in Germany and many on precision targets in enemy-occupied territory. At all times this officer has displayed a high standard of courage and determination in keeping a close watch for enemy aircraft. His careful vigilance has been responsible for the safe return of the members of his crew from many sorties.

As an air gunner of exceptional skill, his work both in the air and on the ground has been of the highest order. His keen crew co-operation and fine spirit have been an example and inspiration to all gunners in the section and to all members of aircrew on the squadron.

The sortie list was as follows:

One night in September 1942, Pilot Officer Malkin, as Captain of a Halifax aircraft, was detailed to attack a target at Frankfurt. When eighty miles away from the target area his aircraft was attacked by an enemy fighter and much damage was sustained. Pilot Officer Malkin, although wounded in the leg by splinters from an explosive cannon shell, took evasive action and enabled his air gunners to return fire, which caused the enemy aircraft to break away. Pilot Officer Malkin set his course for home and, although suffering much pain, brought his aircraft back to base safely where he made a masterly landing.

MALKIN, F/L Harry, DFC (J15521) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.35 Squadron - Award effective 23 March 1943 as per London Gazette dated 6 April 1943 and AFRO 757/43 dated 30 April 1943.

One night in March 1943, this officer captained an aircraft detailed to attack Berlin. Whilst over the city the bomber was held in searchlights and subjected to heavy anti-aircraft fire. The rudder controls were severed and one of the port engines was damaged, causing it to fail. Despite this, Flight Lieutenant Malkin skilfully controlled the damaged aircraft and executed a successful attack. Soon after leaving the target area, efforts to restart the damaged engine proved successful but further trouble was encountered. The bomber was again damaged by anti-aircraft fire which rendered the port outer engine unserviceable. The mid-upper gunner was wounded while all lights in the cockpit failed. With extreme difficulty, height was maintained and, displaying superb airmanship, Flight Lieutenant Malkin flew the damaged bomber to an airfield in this country. This officer displayed great skill, determination and endurance in most difficult circumstances.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/4951 has recommendation drafted 7 March 1943 when he had flown 41 sorties (228 operational hours) of which 14 sorties (73 hours) had been flown since his previous award.

One of the force which successfully attacked Berlin on the night of 1 March 1943, Flight Lieutenant Malkin arrived in the target area some few minutes before the time he was detailed to attack, and whilst waiting for his zero hour his aircraft was picked up by searchlights and subjected to heavy anti-aircraft fire which severed the rudder controls and damaged the port inner engine which had to be stopped and the propellor feathered.

Displaying excellent pilotage in controlling his damaged aircraft by means of the rudder trimming tabs, Flight Lieutenant Malkin turned on to the heading for attack and successfully bombed the target.

Having cleared the target and set course for base, attempts to restart the engine proved successful, but further trouble was encountered when searchlights again found his aircraft and he was engaged by heavy and accurate flak for an extended period rendering the port engine unserviceable. Feathering the propellor of this engine, at about the same time the port inner revolution counter failed with the engine surging. The propellor of this engine was adjusted to fully coarse pitch in which condition it functioned better. All the cockpit lights had failed, the pilot's DR repeater and Gee were also unserviceable and the starboard outer engine revolution counter. This engine was also surging and as in the case of the port inner the propellor was adjusted to fully coarse pitch. The mid-upper gunner reported that he had been wounded.

With extreme difficulty and considerable physical exertion height was maintained at 11,000 feet and course set for Bircham Newton having transmitted an SOS. Diverted to Swanton Morley, the aerodrome was located and a successful landing carried out without further incident.

The determination and endurance displayed by Flight Lieutenant Malkin in flying his aircraft back successfully throughout this long return flight under such extreme difficulties are deserving of the highest award, and in recognition he is recommended for the immediate award of the Bar to the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MALKIN, W/C Harry, DFC (J15521) - Air Force Cross - No.5 OTU - Award effective 21 April 1945

as per London Gazette dated 24 April 1945 and AFRO 802/45 dated 11 May 1945. No citation to AFC in AFRO. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Vol.58, file 190-I, dossier 6) has citation. When recommended he had flown 1,025 hours, of which 295 were as instructor (54 hours in past six months).

This officer, as chief instructor, has organized in record time the Training Wing of No.5 Operational Training Unit from nothing to its present tremendous size. His enthusiasm, personal example and outstanding powers of leadership have been largely responsible for the success of this unit in training bomber crews, often under the most adverse weather conditions. This officer,, by his outstanding ability, tact and energy, has contributed very greatly to the success of operational training.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 50/185 has the following Combat Reports that bear on his operations:

8/9 September 1942: Target Frankfurt, Halifax G/35. Bomb load was described as "6 x 3 flares" plus nine 250-lb bombs. Captain, P/O Malkin, Observer Warrant Officer Sorsdahl (RCAF, later awarded DFC), WOP as Flight Sergeant Jolly (Hector Arthur William Jolly, RAF, DFM on 1 January 1943), Air Gunner Sergeant Fryer (John Meredith Fryer, awarded DFM 9 July 1943), Rear Gunner as Sergeant Stanton (John Thomas Stanton, awarded DFM on 12 January 1943) and Sergeant Stocker as Flight Engineer.

Ten miles north of Arlon, 2246 hours, 15,500 feet on bearing 113 degrees Magnetic, before bombing. Weather clear and dark. Rear Gunner reported that enemy aircraft had switched on and off green forward and white rear lights at about 1,000 yards astern. These lights were switched on and off again as enemy aircraft closed to 800 yards, when lights were once more switched on an enemy aircraft opened fire hitting our aircraft in fuselage between 2nd pilot and navigator's positions with cannon, damaging the starboard inner engine propellor and slightly wounding the Captain in the leg.

Our aircraft turned and dived to starboard and as enemy aircraft, which was identified as ME.110, passed about 250 yards over, Mid-Upper and Rear Gunners opened fire and 2 and 3 second bursts which appeared to hit the enemy aircraft. It went down in an almost vertical dive to port and disappeared. No IFF, no flak, no searchlights.

14/15 January 1943: Target Lorient, Halifax H/35. Bomb load was described as "7 x 4 flares" plus 720 four-pound incendiaries. Take off at 2303 hours, landed at 0403 hours. Captain, P/O

Malkin, Sergeant Bedward, Air Bomber Warrant Officer Sorsdahl (RCAF) WOP as Flight Sergeant Jolly, Mid-Upper Gunner Flight Sergeant Fryer Emerson, Rear Gunner was Sergeant Fryer and Sergeant Stocker as Flight Engineer.

14/15 January 1943. Halifax Mk. II, W1141, H/35 Squadron, Lorient, had encounter five miles N.W. of Lorient with FW.190 at 0130 hours, 7,000 feet, speed unknown, A.S.O. frozen. Course 325 Degrees Magnetic. Weather was medium cumulus, visibility good, half moon on port beam, no searchlights or other ground co-operation. There were no lights on the enemy aircraft which did not open fire during the encounter.

First Attack: Rear Gunner reported FW.190 approaching from S/B Beam at same height, 4-5,000 yards distant. Our aircraft evaded by corkscrewing with a 45 Degree turn, 600 feet dive, and climbing return back to course into attack. Enemy aircraft broke away approximately 300 yards.

Second Attack: Enemy aircraft approached again from S/B Beam, slightly below and our aircraft evaded by corkscrewing as in first attack. Mid-Upper Gunner got in 2/3 second burst. No results observed.

Third Attack: Enemy aircraft then approached from S/B Quarter slightly below; our aircraft corkscrewed as before; Mid-Upper Gunner sprayed him with a 5-second burst. The Flight Engineer, who was watching the enemy aircraft for evidence of his guns opening fire, noticed the Mid-Upper Gunner's bullets striking the belly of the enemy aircraft, in a shower of sparks. NO CLAIM.

The Rear Gunner, Sergeant Fryer, who was unable to get in any bursts himself, gave excellent fire control over the intercom to the Mid-Upper Gunner throughout the attacks. He was trainee at the B and G S, Marston. The Mid-Upper Gunner, Flight Sergeant Emerson, was trained at No.7 A.G.S., Stormy Down, Wales.

Press Release No. 1585 dated 5 May 1943 (London, R.C.A.F. News service) - article by F/O W.J. Crampton, Public Relations Officer.

"Rudders! I don't use 'em. Courses! "I don't fly 'em," said Hank Malkin, 28-year-old Canadian bomber pilot, when he returned to his base after "landing away" following a recent operation against the enemy.

It was his way of trying to laugh off a story he would inevitably have to recount – a story the other chaps of his squadron were waiting to hear – a story the official account of which led to the immediate award to the gallant skipper of a Bar to his Distinguished Flying Cross.

You might not notice Hank Malkin in a crowd, nor even his lanky navigator, Carl Sorsdahl, who also wears the blue and white ribbon of the D.F.C., a result of some 46 operations he has carried out with outstanding success, nearly all of them with Malkin.

In civvy street Hank is a clerk and accountant with the C.N.R. – in the office of the general superintendent in Montreal. His home is at 422 Argyle Avenue, Verdun.

Carl was a schoolteacher at Weyburn, Saskatchewan. His home is at Midale, and he is the same age as his skipper.

On their way to Frankfurt in their four-engined bomber last September, Sorsdahl was sent sprawling on the floor when a cannon-shell shattered the chair he was sitting on.

He felt a bump on his hip and found that a machine-gun bullet had torn through his trousers.

He left his table, climbed up the steps to the cockpit and stood by his skipper.

Malkin, with an inch-long piece of cannon-shell in his leg, was weaving the Halifax in violent evasive action. His leg was numb.

The Me.110 which attacked them 70 miles from their target put their starboard inner engine out of commission, blew a tire off their starboard undercarriage, and sent a fusillade of shells crash-in into the fuselage.

One landed only two feet from the wireless operator and destroyed his parachute.

“I remembered being the third on a match when we had our last cigarette before take-off,” Malkin relates. “Never again”.

The two gunners opened fire on the German fighter, and from his look-out in the astro-dome, the flight engineer saw their tracers strike his fuselage and wings, but he still sent a stream of shells and machine-gun bullets towards the bomber.

When he broke off he did not return to the attack. It was just as well. The starboard inner engine of the bomber had dropped forward and was hanging down from its mounting at a sharp angle.

It had caused the aircraft to start to vibrate.

You can't carry bombs in an aircraft that is shaking as if the grip of an earthquake – especially when you have only three engines and are short of parachutes.

Reluctantly, Malkin jettisoned his bombs and turned for home. By this time, the numbness had left his leg and it had begun to ache. In spite of the pain and the great difficulty he had in keeping his control over the bomber, he made base and landed safely. This gallant effort won for him the D.F.C.

The crew begin to laugh breathlessly as they talk about their Berlin trip of the night of March 1st. They find it hard to describe.

It was dark over the target as they headed in from the north. Then, as Malkin relates it: "Two or three searchlights came up behind us".

"We were weaving, of course, but everywhere we turned, beams popped up in our path, first to starboard, and they flicked on straight ahead of us. Then to port, and others came up on our nose. As soon as the first beams found us, others joined them. In a matter of seconds we were in a cone and didn't get out of it for eight minutes."

During these eight minutes that seemed to the crew like hours, the German gunners were sending burst after burst into the cone. The port inner engine was hit, and had to be feathered. Worse still, the rudder control bar, which traverses the length of the aircraft, was shattered.

"We couldn't make a bombing run. We just had to let them go, knowing that we were over the target and that they would do some good," said Sorsdahl, the navigator, who, in the brilliantly-lighted compartment (lighted by the searchlights) was desperately trying to keep check of the rapid changes of course.

Losing height rapidly the bomber gradually emerged from the danger zone, and after half-an-hour the skipper found that he was able to restart the feathered engine.

That night most of the bombers returning from Berlin encountered intense searchlight and "flak". Sorsdahl navigated safely around the danger spots, but farther along, the already crippled bomber ran into a pack of trouble beside which their experience over Berlin seemed like nothing at all.

Beams came up and suddenly a cone was dropped right on them. It was 20 minutes before they got away. As searchlight beams held them in the terrifying cones and snakelike streams of flak were hosepiped towards them from below, Malkin corkscrewed violently. Nevertheless, the "flak" reached them. "We ain't kidding, either," they grin as they tell about it. Three of the four propellers were hit, the two port wing petrol tanks were punctured and the oil tank of the port inner engine was holed. The crew could only talk to each other intermittently through a spasmodically functioning intercom system. The hydraulics were damaged and the port outer engine was knocked out of commission.

In his turret, the mid-upper gunner, Flight Sergeant Joe Fryer, an Englishman, sat with a wounded shoulder and another wound in his leg. Refusing first-aid until they should get out of the trouble they were in, he remained at his post.

In a maelstrom of noise as "flak" burst nearby and crashed into the aircraft, Malkin, dripping with perspiration, threw the bomber this way and that in almost desperate efforts to free it from the leech-like beams. The loss of rudder control made it doubly hard to handle the huge 25-ton aircraft.

"When we finally flew out the barrage, it was like walking into a quiet room," he said afterwards.

The bomber was way off track when it finally emerged from the danger, and but for the hard work at his wireless set put in by the operator, an Englishman, veteran of 60 operations, the bomber would not perhaps have had enough fuel left to reach England. His loops and fixes, obtained at high speed, quickly put the bomber back on track and Sorsdahl held her there all the way back.

Another hazard awaited them when they reached an English airfield. Visibility was bad and the lowering cloud base had already reached 700 feet.

Without rudder control to aid him, and with only three engines, Malkin at first failed to make his approach, unable to control the aircraft's swing. "I guess I was tired," he apologized afterwards.

As a matter of fact, the condition of the aircraft was such that he had seriously thought of ordering the crew to bale out, so doubtful was he of making a successful landing. He made it the second time, and the gunner was rushed to hospital.

Three weeks later, the bomber was flown to a maintenance unit. It had taken all that time to get it into shape to fly again.

One of the difficulties under which the pilot was working on the way back on this operation was the lack of all lights on his instrument panel. All were put out when the electrical system was damaged.

He couldn't even be sure that the undercarriage would not fold up as he touched down, as though he knew it was lowered, no light came on his panel to tell him that it was locked in position.

It was this operation, marked by a safe return under the most extraordinarily difficult circumstances, which brought the intrepid Montreal captain the Bar to his D.F.C.

Malkin has been to every major target in Germany and Italy, with the exception of one.

Stuttgart is the only name that does not appear in his log-book, which is filled with the names of targets that have become household words in the history of the bombing offensive.

His first operation made him wonder a bit about this bombing business. When he brought his two-engined Whitley back from Stettin he had been airborne exactly 11 hours, and had to be towed from the flare-path, every drop of petrol having been used up in the long flip. "I thought if we've got to do more of these, I've had it," he relates.

In January, 1943, Malkin and Sorsdahl were attacked three times by an FW.190 after they had dropped their bombs on L'Orient.

Flight Sergeant Emerson, of Moose Jaw, Sask., in the Halifax's mid-upper turret, used up all his ammunition, and between them the gunners drove off the deadly nightfighter. The bomber's casualties, however, included the port outer engine.

Malkin got the aircraft back over his base on three engines well enough, then at 700 feet the inboard engine on the port wing conked out.

It takes remarkable skill to land a four-engined bomber safely with power on only one wing. The port wing suddenly dropped, when the inner engine went, "to not a very comfortable angle," according to the pilot's own description.

Throttling back the two engines on the starboard wing, he managed to straighten out the rapidly dropping and lopsided aircraft in time to glide her safely in to an almost perfect landing. They are not designed for gliding, these four-engined bombers, either.

Malkin, Sorsdahl and the rear-gunner, Flight Sergeant John Stanton, D.F.M., have just completed their second tour of operations. The wireless operator, W.O.1 Herb Jolly, D.F.M., is well on in third tour. Amongst them, the crew had accumulated more than 270 operations.

Until the Frankfurt trip of September, 1942, Hank Malkin had only one superstition.

It was shared by the rest of the crew and was instigated by the ground crew.

Two aircraft letters only were used by Malkin on his tour. His first 20 operations were done on "E for Edward," the remainder on "G for George."

When he got "G for George", he found the ground crew had painted a fantastic Gremlin on the fuselage.

It had become a ritual with the crew they had formerly teamed with to bow to the Gremlin painted on the side of their kite, which they knew as "G for Gremlin" instead of the official "G for George".

Every new member of the crew had to incline to the Gremlin before entering the aircraft.

One night, a new member, going into the aircraft, forgot to make his obeisance, and nobody remembered to tell him about it. The crew did not come back.

Meaningless? But small and meaningless things matter a lot in retrospect among men who are here tonight and may not be back tomorrow.

MALLORY, S/L Gordon Ewart (C23982) - Member, Order of the British Empire - Station Trenton - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946. Born 2 October 1886. Enrolled in Toronto, 8 April 1942 as Foreman of Works with rank of WO2 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To “E”, 23 May 1942. Commissioned 12 March 1943 with rank of Flying Officer. To No.5 Manning Depot, 13 March 1943. To Officer School, 18 March 1943. To RCAF Headquarters, 30 September 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 December 1943. To St. Hubert, 13 April 1944. To Trenton, 17 October 1945. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 December 1945. Retired 30 September 1946 to Brighton, Ontario. Died 3 March 1966.

This officer is in charge of Works and Buildings and has shown at all times untiring devotion to duty away beyond his regular Air Force work. He is an outstanding officer, his conduct has been exemplary at all times and under very trying conditions. He provides inspiring leadership to all and has shown remarkable speed and efficiency in mastering maintenance problems. His initiative, forethought, energy and industry have been incomparable. Through his efforts the efficiency of any unit is greatly enhanced.

MALLOY, S/L Dennis Graland (C1072) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.402 Squadron - Award effective 18 January 1943 as per London Gazette dated 29 January 1943 and AFRO 272/43 dated 19 February 1943. Born in Halifax, 26 December 1917; attended Halifax Academy; enlisted there 9 September 1939 as Provisional Pilot Officer (confirmed). Trained at Halifax Aero Club, 11 September to 8 November 1939; at Station Trenton, 9 November to 10 December 1939. Promoted Flying Officer, 20 April 1940. Awarded wings on 17 May 1940. To Camp Borden, 18 May 1940. To No.2 SFTS, 22 July 1940. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 March 1941. To “Y” Depot, 4 February 1942. Embarked from Canada, 9 February 1942. Arrived in United Kingdom, 20 February 1942. To No.58 OTU, Grangemouth, 3 March 1942. To No.402 Squadron, 5 May 1942; became CO, 26 September 1942 (promoted Squadron Leader that date), holding that appointment to April 1943. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 15 May 1943. Repatriated to Canada, 19 August 1943. To Rockcliffe, 29 August 1943. To AFHQ, 2 October 1943. To No.2 SFTS,

3 January 1944. To AFHQ, 1 March 1944. To No.14 SFTS, 6 August 1944. To War Staff College, Toronto, 9 September 1944. To No.1 Training Command, 18 November 1944. To No.9 SFTS, Centralia, 24 November 1944. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 December 1944. To Central Flying School, Trenton, 2 March 1945. To No.1 SFTS, Camp Borden, 11 June 1945. To No.1 ACAU (whatever that is), 7 May 1946. To Station Lachine, 18 June 1946. Reverted to Squadron Leader, 1 October 1946 in postwar RCAF (19837). To St. Hubert, 2 October 1946; took command of the Regular Support Unit for No.401 (Auxiliary) Squadron. Commanded Offensive Support Wing, Exercise SWEET BRIAR. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 January 1949. Attached to Air Defence Group Headquarters before taking command of Station Uplands (December 1950). As Station CO he supervised formation of Sabre squadrons; in April 1953 posted overseas to command No.3 Wing, Zweibrucken of No.1 Air Division, followed by No.4 Wing, Baden-Soellingen. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 23 October 1953 as a Wing Commander in No.1 Air Division. Returned to Canada in 1954. To Air Defence Command Headquarters, 13 May 1954; to Station Trenton, 12 August 1956; to No.3 AFS, Gimli, 4 November 1956; to No.25 NORAD Region (Seattle), 14 May 1960. Promoted to Group Captain, 3 February 1961 on becoming Assistant for Deputy Operations at 25 NORAD Region Headquarters. Appointed Commanding Officer, Station Goose Bay, July 1964. To Canadian Defence Liaison Staff, Washington, August 1966. Retired 29 April 1969. Died in Ottawa, 24 June 1993. Aerial victories as follows: 15 July 1942, one FW.190 destroyed (shared with five other pilots); 27 August 1942, one FW.190 damaged; 6 September 1942, one FW.190 probably destroyed; 17 January 1943, one FW..190 destroyed; 26 February 1943, one FW.190 damaged (shared with another pilot).

Squadron Leader Malloy has participated in sixty sorties. He is an outstanding leader whose skill and devotion to duty have set an example worthy of high praise.

MALLOY, W/C Dennis Graland, DFC (C1072) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - No.9 SFTS - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945.

Notes: Assessed 21 September 1942 - "An excellent pilot, a strict disciplinarian and an influential leader." (S/L N.H. Bretz).

On 18 May 1944 he stated he had flown 92 sorties (195 operational hours).

MALONEY, F/O Gustave Henry Edwin (J8779) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.683 Squadron - Award effective 16 April 1943 as per London Gazette dated 27 April 1943 and AFRO 985/43 dated 28 May 1943. Born in St.Alberta, Alberta, 15 July 1918; home in Calgary; enlisted there 17 February 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.20 EFTS (guard duty), 23 March 1941. To No.3 ITS, 27 May 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 30 June 1941. Posted that date to No.16 EFTS; graduated 19 August 1941 and posted that date to No.3 SFTS; graduated and commissioned on 7 November 1941. To No.31 School of General Reconnaissance, 21 November 1941. Posting cancelled and sent instead to "Y" Depot, 22 November 1941; to RAF overseas, 3 December 1941. To No.1 PRU, Benson on 14 May 1942; to No.2 RRU, Middle East, 11 August 1942; promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942; to No.62 Squadron, Malta, 27 December 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 11 April 1943. Repatriated to Canada, 11 October 1944; to Northwest Air Command, 31 December 1944. To Moncton, 4 February 1945. To Release Centre, 25 July 1945. Retired 26 July 1945. Medal sent by registered mail, 2 February 1949.

This officer has completed eighty-four flights including a number of sorties over Germany, northern France, and Holland. In the Middle East he has rendered valuable service. Photographs which he obtained over the El Alamein battle zone were an important contribution to the pictorial record on which the advance was planned. On a recent occasion he dived under the balloon defences in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire to obtain photographs of Italian naval units. This officer is an outstanding pilot whose courage and devotion to duty have been of a high order.

Flying Officer Maloney is the Canadian captain and pilot of a Lancaster crew and has now completed two-thirds of his first operational tour having carried out 22 sorties comprising 132 hours operational flying.

This officer has carried out attacks on many enemy targets including Duisburg, Essen, Cologne, Gelsenkirchen and Dortmund, and has never failed to press home his attack in spite of heavy enemy opposition on many occasions.

Throughout his tour, Flying Officer Maloney has proved himself to be a trustworthy and gallant officer. Photographs taken at the time of bombing show that he has secured excellent results on many occasions.

He has always shown a complete disregard for fierce enemy opposition at all times and I strongly recommend him for an award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The website "Lost Bombers" gives the following on his final sortie. Lancaster NG267, No.625 Squadron (CF-Y), target Dortmund, 20/21 February 1945. This aircraft was delivered to No.625 Squadron on 27 October 1944. No operational history. Airborne at 2122 hours, 20 February 1945 from Kelstern. Crashed at 0130 hours, 21 February 1945 at Hagen after exploding in the air. Crew (all killed) were F/O W.P.Maloney, DFC, RCAF; P/O W.G.Pearce; F/O G.H.P Shephard, RCAF; F/O H.R.Dart, RCAF; WO2 J.A.Dickson, RCAF; Flight Sergeant B.S.Thompson, RCAF; Sergeant O.Harding, RCAF.

MALOUF, F/L Stanley Edward (C4994) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.6410 Servicing Echelon - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1219/45 dated 27 July 1945. Born in Saskatoon, 8 November 1914 (RCAF press release announcing award); attended University of Saskatchewan (B.Sc.1934) and McGill (M.Sc., 1936 and Ph.D., 1941) Geologist for eight years. Home in Quebec City; enlisted in Montreal, 9 May 1941 in Aero Engineer Trade. Granted rank of Flying Officer, 25 October 1941. To No.4 Repair Depot, 1 November 1941. To "Y" Depot, 10 April 1942. Despatched overseas, 24 April 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 9 May 1943. Repatriated 14 April 1945. To Lachine, 27 April 1945. To Release Centre, 4 September 1945. Retired 6 September 1945. Postwar, his main geological interests were concentrated in the Chibougamau area in Quebec scoring majority on the westerly plunge of the Campbell Chibougamau Main Mine occurrence in 1950, the start of re-activity in Chibougamau. In 1951, Dr. Malouf moved his family from Noranda to Chibougamau to become the Chief Geologist for Campbell Chibougamau Mines, operating at better than 3,000 tons per day. He was also the Manager and Vice President of Chibougamau Mining and Smelting Company Ltd. He was credited with four original finds, three of which were buried deposits, located by applied geology and geophysics and the development of a host of commercial ore deposits. In addition to these, he completed a Bauxite review for Campbell Chibougamau in the Dominican Republic and reviewed the Pueblo Viejo gold deposit developed by the dictator Trujillo. Campbell Chibougamau joint ventured with Rosario Resources in obtaining the Pueblo Viejo deposit. The deposit was obtained and drilled with Rosario in charge. Died in Toronto, 8 February 2008. Presented 24 April 1948. No citation in Canadian sources. Public Records Office Air 2/9056 has recommended citation.

Flight Lieutenant Malouf has rendered valuable service as an engineering officer since his arrival in the United Kingdom in May 1942. Ground crew and engineers alike in this Canadian unit were ignorant of RAF servicing procedure and maintenance on high speed aircraft, but as a result of the training methods instituted by this officer, the unit subsequently proved to be one of the most successful servicing wings in France. During his service this officer has been responsible for several valuable technical instructions which have been accepted by the Group. Flight Lieutenant Malouf has at all times proved himself to be an outstanding technician and a fine leader of men. Over and above his normal duties he has spared no pains to advance the welfare of the personnel of his unit and it is due in no small measure to his devotion to duty and consistent interest in his men that the morale of the Echelon has at all times been high.

NOTE: Records of No.410 Squadron have a much longer recommendation drafted by an unidentified officer:

This officer commenced his service career by serving through the ranks as a 2nd Lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Engineer Pioneer battalion in the Noranda Militia, leaving after six months to enlist as a Pilot Officer Technical Branch in the RCAF on the 8th May 1941. On posting to No.4 Repair Depot, Scoudouc, he worked on Hudsons, Bolingbrokes, Harvards, Anson and Fairey Battle aircraft, being promoted to Flying Officer on 25 October 1941. Volunteering for overseas service, he arrived in the United Kingdom on 8 May 1942, being posted to No.416 (RCAF) Squadron (Spitfires). While stationed at Martlesham he was paraded before the Commanding Officer at the request of the Group Engineer, Wing Commander Finlay, and complimented on having the best kept aircraft in No.11 Group. On the 15 April 1943, he was posted to No.406 (RCAF) Squadron (Beaufighters) and achieved a 90 percent serviceability during his last three months with this squadron. Posting to 83 Group as Chief Technical Officer, 143 Wing followed on the 19th January 1944, this Wing comprising three Canadian Hurricane squadrons which were converting to Typhoons at Ayr, Scotland during the winter months. This Wing did better than half of the flying in 13 Group during February 1944. Ground crew and Engineers alike were completely ignorant initially of the RAF servicing procedure and maintenance of high speed aircraft but the Wing as a result of the training methods instituted by this officer subsequently proved to be one of the most successful servicing wings in France. On the 23 April 1944, Flight Lieutenant Malouf was posted to 83 General Support Unit (Spitfires, Mustangs and Typhoons) and against the wishes of the Royal Air Force was posted by RCAF Headquarters to 410 (RCAF) Squadron (Mosquito 13s) on the 15 May 1944. As Engineer Officer of 410 Squadron several squadron moves have been successfully accomplished with a minimum disruption to serviceability. The squadron converted from Mosquito 13s to 30s in a month, remaining operational throughout the conversion period. Two squadron moves have subsequently been completed in France, again with the minimum disruption to serviceability. During his services this officer has been responsible for several valuable technical instructions which have been accepted by Group and which are summarized on the attached Appendix "A". The average serviceability maintained by this officer since joining the squadron has been 78 percent with an average of 850 flying hours per month.

To this, W/C G.A. Hiltz added under "Squadron Commander's remarks":

This officer's record speaks for itself. He has always proven himself to be an outstanding technical man as well as a leader of men, over and above his normal duties. He has spared no pains to advance the welfare of the 6410 Servicing Echelon personnel, and it is due in no small measure to this officer's devotion to duty and consistent interest in his men that the morale of the Echelon is probably at present at an all time high. I feel that the work so efficiently and self-sacrificingly accomplished by this officer strongly merits recognition and I have no hesitation in recommending him for the above award [MBE].

The Appendix mentioned lists a long series of accomplishments, including:

Minimizing vibration troubles by restricting the R.P.M. on 30s to above 2,350 revs.

Emphasizing vibrations caused by the lead working loose in the elevator balance weight.

Proposing modification action to prevent petrol from fuel pump priming system from entering the rear and front supercharger bearings via the drain box assembly on the port side of the engine.

Pointing out danger from the impact tubes clogging up with dry fine snow on run ups and taxiing.

Prompted further attention to overspeeding on take-off, thereby hastening the introduction KI, a constant speed unit strong enough to control the paddle-bladed prop.

Prompted group instruction to feather port engine on belly landing a Mosquito 30 thereby avoiding the reduction gear tearing off to starboard and endangering the pilot. The paddle bladed props are relatively inflexible.

Emphasizing the icing of Stromber carburettors.

Emphasizing the importance of improving the volute casing drain Modification 888, the cause of flame traps clogging up at approximately 200 hours.

Initiated the first power plant changes with Mosquito 30s in France.

Completed service trials for 85 Group on a Swansdowne Bag for a sand filter, a new and successful boost capsule and a successful vibration damper for side cowlings.

RCAF Press Release No. 746 dated September 10, 1942 from "Wright" reads as follows:

When the boys around the aerodromes use the letters "US" in conversation, they don't mean United States. In fact, nobody likes to hear it used, for, in Royal Canadian Air Force language it means "unserviceable", and is usually applied to aircraft.

Obviously, an airplane which is unserviceable, by reason of an engine or structural defect, isn't much use in fighting the war. It is the job of some 175 men at each squadron to see that the squadron's aircraft are unserviceable for as short a period as possible. The man ultimately responsible for seeing this is carried out is the squadron's engineer officer, universally known around the station as "Engines". F/O Stanley Malouf, "Engines", at a Royal Canadian Air Force Spitfire squadron, is typical of his fellow engineers overseas. If the squadron hasn't enough serviceable aircraft to carry out an operational task to which it has been assigned, F/O Malouf's commanding officer wants a reason, not an excuse. And on the rare occasions, there aren't enough aircraft in this or any other Canadian squadron, F/O Malouf and his fellow engineers have a pretty good reason.

Born in Saskatoon and a graduate of the University of Saskatchewan in engineering, F/O Malouf took a post-graduate course at McGill University, Montreal, before taking up prospecting in the Noranda Country. He was geologist with Francoeur Gold Mines when he joined up, after which he was given a several months course in the fundamental principal of aircraft engineering at Montreal. It was a stiff course which all R.C.A.F. engineer officers have to go through, a course which took two years to complete before the war.

Afterwards, engineer officers are usually given some experience in Canada before being posted overseas. In F/O Malouf's case, he was detailed to open a repair depot at Scoudouc, N.B. On proceeding overseas the "Engines" are posted to a squadron under a Royal Air Force engineer officer, until they have gained enough experience to carry on themselves.

MANDERS, S/L (now W/C) David Frederick (C995) - Member, Order of the British Empire - Eastern Air Command Headquarters - Award effective 26 May 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1380/44 dated 30 June 1944. Born 10 May 1915 in Vancouver; educated there including Vancouver Technical School and University of British Columbia. Lathe hand operator, for two years plus two years at Britannia Mines as mucker, nipper, motorman and miner. Applied to enlist in Vancouver, March 1939. Granted Short Service Commission at Provisional Pilot Officer (Auxiliary), 5 June 1939 when posted to No.111 Detachment and attached to Aero Club of British Columbia for ab initio instruction. To Camp Borden, 28 August 1939 by rail, reporting 30 August 1939 for Intermediate Flying Training; qualified for pilot's flying badge, 30 October 1939. To Station Trenton, 31 October 1939. Promoted Flying Officer, 13 December 1939. To No.1 Wireless School in Montreal, 22 February 1940. To AFHQ, 9 May 1940. To No.112 (Army Cooperation) Squadron, 20 May 1940. Embarked from Montreal, 21 May 1940 with No.110 Squadron for overseas. Attended School of Army Cooperation, Old Sarum, 15 July to 10 August 1940. This involved flying in Lysander aircraft (12.50 day, 1.05 night), Hector aircraft (13.40, day) and the Link (two hours). Courses in "military subjects", Reconnaissance, Photography, Signals and Artillery Cooperation, practical work in Tactical Reconnaissance, Artillery Reconnaissance, Photography and Signals. "After a poor start he showed improvement and attained average results" (G/C C.J.S. Dearlove). To No.112 Squadron, 12 September 1940. Attained rank of Flight Lieutenant, 15 June 1941. Attended No.1 Radio School, 29 September to 24 October 1941 (maintenance course). Attended No.3 Radio School, Prestwick, 28 October to 29 November 1941 (operational course) and posted to No.400 Squadron. Repatriated via Rockcliffe, 10 January 1942. To Eastern Air Command, 26 January 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 November 1942. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 January 1945. Insignia presented 3 March 1945. To No.3 Release Centre, 3 September 1945. Released 6 September 1945. Subsequently in RCAF Auxiliary, 1 June 1950 to 31 December 1954, initially as Squadron Leader; promoted Wing Commander, 15 November 1950 while on staff of No.19 Wing Headquarters, Vancouver. Died in Penticton, British Columbia, 25 December 1979 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

This officer has been employed as Command Radar Officer for over two years. During this time he has been responsible for directing the organization, installation, operation and maintenance of the Command radar system. By skilful planning, enthusiasm and ceaseless effort, he has overcome exceptional difficulties and built up an efficient and smoothly running system which is truly a credit to his outstanding ability and perseverance.

The recommendation was raised 15 January 1944 by G/C W.A. Orr as follows:

Squadron Leader Manders has been employed as Command Radar Officer since January 1942, during which time he has been responsible for directing the organization, installation, operation and maintenance of the Command Radar system. By skilful planning, enthusiasm and ceaseless effort, he has overcome the exceptional difficulties surrounding the task, and built up a system which is efficient and smoothly running - truly a credit to his courage and tenacity.

Selected Assessments: "This officer has recently taken over the duties of signal officer for this squadron. Works very hard. Lacks experience but with seasoning should be able to run a section efficiently." (22 November 1940).

"Has been Signals Officer with this squadron since last November. During that time he has shown a great deal of enthusiasm with regards to technical aspects in the squadron. His organizing ability is not quite as good as it might be. It is suggested this officer's ability could be much improved by a further Signals Course which would go deeper into the administration of a Squadron Signals Section." (W/C R.M. McKay, Odiham, 11 June 1941).

"This officer has applied himself diligently to the work assigned to himself, that of completing and putting into operation the Radio Station in this Command. He has applied himself diligently and overcome all obstacles to date." (W/C W.A. Orr, Eastern Air Command Headquarters, 28 September 1942).

"Squadron Leader, has been posted to fill the position of Chief Signals Officer, a position for which he is well suited. Recommended for promotion to the rank of Wing Commander, Acting." (W/C W.A. Orr, Eastern Air Command Headquarters, 9 March 1944).

"A very sound technical and radar officer with a fine, pleasing personality. However, this officer is very spasmodic in attendance. He tends to work very hard for a few months and then is seldom seen for some time. However, his knowledge and ability are very valuable and essential to this Headquarters." (G/C G.W. Northcott, No.19 Wing Headquarters, 13 September 1954).

MANGAN, FS John Thomas (R69117) - Mention in Despatches - No.162 Squadron (Canada) - Awarded 1 January 1943 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 55/43 dated 15 January 1943. Born in Massey, Ontario, 21 September 1919. Home in North Bay, Ontario (machinist, Noranda Mines). Enlisted there 21 September 1940 and taken on strength of No.2 Manning Depot. To No.11 Equipment Depot, 23 September 1940. To No.1 WS, Montreal, 9 October 1940. To No.1 ITS, 19 November 1940; to No.1 Equipment Depot, 11 December 1940; to No.1 WS, 4 January 1941; promoted LAC, 3 February 1941. To No.1 BGS, 26 May 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 23 June 1941. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 7 July 1941. Uninjured, 3 October 1941 when Digby 748 settled into trees just after takeoff (F/L R.A. Butts, pilot; also in crew were J5072 P/O Redmond, Sergeant A.C. Colville, and LAC G.H. George). To No.162 (BR) Squadron, 18 May 1942. Commissioned 8 December 1942 (J23805) but then killed 6 January 1943 in crash of Canso 9737, No.5 (BR) Squadron.

This NCO has set a fine example by his devotion to duty and the excellent manner in which he has carried out his duties as a Wireless Air Gunner. He has assisted in an attack on an enemy U-boat and carried out 540 hours of operational flying during the past eight months.

In December 1942 his Commanding Officer (S/L S. Turner) wrote of him:

This NCO is an exceptionally good WAG with over 1,000 hours flying experience. His work with this squadron has always been of the highest standard and it is strongly recommended that he be granted a commission in the RCAF.

MANGIONE, Sergeant John (R195860) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.429 Squadron - Award effective 13 July 1944 as per London Gazette dated 21 July and AFRO 2160/44 dated 6 October 1944. Originally published as a DFC citation in AFRO 2052/44, cancelled by AFRO 2101/44 and then corrected. Born 21 July 1924 in Ottawa; home there; enlisted there 29 October 1942 (one of four brothers in RCAF). Granted Leave Without Pay until 12 November 1942 when posted to No.5 Manning Depot. To No.4 Manning Depot, 29 December 1942. To No.6 ITS, 27 February 1943. To No.5 ITS, 3 April 1943. Promoted LAC, 10 July 1943. To No.2 Air Gunner Ground Training School, 21 May 1943. To No.3 BGS, 10 July 1943. Graduated 20 August 1943 and promoted Sergeant. To "Y" Depot, 3 September 1943. To United Kingdom, 12 September 1943.

Commissioned 9 July 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 3 November 1944. To No.3 Training Command, 6 December 1944. To No.9 BGS, 7 December 1944. To "Y" Depot, 11 March 1945. To United Kingdom again, 18 March 1945. Repatriated 13 June 1945. Released 3 September 1945. Cited with Sergeant Gilbert E.J. Steere (RAF, awarded CGM) and Sergeant G.J.M. Ritchie (RCAF, awarded DFM). Pilot, S/L W.B. Anderson, DFC, died before being located. A clipping in an Ottawa paper of 14 July 1944 has more details. Aircraft was hit over Dieppe; Mangione recalled it was the third time they had been hit by flak. The first time had been nothing and on the second the pilot (Anderson) had been wounded above one eye; a second pilot flew it home. This time it was bad (shrapnel passing through chest from left to right) and they had no second pilot. Several crew had baled out. "When I went to jump, Gil (Steere) told me Andy could not get out and to come and help him. So I went up front and Andy passed out. The kite went into a dive. We pulled it out and got Andy to wake up a bit. He could talk a little and told us what to do." Steere recounted, "It took them [Mangione and Ritchie] almost an hour to get him back there [to rear of aircraft]. He weighed almost 200 pounds, and although semi-conscious, was unable to move himself. He was the gamest guy I ever met. While the gunners were dragging him back he kept patting their parachutes and telling them to bale out and leave him there." Mangione wrote "Gil did most of the work and we think he'll get a 'gong' for it." Photo PL-34100 shows him with F/O L.F. Berryman, DFC. Photo PL-32607 (ex UK-13711 dated 24 August 1944) taken during Royal visit to No.6 Group.

Sergeant Steere, Sergeant Mangione and Sergeant Ritchie were flight engineer, mid-upper and rear gunners respectively of an aircraft detailed for a sortie on night in June 1944. Over the enemy coast the aircraft was hit by anti-aircraft fire and the pilot was mortally wounded. He gave orders to the remainder of the crew to leave by parachute but Sergeant Steere, realizing that his comrade would be unable to follow, disregarded the order. He went to his wounded comrade and together they succeeded in regaining control of the aircraft. Sergeant Steere then discovered that Sergeants Mangione and Ritchie had also stayed in the aircraft and were ready to assist Sergeant Steere who had taken over the controls in an effort to fly the aircraft home. Although he had no previous experience he flew to an airfield. After making contact with the ground personnel by radio telephone he circled the airfield whilst Sergeants Mangione and Ritchie gave additional first aid to the pilot and then parachuted him out of the aircraft on a static line in a last effort to save his life. Only when he was sure that his other two comrades had safely left the aircraft by parachute did Sergeant Steere then leave himself. In the face of a trying ordeal these airmen displayed great courage and devotion to duty setting an example of the highest order.

MANION, F/O William Joseph (J28802) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.429 Squadron - Award effective 8 September 1945 as per London Gazette dated 25 September 1945 and AFRO 1768/45 dated 23 November 1945. Born 1923 in Ottawa; home there (clerk); enlisted there 22 June 1942. Trained at No.1 ITS (graduated 5 March 1943), No.1 BGS (graduated 27 July 1943) and No.9 AOS (graduated 14 June 1943). Overseas in September 1944. Photo PL-33607 (ex UK-15991, dated 26 October 1944) shows F/O W.J. Manion (pointing) and F/O F.W. Bullen with Victory Loan "thermometer". Medal presented 10 December 1947. Served in postwar RCAF with service number 17603. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.2610 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 18 April 1945 when he had completed 30 sorties (189 hours 40 minutes), 11 October 1944 to 31 March 1945.

Flying Officer Manion has taken part in thirty operational sorties, including attacks on such well defended targets as Cologne, Duisburg and Dusseldorf. He has proved himself to be a keen and capable air bomber who has at all times displayed an exceedingly high standard of devotion to duty and determination. This officer has set a fine example to other members of his squadron.

It is considered that his outstanding skill, tenacity of purpose and fine operational record fully merit the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows:

11 October 1944 - Wanne Eickel (5.10)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (5.30)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (5.55)
1 November 1944 - Oberhausen (6.00)
2 November 1944 - Dusseldorf (6.05)
4 November 1944 - Bochum (5.25)
6 November 1944 - Gelsenkirchen (5.25)
27 November 1944 - Neuss (5.30)
30 November 1944 - Duisburg (6.55)
4 December 1944 - Karlsruhe (7.00)
5 December 1944 - Soest (6.20)
24 December 1944 - Oslo (6.20, mining)
5 January 1945 - Hanover (6.10)
12 January 1945 - Flensburg (5.45)

16 January 1945 - Oslo (7.30, mining)
1 February 1945 - Mainz (7.25)
4 February 1945 - Wilhelmshaven (5.30, mining)
14 February 1945 - Willow (7.25, mining)
15 February 1945 - Oslo (6.35, mining)
20 February 1945 - Mannheim (6.40)
21 February 1945 - Worms (6.45)
25 February 1945 - Arendal (6.20, mining)
2 March 1945 - Cologne (5.55)
5 March 1945 - Chemnitz (9.05)
8 March 1945 - Elbe (5.05, mining)
9 March 1945 - Oslo (7.05, mining)
12 March 1945 - Hesselo (6.20, mining)
14 March 1945 - Zweibrucken (6.55)
15 March 1945 - Castrop Rauxel (6.00)
31 March 1945 - Hamburg (5.35)

Application for Operational Wing dated 18 May 1945 states he had flown 30 sorties (189 hours 40 minutes), 4 June 1944 to 31 March 1945.

MANLEY, Sergeant John Alfred (R51573) - Air Force Medal - No.3 Air Navigation School - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Born 14 November 1920. Home in Port Arthur; enlisted in Fort William, 21 November 1939 as Wireless and Electrical Mechanic. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 29 January 1940. Promoted AC1, 29 February 1940. Promoted LAC, 1 October 1940, on which date he was reclassified Wireless Operator (Ground). Promoted Corporal, 15 March 1941. To Newfoundland, 23 June 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 1 April 1942. Reverted to Corporal, 23 April 1942. To No.1 SFTS, 15 June 1942. To "Y" Depot, 21 April 1943. To "G.D." (Gander ?), 1 May 1943. Reduced to LAC, 22 July 1943. To be Corporal, 15 October 1943. To No.8 Construction and Maintenance Unit, 30 November 1943. To No.5 AOS, 4 December 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 February 1944. To No.3 ANS, 31 March 1945. To Composite Training School, 28 May 1945. To Release Centre, 15 September 1945. Released 29 September 1945. As of recommendation for award had flown 1,360 hours including 271 hours in previous six months.

This Wireless Operator (Ground) has an operational flying record which he has used to marked advantage to the efficient operation of this unit. His extreme devotion to duty, courage and loyalty have been an inspiration to all with whom he has served. He has contributed much to the smooth operation of his section and to the morale of those serving under him. The manner in which he has discharged his many responsible duties has been exemplary.

MANN, P/O Edward James (J85595) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.576 Squadron (deceased) - Award effective 28 July 1944 as per London Gazette dated 12 February 1946 and AFRO 322/46 dated 29 March 1946. Born 14 December 1923 in Regina, Saskatchewan; home there (bank employee, Royal Bank of Canada); enlisted there 10 March 1942 and granted Leave Without Pay until 3 April 1942 when posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.2 BGS (non-flying duties), 23 May 1942. To No.2 ITS, 18 July 1942; promoted LAC, 12 September 1942; to No.15 EFTS, 10 October 1942; to No.11 SFTS, 5 December 1942; promoted Sergeant, 2 April 1943; to "Y" Depot, 16 April 1943. To RAF, 26 May 1943 (embarked from Halifax on 27 May 1943). Arrived in Britain, 4 June 1943. Taken on strength at No.3 PRC, 5 June 1943. To No.20 (P) AFU, 29 June 1943. To No.30 OTU, 28 September 1943. To No.11 Base, 18 January 1944. Commissioned 28 February 1944. To No.578 Squadron 14 May 1944. Killed in action 28/29 July 1944 (Lancaster LL905; shot down by a night fighter, 0140 hours near Saarwerden); buried in France. Medal sent by registered mail to next-of-kin, 2 December 1946.

Pilot Officer Mann has participated with outstanding success in attacks against many strongly defended targets. He has consistently displayed great skill, courage and devotion to duty even in the most hazardous circumstances. In July, 1944, during an attack on railway sidings at Revigny his aircraft was severely damaged by enemy action. Despite great difficulties he pressed home his attack on the target with the utmost determination and succeeded in flying his damaged aircraft safely back to base. He has continued to show exceptional zest for operational flying and his cheerful and confident manner has set a high example to all.

The website "Lost Bombers" gives the following on his loss. Lancaster LL905, No.576 Squadron (UL-H2), target Stuttgart, 28/29 July 1944. LL905 was a Mark I, delivered to No.576 Squadron on 27 April 1944. Took part in the following operations: Mailly-le-Camp, 3/4 May 1944; Wesseling, 21/22 June 1944; Kiel, 23/24 July 1944; Stuttgart, 28/29 July 1944 (lost). When lost this aircraft had a total of 249 hours. It was one of four No.576 Squadron Lancasters lost on this operation; the others were LL799, PB128, and PB253 Airborne at 2110 hours from Elsham Wolds. Crashed approximately 0140 hours, 29 July 1944 with its starboard wing on fire, between Sarrewerden (Bas-Rhin) and Rimsdorf, 2 km SSW and SE respectively of Sarre-Union. Crew were F/O E.J.Mann, DFC, RCAF (killed); Sergeant R.A.W.Roberts (killed); F/O A.Novak, RCAF (POW); Sergeant W.T.Dodge (POW); Flight Sergeant F.T.McCann (POW); Flight Sergeant L.Mutton, RAAF (killed); Flight Sergeant D.I MacVicar, RCAF (killed).

Flying Officer Mann has carried out 37 sorties totalling 169.41 hours during which he has attacked many important targets situated in such well known defended areas as Dusseldorf, Karlsruhe, Aachen, Bottrop and Stuttgart.

This forceful Canadian captain has led his crew with brilliant success throughout a large number of operations upon many different types of target with outstanding results. He has always combined, during his operational career, a belligerent and fearless spirit with skilled and determined handling of the most difficult situations.

It is strongly recommended that Flying Officer Mann's magnificent operational record should be recognized by the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

RCAF Press Release No. 8093 dated 4 January 1945 from S/L Vic Baker reads:

WITH RCAF IN BRITAIN: -- Before, during, and just after D-Day our bombers flew in weather which was too foul even for motoring on the ground, says F/O Forrest G. Mann, DFC., of Angusville, Manitoba, a Halifax pilot with an R.A.F. bomber squadron.

The 23-year-old Manitoban remembers taking off from his airfield in clouds which were less than 100 feet off the ground and 10,000 feet thick. They bombed their invasion target blindly on instruments and made the return journey flying only 200 feet above sea-level. Back at base, they were forced to circle for more than a half hour with ever-dwindling petrol supply, while powerful fog lights were made ready for an instrument landing.

"It took us quite a while stooging around that aerodrome getting up enough courage to land our 30-ton aircraft in that soupy fog", said Mann, who is at an RCAF repatriation depot in Britain. Going home with him is his navigator, P/O M.L. Hubbard, of Robsart, Saskatchewan, and his gunner, P/O J.R. Churchill, DFM, of Owen Sound, Ontario.

Before enlisting, he worked for the Royal Bank at Russell, Manitoba as a teller and hopes to return to his old job on discharge from the service.

MANN, Corporal Gordon Carlington (R225524) - Mention in Despatches - Eastmoor - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 388/46 dated 12 April 1946.. Identified in AFRO as "Overseas". McEwen papers (CWM) with list of recommendations with MiD recommendations for 1 February to 31 July 1945 identifies unit. Born 18 June 1918. Home in Toronto. Enlisted in RAF under service number 619225. Transferred to RCAF in London, England, 21 December 1944, at which time he had been overseas for seven years and four months. Repatriated to Canada 18 June 1945. Appears to have volunteered for Tiger Force until it was stood down. Released 19 September 1945. Certificate sent 9 October 1948. DHist file 181.009 D.1725 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20607) has recommendation forwarded to No.6 Group Headquarters, 5 May 1945. Armourer.

Corporal Mann has been employed as an NCO in the Station Armoury for the past six months and previous to enlistment in the RCAF has served seven years with the RAF. During the period of time he has been on this Station he and his men have been called upon to work exceedingly long hours in all weathers [sic] at the arduous task of preparing operational bomb loads. Corporal Mann by his untiring efforts and initiative has been instrumental in increasing the efficiency of the Station Armoury. In his loyalty and efforts beyond the ordinary call of duty, it is strongly recommended that he be awarded a "Mention in Despatches".

MANN, P/O Lloyd Arthur (J19783) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.426 Squadron - Award effective 4 August 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2052/44 dated 22 September 1944. Born 28 October 1918 in Carivale, Saskatchewan or Elmore, Saskatchewan; raised at Melita and Portage la Prairie, Manitoba; enlisted in Ottawa as a Clerk, 10 August 1941. To AFHQ, 3 September 1940. Promoted AC1, 10 November 1940. Reclassified Clerk/Steno, 1 March 1941. Promoted LAC, 10 March 1941. Promoted Corporal, 1 July 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 1 October 1941. Remustered to aircrew and posted on 11 April 1942 to No.1 ITS; to No.9 EFTS, 18 July 1942; to No.11 SFTS, 12 September 1942; graduated 30 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, date not shown; to RAF overseas, 25 January 1943. Commissioned 26 January 1944. To No.426 Squadron, March 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 26 July 1944. Incident described was on 22 May 1944. Ultimately flew 33 sorties. Award presented at during the King's visit to No.6 Group, 11 August 1944. Repatriated 15 November 1944 and posted to AFHQ again for administrative duties. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 May 1945. Signed on for RCAF Interim Force until 26 September 1947 when he was released. RCAF photo PL-31682 (ex UK-13560 dated 14 August 1944) shows him being invested. RCAF photo PL-32307 (ex UK-14570 dated 6 September 1944) shows three men from Portage la Prairie, Manitoba - F/L L.J. Kennedy (left, described as squadron bombing leader with two tours to his credit), Warrant Officer J.R. McCulloch (new to the squadron) and P/O Lloyd Mann, DFC, awarded for "bringing back his severely damaged Halifax after it collided in mid-air with another bomber." PL-32306 is similar. Went in to the roofing business with his father-in-law and eventually owned the company outright. Died in Ottawa, 7 March 2011. Obituary in Ottawa Citizen detailed his charitable and travel activities.

This officer has completed numerous sorties and has proved himself to be a skilful and resourceful pilot and captain. On one occasion he was the pilot of an aircraft detailed to attack the railway sidings at Le Mans. Whilst over the target his aircraft sustained extensive damage. Several holes were torn in the fuselage, the bomb doors were torn open, parts of them being ripped away, and the port rudder and elevator were damaged. Both the port engines were affected and one of them caught fire. Much height was lost and the situation was serious. Pilot Officer Mann succeeded in levelling out, however, and course was set for home. Much vibration was experienced and flying speed had to be reduced but in spite of many difficulties, Pilot Officer Mann reached an airfield. This officer displayed exceptional skill and coolness in most harassing circumstances and was undoubtedly responsible for the ultimate safety of the aircraft and its crew.

Public Record Office Air 2/9158 has recommendation drafted 20 June 1944 when he had flown seven sorties (30 hours).

Pilot Officer L.A. Mann was detailed to attack the marshalling yards at Le Mans, France on the night of 22/23 May. Soon after reaching enemy territory the rear turret became unserviceable. Arriving at the target which was not yet marked, an orbit was made and bombs were dropped on the second run. Then, one minute after leaving the target his aircraft collided with another aircraft and was severely damaged - port inner propellor missing, port outer prop bent, port inner engine on fire, port rudder and elevator badly damaged, bomb doors torn open and partly missing, several large holes in fuselage. Before Pilot Officer Mann could regain control, 5,000 feet had been lost and he had given the order "Prepare to abandon aircraft". However, eventually getting the aircraft on an even keel, course was set for Base but owing to extreme vibration, speed had to be reduced below 140 miles per hour, with the result that the aircraft stalled many times, including rudder stalls when it would alter course to 100. In spite of this, a safe landing was eventually made at an emergency landing field.

Pilot Officer Mann displayed exceptional skill and coolness in extricating his aircraft from a most perilous situation, thereby saving the lives of his crew and much valuable equipment. Although Pilot Officer Mann is a comparatively inexperienced pilot, since joining the squadron he has continually displayed a cool determination and the will to press on regardless of the difficulties. He has consistently set a splendid example to his crew and his squadron and is therefore recommended for the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

To the above the Officer Commanding, Station Linton-on-Ouse, wrote (23 June 1944):

Pilot Officer Mann is an exceptionally promising young captain who already has a previous commendation in his Log Book for exceptional fine flying of an aircraft in an emergency and who, in the incident cited above, has in my opinion merited the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross, the recommendation for which I strongly support.

On 27 June 1944 the Commander of No.62 Base (Air Commodore A.D. Ross) added the following:

Pilot Officer Mann has shown himself to be a most courageous and determined operational pilot and capable of making instant decisions in an emergency. He has displayed a high standard of airmanship, devotion to duty and fine leadership, I recommend be recognized by the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The above award has a curious history, as revealed in DHH file 181.009 D.1513 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Vol.20600). On 29 May 1944, W/C E.C. Hamber recommended him for a DFC; the wording was identical to that of 20 June 1944, but in the earlier submission he was noted as having flown five sorties (23 hours). On this occasion the Officer Commanding, No.62 Base (Air Commodore A.D. Ross) did not agree, and on 3 June 1944 he wrote to the Air Officer Commanding, No.6 Group, as follows:

1. Enclosed herewith recommendation which has been submitted by RCAF Station Linton for an immediate award of the D.F.C. to the above-noted officer. I do not concur in this recommendation but recommend that P/O Mann be awarded a Special Commendation.
2. The main theme of this recommendation is the act of bringing the damaged aircraft back to this country, the damage not being caused by enemy action. Farther on investigating the matter I have found that P/O Mann was 30 degrees off the Bombing Heading laid down for this attack and consequently cannot be considered entirely free of blame for the collision in which he was involved. I consider therefore that this recommendation is contrary to the Commander-in-Chief's policy as set out in your 6G/S.978/P.1 dated 30th January 1944. However, as this officer displayed a high degree of skilful airmanship and determination in bringing his aircraft back to this country and effecting a safe landing under difficult conditions, I consider he merits a Special Commendation.

DHH file 181.009 D.4431 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20649) has a partial list of sorties as follows:

- 18 April 1944 - Noisy-le-Sec (5.00)
- 20 April 1944 - Cologne (4.55)
- 12 May 1944 - Louvain (4.20)
- 19 May 1944 - Franceville (4.40)

22 May 1944 - Le Mans (4.05)

On 7 June 1944 he had an unfortunate occurrence. He was airborne at 2250 hours to bomb the rail yards at Acheres. Shortly after crossing the French coast his aircraft was hit by flak. He turned out to sea to assess the damage. It was then discovered that four members of the crew had bailed out without instructions. Mann and his other crew members succeeded in bringing the aircraft back to the United Kingdom and effecting a safe landing at Bradwell Bay. Those who bailed out were R48505 D.S. Smith (navigator, POW), 1070752 Sergeant Stanley Gilder (flight engineer, killed), R107527 WO1 W.G. McClelland (WOP/AG, killed), and J28083 F/O J.K. White (air bomber, returned safely to United Kingdom).

RCAF Press Release No. 5388 dated 18 June 1944, transcribed by Huguette Oates, reads:

WITH THE RCAF BOMBER GROUP OVERSEAS: -- P/O Lloyd Mann, Portage La Prairie, Thunderbird squadron skipper, had a lonely and shaky trip home from France recently. That he is able to tell the story is a tribute to his efficiency as a pilot.

The target was a railway yard close to Paris and P/O Mann never did get there. On route the intercom became Useless and the bomber was hit hard by flak, going into a wild spin and temporarily out of control. By the time Lloyd got his aircraft on an even keel and had a chance to look around, he only had his gunners for company. The rest of the crew had bailed out thinking the bomber was on a one-way street toward destruction.

Minus a wireless operator, flight-engineer, navigator and bomb-aimer, P/O Mann estimated his course for home, flew until he reached the English coast and brought his aircraft down at the nearest airfield. That doesn't sound too tough but the westerner came down on the runway with a full load of bombs aboard. He had been unable to jettison the explosives in the Channel as he was crossing a protected area, the "ditch" being full of invasion shipping.

The lads who came home with P/O Mann – Sergeant Doug Harkness, 400 Woodfield Road, East Toronto; Sergeant Merrill Burnett, Chelsea, Quebec, and Sergeant Hugh Galarneau, 741 Hounesfield Avenue, Woodstock, Ontario – said the situation didn't seem to phase the skipper. Must be the Portage La Prairie air !

MANN, P/O Lloyd Robertson (J15638) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.420 Squadron - Award effective 31 December 1942 as per London Gazette dated 12 January 1943 and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Born in Moncton, New Brunswick, 1 June 1919; home in Truro, Nova Scotia. Trimmer and diamond driller for one year in a gold mine; service station attendant for two years. Enlisted in Halifax, 18 July 1940. To No.1 Manning Depot, 22 July 1940. To Trenton, 20 August 1940. To No.2 ITS, 31 August 1940; promoted LAC and posted to No.1 WS, 12 October 1940; to No.1 BGS, 16 February 1941; promoted Sergeant on graduation, 15 March 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 17 March 1941. Embarkation cancelled and sent to No.1 WS, 2 May 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 31 May 1941. To RAF, 18 June 1941. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 1 July 1941. To No.1 Signal School, 1 July 1941. To No.16 OTU, 6 September 1941. To No.420 Squadron, 13 February 1942. Commissioned 17 June 1942. To No.156 Squadron, 3 October 1942. Killed in action 21 December 1942 (Wellington BK386).

As wireless operator/air gunner, Pilot Officer Mann has displayed courage and efficiency of the highest order. On several occasions, by his technical skill, he has enabled his captain to fly a badly damaged aircraft safely to base. He has taken part in operations over the enemy's most heavily defended areas and his cheerfulness and devotion to duty under the most trying conditions have set a high example to his crew.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his last sortie. Wellington BK386 of No.156 Squadron, target Munich, 21/22 December 1942. Airborne at 1655 hours, 21 December 1942 from Warboys. Crashed at Matignicourt-et- Goncourt (Marne), 4 km SE of Vitry-le-Francois, France. Crew were F/L S.J.Cybulski DFC, RCAF, F/L W.S.Crawford, RCAF, P/O H.T.Boyes, RCAF, F/O L.R.Mann DFC, RCAF, and F/O J.P.Sullivan RCAF (all killed).

Promoted LAC and posted to No.9 BGS, 10 July 1943; graduated 20 August 1943 and promoted Sergeant. To "Y" Depot, 3 September 1943. Embarked from Halifax, 13 September 1943. Disembarked in Britain, 19 September 1943. To No.22 OTU, 5 October 1943 (Wellingtons, 96 hours yen minutes). To No.61 Base, 25 February 1944. Attached Dalton Battle School, 26 February to 8 March 1944. Attached No,1664 Conversion Unit, 8 March to 10 April 1944 (Halifaxes, 40.35). To No.419 Squadron, 10 April 1944 (28.35 on Halifax aircraft, 244.15 on Lancasters). Commissioned 28 August 1944 (J89718). Repatriated 27 November 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 28 February 1945. To Mountain View, 28 March 1945. To Release Centre, 29 August 1945. Released 6 September 1945. Died 28 December 1992 in Scotland, Ontario as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of April 1993. Medal presented 30 May 1947. Cited with Sergeant Paul Burton (RCAF, rear gunner, awarded DFM); see above for citation and Combat Report details. DHH file 181.009 D.1634 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20604) has recommendation drafted 26 June 1944 by W/C W.P. Pleasance when he had flown 16 sorties (78 hours 45 minutes):

This NCO has completed 16 operational sorties against the enemy. On a number of occasions his alertness and coolness has greatly contributed to the success of the operation and the safety of his crew.

On three occasions his aircraft has been attacked by enemy fighters and in each case his cool and concise directions to his pilot have undoubtedly saved the aircraft from damage. On the night of 7/8th June 1944, when attacking Acheres, the aircraft was attacked by a Ju.88 after leaving the target. Displaying great coolness, Sergeant Mann successfully directed his pilot in evasive action and at the same time opened fire on the attacker and successfully shot the enemy aircraft down in flames.

I consider that the coolness, high courage and skill shown by Sergeant Mann merits the immediate award of the DFC.

The sortie list was as follows; first four on Halifaxes; all thereafter on Lancasters:

18 April 1944 - Gardening Copenhagen (7.35)
20 April 1944 - Lens (4.55)
24 April 1944 - Laon (5.55)
27 April 1944 - Montzen (4.35)
10 May 1944 - Ghent (4.40)
11 May 1944 - Boulogne (4.20)
27 May 1944 - Bourge-Leopold (4.45)
5 June 1944 - Merville (5.15)
6 June 1944 - Coutance (5.05)
7 June 1944 - Achere (5.05)
12 June 1944 - Cambrai (4.50)
14 June 1944 - St. Pol (4.05)
15 June 1944 - Boulogne, daylight (4.40)

16 June 1944 - Sterkrade (4.50)
21 June 1944 - St. Martin l'Hortier (4.15)
23 June 1944 - Bientique (3.55)

DHH file 181.009 D.1634 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20604) has further recommendation drafted 9 August 1944 by W/C W.P. Pleasance when he had flown 27 sorties (138 hours five minutes). Text almost identical to above except mention of "27 operational sorties". The additional sorties were as follows:

24 June 1944 - Bamieres (4.10)
6 July 1944 - Siracourt, daylight (4.40)
9 July 1944 - Mont Candon (4.00)
15 July 1944 - Bois des Jardins (4.20)
18 July 1944 - Caen, daylight (4.30)
18 July 1944 - Wesseling (6.10)
20 July 1944 - Anderbelck, daylight (3.35)
24 July 1944 - Stuttgart (9.15)
25 July 1944 - Stuttgart (2.10, incomplete)
28 July 1944 - Hamburg (5.30)

Notes: Application for Operational Badge dated 22 October 1944 stated he had flown 33 sorties (180 hours 35 minutes), 18 April to 25 September 1944.

Repatriation Form dated 15 November 1944 stated he had flown 33 sorties (199 hours 15 minutes operational), the last on 25 September 1944. Had also flown 210 hours 20 minutes non-operational. Hit by flak at Laon (ten holes), Siracourt (40 holes), and Dortmund (two holes). Destroyed a Ju.88 on Acheres target.

Training: Interviewed 6 January 1943 by P/O J.M. Stirling. "Most enthusiastic. Well motivated. Understands selection method. Brother in Army in Jamaica. Hard worker."

Courses taken at No.23 Pre-Aircrew Education Detachment (University of Toronto) were English (79 percent), Mathematics (61 percent) and Signals (80 percent)

Course at No.9 BGS was 12 July to 20 August 1943. Battle aircraft - flew 25 hours five minutes. Fired Vickers Gas Operated gun in air, Vickers Gas Operated and Browning guns on ground; encountered Bristol, Frazer-Nash and Boulton-Paul turrets on ground. Exposed three cine films. Fired 300 rounds air-to-ground, 3,625 rounds air-to-air (3.4 percent hits in air). Ground courses in Guns, Pyrotechnics and Ammunition (184/200), Guns, practical (75/100), Sighting, written (212/250), Turrets, practical (142/200), Aircraft Recognition (139/150) and Signals (85/100). Placed 45th in a class of 105. "No difficulty in understanding, sufficient self-assurance. Can be depended upon but occasionally takes the lead."

Historian; retired 2 September 1965. Deputy Director, Canadian War Museum, 1966-1982. Died in Ottawa 8 February 1994, aged 78. Medals with Canadian War Museum (AN 19680015-008) with other memorabilia. See Ralph Barker, The Ship Busters and Tom Coughlin, The Dangerous Skies. For his contributions to Canadian air museum development see http://www.rcaf-arc.forces.gc.ca/CFAWC/eLibrary/pubs/SiclturAdAstra-Vol1_e.pdf. RCAF photo PL-27221 (ex UK-10070 dated 28 April 1944) is captioned as follows: "Sitting on a pile of logs near his palm-leaf office, 'somewhere in Ceylon', S/L Ralph Manning, (J15633, of Vancouver and Toronto, was unaware that a few days later he was to be awarded the DFC. The 27-year old pilot, now a flight commander with the crack RAF Shark Squadron, was awarded the DFC for his brilliant record before coming to the Far East. He is officially credited with sinking a tanker in the Mediterranean which was on its way with supplies for Rommel during the African campaign. He also attacked and scored a probably hit on the cruiser Prince Eugen, after the Nazi warship had been damaged by a submarine off the southern coast of Norway. Land batteries broke the Squadron Leader's rudder controls [which] were shot away. As the aircraft was limping home it was contacted by three Jerry fighters and one of Ralph's gunners was knocked out in his turret from shock of cannon fire. Finally working past the range of endurance for the enemy machines, Squadron Leader Manning crash landed at base."

MANNING, F/L Ralph Viril (J15633) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.217 Squadron - Award effective 29 February 1944 as per London Gazette dated 7 March 1944 and AFRO 766/44 dated 6 April 1944.

Flight Lieutenant Manning has taken part in several torpedo bomber attacks with good results. In April 1942 he participated in an attack on an enemy convoy in the Skagerak, and in May 1942 he was pilot of a formation of aircraft which penetrated the heavy defences around the "Prinz Eugen" off Norway and made a successful attack on the cruiser. On this occasion his aircraft sustained severe damage. In October 1942, Flight Lieutenant Manning destroyed an enemy tanker, which was of the utmost importance to the enemy. On a recent sortie he was forced to bring his aircraft down on to the sea. The dinghy failed to operate and Flight Lieutenant Manning gave great help and encouragement to his crew, two of whom were non-swimmers, while they were in shark-infested waters. He has at all times displayed exceptional valour and determination on operations.

Training: Interviewed in Toronto, 27 July 1940 by F/O J.M. MacDonald. "Excellent appearance. Has excellent moral, social and intellectual background. Clean, neat, alert, well organised. Recommend for commission."

Course at No.2 ITS was 14-31 October 1940. Mathematics (97/100), Armament, practical and oral (74/100), Visual Link (A), Drill (79/100), and Law and Discipline (68/100). Placed eleventh in a class of 105. "Good background. Quiet but keen."

Course at No.5 EFTS was 5 November to 22 December 1940. Tiger Moth aircraft - 25.20 dual and 24.55 solo. Logged four hours in Link. "Forced landings are poor. Does not use very good judgement in general flying." (R.F. Gladstone, Chief Flying Instructor). Ground courses in Airmanship (160/200), Airframes (165/200), Engines (160/200), Signals (48/50), Theory of Flight (73/100), Air Navigation (165/200), and Armament, oral (175/200). Rated 150/200 in Qualities as NCO/Officer. Placed fifth in a class of 27. "Clean cut, possible officer material, with more experience. Conduct very good." (F/L R.F. Gladden)

Course at No.3 SFTS was 23 December 1940 to 10 April 1941. Anson aircraft - 28.50 day dual, 40.00 day solo, 4.15 night dual, 14.25 night solo. Logged 17 hours in Link. "Hesitant at times, average pilot." (F/L G.M. Nearnton). Ground courses in Airmanship (152/200), Armament, written (80/100), Armament, practical (86/100), Air Navigation (126/200) and Signals, (49/50). Placed 28th in a class of 57. "Suitable with more service experience. Somewhat lacking in self-assertiveness. Pleasing personality."

Course at No.31 GRS was 21 April to 11 July 1941. Anson aircraft - 52 hours 51 minutes on navigation training, "This NCO has put in some sound work on the course. A reliable navigator." Ground training in DR Navigation (324/400 written, 219/300 practical), Reconnaissance (166/200 written, 75/100 practical), Patrol and Search (141/200), Ship Recognition (173/200), Coding (82/100). DF/WT (96/100), Meteorology (157/200), Compasses (169/200), Maps and Charts (91/100), Phonography (67/100), Instruments (83/100) and Signals (Pass). "Average. A keen wicker who has produced satisfactory results." Also "A good NCI who will make a sound GR pilot."

Course at No.5 OTU was 13 September to 18 November 1941. Flew 10.20 day dual, 18.55 day as second pilot, 33.15 day as first pilot, 3.00 night dual, 8.00 night as first pilot, 4.19 in night crew training. On instruments 4.45 and spent 45 minutes in formation. Graded 50 percent in Armament, 63 percent in practical Signals, 80 percent in Navigation and 78 percent in Link. Dropped 18 bombs as pilot, 36 bombs with crew. Fired 500 rounds air-to-sea and 250 rounds on range. "Reliable and tries but almost failed Armament. Just missed being above average as a pilot." (W/C E.C. Kidd).

Course at Torpedo Training Unit was 27 November 1941 to 8 January 1942. Flew 2.20 as second pilot and 23.35 as first pilot. Made three runner drops as pilot by day and seven runner drops as bomb aimer by day. "An average pilot and NCO. Has determination." (W/C F.J. St. G. Braithwaite).

With this listing he noted, "Operational tours on Beaufort Torpedo Bombers in the RAF were not defined, or varied from Command to Command. India Command, which included Ceylon, defined a tour for this type of aircraft as being one year on a squadron, irrespective of hours flown or operations in another command. Eighteen months of my tour was spent on such a squadron in India Command, extension to my tour being granted by the AOC 222 Group."

Selected Assessments: "Was accepted into this unit on conversion to Beauforts as an ex-Beaufort pilot of exceptional merit and ability. At the start, his work was of a high standard and he was promoted to fill a flight commander vacancy. After this time, although all duties were carried out efficiently, the enthusiasm he had first shown was definitely lacking and a disinclination to exert himself was shown. This was considered by his then CO to be due to a long period of inaction following on intensive activity in the UK, Middle East and Burma, and my own opinion is that his former enthusiasm, ability and zeal will return when he is given a fresh start in another theatre of operations." (W/C T. Child, No.217 Squadron, 26 May 1944; he had flown 728 hours, 87 in previous six months).

RCAF Press Release (Asia) No.29 dated 7 April 1944 from "Dumsday", transcribed by Huguette Oates, reads:

SOMEWHERE IN CEYLON: -- A tanker carrying valuable supplies to Rommel during the African campaign never reached its goal – it sank in the Mediterranean, victim of torpedoes from an aircraft flown by a former Canadian bond clerk, S/L Ralph Manning, J15633, of 4263-10th Avenue West, Vancouver, B.C. and Toronto (Wood-Gundy Ltd.) For this attack and other brilliant work, the 27-year-old pilot, now "Somewhere in Ceylon", has just been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The crack RAF Shark Squadron of which Ralph is a flight commander, staged a big "do" in the mess the night word came through about his "gong" and chief celebrants were other Canadians in the bomber unit. S/L Manning, who worked in a Toronto bond house for three years before enlisting in the Royal Canadian Air Force, has been with his present bomber squadron less than a year and only recently took over as flight commander. He is well into his second year of operations in the Far East.

"We were patrolling the Med. when we saw a tanker sailing in convoy with two merchant vessels and a destroyer,” said Ralph, as he sat on a pile of logs outside his palm-straw office in a Ceylonese jungle camp to tell of his successful attack, officially confirmed. “There was plenty of flak as we went in for the attack but we were able to drive our torpedoes home and the tanker soon floundered. We kept clear of the flak but, before we reached home, some Jerry fighters holed us a bit.”

The tanker sinking was not the only achievement which now entitles S/L Manning to tack DFC after his name. Once when the battle cruiser, Prince Eugen, was sailing back to Germany after being damaged by a submarine, Ralph’s squadron made an attack off the southern coast of Norway. He is believed to have scored a “probable hit” on the Nazi warship. “Our chief worry was land batteries which messed us up pretty badly,” said S/L Manning. “Our rudder control was broken, forcing the rudder to one side and our trimming controls were shot away. As we were limping home, we were picked up by three Jerry fighters and, as their canon fire hit our aircraft, one of our gunners was knocked cold in his turret from the shock. Finally, we got past their range of endurance and crash-landed at base”.

No citation other than "completed... numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.2610 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 18 May 1945 when he had flown two tours - 25 May 1943 to 22 February 1944 (25 sorties, 160 hours 45 minutes) and 6 December 1944 to 22 April 1945 (19 sorties, 127 hours).

Flying Officer Mannix, as air gunner, has completed his second tour of operations. His first tour consisted of twenty-five trips and his second of nineteen, both tours including many sorties to the more heavily defended areas of Germany such as Berlin, Leipzig, Hamburg and Bremen. His displayed fearlessness, coolness and outstanding devotion to duty throughout and has been an inspiration to the team work and efficiency of his crew. His captain has the highest praise for this officer's skill and courage in the face of the enemy. His co-operation has been of great help to the Gunnery Leader and the leading example he has set to the other air gunners is most praiseworthy.

RCAF Press Release No. 4545 dated 2 April 1944 from John Badger reads:

WITH RCAF BOMBER GROUP OVERSEAS: The two-gun adventurers of the Old West no longer ride the dusty trails of those parts, but nowadays winged sons of the West out-shoot the legendary feats of those pistol-packing pioneers almost nightly.

These young men pack four machine-guns instead of the traditional pair of six-shooters. The trails they ride stretch across eastward skies to the Continent, instead of across westward plains away from it. They come through far deadlier duels than the old heroes fought, and they do it to guard not stage-coach gold but a more precious cargo – the bombs that help destroy the most formidable villain of all time – Nazism.

One such air-gunner is 20-year-old Pilot Officer John B. Mannix of Meota, Saskatchewan. John B. is only a boy but he had his wing at 18, has flown a tour of operations and is now instructing at a heavy bomber conversion unit of this Group. He flew his tour behind the tail turret guns of a four-motored RAF Halifax.

The aircraft was on its dark way to the Nazi shrine-city of Nuremburg one night when searchlights wig-wagged their ghostly fingers together on it. The cold glare held it while an Me109 night-fighter raced in from astern, its guns spurting flame. Cannon-shells burst along the underside of the Halifax, stripping the long bomb doors off. A little deflection in the pilot's aim would have sent them into the huge bombs! Holes appeared in the giant fin and rudder, not far from John B.'s perspex-panelled nook. Then the Westerner began firing. His strikes appeared distinctly on the night-fighter. It was within a hundred yards of its lumbering prey when it peeled off, having apparently had enough. The RAF mid-upper gunner was firing too by that time. An Me210 followed the 109 with another attack, had even less luck. The Halifax thundered irresistibly on to the target area and dumped its bombs where they belonged.

Going in over Dusseldorf another night, a fighter attacked from the starboard quarter. It was hard to see but John B. directed his captain in evasive action as best he could, while he and the Nazi aircraft exchanged fire. He's not sure if he hit the attacker, but the bomber received hits in the starboard wing. The shooting part of the engagement didn't last long. The RAF skipper put the Halifax in a spin. The heavy aircraft screamed about 7,500 feet downward before it could be righted. John B. banged around inside his turret like a loose pea in a pod. Once it was straightened away, the Halifax again went on to bomb its target successfully.

John B. is looking forward to his 21st birthday, says he wants to be a man.

Application for Bar to Operational Wing dated 23 April 1945 states he had flown 19 sorties (127 hours), 6 December 1944 to 22 April 1945.

1944. Attached to No.1659 HCU, 12 May to 19 June 1944. To No.432 Squadron, 9 June 1944. To No.419 Squadron, 16 June 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1944. Killed in flying accident, 24 November 1944 (Lancaster KB875); buried in United Kingdom. Medal presented by Governor General to next-of-kin, 2 December 1946.

Pilot Officer Mansfield has participated in many attacks on various enemy targets and has displayed a fine fighting spirit and great keenness. On a recent occasion he captained an aircraft detailed to attack Duisburg. During the operation the aircraft was hit by fire from the ground defences and the mid-upper gunner was badly wounded. Nevertheless, Pilot Officer Mansfield completed a successful attack and flew the aircraft to an airfield near the English coast where he effected a landing so that his wounded crew member could be taken off for medical attention. Pilot Officer Mansfield then took off again and flew the aircraft to base. This officer is a most able and inspiring captain whose example has been well reflected in the high standard of efficiency of his crew.

DHist file 181.009 D.1634 (RG.24 Volume 20604) has original recommendation by W/C D.C. Hagerman drafted 31 October 1944 when he had flown 21 sorties (116 hours 20 minutes).

Pilot Officer Mansfield has taken part in 21 day and night attacks on the enemy, during the course of which his enthusiasm and devotion to duty have been amply demonstrated.

On the 29th August, when attacking Stettin, his aircraft was hit on the port outer engine by an explosive incendiary bomb dropped by one of our own aircraft. This bomb penetrated the engine nacelle and exploded, setting the engine on fire.

Pilot Officer Mansfield calmly feathered the engine, extinguishing the fire and, through excellent airmanship and ability, brought his aircraft safely back to base.

On the 14th October, when detailed to attack Duisburg by daylight, his aircraft was badly hit by predicted flak and his Mid-Upper Gunner badly wounded. Despite this Pilot Officer Mansfield carried on and completed a successful attack, returning to an emergency airfield in the south of England where he left his wounded Gunner, thereafter returning to Base to take off on the same night to again attack Duisburg.

I consider the efficient captaincy, high morale and enthusiasm to operate shown by this officer fully merits the immediate award of the DFC.

The sortie list was as follows:

23 June 1944 - Bientiques (4.35)
8 August 1944 - La Pallice (6.55)
15 August 1944 - Bremen (5.15)
25 August 1944 - Russelheim (9.20)
29 August 1944 - Stettin (9.15)
12 September 1944 - Dortmund (5.50, day)
14 September 1944 - Wilhelmshaven (3.40, day, recalled)
15 September 1944 - Kiel (5.40)
17 September 1944 - Boulogne (4.05, day)
18 September 1944 - Domburg (5.00, day)
19 September 1944 - Domburg (2.00, day, duty not carried out)
20 September 1944 - Pas de Calais (3.35, day)
25 September 1944 - Pas de Calais (5.35, day)
26 September 1944 - Pas de Calais (4.45, day)
27 September 1944 - Bottrop (6.00, day)
28 September 1944 - Cap Gris Nez (4.00, day)
4 October 1944 - Bergen (5.55, day)
6 October 1944 - Dortmund (6.25)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (3.30, day)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (3.15)
15 October 1944 - Wilhelmshaven (4.55)
19 October 1944 - Stuttgart (6.50)

The course at No.19 (P) AFU lasted 19 October 1943 to 11 January 1944. He flew Oxford aircraft (36 hours five minutes day dual, 64 hours 30 minutes day solo, taking 8.05 dual before solo plus 8.50 night dual, 18.55 night solo and requiring one hour night dual before going night solo. He also logged 13.30 in Link. Assesses as "An average pilot, who flies carefully and well. His judgement could be better, however, and he seems a little slow to grasp things. Aircraft handling quite good, and should become a useful pilot when he has gained more experience."

The course at No.22 OTU lasted from 27 January to 12 April 1944. He flew Wellingtons (7.25 day dual to day solo, 8.45 day dual, 9.15 at controls with a captain by day and 31.30 at controls without a captain by day; 5.20 night dual to night solo, 6.50 night dual in all, 5.30 at controls by night with a captain, 30.05 at controls by night without a captain); flew 27.30 on instruments and 17.30 on Link. He took part in no "Nickel" raids, but flew one "Bullseye" exercise and three fighter affiliations. Ground subjects were Airmanship (225 out of 300), Armament (258 out of 300), Meteorology (44 out of 100), Navigation (180 out of 200) and Signals (76 out of 100), rating 78.3 % in ground training. Flying Tests were as follows: General Flying (200 out of 400), Applied Flying (105 out of 200), Instrument Flying (120 out of 250), Night Flying (50 out of 100), and Link (24 out of 50), giving an average of 49.9 percent. Assessed as follows: "Has completed general reconnaissance course. Exceedingly keen, smart and efficient, but does not take quickly to new type of aircraft. Possibly his small stature made Wellington aircraft difficult in early stages, but he is quite OK now. Very fine captain who stands no nonsense from his crew. Specially recommended for commission." The reference to his "small stature" is interesting - as of enlistment he was five feet six inches tall and weighed 115 pounds.

Involved in an accident, 0030 hours, 25 June 1944, Lancaster KB707. While landing he glided in too fast and neglected to lower his flaps. Aircraft ran off runway and was damaged, Category AC. Assesses as "Finger trouble on pilot's and Engineer's part. Recommend log books of both be endorsed."

Lancaster KB785 was airborne at 1420 hours, 24 November 1944 for night flying training. It crashed at 1823 hours near Bradbury, County Durham, killing all aboard. Aircraft had completed cross-country part of the flight and at 1812 hours was directed to Bradbury Bombing Range on bombing detail. Evidence was subsequently produced that the aircraft was on fire before the crash and may have had an explosion just as it arrived at the bombing range. Witnesses at the inquiry did not agree, but it appeared that he had applied hot air to engines while climbing through cloud to bombing height, then had inadvertently selected fuel jettison instead of cold air (both sets of levers operated in the same direction). However, the fuel jettison system did not work properly, and instead of dumping fuel outside the aircraft it allowed gasoline to flow into the rear of the main plane and possibly the fuselage. Whether or not there was fire, the pilot lost control close to Bradbury Village and passed over Sedgefield Railway Station at 400 feet, crashing 300 yards east of the railway station. The engines were buried, the fuselage thrown 600 yards, the petrol tanks exploded, and the wreckage burned for ten minutes. Besides its RCAF there was one member of the RAF aboard (1812280 Sergeant D.G. Newland, Flight Engineer). The court of inquiry noted, "The Lancaster fuel jettison system has been made inoperative in all aircraft in this Group until a satisfactory modification is received."

At the time of the crash, Pilot Officer Mansfield had logged solo 179 hours 40 minutes on Lancasters (plus one hour 45 minutes of dual instruction) and 478 hours 20 minutes solo on all types, including 41 hours 40 minutes on Halifax II aircraft. He had flown 27 sorties (152 hours 45 minutes).

As air bomber this warrant officer has completed a tour of operational duty. He has consistently displayed keenness and enthusiasm and set a fine example by his gallantry, skill and devotion to duty. On one occasion he was detailed for an attack against Mannheim. Whilst over the target area his aircraft was illuminated by searchlights and engaged by enemy night fighters. During the ensuing air combat a Focke Wulfe 190 was shot down and another enemy aircraft damaged.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9276 has recommendation dated 14 June 1944 when he had flown 28 sorties (164 hours 26 minutes) which gives much more detail:

1 Sept 1943 - Munich (9.45)

Warrant Officer Manson was posted to No.10 Squadron in August 1943 and after completing 28 sorties comprising 164 operational hours has been screened and posted for instructional duties.

Warrant Officer Manson was the Air Bomber of a particularly successful crew and although his aircraft has been attacked by enemy night fighters and damaged by flak he has operated with great coolness, skill and determination.

This Canadian Warrant Officer was the Air Bomber of a Halifax aircraft detailed to attack Mannheim. Whilst over the target the aircraft was coned by searchlights and immediately engaged by night fighters. During the engagement a FW.190 was shot down and claimed as destroyed, while another was claimed as damaged.

He has obtained good photographs of the target areas, several showing intense fire tracks. Warrant Officer Manson has always remained cool during runs up to the target and in cases of stress whilst over the target.

Warrant Officer Manson has now completed a very successful tour of operations and it is strongly recommended that his gallantry, skill and strong devotion to duty be recognized by the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MANSON, F/L Russell Herbert (J16078) - Air Force Cross - No.2 FIS - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born in St.Boniface, Manitoba, 8 February 1921 (RCAF press release announcing award); educated in Norwood, Manitoba. Worked for Commercial Insurance Agency, Winnipeg. enlisted there 19 October 1940. Trained at No.2 ITS (graduated 4 February 1941), No.14 EFTS (graduated 10 April 1941) and No.33 SFTS (graduated 2 July 1941). Medal presented 8 November 1945. Served in postwar RCAF (service number 19824); postings included exchange with USAF in Texas, command of No.115 Air Transport Unit (Sinai) and staff of AFHQ. Retired 1975. Died in Victoria, 24 April 2017. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Vol.59, file 190-I, dossier 7) has citation. When recommended he had flown 1,200 hours, 700 as instructor, 400 in previous six months.

Since returning from operations overseas, this officer, in nine months, has completed seven hundred hours of instruction. His zeal and energy, combined with his methodical and painstaking efforts to incorporate useful operational information in his air instruction, have served to instil confidence and vital knowledge in all his pupils. He has provided an outstanding example to both instructors and pupils alike. The devotion to duty displayed by this officer has been exceptional.

MANWARING, F/L Arthur Henry (J11840) - Commended for Valuable Services - Station Dorval - Award effective 7 September 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1647/45 dated 26 October 1945. Born 8 April 1918. Home in Toronto; enlisted there 7 March 1941 and granted Leave Without Pay. To No.1 Manning Depot, 22 June 1941. To No.1 SFTS (non-flying duty), 3 August 1941. To No.1 WS, 8 November 1941. Promoted LAC, 9 December 1941. To No.1 BGS, 25 April 1942; graduated and commissioned 25 May 1942. To No.31 OTU, 13 June 1942. To RAF Ferry Command, 30 June 1942. Eventually went overseas with a delivery flight. Promoted Flying Officer, 23 November 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 23 May 1944. Repatriated to Canada, 5 August 1945. Released 6 December 1945. No citation in Canadian sources. Public Records Office Air 2/9117 has recommendation drafted when he had flown uncertain total hours, 570 hours on transport or ferry operations and six hours in previous six months.

This officer is employed as radio navigator/wireless air gunner. He is an extremely able operator and a co-operative crew member. As navigator he has shown great skill and his services have been in much demand by both service and civilian captains engaged on Boston and Mosquito aircraft delivery flights. Owing to a flying accident from which he is now recuperating in hospital, this officer was only able to complete six hours flying within the past six months.

To Halifax, 23 June 1941. To RAF overseas, 5 July 1941. Taken on strength in Britain, 27 July 1941. To No.53 OTU, 3 August 1941. To No.411 Squadron, 23 September 1941. To Central Flying School, Upavon, 28 February 1942. To No.17 (P) AFU, 29 April 1942 Commissioned 29 October 1942. To No.21 (P) AFU, 25 January 1944. To No.24 OTU, 2 May 1944. To No.61 Base, 26 July 1944. Attached to No.1661 HCU, 26 July to 8 September 1944. To No.433 Squadron, 8 September 1944. Killed in action, 4 February 1945 (Lancaster PA219, "M" which collided with KB787 of No.419 Squadron); widow in UK; buried in Britain. He had completed 22 sorties (128 hours 55 minutes). His brother, Flight Sergeant Stanley Mara (Air Gunner) was killed in action on 15 October 1944 (Halifax HZ434, No.431 Squadron). RCAF photo PL-2915 shows Torontonians graduating from No.2 SFTS - G.H. Bayly, D.J. Sinclair, T.R.C. Adams, R.W. Gardiner, N.D. Mara, N.S. Baldwin, T.W. Gain, S.W. Pearce, D.A. Court, H.V. Thompson, W.B. Randall, J.A. Long.

One night in December 1944, this officer was the pilot of an aircraft detailed to attack Osnabruck. Before reaching the target, trouble was experienced with the port outer engine which began to misfire, followed by a large flame from the exhaust. The throttle control kept jumping back to the closed position. Despite this, Flight Lieutenant Mara went on to the target. Whilst on the bombing run, flames once again shot out from the exhaust. Nevertheless, this pilot continued his run and the bombs were released. At this point, two enemy aircraft attempted to close in. Flight Lieutenant Mara evaded them and course was set for home. Soon after crossing the enemy coast, the hydraulic system became unserviceable. The bomb doors fell open and the tail wheel dropped to the down position. Despite this, Flight Lieutenant Mara, when he reached an airfield, effected a safe landing. This officer displayed great skill and coolness in difficult circumstances.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9044 has recommendation drafted by W/C G.A. Tambling, Commanding Officer, No.433 Squadron, 27 December 1944 when he had flown 18 sorties (101 hours 40 minute).

On the night of December 6th/7th, 1944, this officer was captain of an aircraft detailed to attack the German city of Osnabruck. Just after crossing the French coast en route to the target, the port outer engine commenced to misfire followed by large flame from the exhaust, and the throttle control kept jumping back to the closed position. In spite of the trouble with this engine he pressed home his attack. Whilst on his bombing run flames appeared once again, but nevertheless he carried on and bombs were accurately dropped. At this point two night fighters were seen positioning themselves. During the ensuing attack, evasive action was taken and the aircraft was eventually forced down to 1,000 feet. Flight Lieutenant Mara then feathered the port outer engine and proceeded home at this level. Upon crossing the Dutch coast the hydraulic system went unserviceable, the bomb doors falling open and the tail wheel dropping. Despite these setbacks this officer managed to effect a safe landing at a diversionary base.

In my opinion this officer's display of exceptional skill and coolness plus his spirit of determination to achieve his objective fully merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

On 31 May 1943 (1700 hours), flying aircraft test and instructor's instrument flying on Master II DL351, with Sergeant H.J. Studley (RAF), he climbed to 5,000 feet and found all instruments reading normal. He carried out three slow rolls, each time cutting the throttle while in the inverted position. All remained normal until the fourth roll when the engine cut. He pumped the undercarriage down and executed a forced landing on Wrexham airfield without further damage to the aircraft. Carburettor had malfunctioned. S/L R.V.W. Kettlewell described it as "a very commendable forced landing." At the time he had 850 hours on all types, 520 hours on Masters.

The following is an excerpt from the letter sent to his widow on 8 February 1945 by W/C G.A. Tambling:

Neil had proven himself to be a great asset to the entire squadron in many capacities. His skilful pilotage and fine captaincy was an inspiration not only to his crew, but the whole squadron, and the manner in which he carried out his additional duties as Assistant Deputy Flight Commander and Air Sea Rescue Officer for the squadron was most impressive. During the six months that Neil had been at this unit, he made a host of friends and his absence is indeed felt by his comrades. His operational sorties were comprised of 22 trips totalling 128.55 operational hours, and the manner in which he carried out this phase of his work was amply indicated recently by the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The website "Lost Bombers" added the following to accounts of his final sortie. Lancaster PA219, No.433 Squadron (BM-M), target Bonn, 4/5 February 1945. PA219 was delivered to No.433 Squadron on 6 January 1945. No major operations previous to loss. Airborne at 1734 hours, 4 February 1945 from Skipton-on-Swale. Outbound, and flying in cloud, collided with a Lancaster from No.419 Squadron. Both aircraft crashed south of Vielsalm (Luxembourg) in the Belgian Ardennes. Airmen from the RAF Regiment assisted in the recovery of the fourteen who were killed and later marked their temporary graves with crosses. They have been subsequently re-interred in Hotton War Cemetery. Three of the five married RCAF officers had married English girls. Crew were F/L H.D.Mara, DFC, RCAF; F/O C.H.Howard, RCAF (second pilot killed); Sergeant L.J.Sims (killed); F/O W.L.Melbourne, RCAF (killed); F/O A.J.Tyrrell, RCAF (killed); P/O N.A.Hurst, RCAF (killed); WO2 B.T.Sheeran, RCAF (killed); P/O W.G.Whitton, RCAF.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9159 has recommendation drafted 17 July 1944 when he had flown 54 sorties (106 operational hours).

This officer is a keen and aggressive night fighter pilot and Flight Commander. He has destroyed three enemy aircraft at night, the last of which involved a "flat out" chase of five minutes to catch a Focke Wulf 410. In addition he has a number of Ranger sorties to his credit during which enemy airfields and other targets were successfully bombed. His courage and determination are an inspiration to the squadron.

MARCIL, FS (now P/O) Joseph Eugene Germain (R219039/J94155) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.425 Squadron - Award effective 5 July 1945 as per London Gazette dated 17 July 1945 and AFRO 1453/45 dated 14 September 1945. Born 19 September 1924 in Drummondville, Quebec; home in Montreal (shipper). Enlisted in Montreal, 9 February 1943. To No.1 Manning Depot, 2 March 1943. To No.4 BGS, 6 July 1943, serving there to 12 September 1943. To No.1 Air Gunner Ground Training School, 29 October 1943. To No.3 BGS, 10 December 1943; graduated 28 January 1944 when promoted Sergeant. To No.3 Air Gunner Ground Training School, 1 February 1944; to "Y" Depot, Halifax, 16 March 1944; taken on strength of No.3 Personnel Reception Centre, Bournemouth, 25 March 1944. Commissioned 11

January 1945. Repatriated 14 May 1945. Released 15 June 1945. Medal presented 5 October 1947.

In January 1945 Flight Sergeant Marcil was rear gunner in an aircraft detailed to attack Magdeburg. On the way to the target the aircraft was riddled by anti-aircraft fire and also attacked by a Messerschmitt 210. Flight Sergeant Marcil, with the co-operation of the mid-upper gunner, succeeded in shooting the enemy aircraft down in flames. The mission was completed and the aircraft returned safely to base. Flight Sergeant Marcil has at all times shown a fine fighting spirit, skill and devotion to duty of a very high order.

NOTE: Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.009 (D.1510), in National Archives of Canada, RG.24, Volume 20600, has recommendation drafted 5 February 1945 when he had flown 18 sorties (115 hours 55 minutes).

On the night of 16th January 1945, Flight Sergeant Marcil, a Rear Gunner, was detailed for operations to attack marshalling yards in Magdeburg, Germany.

On the way to the target over enemy territory between the cities of Hamburg and Bremen, this crew were attacked by a barrage of searchlights and predicted flak which lasted 15 minutes. Effective evasive action was taken and the crew continued their mission in spite of the aircraft being completely riddled.

At the point of release, Flight Sergeant Marcil, who was keeping a constant watch for enemy fighters, sighted a Me.210 dead astern at approximately 300 yards. With skill and outstanding coolness, this determined Non-Commissioned Officer immediately fired 100 rounds of ammunition. The tracers were seen to register in the port engine of the attacker. At the same time, the Bomb Aimer reported "Bombs Gone". The Rear Gunner gave corkscrew directions and the Mid-Upper Air Gunner fired a burst of 75 rounds of ammunition into the under part of the enemy fighter who was in a steep bank at a distance of 200 yards.

The Me.210 was last seen in a dive by the Flight Engineer and the Bomb Aimer and exploded on the ground. Although most of the navigation equipment were unserviceable, the aircraft returned back to base with no further incident. The outstanding efficiency, precision and exceptional cooperation of these two gunners have saved lives and their aircraft. Flight Sergeant Marcil has displayed presence of mind and good fighting spirit which is worthy of high praise. I strongly recommend him for the Immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

Warrant Officer Marcotte, a pilot, Canadian in the RCAF, since completing nine successful operational sorties over Germany, including such targets at Berlin, Frankfurt, Emden, and also a further 18 successful sorties on enemy targets in the Middle East, has carried out 13 successful sorties over Germany since joining this squadron. These operations include sorties to Hamburg, Cologne and Essen, as well as some difficult mining trips, making a total of 74 hours 15 minutes operational hours on this tour.

This Warrant Officer has carried out these attacks with constant skill and courage. With his calm and quiet manner, he has a fine offensive spirit in action and this, together with his splendid record and dogged determination, has set a fine example to the other members of the squadron. I consider his fine record of achievement, his tenacity, endurance and courage, fully merit the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

On 8 March 1943 the Officer Commanding, Station Dishforth, added:

Warrant Officer Marcotte has carried out successfully with courage and determination many bombing attacks against heavily defended targets. He enjoys the absolute confidence of his crew and of everyone with whom he works. I recommend he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross in recognition of his long and distinguished operational career.

On 29 March 1943 Air Vice-Marshal G.E. Brookes, Air Officer Commanding, No.6 Group, concurred, noting, "This Warrant Officer has done outstanding work as a pilot."

MARCOTTE, F/O Joseph Louis Albert Lucien (J86833) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.425 Squadron - Award effective 12 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 471/45 dated 16 March 1945. Born 28 August 1915 in Montreal; home there; enlisted there, 11 June 1942, in Wartime Emergency Training Plan. To No.5 Manning Depot, 11 August 1942. To No.6 BGS, 25 September 1942, To No.3 ITS, 4 January 1943; graduated and promoted LAC, 19 March 1943; to No.11 EFTS, 20 March 1943; graduated 14 May 1943 and posted next day to No.9 SFTS; graduated 3 September 1943 when promoted Sergeant. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 17 September 1943; taken on strength of No.3 Personnel Reception Centre, Bournemouth, 9 October 1943. Commissioned 22 May 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 22 November 1944. Repatriated 14 September 1945. Retired 13 July 1945. Served in interim RCAF, 26 April 1946 to 10 June 1947 with No.438 Squadron. Medal presented in Montreal, 25 November 1949. RCAF photo PL-41410 (ex UK-17825 dated 4 January 1945) shows two recent DFC winners having tea - F/O Lucien Marcotte and F/L Marcel Regimbald. Marcotte also shown alone in RCAF photos PL-41412 (ex UK-17827) and PL-41413 (ex UK-17828), both dated 4 January 1945).

As captain and pilot of aircraft this officer has participated in very many operational missions and throughout has set a high standard of skill, determination and keenness. In September 1944 he piloted an aircraft in an attack on Wanne Eickel. Heavy and concentrated anti-aircraft fire was encountered over the target area and Flying Officer Marcotte's aircraft was hit. The rear gunner and the wireless operator were wounded, the latter member seriously. Flying Officer Marcotte promptly directed another crew member to tend to the injured men and then coolly executed a successful bombing attack. He afterwards flew the aircraft to an airfield in this country in the shortest possible time so that the seriously wounded wireless operator could receive the urgent medical attention necessary to save his life. Flying Officer Marcotte has completed very many sorties and has invariably pressed home his attack with the greatest determination. He is a brave and devoted captain.

DHH file 181.009 D.1730 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20607) has original recommendation prepared by W/C Hugh Ledoux, 9 November 1944 when he had flown 29 sorties (145 hours 20 minutes).

During a raid on Wanne Eickel on September 12th, 1944, while on the bombing run, Flying Officer Marcotte experienced heavy and concentrated anti-aircraft fire. His Wireless Operator/Air Gunner was severely wounded and his Rear Gunner who was also hit and had to be removed from their respective posts. He instructed his Flight Engineer to attend to the men. He coolly and skillfully completed his mission with a telling attack. He then flew his aircraft at top speed to an English aerodrome. His exceptional airmanship contributed in no small measure in saving his Wireless Operator's life and also in bringing the rest of his crew and his aircraft to safety.

In all his sorties, many of which have been over the enemy's most heavily defended targets, Flying Officer Marcotte has shown himself to be a courageous and determined pilot.

Despite the violent opposition and hazards encountered he has always been keen to engage in operations and has amply proved his exemplary ability as a pilot and captain which duties he has always discharged most commendably.

Flying Officer Marcotte's remarkable record and outstanding leadership throughout his operational career merits my recommendation for the award of the immediate Distinguished Flying Cross.

He retired from the RCAF on 21 February 1966 and died in Drummond Township, Nepean, Ontario on 5 January 1999. Photo PL-44029 (ex UK-21412 dated 16 May 1945) shows him at RCAF hospital, Bournemouth, with "Squito", his cocker spaniel soon after he was flown back to England from POW camp.

This officer has completed, as pilot, numerous operations against the enemy, in the course of which he has invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty.

NOTE: The types of aircraft he flew were sufficiently varied as to bear remark. Two forms, one filled in March 1948 and the other in June 1951, track his flying career. The numbers are not consistent from one date to the next, but the range of machines flown remains interesting:

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire with his account of being shot down in Lancaster W/405, 20/21 February 1945, target Dortmund. He stated he had flown 30 sorties including this one. Narrative as follows:

Aircraft W, Lancaster, took off from Gransden Lodge approximately 2200 hours. Set course, target Dortmund. Due on target at H plus 2 (approximately, i.e. about 0030 hours), 21 February 1945 as visual centrer (P.F.F.). Ran up on target through slight barrage flak. Dropped about one minute late (i.e. H plus 3) and waited for picture. Camera was turning over when hit by flak in port outer and No.2 starboard tank - both on fire. Ordered crew prepare bale out. About one minute later ordered crew bale out, having feathered and put out fire in port outer but tank fire was spreading rapidly. Saw all crew except Mid Upper Gunner and Rear Gunner bale out. Baled out myself. Landed in tree, gave self up to farmer as wounded in left knee and hand, making escape impossible. Wounds were received at same time as aircraft was hit.

The website "Lost Bombers" provides the following on his being shot down. Lancaster PB530, No.405 Squadron (LQ-W), target Dortmund, 20/21 February 1945. This aircraft was a Mk.III and was delivered to No.582 Squadron from No.32 Maintenance Unit in September 1944, joining No.405 Squadron on 12 October 1944. PB530 took part in the following operations: none with No.582 Squadron. With No.405 Squadron, Stuttgart, 19/20 October 1944; Essen, 23/24 October 1944; Dortmund, 20/21 February 1945 when lost. No accounting for the period 24 October 1944 - 20 February 1945. Airborne at 2220 hours, 20 February 1945 from Gransden Lodge. Cause of loss and crash-site not established by webmaster. Crew consisted of Flight Sergeant G.E. Bolland (killed, DFM gazetted 1 March 1946; left the aircraft by parachute but did not survive the descent); S/L H.F.Marcou, DFC, AFC, RCAF (injured); F/O T.W.Downey (injured); F/O R.O.Norse, RNZAF (injured); F/O B.G.Smoker (injured); F/O J.A. Lewis (injured); F/O J.T.Ross. RCAF (POW); Technical Sergeant J.W.Verner, USAAF (injured). Survivors were confined in hospital due to injuries until liberation. No POW numbers.

MARCUS, FS (now P/O) Norman (R161644/J92470) - Mention in Despatches - No.432 Squadron - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1600/45 dated 12 October 1945. WOPAG. Born 9 November 1916. Home in Ottawa; enlisted there 27 April 1942 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To Technical Training School, 5 July 1942. To No.4 ITS, 31 July 1942; promoted LAC, 1 September 1942; to Trenton, date uncertain; to No.2 Air Gunner Ground Training School, 17 April 1943. To No.3 BGS, 29 May 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 6 August 1943. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 6 September 1943; taken on strength of No.3 Personnel Reception Centre, Bournemouth, 4 October 1943. Commissioned 16 November 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 16 April 1945. Repatriated 13 June 1945. To No.663 Wing, Tiger Force, 6 August 1945. Retired 19 September 1945. Unit identified in AFRO only as "Overseas"; proper unit identified in DHist file 181.009 D.1725 (PAC RG.24 Box 20607). WOPAG. DHist file 181.009 D.1722 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation drafted by W/C J.K. MacDonald (CO, No.432 Squadron) dated 2 October 1944 for Marcus, Ranson, Stokx, Walker, Wyers, and 1890323 FS Eric Arthur Slaughter (RAF Flight Engineer).

On September 26th, 1944, these NCOs were members of a crew detailed to attack Calais. The enemy put up effective anti-aircraft fire before and after the actual attack. Their aircraft was badly damaged and difficult to control, but as the Flight Engineer had his parachute shot to pieces it was decided that they would fight it out and stay with the ship. The effort against great odds was successful and each member of the crew proved to be courageous and skilful in his duties under these adverse conditions. For their dogged determination, devotion to duty and to their fellow crew members they are strongly recommended for an award of Mention in Despatches.

MARGERISON, F/L Clarence Christopher William (J7337) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.571 Squadron - Award effective 5 December 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 293/45 dated 16 February 1945. Born 17 December 1914 in Carroll, British Columbia; home in Cloverdale, British Columbia; educated at University of British Columbia; enlisted in Vancouver, 6 January 1941 and immediately posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.6 AOS (guard duty), 27 January 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot again, 14 March 1941. To No.2 ITS, 29 March 1941; promoted LAC, 2 May 1941 and posted that date to No.18 EFTS; to No.15 SFTS, 2 July 1941. Graduated and commissioned on 13 September 1941. To Embarkation Depot, date uncertain; to RAF Trainee Pool, 13 December 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 13 February 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 13 September 1943. Repatriated to Canada on 1 February 1945. To Western Air Command, 13 February 1945. To No.8 OTU, 21 March 1945. Remained in RCAF, 1 October 1946 as Flight Lieutenant (19697). Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 June 1951. Attained rank of Wing Commander before retirement. Medal presented 9 July 1949.

One night in October 1944 this officer was the pilot of an aircraft detailed for a mine-laying mission. Considerable anti-aircraft fire was encountered in the target area but Flight Lieutenant Margerison completed his task with skill and precision. This officer has participated in very many sorties and has set a fine example of courage and determination.

To "Y" Depot, 29 August 1942. To RAF overseas, 2 October 1942. Repatriated 2 June 1945. To No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945. To No.663 Wing, Greenwood, for "Tiger Force" training, 31 July 1945. To Halifax, 7 September 1945. Released 13 September 1945. RCAF photo PL-19951 (ex UK-5376 dated 28 September 1943) is captioned as follows: "Flight Lieutenant H.T. Miles, DFC is captain of a crew which is now on Lancasters. He has completed 40 operational trips, mostly on Stirlings, some trips on Halifaxes. He has recently been made Flight Commander. The members of the crew from left to right are mid-upper gunner Sergeant D.C. Sheppard (R120619, Regina, Saskatchewan; bomb aimer Flying Officer D.B. Young (J14819, Vancouver); flight engineer Sergeant H.L. Grayson (R68020, London, Ontario); rear gunner Sergeant D. Beynton (R110387, Abbotsford, awarded a DFM for having shot down a Ju.88); pilot F/L H.T. Miles, DFC (Toronto); wireless operator Sergeant P.M. Hughes (655043, Blackpool, Lancs); and the navigator, is Flying Officer J.E. Marier (J13819, Toronto). RCAF photo PL-32036 (ex UK-14192 dated 24 August 1944) shows two RCAF navigators who interrogate as well as fly. Seated F/O H.J. "Slim" Pittman of Montreal; standing is F/L Jack Marier of Toronto. RCAF photo PL-32037 (ex UK-14193 dated 24 August 1944) is captioned as follows: "Navigation Leader of the RCAF Bomber Group's Bluenose Squadron, Flight Lieutenant Jack Marier has to instruct and interrogate other navigators, as well as take part in operations himself. This 'gen man', as they call the type in the Air Force, comes from Toronto. He is almost finished his first tour." Medal presented in Toronto, 30 November 1949. Postwar he acquired a business degree at the University of Toronto, being in business in Toronto, Windsor and Vancouver (settling in the latter in 1961). Died in Vancouver, 18 May 2011. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1941 (RG.24 Vol.20612) has recommendation dated 24 January 1945 when he had flown 30 sorties (179 hours 45 minutes), 24 June 1943 to 14 January 1945, divided between No.408 Squadron (24 June 1943 to a Berlin raid in March 1944, 22 sorties) and No.434 Squadron (20 July 44 to 14 January 1945, nine sorties). Sortie list is very detailed listing many engagements with flak and fighters. Returning from Berlin, 21 January 1944, they landed at Dalton with ten minutes' fuel left ("All England fogged in - really hairy"); crash-landing at base after raid on Magdeburg, 21 January 1944, orbited over Berlin defences in March, and on 10 September 1944, bombing Le Havre, took movies and stills.

Flight Lieutenant Marier as navigator has completed a tour of operations, the majority of which were attacks against major German targets including five sorties against Berlin. He has displayed high navigational skill at all times, remaining cool and navigating accurately back to base on several occasions when his aircraft has been seriously damaged by enemy action.

As squadron navigation leader he has carried out his duties very efficiently, holding the high respect of all those under him and proving himself a tower of strength to the squadron. His devotion to duty and fine offensive spirit have been an example worthy of emulation by all members of the squadron.

The complete sortie list was as follows:

24 June 1943 - Wuppertal (5.55, fighter attack)
25 June 1943 - Gelsenkirchen (4.45, flak holes)

MARIER, FS Joseph Albert Marcel (R54497) - British Empire Medal - No.2 Bombing and Gunnery School - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born in Ottawa, 12 May 1918. Home in Eastview (Vanier), Ontario; employed by Continental Paper; enlisted in Ottawa, 7 September 1940 as Clerk/Admin. To No.2 BGS, 2 November 1940. Promoted AC1, 7 December 1940. Promoted Corporal, 1 July 1942. Promoted Sergeant, 1 December 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 November 1943. To No.13 SFTS, 16 December 1944. To Lachine, 28 March 1945. To "Y" Depot, 7 June 1945. To "K", 26 September 1945. Reverted to Sergeant in postwar RCAF (21195). Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 August 1945. Medal presented 10 January 1946, Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Volume 59, file 190-I, dossier 7) has citation.

Flight Sergeant Marier, during his four years in the Air Force, has shown outstanding executive ability in Air Force administration. He has been largely responsible for the efficient organization of station Orderly Room and Central Registry and has also been of great assistance in an advisory capacity to all other sections of this station. He has made sound, worthwhile suggestions which have undoubtedly been of great saving to the service both in man-hours and money and also have been the means of eliminating many common errors. This non-commissioned officer has conscientiously and tirelessly instructed his staff until he was sure that maximum efficiency has been attained. His character and personality, plus his absolute devotion to duty, have been such as to command respect from all personnel with whom he has come in contact.

Since joining his present squadron he has been occupied mainly with attacks on the railway and transport system of Germany and in armed reconnaissance work. Flight Lieutenant Marlatt has also taken part in close support missions during which he has achieved outstanding results. In support of the Rhine crossing he was engaged in harassing German communications, artillery concentrations, and troops, and in the latter stages of the war he participated in anti-shipping operations. As a flight commander he showed great ability and leadership and was materially responsible for the consistently good results achieved by his squadron.

MARQUET, Corporal Maurice (R87217) - George Medal - No.425 Squadron - Award effective 27 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 293/45 dated 16 February 1945. Born 21 May 1922 in Dollard, Saskatchewan; home in Meadow Lake (aero engine mechanic). Enlisted in Regina, 30 January 1941 as Aero Engine Mechanic. Posted that day to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.1 Manning Depot, 28 March 1941. To No.6 SFTS, 28 April 1941. To Technical Training School, St. Thomas, 16 May 1941. Promoted AC1, 20 September 1941. To "P", 24 September 1941. To "H", 26 November 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 January 1942. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 1 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 25 September 1942. Promoted Corporal, 1 April 1943. Repatriated to Canada, 7 August 1945. Released 24 September 1945. Rejoined RCAF, 9 January 1948 as an LAC and was still in the force as late as 1956 (service number 27392). Event also led to award of George Cross to A/C A.D. Ross, George Medal to FS J.R.M. St.Germain, and BEM to LACs M.M. McKenzie and R.R. Wolfe. Presented at Buckingham Palace, 7 November 1944.. Photo PL-33961 shows A/V/M McEwen congratulating St. German, McKenzie, and Marquet. PL-33963 and PL-33979 show Marquet alone. PL-33981 taken outside Buckingham Palace shows Marquet, St.Germain, Ross, and McKenzie. PL-40168 shows McEwen with Marquet, Ross and McKenzie. NOTE: See DHist file 181.009 D.1725 (RG.24 Volume 20607) shows that Marquet was originally recommended for a George Cross (downgraded to GM); St.Germain was originally recommended for a George Medal (and it stood).

One night in June 1944, an aircraft, while attempting to land, crashed into another which was parked in the dispersal area and fully loaded with bombs. The former aircraft had broken into three parts and was burning furiously. Air Commodore Ross was at the airfield to attend the return of aircraft from operations and the interrogation of aircrews. Flight Sergeant St.Germain, a bomb aimer, had just returned from an operational sortie and Corporal Marquet was in charge of the night ground crew, whilst Leading Aircraftmen McKenzie and Wolfe were members of the crew of the crash tender. Air Commodore Ross, with the assistance of Corporal Marquet, extricated the pilot who had sustained severe injuries. At that moment ten 500-pound bombs in the second aircraft, about 80 yards away, exploded, and this officer and airman were hurled to the ground. When the hail of debris had subsided, cries were heard from the rear turret of the crashed aircraft. Despite further explosions from bombs and petrol tanks which might have occurred, Air Commodore Ross and Corporal Marquet returned to the blazing wreckage and endeavoured in vain to swing the turret to release the rear gunner. Although the port tail plane was blazing furiously, Air Commodore Ross hacked at the perspex with an axe and then handed the axe through the turret to the rear gunner who enlarged the aperture. Taking the axe again the Air Commodore, assisted now by Flight Sergeant St.Germain as well as by Corporal Marquet, finally broke the perspex steel frame supports and extricated the rear gunner. Another 500-pound bomb exploded which threw the three rescuers to the ground. Flight Sergeant St.Germain quickly rose and threw himself upon a victim to shield him from flying debris. Air Commodore Ross' arm was practically severed between the wrist and elbow by the second explosion. He calmly walked to the ambulance and an emergency amputation was performed on arrival at station sick quarters. Meanwhile, Corporal Marquet had inspected the surroundings and, seeing petrol running down towards two nearby aircraft, directed their removal from the vicinity by tractor. Leading Aircraftmen McKenzie and Wolfe rendered valuable assistance in trying to bring the fire under control and they also helped to extricate the trapped rear gunner, both being seriously injured by flying debris. Air Commodore Ross showed fine leadership and great heroism in an action which resulted in the saving of the lives of the pilot and rear gunner. He was ably assisted by Flight Sergeant St.Germain and Corporal Marquet who both displayed courage of a high order. Valuable service was also rendered by Leading Aircraftmen McKenzie and Wolfe in circumstances of great danger.

NOTE: The original recommendation for Corporal Marquet, drafted 4 July 1944 by W/C L. Lecomte, read as follows:

On the night of June 27th, 1944, Corporal Marquet was duty Non-Commissioned Officer in charge of the night ground crew awaiting the return of aircraft from operations. Without consideration for his personal safety, this Non-Commissioned Officer rushed to a nearby crash to assist the crew. By his coolness and presence of mind he immediately checked the burning nose section which was separated from the rest of the aircraft and hurried back to the centre section where he found the injured pilot. Air Commodore A.D. Ross joined Corporal Marquet and both carefully extricated him from a perilous situation. Through scattered bomb and gas tank explosions, Corporal Marquet rushed to the rear gunner still helpless in his turret. More help arrived and the gunner was saved. With outstanding fortitude and skill this Non-Commissioned Officer directed the ambulance and personally saw to the injured pilot's safety. He then ensured that all members of the crew had been saved and proceeded to inspect the surroundings of the explosion. Upon discovering the petrol running down towards two aircraft, he, under intensive heat and occasional small explosions, fearlessly towed away these two aircraft to a safe dispersal by means of a tractor. Shortly after, more bombs, gas tanks and ammunition exploded all around the crash area.

Corporal Marquet's tenacity, endurance and dogged determination has saved life and complete destruction of two aircraft. His cool courage and conspicuous devotion to duty regardless of possible loss of his own life, is worthy of the highest order. In recognition of his good service, I recommend that he be awarded the George Cross.

Promoted LAC, 1 July 1942. To "Y" Depot, 8 March 1943. To RAF overseas, 27 March 1943. Repatriated to Canada, 18 June 1945. To No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945. To Greenwood for Tiger Force, 31 July 1945. To Halifax, 4 September 1945. Released 6 September 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.1719 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation dated 3 February 1945 when he had served 30 months in Canada, 21 months overseas. Fitter IIE.

This airman by his willingness to work hard without stint to complete even the most difficult job has set a high example to all the other airmen in his section. He is constantly trying out new schemes in his own time to improve the standard of work in his trade and is encouraging his fellow airmen by his outstanding devotion to duty.

MARR, F/L William Lloyd (J9873) - Air Force Cross - No.409 Squadron - Award effective 3 April 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 802/45 dated 11 May 1945. Born 5 July 1917. Home in Langley, British Columbia; enlisted in Vancouver, 6 June 1940. To No.1 ITS, 24 June 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 19 July 1940; posted that date to No.8 EFTS; may have graduated 15 September 1940 but not posted to No.4 SFTS until 12 October 1940; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 20 December 1940. To "E", 20 December 1940. To No.8 SFTS, 25 February 1941. To No.1 Flying Instructor School, 2 September 1941. Commissioned 15 December 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 15 August 1942. To "Y" Depot, 11 October 1942. To RAF overseas, as of that date. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 December 1943. Repatriated 14 May 1945. To Western Air Command, 27 May 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 26 July 1945. Retired 27 July 1945. Medal sent by registered mail 7 June 1950. RCAF photo PL-1531 taken 27 September 1940 at No.8 EFTS shows LAC L. Marr (Langley Prairie, B.C.), LAC Barney Boe (North Vancouver), LAC L.F. Hickey (Summerland, B.C.), and LAC G.C. Lancaster (Revelstoke, B.C.). RCAF photo PL-42250 (ex UK-19107 dated 27 February 1945 is captioned

Flight Lieutenant Marr has flown a total of 2,113 hours of which 415 hours have been at night. He served for eighteen months at Central Flying School in Canada in which time he was considered well above the average in flying ability and in interest shown in Station and Squadron activities. He has always been a tower of strength in Squadron affairs since arriving here and though he has had bad luck in contact with the enemy (on two occasions his guns jammed when in position to make a kill), he has never lost interest and has shown exceptional and outstanding keenness at all times. During his long tour he has had five successful single engine landings at night and during his entire service career at no time has he had the slightest mishap or damaged his aircraft.

NOTE: His work in Canada involved hazards as well. On 27 August 1942, at Central Flying School, Trenton (Harvard 2971) he was instructing in spinning when engine caught fire and throttle jammed. He made a forced landing with undercarriage retracted.

RCAF Press Release 4475 dated 2 November 1944 tells a little more about his services:

With a Canadian Night Fighter Squadron in France - Hitler slept here once, the villagers say, but the little painter would probably eat an extra rug if he could see the present occupants of this beautiful old French chateau.

They are the RCAF's Nighthawk Mosquito squadron, who moved into the former German officers' luxurious billets when they took over a nearby airfield.

Flight Lieutenant Bill Marr of Langley Prairie, British Columbia, pilot and advance man for the squadron when it moves, showed a sense of history - and maybe humour - when he picked on the roomy chateau as billets for the Mosquito men, who have helped chop down Hitler's once-powerful night fighting force by 35 planes since D-Day.

The dining hall gives a hint of Hitler's dream of conquest in a mural depicting an eagle-crested compass which completely encircles Great Britain, France and Russia, the painter using a touch of artistic license to make the geography conform to his ideas of greater Germany.

MARRIOTT, F/L Edwin Thomas (J7031) - Mention in Despatches - No.145 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 21 April 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 802/45 dated 11 May 1945. Born 4 January 1921. Home in Bateman, Saskatchewan; enlisted in Ottawa, 31 October 1940. To No.8 SFTS, 8 December 1940. To No.1 ITS, 3 March 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 10 April 1941; posted that date to No.3 EFTS; graduated 28 May 1941 and posted to No.1 SFTS; graduated and commissioned 20 August 1941. To Central Flying School, 21 August 1941. To No.32 SFTS, 25 November 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 20 August 1942. To No.9 SFTS, 16 October 1942. To No.34 OTU, 2 April 1943. To No.145 (BR) Squadron, 12 July 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 December 1943. To No.2 Air Command, 11 March 1945. To Release Centre, 19 September 1945. Released 22 September 1945.

This officer has proved himself a most able and competent flight commander and pilot. On his many operations over the North Atlantic he has exhibited skill and leadership of a very high order. He has been an inspiration and example to all who have served under him.

To No.4 Training Command, 22 July 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 April 1944. To Northwest Air Command, 15 June 1944. To "Y" Depot, Lachine, 28 December 1944. To United Kingdom, 4 January 1945. Repatriated 10 July 1945. Reverted to WO2 as of 1 October 1946. Promoted WO1, 1 October 1948. Commissioned 1 January 1949 in rank of Flight Lieutenant. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 January 1953. Retired 23 January 1961.

Warrant Officer Marriott was posted to this station to reorganize the Motor Transport Section. He has proved himself to be a most capable administrator. By his own efforts and teaching he has made a most praiseworthy improvement in the standard of knowledge of all Motor Transport personnel on the station and has given without stint his off-duty hours to further their program. He is an excellent disciplinarian and leader, and outstanding in all respects among the warrant officers of this station.

To No.426 Squadron, 20 October 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 10 January 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 16 March 1943. Killed in action 17/18 August 1943 (Lancaster DS681); buried in Germany. His brother, Lieutenant W.H.C. Marsh, served in the First Canadian Armoured Car Regiment (Royal Canadian Dragoons). Medal presented to next-of-kin. Cited with F/O D.W. Simpson (RCAF, navigator).

One night in April 1943, these officers were wireless operator and navigator, respectively, of an aircraft detailed to attack Duisburg. When nearing the target area the bomber was engaged by an enemy fighter and sustained severe damage. On the return flight Flying Officer Simpson displayed exceptional navigational ability in most difficult circumstances, and Flight Lieutenant Marsh, who skilfully obtained bearing, rendered him valuable assistance. Both these members of aircraft crew displayed great coolness and skill in a perilous situation.

NOTE: Assessed on 23 July 1943 by W/C L. Crooks as Squadron Signals Leader. He had flown 408 hours 40 minutes (30 hours ten minutes in previous six months) and was described as "Strong sense of loyalty. Keen and smart. Carries out his duties in an efficient manner."

When he went missing the crew consisted of the following: 44054 W/C L. Crooks, DSO, DFC (on second tour, 41 hours ten minutes on that tour), 1254491 FS A.J. Howes (navigator, first tour, two sorties, 9 hours 55 minutes), F/L Marsh, 1217087 Sergeant K.W. Reading (air bomber, first tour, three sorties, 16 hours 15 minutes), 1567321 Sergeant J.C. Hislop (flight engineer, engaged in his first sortie), J26605 P/O T. Dos Santos (Trinidadian, mid-upper gunner, engaged on his first sortie) and R.100881 Sergeant D.M. Smith (rear gunner, first tour, 25 sorties, 151 hours).

DHH file 181.009 D.2624 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20628) has correspondence respecting securing Caterpillar Club badges for 44054 W/C Leslie Crooks, DSO, DFC, J15643 Flight Lieutenant Francis Peter Marsh, DFC, J11110 Flying Officer Donald Wallace Simpson, DFC, J20163 Pilot Officer Lawrence Henry Power (POW, 27 January 1944), R121044 Sergeant James Austin Thomson (killed in action, 13 May 1943), and R132613 Sergeant Thomas Ferguson How (killed in action, 13 May 1943). Letter dated 21 May 1943 read, in part:

On the morning of the 27th April [1943] an aircraft of this squadron was returning from an operational sortie. It had been badly damaged by enemy action, the hydraulic lines were shot away and the bomb doors damaged in such a way that the aircraft could not drop its bomb load. The captain, Wing Commander L. Crooks, DSO, DFC, was unable to land the aircraft and had therefore to order the crew to bale out. All members of the crew jumped safely and it was the first jump for all of them. Wing Commander Crooks and Pilot Officer Power suffered slight injuries in the form of a strained back and three small bones broken in one foot.

No citation other than "completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty. DHist file 181.009 D.2611 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation by G/C J.G. Kerr (CO, Skipton-on-Swale) dated 24 December 1944 when he had flown 25 sorties (133 hours ten minutes), 12 July to 17 December 1944.

This officer, who now commands No.433 (RCAF) Squadron, is nearing the completion of a most successful tour of operations. At the commencement of his tour, he showed himself to be a resolute Captain who moulded his crew into an exceptionally fine fighting team. His keenness to fly on operations coupled with his natural ability as a pilot was immediately outstanding.

In due course he assumed command of a flight. Here, with great scope for his energy and ability, he proved to be of great assistance to his Squadron Commander.

For the past two months he has been employed on his present duties. Once again, his ability to organize and direct have produced excellent results and the efficiency and morale of his squadron has shown remarkable improvement. He himself continues to set an outstanding example as an operational pilot. He purposely details himself for the most difficult targets and on every operation he shows great determination in pressing home his attacks.

Throughout his operational career, this officer's work has been outstanding in all phases and I strongly recommend the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows:

The following appeared in the Globe and Mail of 11 November 2009:

Group Captain Murray Marshall learned to fly as a teenager in the Second World War and shared his enthusiasm with hundreds of young air force pilots over a 23-year career. A quiet individual, he seldom spoke of his war years and referred to himself as a dull man. Dull or not, he brought his aircrew safely home after every mission through the deadly summer of 1944.

Murray Marshall was born in 1921 in Ancaster, Ont., northwest of Hamilton, the 10th child of a prominent farm family that had lived in the area for almost a century. He earned his Royal Canadian Air Force pilot's wings a year after graduating from high school and, by his 20th birthday, he was teaching teenage recruits to fly over the fields of southwestern Ontario. In 1943, he was assigned to the RCAF's 427 Squadron in England and switched from two-seater, single-engine Harvards to huge four-engine Halifax bombers that carried seven crew and 6,000 kilograms of bombs. The skies above Britain's airbases were crowded with beginner and veteran pilots and conversion unit training mishaps often added to the RCAF's high casualty lists. Bomber crews serving overseas had a 50-per-cent survival rate.

During the Halifax course, 20-year-old Nick Markin joined Mr. Marshall's crew as the mid-upper gunner. He remembers his tall flight lieutenant as a very quiet, very calm pilot. Nothing seemed to phase him. When a tail control snapped during takeoff, the 21-metre-long plane swerved dangerously off the runway into a field, but Mr. Marshall's reaction was typically low key. "I wonder what caused that", he asked casually when the plane came to rest. "We were glad we had him", said Mr. Markin, 87, of Port Coquitlam, B.C., "He brought us home every time". While pilots normally hand picked their entire crew, Mr. Marshall was assigned a British radio operator who had experienced two fiery crashes and was suffering from bad nerves. Worried that the man would be charged with lack of moral fibre for what would today be recognized as post-traumatic stress, Mr. Marshall quietly talked him through the panic attacks of nausea and shaking that accompanied every takeoff and landing.

On April 26, 1944, the night before his 23rd birthday, Mr. Marshall made his first bombing flight with the RCAF 427 Squadron out of Leeming, North Yorkshire. The flights were usually eight hours long, starting and ending over the English Channel, a body of water that held no appeal for Mr. Marshall. Near the end of his tour, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross for the skill he showed in bringing his badly damaged Halifax home rather than ditching it in the sea. He held the plane steady while the crew members decided if they should bail out, his daughter Susan said. In the end, they stayed with the plane, she said. But Dad had no intention of jumping. He hated cold water. Typically, he attributed his survival to the skill of his crew. He told his wife Dorothy that navigator Mac McLeod was the one who always got them home. Even when they were flying on fumes with no oil and all shot up, Mac found their way back. Mrs. Marshall said her husband told her that the crew members always peed on the plane's back wheel for good luck before takeoff. Mr. Markin credits Mr. Marshall's skill with the survival of the crew and its Halifax through 37 missions, mostly over Germany and France. He was very clever. When the search lights came on, he was able to take evasive action like no one else. During one flight, the bomber kept bumping up slightly and settling back down. We didn't even know what was causing it until we got back home. There were 113 holes in the fuselage from ack-ack [anti-aircraft fire]. The summer weather of 1944 made for clear flying and Mr. Marshall's crew flew so regularly that they fulfilled their quota of missions by September. One assignment was to bomb German positions prior to the Normandy invasion, during which 150,000 Allied soldiers landed in France on the first day.

That fall Mr. Marshall returned to flight instructor duties in Canada and, before his next overseas tour started, the war was over. By Christmas 1945, he had returned to civilian life and his father's potato farm. He began courting Dorothy Gleed, a registered nurse at Hamilton's Veterans Hospital, whom he had met in high school. They married in early 1948 and bought a potato farm of their own north of Waterdown, Ont.

Mr. Marshall seldom spoke of his wartime experiences, but he was not finished with the RCAF. He joined Hamilton's 424 auxiliary Tiger squadron and spent the next 18 years flying a range of fighters, including Harvards, Mustangs and the T-133 Silver Star training jet. By 1953 he was the squadron's commanding officer and, in 1960, was promoted to commander of 16 Wing, which administered a number of local reserve squadrons including the 424. Administrative duties took up two nights a week and his reward was a Saturday or Sunday in the sky. Mrs. Marshall said that her husband's reserve duties once got them better phone service after an RCAF emergency call was blocked by a local operator. There were 15 people on our party line and late one night the operator wouldn't put a call through for fear of waking everyone up (if all the telephones rang). The air force had a private line installed in the Marshall home the next day.

Summer was a busy time for a potato farmer, so Mr. Marshall usually missed extended military exercises in the warm months, but he had no excuse to skip a winter survival course in 1962 near Fort St. John in northeastern British Columbia. Dropped off in dangerously cold weather with only a survival kit, the small group of pilots were contemplating a miserable night when they stumbled across an isolated homestead. The family took them in and fed them before they resumed roughing it the following day. George Stewart, a veteran fighter pilot and fellow reservist, remembers his former commander fondly. Everyone liked him. He wasn't a braggadocio kind. Murray was a great, regular guy. A very good pilot. A great competitor. A good leader.

That skill and competitive nature contributed in 1953 to the success of the 424 in the air force's annual gunnery competition. Mr. Marshall and Mr. Stewart were part of the five-man team that won the MacBrien Trophy in their P51 Mustangs, beating out the country's best regular-force fighter pilots. Their green single-prop fighters carried the squadron's distinctive logo of a tiger ready to pounce out of Mount Hope, the 424's hilltop base. Susan Marshall grew up used to seeing her farmer father in uniform as he moved back and forth between his fields and the air base. I remember going to change-of-command ceremonies and taking the salute at the cenotaph on Remembrance Day. He had his air force, but I was more interested in my horse shows. Those special-occasion duties continued long after he retired from the RCAF in 1964 when 424 Squadron was disbanded. The family joke was that when dad had to take the salute, mom had to put him on a diet so that his uniform would fit, Susan said. After his air force retirement, he bought a share in a private plane and continued to fly until age 66.

One of his proudest duties was a four-year appointment as an honorary aide-de-camp to Governor-General Georges Vanier whenever royal duties brought the GG or royal visitors to the Hamilton area. He attended the Queen during her 1959 visit. Despite his senior rank and personal success, Mr. Marshall never forgot the needs of other veterans. For 30 years he worked with the Ontario chapter of the RCAF Benevolent Fund, a volunteer organization that provided financial assistance and counselling to airmen and women who had fallen on hard times. Fifteen of those years were as provincial chair. As quiet a veteran as he was, he liked the camaraderie of other servicemen. He was a regular at the Royal Hamilton Military Institute, a donor to the Warplane Heritage Museum and a keen member of the Halifax Bomber Association that recovered a crashed Halifax bomber in 1995. After 350,000 hours of volunteer time, the Halifax, shot down in Norway in 1945, went on display at Trenton's National Air Force Museum. Suffering from Parkinson's disease, cancer and a broken hip in recent years, Mr. Marshall talked of taking one last look at his beloved Halifax but he never got the opportunity. So he watched the sky instead. To Mrs. Marshall, her husband's affection for flying was clear. He loved the clouds, loved to do aerobatics through them. Even when he was sick, he would look at them and say he wished he was barreling through them.

To No.5 Manning Depot, 7 August 1942. To No.3 ITS, 29 August 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 23 October 1942; to No.4 AOS, 7 November 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 5 March 1943. To "Y" Depot, 19 March 1943; to RAF overseas, 27 March 1943; promoted Flight Sergeant, 5 September 1943. Commissioned 24 March 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 24 September 1944. Repatriated 21 December 1944. To No.1 Air Command, 14 January 1945. To No.1 Central Navigation School, 9 March 1945. To Release Centre, 18 September 1945. Retired 25 September 1945. Medal presented 27 May 1949.

Throughout his operational tour this officer has displayed outstanding courage and determination. He has participated in many attacks against heavily defended targets including Berlin, Essen and Dusseldorf. On one occasion during a mission to Berlin in March 1944, his aircraft was illuminated by searchlights for fifteen minutes. Although evasive action was taken, anti-aircraft fire was most intense and the aircraft was damaged. Despite poor visibility and high winds Flying Officer Marshall gave his pilot valuable assistance in locating the target and it was successfully attacked. His outstanding technical skill and initiative have largely contributed to the success of many operations.

The original recommendation (DHH file 181.009 D.1633, National Library and Archives RG.24 Volume 20603) was drafted 10 October 1944 by S/L L.P. Dupuis when Marshall had flown 36 sorties (188 hours 30 minutes). Sortie list and submission as follows:

As navigator on a bomber, Pilot Officer Marshall has recently completed a tour of operations over the heavily defended targets of Berlin, Stuttgart, Essen, Frankfurt, Nuremberg, Karlsruhe, Dusseldorf and Castrop Rauxel.

On one occasion when attacking Berlin on March 24th, 1944, the aircraft of which Pilot Officer Marshall was navigator was coned by searchlights. Evasive action was taken, but despite this, the aircraft remained coned for fifteen minutes. The visibility was very poor and high winds were tending to drive the aircraft off track. The flak was intense. One piece of flak tore a large hole in the nose of the aircraft.

Determined to bring the aircraft to the target, Pilot Officer Marshall was obliged to tie his equipment to the work table. The run in to the target was made and successful bombing was carried out.

The indomitable courage displayed by the navigator on this occasion characterized his navigational prowess throughout the whole tour. His outstanding devotion to duty is worthy of the highest praise.

In recognition of his outstanding efficiency and bravery, I strongly recommend Pilot Officer Marshall for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MARSHALL, F/O Robert George (J19504) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.428 Squadron - Award effective 3 November 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1/45 dated 5 January 1945. Born 23 October 1921 in Melancthon, Ontario; home there; enlisted Toronto, 23 October 1940. To No.1 WS, 6 December 1940; promoted LAC, 8 January 1941; graduated 27 April 1941 and posted next day to No.4 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 26 May 1941. Posted next day to Embarkation Depot. To RAF overseas, 18 June 1941. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 26 November 1941. Promoted WO2, 6 November 1942. Commissioned 12 November 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 12 May 1944. Repatriated 18 October 1944. To No.4 BGS, 6 December 1944. Retired 2 February 1945. Cited with F/L R.E. Curtis (RCAF, awarded DSO), F/O Dougal A. McGillivray (RCAF, awarded DSO) F/L Hugh F. Smith (RCAF, awarded DFC), F/O Charles F. Wattie (RCAF, awarded DFC) and Sergeant J.D. Rose (RAF, awarded DFM). Notwithstanding the citation, the incident described was 12 September (not August) 1944.

These officers and Sergeant Rose have participated in a very large number of sorties and have displayed skill, courage and devotion to duty worthy of the highest praise. In August 1944, they were members of the crew of an aircraft detailed to attack Dortmund. Whilst on the bombing run the aircraft came under heavy anti-aircraft fire and was hit. Flight Lieutenant Curtis was wounded in the head. Despite the severity of his injury, this brave pilot remained at the controls and pressed home his attack. Not until the task was accomplished did he ask for assistance. He afterwards collapsed and was placed in the rest position. Flying Officer McGillivray, the air bomber, then took over the controls and kept the aircraft on a course for home. During the return flight his comrades, Flight Lieutenant Smith, Flying Officers Marshall and Wattie and Sergeant Rose set a fine example of coolness and co-operation and did everything within their power to assist in flying the aircraft home. Eventually an airfield was reached. Although he had never previously landed an aircraft, Flying Officer McGillivray succeeded in bringing it down, being greatly assisted by the advice and directions of Sergeant Rose, the flight engineer. These members of aircraft crew displayed rare determination and great courage in perilous circumstances. Flight Lieutenant Curtis had sustained a compound fracture of the skull. Until the time he became incapable of further action he had displayed the courage and tenacity of a fine leader.

DHist file 181.009 D.3260 (RG.24 Vol.20637) has recommendation dated 15 September 1944 when he had flown 52 sorties (348 hours 35 minutes). These began with two sorties from Malta before continuing to Egypt, followed by 34 sorties with No.148 Squadron (25 June to 24 September 1942) and 21 sorties with No.428 Squadron (5 July to 12 September 1944). Flying Officer Marshall has completed two tours of operations as an Air Gunner and has completed sorties on many major targets. He has shown exceptional skill and determination and a keen desire to serve. On 12th August [sic] during the attack on Dortmund his pilot was dangerously wounded and the rear gunner killed by heavy flak. Flying Officer retained his coolness in the face of danger and cooperated with the crew in aiding the bomb aimer pilot the aircraft back to England.

For his all-around efficiency, coolness and courage, I recommend the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MARSHALL, S/L William Leslie (C3373) - Mention in Despatches - Station Linton - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Enlisted in Toronto, 9 December 1940 in Administration Branch. Served initially at Technical Training School. To "Y" Depot, 11 July 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 December 1941. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 October 1942. Repatriated 31 March 1945. Retired 31 May 1945. No citation in AFRO which also gives unit only as "Overseas". Station

Administrative Officer. DHist file 181.009 D.1719 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation dated 14 February 1944.

After a year and a half of noteworthy service at Technical Training School, St.Thomas, Ontario, Squadron Leader Marshall was posted in July 1942. He served three months as Adjutant of No.409 (RCAF) Squadron and subsequently assumed the duties of Station Adjutant and Squadron Leader Administrative at RCAF Station Dunsfold. Upon the entry of Eastmoor into No.6 (RCAF) Group in May 1943, he assumed the duties of Senior Administrative Officer there, and by his zeal, energy and efficient performance of his duties, which have been far in excess of normal requirements, played a vital part in building up a smooth running and effective station organization. Since December 4th he has performed similar duties at Linton. A very loyal and hardworking officer.

No citation other than "completed... numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1731 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20608) has recommendation dated 10 January 1945, when he had flown 27 sorties (158 hours 25 minutes):

On October 28th, 1944, Flying Officer Martel and his crew were detailed to take part in a daylight raid over Cologne, Germany.

Shortly after setting course, trouble developed in the port inner engine. Attempts were made to rectify the trouble but the gauges indicated that it was dangerous to operate it further. The pilot was forced to feather the engine. Determined to drive home a successful attack, he decided to carry on to the target on three engines.

The height from which the crew had been briefed to bomb was 21,000 feet. When the port inner engine was feathered, height was gradually lost. The target was bombed on time from 15,000 feet. On the trip to base, the port outer developed trouble. It could not do more than 1,800 revs per minute. Despite this fact, Flying Officer Martel completed the trip back to base successfully.

In times of stress, this officer's cool efficiency and unflinching devotion to duty have been a constant source of encouragement and confidence to the other members of his crew.

On many other sorties he has met with serious difficulties far inside enemy territory but this outstanding leader's exceptional airmanship and cool determination have always permitted him to successfully complete his missions.

From a Dave Brown column, Ottawa Citizen, 11 November 2012; Martel was then in the Perley Veterans Home, Ottawa.

It's Oct. 28, 1944, and we are invited to join pilot officer Albert Joseph "Al" Martel and the crew of a Halifax bomber on a daylight raid on Cologne, Germany.

Al Martel has reached an age where he doesn't fully trust his memory, so the kitchen table of his home near the Ottawa airport is covered with logbooks, albums and official military records. Wife Heidi is also at the table. She can find the records faster than he can.

The four-engine Halifax carries a crew of seven, including the pilot, and this crew is known as lucky. They are on their 27th mission and so far haven't lost a man, or even had one wounded. It has earned the pilot an unofficial title — "The Natural."

The heavily laden bomber leaves base in England and claws its way up to cruising level above Europe. Just as it settles in for the ride, the port inner engine acts up. Attempts are made to fix the problem, but the gauges say it's dangerous to keep the engine operating. Al Martel makes the decision to shut it down.

The Halifax can fly on three engines, but with the heavy bomb load it will bleed altitude. If there are no more mechanical problems, they can make it to the target, but will be well below the main bomber stream. It means flying low in daylight over a heavily defended target, and in danger of being hit by bombs being dropped from above. Those are grounds to scrub the mission and return to base.

A loaded bomber is not a democracy, and the decision is the captain's alone. Hang on, he says. We're going.

By the time we reach the target, bouncing through a sky filled with exploding shells, we're 6,000 feet below the main bomber stream. Captain Martel orders all available eyes to scan for danger from above. He's counting on his flying skills to duck.

The lower and slower aircraft attracts the attention of gunners on the ground, and the hail of upward explosives thickens. The captain concentrates on flying, and keeps giving orders. The bombs drop and the aircraft, as if knowing the danger, tries to climb. It isn't allowed to. The pilot, to complete the mission, now has to fly straight and level for almost a minute while cameras on the Halifax record the drop. Every instinct of every person on the plane is screaming to forget the filming. Even the captain feels it, but he holds course and all are silent.

At last we clear the target area and the flak thins, and the captain turns for home and starts trying for altitude. Problem.

The port outer engine starts to act up. It can't produce full power, and the craft once again starts to lose altitude. The captain tells the crew to prepare to visit France. It's still occupied, but they have an advantage. They are members of 425 "Alouette" Squadron. French Canadians. Language won't be a problem.

Over France, it's decision time again. The altitude loss wasn't as severe as expected. The captain alerts the crew that he is going to try for the English Channel. Their chances of avoiding capture are better, but the odds of surviving in the cold sea are off-putting.

Flying low over the Channel, the captain decides to try for an emergency strip on the British side. The strip comes into view with emergency vehicles lining both sides. They aren't needed. Captain Martel sets the craft down, smooth as silk. Mechanics get to work on the balky engines. With repairs made and a little daylight remaining, the captain decides to take the repaired craft back to home base.

Flying officer Martel won the Distinguished Flying Cross. The RCAF motto is: Through adversity to the stars. In this case, he flew through adversity to the target — and back.

He was 23.

The crew was together through their active service and completed 33 missions, without a scratch. As for fear, the elderly Manitoba native who was "The Natural" says: "If you had it, you couldn't show it. The pilot is the boss and has to generate trust."

After the war, he joined Trans Canada Airlines (Air Canada) and wound up in management. He worked his way up. Along the way, he met a TCA sky goddess (hostess) from Montreal, named Heidi. They married and had two daughters.

He was a natural at golf, too, and says of war: "You had to be damned lucky."

MARTELL, F/O Herman (J12983) - Mention in Despatches - No.10 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 3 November 1944 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 2479/44 dated 17 November 1944. Born in Russia, 8 February 1911. Home in Edmonton; enlisted there 4 July 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot, 3 August 1941. To No.34 SFTS as guard, 9 October 1941. To No.4 ITS, 22 November 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 18 January 1942 when posted to No.2 AOS; graduated 25 April 1942 when posted to No.8 BGS; graduated 6 June 1942 when posted to No.1 ANS; graduated and commissioned, 20 July 1942. To Halifax, 21 July 1942. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 16 September 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 20 January 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 4 August 1944. To Transport Conversion Squadron, 9 December 1944. To No.6 OTU, 14 September 1945. To No.1 Release Centre, 16 March 1946. Retired 24 March 1946.

This officer, in many hours of operational flying in the North Atlantic area under all weather conditions, has consistently shown keenness and skill in navigation. His ability and steadiness have played a major part in the successful completion of many sorties and have been an inspiration and example to all members of his squadron.

MARTIN, F/O Anthony Arthur (J17876) - Distinguished Flying Cross (United States) - 9th USAAF - Award effective 20 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1861/44 dated 25 August 1944. Public Records Office Air 2/9599 has citation from General Order No.31, HQ US Army Air Forces in the Middle East, 28 April 1944.

For extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flights. While attached to the Ninth United States Air Force as a radio-gunner in a B-25 bomber he completed 51 combat missions totaling 129 combat hours during the Allied drive from El Alamein to Tunisia, and in operations connected with the Islands of Pantellaria, Lampadusa and Sicily. On one occasion while on a combat flight the plane in which he was flying hit some turbulent air causing one bomb to fall through the bomb-bay doors and explode and leaving another bomb hanging by one shackle, thus endangering the plane and crew. Sergeant Martin climbed down into the bomb-bay and replaced the safety pin in this bomb thus making a safe landing possible. Through his devotion to duty and courageous efforts he has contributed in a marked degree to the military successes in the Middle East.

RCAF Press Release 2326 dated 8 October 1943 provides more details:

Ottawa, Ontario - Fifty-three operational flights as wireless air-gunner without firing a single shot at the enemy is probably some sort of record. At any rate, that is the experience of Pilot Officer Anthony A. Martin of Squamish, British Columbia.

Martin recently returned to the United States after twelve months of continuous operations with an American squadron in Africa and Sicily. He saw action in all the major engagements which routed the Axis from their footholds in the Mediterranean. His squadron flew in cooperation with both the American First Army and the British Eighth Army; their B-25 bombers worked overtime at El Alamein, and dumped the last load of high explosives on fleeing Huns at Cap Bon.

Although Martin was trained in Canadian schools and went overseas with the RCAF, he was one of 25 Canadian gunners chosen to fly with American crews in American ships. He went to Africa in January 1942 and from that time until September of this year, he had a part in every "do". Most of the main African targets, Pantellaria, Lampedusa, and Sicilian towns have felt the weight of his bombs. But throughout it all, his guns have remained silent.

Martin returned to America on September 12th with the crew of the famous "Desert Warrior", a veteran of 73 combat missions. He was the only Canadian aboard. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Martin of Squamish, British Columbia.

Flying with Martin in his Mitchell bomber were Captain Ralph M. Lower, pilot from Seattle, Washington, Lieutenant C.O. Seaman, second pilot from Fresno, California; First Lieutenant F.F. Pond, navigator from San Antonio, Texas; First Lieutenant T.R. Tate, bombardier from Kentucky; Staff Sergeant J.P. Garafala, mid-upper gunner from New York City; and Master Sergeant J.R. Dawdy of San Antonio, Texas, the Crew Chief.

MARTIN, F/O (now S/L) Branston Wilmott (C3173) - Member, Order of the British Empire - RCAF Overseas - Award as per London Gazette dated 1 October 1946 and AFRO 1059/46 dated 8 November 1946. Home in Kingston; enlisted in Ottawa, 6 November 1940 in Signals Branch with rank of Flying Officer and posted overseas. Missing, POW in Far East, 12 May 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 July 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 August 1943. Repatriated 27 November 1944 (not clear how he was released from captivity). To Moncton, 15 April 1945. To No.1 Technical Support Unit, 18 April 1945. To No.5 Radio School, 23 June 1945. To No.3 Release Centre, 15 August 1945. Retired to Kingston, 22 August 1945. Medal presented 19 November 1948. No citation with AFRO other than "...in recognition of gallant and distinguished services rendered during the period of operations against the Japanese in Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies, terminating in March, 1942." Public Records Office Air/8774, dealing with awards to personnel in the Far East, gives citation as presented to Air Ministry Honours and Awards Committee:

In December 1941, Flying Officer Martin was technical officer commanding a radar station on the east coast of Malaya, 100 miles north of Singapore. Despite great difficulties caused by tropical conditions, the unit reached a high pitch of operational efficiency, largely because of Flying Officer Martin's efforts. It was the first radar unit to plot the first enemy raid on Singapore, thereby giving almost an hour's warning of its approach. By 15th January, 1942, the enemy had advanced to within half a mile of the station, which sustained repeated low level machine gun and bombing attacks. Despite this, it continued to function until orders to withdraw were received. All the secret equipment was then removed intact, although the station was not a mobile one, and although most of the personnel, including Flying Officer Martin, were suffering from malaria or dengue. On 9th February 1942 the station, now mobilized and re-erected at Tuas on Singapore Island, had again to be withdrawn before the Japanese advance. Flying Officer Martin completed this task and then, on his own initiative, returned with a volunteer party, to an area partly occupied by advanced enemy elements to destroy another radar installation. The party spent two hours at this work and withdrew safely. At the withdrawal from Tuas, the unit had been ordered to ensure speed by abandoning their masts but, by 12th February 1942, Flying Officer Martin was again able to report that the station was functioning at Tanah Merah Kechil on the south east side of Singapore Island. He had shown great ingenuity in devising aerials and feeders which were mounted on palm trees instead of masts. Shortly afterwards, the enemy landing at Changi necessitated a further withdrawal and Flying Officer Martin prepared to instal the unit at Fort Canning. While he was preparing the site and aerials, the army car park in which the technical vehicles had been left under guard was closely menaced by the enemy. Flying Officer Martin once more volunteered to take a party back into the danger area. This party reached the vehicles and spent a considerable time rendering the equipment useless to the enemy. Throughout the campaign and the later withdrawal from Singapore, this officer showed the utmost leadership, tenacity and devotion to duty.

MARTIN, F/O Byron Le Verne (J86185) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.408 Squadron - Award effective 5 April 1945 as per London Gazette dated 17 April 1945 and AFRO 918/45 dated 1 June 1945. Born 26 October 1919 in Port Arthur, Ontario; home there (labourer); enlisted there 15 July 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot, 19 September 1941. To No.4 ITS, 6 December 1941. Graduated and promoted LAC, 30 January 1942 when posted to No.5 Manning Depot. To No.3 WS, 14 February 1942; graduated 30 July 1942 and posted on 1 August 1942 to No.8 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeanr, 31 August 1942. To No.32 OTU, 14 September 1942. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 20 March 1943; to RAF overseas, 27 March 1943. Commissioned 5 May 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 5 November 1944. Repatriated 4 September 1945. Released 17 October 1945. Photo PL-36297 is a portrait. Medal presented 22 February 1947. See also entry for Alexander Clibbery.

Flying Officer Martin has completed a successful tour of operations which has included attacks against such heavily defended targets as Kiel, Hamburg, Duisburg and Essen. He has proved himself to be a keen and skilful wireless operator. On the return flight from a mission against Essen in November 1944, a dinghy which had been adrift in the English Channel for four and a half hours was sighted. Flying Officer Martin promptly sent accurate information to a headquarters in England. This was maintained for nearly an hour until the petrol supply of his aircraft was running low. Owing to the exactness of the information sent the crew were rescued half an hour later by a destroyer. The splendid cooperation, determination and devotion to duty displayed by this officer have been most commendable.

MARTIN, Sergeant Douglas Christopher (R64125) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.42 Squadron - Award effective 29 October 1941 as per London Gazette dated 4 November 1941 and AFRO 1340/41 dated 14 November 1941. Born 26 August 1920 in Brantford, Ontario; home there (student); enlisted in Hamilton, Ontario, 25 April 1940. To No.1 AOS, Rivers, 25 May 1940; graduated 18 August 1940 when posted to No.1 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 29 September 1940. To Trenton that date. To No.3 Manning Depot, 11 November 1940. To United Kingdom, 15 November 1940. Posted to No.42 Squadron, 30 November 1940, commencing operations 9 January 1941. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace, 24 March 1942. Commissioned 7 April 1942. Repatriated to Canada, 26 July 1942 to train as a pilot, but does not appear to have completed that; to Trenton, 13 August 1942; promoted Flying Officer, 7 October 1942; to Eastern Air Command, 31 October 1942; to No.162 (BR) Squadron, 2 November 1942. To Yarmouth, 6 October 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 August 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 1 August 1945; released 4 September 1945. For photo see PL-4335 (ex UK-52); a picture of a Beaufort, taken at same time, is PL-4336.

Sergeant Martin has participated in twenty-three operational missions. In October 1941 he was observer of an aircraft which carried out an attack at dusk on enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast. A successful attack was carried out but in the heavy gunfire encountered, Sergeant Martin was wounded in the leg. He did not inform the pilot of his injuries, however, and successfully navigated the aircraft back to base without the aid of the air speed indicator which had been put out of action. This airman's courage in navigating the aircraft under difficult conditions and in spite of the pain from his wounds has set a magnificent example.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/8462 has recommendation drafted 15 October 1941. It differs little from the above other than specifying that the date of the action was 14 October 1941 and that he had flown over 100 hours on operations.

MARTIN, F/L Douglas Christopher, DFM (J15312) - Mention in Despatches - Eastern Air Command Meteorological Flight - Award effective 7 July 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1291/45 dated 10 August 1945.

Flight Lieutenant Martin has been navigation leader of Eastern Air Command Meteorological Flight since its inception in October 1943. His perseverance and devotion to duty have made him one of those instrumental in the carrying out of the original plan and development of this unit. The organization ability he has displayed ensured the very high standard of navigation required to cope with the adverse weather conditions encountered. Flight Lieutenant Martin has contributed materially to the high unit morale and in addition to his other duties has compiled a great number of hours on meteorological flights.

MARTIN, F/O (now F/L) Eld James (J7648) - Mention in Despatches - No.7 Squadron (Canada) - Award effective 1 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 113/44 dated 21 January 1944. Born 2 October 1917 at Edmonton, Alberta (RCAF press release 2659 announcing award). Home in Prince Rupert. Enlisted in Calgary, 2 October 1917. To No.2 SFTS, 9 November 1940 (guard). To No.1 ITS, 3 January 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 8 February 1941 when posted to No.7 EFTS; ceased training, 17 February 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot; to No.4 AOS, 14 April 1941; to No.4 BGS, 7 July 1941. To No.2 ANS, 18 August 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 18 August 1941. Commissioned 15 September 1941; to No.32 OTU, date uncertain. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 April 1942. To No.7 Squadron, 23 March 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 31 August 1943. Released 20 September 1945. Appears to have died of natural causes soon after the war.

Flying Officer Martin is a skilled Navigator who has performed difficult tasks with accuracy and reliability. His keen interest in navigation has resulted in the development of a crew trainer which is of inestimable value to his unit. In addition he has at all times displayed energy and initiative of a high standard.

MARTIN, Sergeant Emmerson Stanley (R97264) - Mention in Despatches - Womblton - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 418/46 dated 18 April 1946. Born 11 February 1923. Home in Toronto; enlisted there 6 March 1941 in the trade of Clerk Stenographer (later Clerk Administration). Served at No.4 Wireless School, 7 July 1941 to 16 June 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 5 March 1943. To Britain, 15 July 1943. Repatriated 15 February 1946. Released 25 November 1946. Later worked for Trans-Canada Airlines. Recommended 16 May 1945. Clerk in station Orderly Room. No citation in AFRO; found in DHist file 181.002 D.225:

This non-commissioned officer was the NCO in charge Central Registry from April 1944 until the end of February 1945 when he was placed in charge of Station Headquarters Orderly Room. While in charge of Central Registry he showed great enthusiasm for his work in carrying out a change-over in the filing system from RAF procedure to the RCAF system and in maintaining a smoothly running section. After his transfer to the Orderly Room, Sergeant Martin again demonstrated his energy and leadership with the result that he has instilled a spirit of confidence and enthusiasm among his staff which is reflected in the present high morale and the good work which is being produced.

To No.5 OTU, 5 July 1944. To No.168 (Heavy Transport) Squadron, 4 July 1944. To No.6 OTU, 6 June 1945. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 October 1945. To Greenwood, date uncertain but still there as of 21 February 1946. To Release Centre, 23 July 1946; retired 25 July 1946. Later chief pilot for Canadian Breweries; founding member of Canadian Business Aircraft Association. Died in Edmonton, 22 April 1986 as per Airforce Magazine of July-August-September 1986. As of award had flown 1,762:15 hours, 1,009:10 operational hours (144 sorties). Medal presented 13 September 1947.

This officer on one occasion was carrying out a convoy escort under very poor weather conditions. Upon sighting a surfaced enemy submarine he immediately attacked, the explosive rolling the U-Boat over 45°. After this attack this officer's crew engaged the U-Boat with machine-gun fire in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire. The U-Boat then settled under the surface and this officer carried out another good attack shortly after which a large oil patch appeared on the surface. At this time a second U-Boat was sighted on the surface. The enemy opened with heavy anti-aircraft fire and Flight Lieutenant Martin manoeuvred his aircraft to engage it to attack with all its guns at 1,200 yards. Since all depth charges were expended, no further attack could be carried out but the running battle was maintained until the U-Boat disappeared into a fog bank. In his many hours of operational flying this officer has proven himself to be a courageous and skilled pilot.

Commissioned 26 January 1944. Repatriated 3 February 1944. To Technical Training School, 3 April 1944. To No.5 OTU, 20 May 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 26 July 1944. To Release Centre, 6 September 1945; retired 14 September 1945. Died in Winnipeg, 2 April 1995 as per Legion Magazine of September 1995. No published citation other than "In air operations this airman has displayed courage and fortitude of a high order." Ian Tavender records, in The Distinguished Flying Medal Register for the Second World War (London, Savanah Publications, 2000) the following recommendation dated 26 May 1944 as found in Public Record Office Air 2/9157.

Sergeant Martin took part in 23 attacks on the enemy prior to being reported missing on the night of the 16th September 1943. His aircraft was shot down by a night fighter on that night and Sergeant Martin landed by parachute in Northern France. He proceeded to walk home as detailed in M.I.9/S/P.G.(-)1704, arriving at Whitchurch on 17th January 1944. I consider that this Non-Commissioned Officer's gallantry while operating with this squadron and the persistence and ingenuity shown by him while making his escape fully merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

Website "Lost Bombers" gives the following details of his being shot down. Halifax LW240 (VR-S), target Modane, 16/17 September 1943. Airborne at 1904 hours, 16 September 1943 from Middleton St.George. Homebound shot down by a night-fighter. Crew consisted of F/L A.N.Quaile, pilot (POW), Sergeant E.E.Bowden, RCAF (POW) Sergeant L.F.Martin, RCAF (evader), P/O L.E.Aspinall, RCAF (POW), P/O G.T.Graham, RCAF (evader, DFC), Flight Sergeant T.J.Bright (evader), F/O H.F.E.Smith, RCAF (evader, DFC), F/L B.L.Kenyon DFC (rear gunner, Squadron Gunnery Officer, on his 44th sortie.)

Report K78B dated 1 February 1944 provides a further account of his being shot down in the Lisieux area on the homeward flight of 16/17 September 1943:

About five minutes before the Halifax was due to cross the French coast on the return flight the Flight Engineer [Martin] left his seat and went to the astrodome, having just changed over to Nos.5 and 6 tanks. When he reached the astrodome he heard Monica giving a warning at a very rapid pace. The Halifax was flying straight and level at about 13,500 feet and the pilot asked whether anyone could see another aircraft. Almost immediately the enemy opened fire and as soon as he saw tracer Sergeant Martin had no difficulty in picking out the fighter which he recognized as a Ju.88. The enemy came up from below on the starboard quarters, crossed over the tail, the Rear Gunner got in one burst which scored hits on the starboard engine. Sergeant Martin saw flames break out in the wing and fuselage. When on the port beam the fighter leveled out for a few seconds and then turned on its starboard side and went straight down well alight. The Rear Gunner had not spoken during the attack, and the Halifax was undamaged, although some bullets had appeared to enter the nose.

About half a minute later Sergeant Martin saw white tracer coming from astern, level and slightly to port. He immediately called out, at the same instant as the Mid-Upper Gunner, "Dive to Port". The pilot did so at once but at the same moment shells hit them in the port wing smashing the aileron and starting fires close to both ends of the aileron which quickly spread as far forward as the tanks and appeared to be creeping towards the inner engine. Shells also entered the fuselage and one passed close to Sergeant Martin, destroying his escape kit and damaging one boot.

The pilot now leveled up the Halifax and gave the order to bale out. The Mid-Upper Gunner asked him to try and hold on for a little longer. He did so for about a minute and then repeated the order to abandon aircraft. Sergeant Martin heard the Rear Gunner ask the pilot to hold the Halifax level while he left the turret and came forward to the rear door. He [Martin] then left the astrodome. As he crossed the rear spar he saw the Mid-Upper Gunner leave. When he reached the door flames were streaming back past it from the wing. He left immediately, rolling out on his side having removed his helmet. The slipstream seemed to catch him and shot him straight back under the tail. The parachute functioned well and he landed in trees on the edge of a forest near Fervaques. He remained suspended for about a hour until, by pulling on the cords, he managed to make the parachute slide off the tree tops. He fell about 30 feet, but the parachute broke his fall. He was unconscious for some time but was not seriously hurt.

Notes: He estimated that he had baled out at 18,000 feet. Following his evasion he could not be operationally employed in the same theater and so was repatriated. On 22 March 1944 he expressed interest in taking an American Engines course and also in Aeronautical drafting.

On 5 May 1944, W/C A. Marks, Commanding TTS St Thomas, wrote, in part, "Pilot Officer Martin has done much to encourage and uplift the morale of the early entrants of Flight Engineers and has proved to be of an industrious disposition but these factors alone do not appear to warrant his retention on the Establishment of the TTS. This officer, by reason on age and temperament, os not likely to settle down in the position of officer in charge training. He has the urge ti be up and doing in a sphere of operations and flying."

Assessed 29 August 1944 - "As an airmanship instructor (Engines) this officer carries out his duties to the best of his ability. His lecturing ability is rather weak, but should improve with experience. Recommended for promotion to Temporary Flying Officer in the service recommended.." (W/C H. Malkin, No.5 OTU).

This Canadian officer was posted to No.103 Squadron on 2nd October 1943, and during his tour of duties has completed 36 sorties on Lancaster aircraft, involving 236.50 hours flying.

Flying Officer Martin by his eagerness to take part in operational flights on every possible occasion has displayed courage and devotion to duty of a high order which has been enhanced by his skill and determination to bomb accurately his objective on every sortie.

Many of the sorties in which this Air Bomber took part involved attacks on railway marshalling yards, tactical targets in support of the Allied Expeditionary Force, in addition to many attacks on heavily defended industrial targets in Germany.

In view of his fine record I strongly recommend that Flying Officer Martin may be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MARTIN, P/O Stanley Sinclair (J15225) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.103 Squadron - Award effective 19 April 1942 as per London Gazette dated 27 July 1943 and AFRO 1724/43 dated 27 August 1943. Born 14 December 1920 in Toronto. Educated in Bowden, Alberta (1926-1938) and Edmonton (1938-39). Worked in a trucking office for three years (1936-1939), plus jobs as grocery clerk (three months), logger (three months) and farm worker (seven months). Enlisted in Calgary 11 September 1940. To No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto, 14 September 1940; to Sydney Detachment, 8 October 1940; to No.1 ITS, Toronto, 14 November 1940. Promoted LAC, 15 December 1940; to No.1 EFTS, Malton, 16 December 1940; course completed 27 January 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot on 29 January 1941; to No.1 SFTS, Camp Borden, 8 February 1942; promoted Sergeant, 11 May 1941. To Halifax, 12 May 1941; to RAF Trainee Pool, 7 June 1941. To United Kingdom, 7 June 1941. To No.21 OTU, 14 June 1941. To No.103 Squadron, 16 August 1941.. Commissioned 19 February 1942. To No.20 OTU, 3 May 1942. Killed in action, 1/2 June 1942 with No.20 OTU (Wellington X9975, JM-P, target Essen), having completed a tour with No.103 Squadron and was "non-operational with the OTU. Medal presented to next of kin by Governor General, 17 April 1947.

This officer has completed thirty sorties, on twenty of which he has acted as captain of aircraft. He has participated in attacks on a wide range of enemy targets including objectives at Le Havre, Frankfurt, Wilhelmshaven, Brest, Poissy, Rostock and the Renault Works at Paris. He has shown great thoroughness in planning his attacks whilst his careful attention to detail during flights have enabled him to reach the target with regularity and accuracy. On one occasion following a successful attack on Hamburg his aircraft was held in a cone of searchlights and heavily engaged by the ground defences. Although his aircraft was damaged he skilfully evaded the fire zone and flew the damaged aircraft back to England. Throughout this officer has displayed fine leadership and courage which have won the entire confidence of his crew.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/8755 has recommendation dated 19 April 1942 when he had flown 30 sorties (191 operational hours). The body of the text says 29 sorties, but the sortie list adds one more (23 April 1942). The evidence supports the above supposition, that he was tour-expired but operating with an OTU crew during the second of the 1,000-bomber raids when he was killed.

Pilot Officer Martin has completed 29 operational sorties of which 20 have been as Captain. He has carried out these attacks with skill and great determination. Throughout he has shown great enthusiasm and cheerfulness which have been an inspiration to his crew and the squadron.

His thoroughness in planning before take off and his attention to detail have enabled him to reach the target with regularity and accuracy. His supervision of the navigation of his aircraft has been exceptional; on many occasions he has obtained useful astro sights which have been of great assistance to his Observer.

His fine offensive spirit has kept him over the target area for considerable periods in order to locate accurately his point of aim, despite intense flak and searchlight opposition.

On one occasion, after successfully locating and attacking the target at Hamburg, and obtaining an excellent photograph, he was held in a large searchlight cone and heavily engaged by intense and accurate heavy flak. His aircraft was hit in several places, the hydraulics being put unserviceable. However, with great skill and determination he eventually evaded the searchlights at 3,500 feet and brought his crew and aircraft safely back to base.

Pilot Officer Martin has a fine crew who have carried out many sorties, producing excellent photographs, and have a good fighting and cheerful spirit, due in no small degree to the leadership and example of their fine young captain. His splendid record and his courage, skill and determination in action fully merit the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his last sortie. Wellington X9975, No.20 OTU, target Essen, 1-2 June 1942. Airborne from Advanced Base (sic). Lost in the North Sea off the Dutch coast, cause not established. Crew (all killed) was Sergeant B.J.Daley, RNZAF, P/O S.S.Martin, DFC, RCAF, Sergeant T.W.Belton, Sergeant T.I.McKenzie, Flight Sergeant A.Marvell, DFM, Sergeant G.C.Falconer.

MARTIN, F/O Theodore John (J8628) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.158 Squadron - Award effective 6 August 1943 as per London Gazette dated 17 August 1943 and AFRO 2005/43 dated 1 October 1943. Born 6 December 1920 in Prince George, British Columbia; home in Vancouver; enlisted there 20 February 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.32 SFTS (guard duty), 29 March 1941. To No.2 WS, 24 May 1941; promoted LAC, 26 June 1941; to No.7 BGS, 10 October 1941; graduated and commissioned 8 November 1941. To "Y" Depot, 9 November 1941; to RAF overseas, 13 December 1941. Further trained at No.22 OTU, Chipping Warden and Wellesbourne, March and April 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. Repatriated via "H", 25 August 1943; to Western Air Command, 24 September 1943. Retired 1 April 1944. NOTE: The reference to his having twice flown "as captain of aircraft" is puzzling for a gunner, although it appears in the Air Ministry Bulletin which publishes the citation.. DHist file 181.009 D.1636 (RG.24 Vol.20604) has application for Operational Wings dated 12 January 1944. Stated that after training in Canada he further trained at No.22 OTU. With No.158 Squadron, 20 August 1942 to 11 June 1943 - 28 sorties (245 operational hours). Repatriated to Canada, August 1943 on medical grounds (burns affecting eyes following fire in aircraft). Medal presented 3 January 1946.

As a rear gunner this officer has shown exceptional capability and on more than one occasion has been instrumental in saving his aircraft from destruction by enemy fighters. Over all the more heavily defended targets such as Essen, Munich, Dortmund and Dusseldorf, Flying Officer Martin has set a fine example of courage and efficiency to other gunners. On two occasions he has flown successfully as captain of aircraft.

Public Record Office Air 50/222 has the following Combat Reports that bear upon his career:

14/15 April 1943: On this occasion Martin was Rear Gunner; the Mid-Upper Gunner was R92187 Flight Sergeant C.K. Rowe (trained at No.8 BGS, Lethbridge, No.15 OTU, Harwell, June to December 1942 and No.1653 Conversion Unit, Martston Moore, December 1942 to February 1943).

Halifax Ia, HR781, "F" of 158 Squadron, target Stuttgart. Over target, height 18,000 feet, time 0114, speed 150 m.p.h., heading south. Visibility good, moderate heavy and heavy light flak and searchlights. Bombs door open and ready to bomb, our aircraft was caught by searchlight and immediately after Rear Gunner observed ME.110 on starboard quarter at 50 feet [!] range. Enemy aircraft opened fire, his fire passing below from starboard quarter to port beam of own aircraft. Both our gunners opened fire immediately and at the same time did a steep diving turn to starboard. The Rear Gunner observed hits entering enemy aircraft from nose to tail. Enemy aircraft then broke away to port beam and was lost. No damage to our aircraft. Enemy aircraft claimed damaged. 300 rounds fired.

11/12 June 1943: Halifax C/158 (HR725), target Dusseldorf.

Position 20 miles South East of Nordwick, time 0233 hours, height 15,000 feet, speed 175 m.p.h. I.A.S. Visibility good, dark cloud below, half moon.

Two fighter flares burst on starboard beam at same height just prior to combat. Slight searchlight activity, no flak. Pilot was first to sight Ju.88 while taking evasive action after fighter flare was seen; he was banking to starboard when enemy aircraft appeared at about 100 yards off starboard wing tip.

An immediate dive to port was made to avoid a collision followed by a violent dive to starboard. Enemy aircraft passed over and above Halifax to port quarter. Rear gunner opened fire at 300 yards.

Enemy aircraft was last seen diving steeply to starboard. Enemy aircraft did not open fire. No damage to our aircraft. Enemy aircraft believed damaged. 50 rounds followed.

This Canadian officer, as captain of aircraft, has now completed 33 sorties against a wide variety of targets in enemy territory. During this time he has proved himself to be a most capable pilot and gallant captain of aircraft.

Under all circumstances he has displayed a fine offensive spirit in action and has pressed home his attacks, despite the fiercest enemy opposition, and often in the face of most adverse weather conditions.

For his skill, determination and magnificent record of achievement he is recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Flying Officer Martin is a skilled navigator who has now practically completed one tour of operations. He has participated in attacks on such heavily defended enemy areas as Stettin, Kiel and Russelheim. Invariably, this officer has displayed a keenness for operational duty which has acted as an incentive not only to his crew, but to all navigators in the squadron. Undoubtedly, this fine fighting spirit and devotion to duty will be very difficult to surpass. Strongly recommended for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Upon repatriation he claimed 793 hours five minutes on operations overseas plus 439 hours 15 minutes non-operational time overseas; last sortie on 22 June 1944. On another form dated 14 December 1945 he reported the following flying times: Yale (11.25), Harvard (1,084.00); Hudson (49.55); Saro London (56.00), Sunderland (1,091.55), Catalina (101.50), Anson (46.15); Beechcraft (20.45)

MARTIN, F/L William Young (19689) - Medal for Bravery (Czechoslovakia) - No.422 Squadron - Canada Gazette dated 24 January 1948, AFRO 81/48 dated 6 February 1948. This award was one of six such awards to members of the squadron (F/O R.W. Berryman, F/O O.R. Carlson, F/L H.E. Dugglebury, F/L W.Y. Martin, F/O D.S. Smith, WO J.H.C. Underwood) for an attack on the German blockade runner, Alsterufer (2,729 tons), 27 December 1943 (ship detected by Sunderland T/201 at 46° 40' N, 19° 30' W., shadowed for four hours and ultimately sunk by Liberator H, BZ796 of No.311 Squadron; P/O Dolezal, pilot F/O Hanus, navigator, received DFCs). Ship had been in transit from Kobe, Japan to Bordeaux with wolfram cargo. The squadron Operational Record Book for the unit (which gives two different aircraft letters for the Sunderland) has the following entries:

Form 540: Clear and bright. Can J.10830 F/L W.Y. Marin and crew of Sunderland R/422 carried out an attack on an enemy blockade running merchant vessel in the Atlantic approximately 500 miles west of Cape Finisterre. Although the aircraft was damaged by the intense anti-aircraft fire from the enemy merchant vessel the attack was pressed home and a near miss was observed, when one of the 500-lb bombs exploded close to the enemy merchant vessel. F/L Martin brought his damaged aircraft back safely to base and no casualties were suffered by the crew.

Form 541: Q/422 - 0112 to 1713 - Crew listed as F/L W.Y Martin (captain), F/O H.E. Dugglebury (2nd pilot), P/O R.W. Berryman (3rd pilot), WO1 O.R. Carlson (navigator), WO2 D.S. Smith (gunnery officer), WO2 A.M. Spear (first WOP), QO1 M. Steffanick (2nd WOP), FS J. Bannister (WOM), FS J.R. Underwood (Flight Engineer), FS A.L. Pattison (FME) and FS A.F. Farmer (FMA).

Anti-shipping search. Q/422 set course from Eagle Island for search area at 0208. Sighted hospital ship burning lights at 0255. On patrol at 0840. Intercepted a sighting message of aircraft T/201 at 1018. Set course position. Captain of aircraft sighted a wake of motor vessel at 1049, cc 120° T/15 knots. Two Sunderland aircraft sighted at 1100 also circling. Took up position directly opposite T/201 in circle, six miles from MV at 1120. Attacked out of cloud at 1135 but overshot and did not release bombs. Second attack out of cloud from 1,500, two miles at 1140, released two 500-lb MC [medium casing] bombs, instantaneous fusing, 30 feet spacing, 160 knots, on angle of 20° starboard to vessel's course. Decks raked with machine gun fire. One bomb only seen to explode 40 yards undershot amidships, Action of second bomb unknown. Four-pound shell struck port wing after attack had been delivered. PLE [prudent limit of endurance] having been reached, set course for base at 1202.

RCAF Press Release No. 3542 dated December 30, 1943 read:

Flight Lieutenant William Young Martin of Toronto, Ontario, made one of the first attacks on the German blockade runner sunk in the approaches to the Bay of Biscay on December 27th by aircraft of Coastal Command.

Planes from two R.C.A.F. Sunderland squadrons were among the first to take off on the attacks after their flying boats, normally engaged in the war against U-Boats, had replaced their depth charges with bombs.

Flight Lieutenant Martin made two bombing runs over the enemy ship, through fairly heavy flak, before releasing his bombs. One four-pound shell from the enemy passed through a wing without exploding.

Flight Officer R.W. Chadwick, St. James, Manitoba, carried out two attacks after the enemy had been set on fire and abandoned by her crew.

When Chadwick arrived on the scene, the sky was filled with aircraft, he said later.

“In the evening, light Halifaxes, Liberators and other aircraft were sometimes silhouetted against the flames from the burning blockage runner, their fuselages alight with the reflection of the fire.

“Pilots seemed to be queuing up to bomb. I dropped two bombs on the ship. The German crew were at a safe distance in lifeboats by this time.”

RCAF Press Release No. 8169 dated 3 January 1945 from F/L Vic Baker reads:

WITH RCAF IN BRITAIN: - Coastal Command aircrews don't often get a chance for the action experienced by bomber and fighter boys, but when the opportunity comes along they go after their target with a vengeance.

F/L William Y. Martin, 38 Willcocks Street, Toronto, Ontario, even dive-bombed with his 25-ton Sunderland flying boat when ordered to attack a blockade-runner in the Bay of Biscay. He had in the bomb bay two 500-pound armor-piercing bombs and some depth charges when directed to the enemy ship trying to reach a French port on the Brest Peninsula. They located the target ship but discovered the cloud base was down to 1000 feet over the ship. This presented a problem. They had been told never to drop this type and weight of bomb under 1000 feet because if they hit the target the blast and debris might knock their plane out of the sky. Martin asked the crew if they were game for a try and with their permission prepared his strategy. With no bombsight on board for bombing but only equipment for dropping depth charges he lifted his flying boat into the clouds to 2000 feet.

Peering from his cockpit window to judge wind-drift, speed and distance of the target and using navigational aids for locating the target through the clouds, he started his flying boat on a dive-bombing approach. When they broke cloud the 12-man crew went to work. While the skipper was getting a bead on the ship, the others opened up with their machine guns and kept the ship's gun-crews too busy to interfere with the approach of the huge flying boat. At a low height, Martin let both of his bombs go, and though he scored only near-misses, the blasts damaged the superstructure of the ship. His crew expended more than 3,000 rounds of ammunition during the bombing run and helped to cripple the blockade-runner. Later, a Liberator made a low-level attack which sent the target to the bottom with its precious cargo.

Martin has completed 65 trips with the RCAF Sunderland Squadron, and has 2500 flying hours to his credit. In the service for almost five years, three years of which were spent overseas, he is now at an R.C.A.F. repatriation depot in Britain. He instructed in Canada for a year, ferried a Hudson bomber over the Atlantic and then joined the Canadian unit in Coastal Command. Before the war, he worked in the States accounting department of the Toronto General Trust Co. and hopes to return to his old job on discharge from the service.

MARTIN, WO (now P/O) Willmer Alexander (R102411/J87038) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.218 Squadron - Award effective 5 February 1944 as per London Gazette of dated 15 February 1944 and AFRO 1291/45 dated 10 August 1945. Born 24 April 1921 in McTaggart, Saskatchewan; home there (farmer); enlisted in Regina, 22 May 1941 and posted to No.2A Manning Depot. To No.3 EFTS, 13 June 1941 (guard); to No.3 WS, 2 August 1941; promoted LAC, 4 September 1941; graduated 12 April 1942 when posted to No.5 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 15 May 1942. To "Y" Depot, date unclear; to RAF overseas, 13 June 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 8 November 1942. Promoted WO2, 11 June 1943. Commissioned 24 May 1944. Repatriated 14 October 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 24 November 1944. To No.6 Repair Depot, 28 January 1945. Date of retirement uncertain. Following incomplete from DHist award card: Award sent by registered mail, 11 March 1949.

Has at all times displayed enthusiasm and a marked eagerness to take part in operations. He has completed a number of sorties against such targets as Berlin and Hamburg. On three missions his aircraft has been attacked by fighters, but on each occasion his accurate fire and perfect co-operation with his captain have beaten off the attacks. This officer has always shown great coolness and set a fine example to other air gunners in the squadron.

Public Record Office Air 50/234 has the following Combat Reports bearing on his career:

13/14 July 1943: Stirling Z/218 (EE410 or EH410); target Aachen. Crew listed as follows: Captain: Sergeant W.B. Hamilton (later P/O William Bruce Hamilton, RCAF) - Navigator: Sergeant Coulson - WOP: Sergeant Harrison - Front Gunner: Sergeant Ashton - Mid-Upper Gunner: Sergeant Jackson (trained at No.7 BGS, Paulson, Manitoba, No.7 AGS Stormy Down and No.12 OTU, Chipping Warden) - Rear Gunner: Sergeant Martin - Flight Engineer: Sergeant Hallam.

On the night of 13th July 1943 just after it had completed its bombing run over Aachen, Stirling III aircraft "Z" (EH410) of 218 Squadron was attacked at 0159 hours by an unidentified single engined enemy aircraft. Our aircraft was flying at 13,000 feet on a course of 215 degrees True and an I.A.S. of 190 m.p.h. Bombs had been dropped. The visibility was good, there being a 1/4 moon on the port quarter and 9/10th cloud 5,000 feet below our aircraft.

The enemy aircraft was first seen by the Rear Gunner (Sergeant Martin) 300 yards away dead astern and level with our aircraft. Our Rear Gunner immediately opened fire with a burst, at the same time gave the Captain (Sergeant Hamilton) orders to start corkscrewing and the enemy aircraft broke away to starboard and below and was not seen again. At no time did the enemy aircraft open fire.

27/28 July 1943: Stirling Z/218 (EE410 or EH410); target Hamburg. Crew listed as follows: Captain: Sergeant W.B. Hamilton - Navigator: Sergeant McIlhimay [?] - WOP: Sergeant Harrison - Front Gunner: Sergeant Ashton - Mid-Upper Gunner: Sergeant Jackson - Rear Gunner: Sergeant Martin - Flight Engineer: Sergeant Hallam.

On the night of the 27th July 1943, whilst approaching the target, Stirling III, "Z" (EF410) of 218 Squadron was attacked by a ME.109 at 54° 10" North 10° 09" East at a height of 15,000 feet. Our aircraft had I.A.S. of 160 m.p.h. on a course of 181 degrees True.

The bombs had not been dropped, the visibility was fair, due to the light from the target and to flares which were being dropped on the track in.

The Rear Gunner (Sergeant Martin) saw enemy aircraft at 600 yards on the port quarter, slightly up; he gave the Captain (Sergeant Hamilton) orders to corkscrew to port and opened fire at 400 yards.

The enemy aircraft broke off the engagement, diving down and underneath and was not seen again. No damage was observed on the enemy aircraft which did not open fire.

This officer was awarded the Military Cross in recognition of distinguished service.

Public Record Officer Air 2/4970 has recommended citation.

This officer was shot down by anti-aircraft fire during an attack on El Daba airfield on the 23rd October 1942, and was captured by Italian infantrymen. He was transferred to Tobruk later and flown with other personnel to Athens on the 26th October. On 29th October he escaped by stealing the spare trousers and cap of a sleeping sentry and climbing a twelve-foot wall. He was cared for by two Greek women until the 12th December when he left in an attempt to reach Cairo. During the journey he was discovered by two Italians in a shed where he was resting but they finally left him, convinced that he was a Gestapo agent. He left Greece with a party of escapers and arrived in Turkey on the 17th December.

Air 2/4970 also has a document, A.I.O.//11/5-175, "Account of Escape" which reads:

While bombing El Daba aerodrome in the early morning of 23 October 1942, Flying Officer Marting's plane was shot down by anti-aircraft fire at 0730 hours. It hit the ground at Map Reference 289860 (1:250,000 Egypt and Cyrenaica, Sheet 14, El Daba) in the minefields of 62 Italian Infantry Battalion, at the north end of their position. Flying Officer Marting was unhurt. He was soon surrounded and captured by Italians who, after stealing his watch, took him to the Italian Commander of the small area in which the plane had crash-landed. Here he was given some breakfast and later some "schnaps" to drink. One hour after capture he was taken, on the carrier of a motorcycle, to the Headquarters of 62 Italian Infantry Battalion where he was questioned. He refused to answer all questions put to him except name, rank and unit. The other principal unanswered questions put to him were:- “How did you arrive in Africa ? How long have you been in Africa ? What was the British treatment of Italian P.O.W. ? What were your operational duties today ?”

Later he was sent by motorcar to Italian Divisional Headquarters not far away. Here again he was questioned, being asked practically the same questions as mentioned above. All he gave, however, was name, rank and unit. He was spoken to here by an Italian General. This General and all other Italian officers in this Division treated him very courteously and gave him some coffee. Flying Officer Marting was then sent to another Headquarters where he was again questioned by an Italian Intelligence Officer for about one hour. He was asked practically the same questions as on the previous occasions, and again gave only his name, rank and unit . At this place he was asked the following questions also:- ”Why have the British bombed and strafed some of the Italian Hospitals ? He replied that to the best of his knowledge this has not been done, and that if done it had undoubtedly been by mistake. Source was then searched very thoroughly, then put into a motor car with two guards in addition to the driver, and taken to the Italian General Headquarters, at Map Reference 296839 (same sheet as mentioned above) where he arrived about noon on the 23 October 1942. He was kept waiting in the car for one and one-half hours. He was then taken to an office in the back end of a motor truck where he was very thoroughly questioned by a very clever Italian Intelligence Officer. He was again asked all the questions which had been previously put to him and many others. This Italian Intelligence Officer tried in vain to find out how long it takes our ships to reach Egypt by inquiring as to the length of time his mail took to reach him, etc. etc. This Intelligence Officer who interrogated him for about one and one-half hours in very good English was very artful and tricky.

Flying Officer Marting was then taken to [an] Italian Colonel who was very insulting and demanded to know why America has declared war on Italy and shouted that Africa was no place for the Americans and English. The Colonel was very angry and rude.

Flying Officer Marting was then sent by car to El Daba Railway Station and then back to a small POW camp nearby where the two German officers in charge gave him bread, soup and water at sunset. He was kept there for two hours and was then put into another car with a German officer, Military Policeman and driver and taken to the Headquarters of the Luftwaffe in Africa, located on the beach near El Daba aerodrome where he was handed over to a German Intelligence Officer. The Germans were very polite. They questioned him very thoroughly but he gave only the same answers as previously. The German Intelligence Officer appeared to be very well informed . He asked how his new Squadron Leader was. (The officer in question had been promoted to Squadron Leader only two days previously). The German Intelligence Officer told him that the British Forces had a total of 1,900 planes in Africa, including those in maintenance shops, and asked when the British push would start. Flying Officer Marting laughed this question away and asked when the Germans would start their push. The German Intelligence Officer put numerous other questions to him, to try and find out when he arrived in Egypt, but did so in vain. While here he ascertained that the following air force personnel were POW in enemy hands:-

Sergeant Ewing
Sergeant Evans
Sergeant Holloway
Sergeant Lindsay - - - all from No.450 Squadron

P/O Hogg of No.112 Squadron

Lieutenant MacKay of SAAF (fighter squadron)

Lieutenant Cleary
Lieutenant Finnegan
Lieutenant O'Berg

Two Sergeants of Crew of a B.25 bomber of 83 Bomber Squadron, all five members of the American Air Force. One of these two Sergeants had been shot through the arm but all the others were in good shape as POW.

Sergeant Corson, SAAF gunner of a Boston plane, had bailed out of his plane on the 23 October 1942 because, while manoeuvring in the air, he thought at one moment that his plane was damaged and was crashing. He is also a POW and is quite well.

At about 2200 hours on the 23 October 1942, Flying Officer Marting was given some food and wine and was then put into a small enclosure at Daaba POW Camp. He was kept in a tent with the four unwounded Americans mentioned above. They had to sleep on the sand with one blanket each. The German guards took their boots at night to prevent them escaping.

On the morning of the 24 October 1942 Flying Officer Marting saw Hogg, Mackay and two members of a Wellington crew (a pilot and a gunner - names unknown) both of whom were badly burnt. They had been shot down on the night of the 22 October 1942.

He was told by Mackay that Sergeant Evans had left a map two saws and a compass buried in the sand in the tent where he had been sleeping. Later in the day he found these articles. Flying Officer Marting and the others were fed twice on the 24 October 1942. The following morning he and the others in the tent, i.e. the four Americans and Sergeant Corson, were awakened at 0600 hours, each was given a French Army overcoat and three days rations, and together with seven German guards they started off for Tobruk by truck. They stopped at Gambut on the night of 25-26 October 1942 (During the afternoon of 24 October 1942, the map which he had wrapped around one of his legs under his trousers came loose and was discovered by one of the guards who took it away from him but gave him no further search. The party arrived at Tobruk at 0830 hours on 26 October 1942 and were taken to the aerodrome on the east side of the road where their names were put on a list for the passage to Greece by air.

At 0845 hours on 26 October 1942, 180 Junkers 52 took off in formation of 30 planes each from this drome and proceeded north. Some of these planes were taking away POWs but most of them were carrying troops going to Germany on leave.

At 1330 hours, Flying Officer Marting with the other five POWs and their seven German guards (together with a crew of four and about five other passengers, i.e. - two German officers, the one a senior "Inspector of Tanks", the other an Oberleutnant and three other Germans - emplaned on a Junkers 52 which took off about 1400hours on 26 October 1942 with many other Junkers 52s.

They flew in a formation of 60 Junkers 52s all the way to Crete, about 50 feet above the sea to Maleme drome. The escort which consisted of only two Messerschmitt 110s, turned back to Tobruk after escorting the Junkers only about ten miles out to sea.

They arrived at Maleme drome at about 1500 hours. No incident on the way. At Maleme each plane took off again as soon as it had refuelled (not in formation), and arrived at Eleusina drome near Athens at sundown. Flying Officer Marting and the other five POWs were kept waiting here under guards until about 2200 hours, when they were put on a truck and taken to a hotel in Athens. They were billeted here on the third floor, two POWs and one guard in each of the three rooms, the other four guards all in one room and the German "Tank Inspector" in a room all alone.

At the demand of the Germans Flying Officer Marting and the other five POWs gave their parole for that night because they were told they would leave for Germany next morning. All of them were too tired to try to escape that night.

On the morning of 27 October 1942 one of the guards went to the railway station to make reservations. In the meantime four of the guards took Flying Officer Marting and the other five POWs for a walk in the streets of Athens but as the crowd of Greeks surrounded them soon became very big they were hurried back to the hotel.

On returning to the hotel they were informed that they would be kept there for five days awaiting onward transport. whereupon they took back their parole. Thence forward they were not permitted to leave the third floor and two guards remained on duty all through the day whilst at night guards were changed every two hours.

Flying Officer Marting made a plan for the escape of all the six but it/had to be abandoned because Corson (who spoke German) was afraid to go through with it.

On the afternoon of the 29 October 1942 they were told that they would leave next day for Germany so Flying Officer Marting told Cleary and Finnigan that he would try to escape that afternoon. They agreed to cover his escape as long as possible.

At 1530 hours on 29 October 1942 while one of the sentries "on duty" was listening to the British Radio Broadcast in the Tank Inspector's room and the other was sleeping in a room across the hall, and adjoining Flying Officer Marting's room, and opening onto the stairs leading down to the hotel courtyard, he put on the spare trousers and cap of the sleeping sentry (Corporal Fritz Eiben) and descended by the fire escape. On reaching the courtyard at the bottom he managed to climb a 12-foot wall with the aid of a length of piping, then onto the roof of a building at the back. From this roof he climbed down into another courtyard where a Greek lady directed him to the street through another office building. While passing through this building he talked to five Greeks and one Frenchman asking them in turn for civilian clothes but they could not or would not help.

Flying Officer Marting then walked out into the street, walked North-East, soon reaching a residential district of Athens, without passing a single German. After about 30 minutes walk he accosted a Greek in the street, told him he was an escaped British POW and asked for help. But this man would not either help, fearing no doubt that he was a German as he was wearing partly German clothing. He then tried to elicit help from a young girl but either she could not understand English or would not help him. Flying Officer Marting then walked on to a big park (nearly into a squad of German soldiers) . When he turned back he found that the same girl and an older lady beckoned him to follow them. He was then cared for from the 30 October 1942 to the 12 December 1942 when he left for Cairo. Whilst on the last lap of journey in Greece he was discovered by a farmer and his son, but they gave him some food and told him he could hide in a shed nearby, about a hundred yards from the road. The smoke evidently attracted attention and soon two Italians in mufti came to investigate. They pretended to be Greeks but spoke Greek so badly that Flying Officer Marting realised they were Italians. They soon saw that he was not a Greek but they refused to believe him when he said he was an American. They convinced themselves that Flying Officer Marting was a Gestapo agent.

The two Italians finally left when he spoke a little German, Norwegian and English.

This officer has taken part in many attacks against heavily defended German targets including Berlin. He has invariably displayed great determination in attacking his allotted targets which has been reflected in the excellent photographs he has obtained. In September 1943, during a sortie against Montlucon, his aircraft was attacked by two hostile fighters but owing to Flight Lieutenant Marvin's fine airmanship these attacks were repulsed without damage to his bomber. Both in the air and on the ground this captain of aircraft has shown great devotion to duty.

To Newfoundland, 15 August 1942. Promoted LAC, 1 October 1942. Promoted Corporal, 1 November 1942. To No.10 (BR) Squadron strength again, 15 November 1942. To "Y" Depot, 13 February 1943. To RAF overseas, 3 March 1943. Repatriated 18 June 1945. To No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945. To Station Greenwood, 31 July 1945. Retired 12 October 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.2619 has recommendation forwarded to No.6 Group Headquarters, 31 July 1944 when he had served 16 months in Canada, 16 months in UK.

By his work as Corporal Instrument Repair, this man has been of great service to the Daily Servicing Flights and the squadron as a whole. His devotion to duty has been an inspiration to the whole of the Instrument Section. He has worked long hours and foregone passes and leave to ensure that the work for which he was responsible was well done and all aircraft were kept serviceable.

MASKELL, WO1 Joseph (Can 626) - Mention in Despatches - Leeming - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1600/45 dated 12 October 1945. Born 29 November 1891. DHist file 181.009 D.5527 RG.24 Vol.20667) has note that he enlisted in May 1923; on establishment of RCAF (Station Winnipeg) as of 1 April 1924 as Aero Engine Mechanic. With No.5 (Flying Boat) Squadron as of 14 November 1938. Promoted WO2, 1 April 1939. Promoted WO1, 1 September 1940. To Eastern Air Command Headquarters, 4 June 1941. To "Y" Depot, 1 September 1943. To United Kingdom, 15 or 16 September 1943. Repatriated 21 January 1946. To "K", 31 January 1946. To Release Centre, 2 May 1946. Retired 19 September 1946. DHist file 181.009 D.2619 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has recommendation for an MBE dated 28 January 1945 when he was WO Engineer, Station Servicing Wing. DHist card in biographical file says his home was in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

He has carried out his duties as Squadron Engineer Warrant Officer in an exemplary manner; his attention to detail at all times and in all kinds of weather has been a major factor in his squadron's high serviceability during the past year.

Early in 1944, an aircraft dropped part of its load of incendiary bombs on the ground as it was leaving its dispersal point. Warrant Officer Maskell skilfully led the ground crew party which cleared away the burning bombs without regard for his personal safety. He incurred minor injuries from an exploding bomb, but no damage was done to the aircraft.

MASKELL, WO1 Joseph (Can 626) - Mention in Despatches - RCAF Overseas - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 418/46 dated 18 April 1946.

MASON, W/C Alfred Thomas (C2273) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.1 Training Command Headquarters - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date, Canada Gazette dated 6 January 1945 and AFRO 89/45 dated 19 January 1945. Born 10 February 1912 in Brantford, Ontario (RCAF Press Release 4907 reporting award), educated there. Employed by Stobie Forlong and Company; when decorated his wife was living in Toronto and his parents in Brantford; enlisted in Camp Borden, 3 September 1930 as a Clerk. As of 30 April 1936 he was at AFHQ. Flight Sergeant as of 1 December 1939. Promoted WO2, 1 June 1940. Commissioned in Ottawa, 15 July 1940 in Administration Branch with rank of Flying Officer. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 May 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 July 1942. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 July 1943. To No.1 Training Command, 13 December 1943. To War Staff College, 8 January 1945. Medal presented 17 June 1945. Served postwar as an administrative officer, AFHQ, reverting on 1 October 1946 but promoted Wing Commander on 1 January 1949; later a probation officer. Died in Orillia, 7 February 1992.

This officer, by virtue of his thorough knowledge of service procedure and his untiring zeal, has been a tower of strength to his senior officers throughout his extensive career. His sound knowledge and good judgement have been of inestimable value in opening new units and closing stations no longer required by the training plan. By his cheerful and co-operative spirit and outstanding devotion to duty he has set an excellent example to those serving under him. His qualities of leadership and organizing ability have contributed materially to the successes of the training plan.

Flight Sergeant Mason has taken part in twenty-nine sorties and has achieved very successful results. By both day and night he has bombed targets of vital importance with extreme accuracy.

Tactical bombing has frequently been his task. Railway yards, airfields and troop concentrations are amongst his targets and he has obtained aiming point photographs during daylight attacks on oil tanks at Bordeaux, gun emplacements at Boulogne and the sea wall at Westkapelle.

He took part in both the successful attacks on Konigsburg, and other German targets he has bombed are Stuttgart, Darmstadt, Karlsruhe, Bremen and Brunswick.

Flight Sergeant Mason has also laid mines in enemy waters and it was on one of these sorties that he achieved the most outstanding success of his tour. He was detailed to lay mines in the Stettin Canal, a task necessitating a high degree of accuracy from a low level. As was expected, fierce opposition was encountered but Flight Sergeant Mason coolly directed his captain over the target, and from a height of only 250 feet he dropped his mines in the canal. Much of the credit for the successful completion of this important and dangerous task must go to Flight Sergeant Mason.

Throughout his tour, Flight Sergeant Mason has displayed keenness and a high technical skill which have rewarded him with many successful sorties.

Flight Lieutenant Mason has completed 34 operational sorties, 23 of which have been with the Pathfinder Force.

This officer is a captain of skill, courage and determination, whose calculated and skilful handling of his aircraft under many difficult conditions have gained him the confidence of his crew. He presses home his attacks with tenacity and courage in spite of difficult and trying conditions. He has a fine offensive spirit and a strong sense of duty, and can be relied upon to complete any work entrusted to him.

He has always shown a high degree of skill, courage and devotion to duty, and I recommend him for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MASSE, WO1 (now P/O) Joseph Jean Charles Ubald (R55488/J87969) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.425 Squadron - Award effective 6 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2534/44 dated 24 November 1944. Born 11 September 1921 in Quebec City; home in Montreal; enlisted in Quebec City, 4 September 1940 as an Electrician. Posted that date to No.4 Manning Depot. To Technical Training School, 21 January 1941. Promoted AC1, 7 June 1941. To No.15 SFTS, 11 June 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 October 1941. Remustered to aircrew, 14 March 1942, reverting to AC2 and posted to No.4 ITS. Promoted LAC, 1 April 1942. Posted elsewhere (possibly Trenton), 26 May 1942. To No.4 BGS, 4 July 1942. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 14 August 1942. To "Y" Depot, 28 August 1942. To RAF overseas, 26 October 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 14 February 1943. Promoted WO2, 14 August 1943. Commissioned 3 June 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 3 December 1944. Repatriated 22 January 1945. To Mountain View, 6 March 1945. To Release Centre, 4 October 1945. Retired 5 November 1945. Medal presented 25 February 1949. Gunnery Officer with RCAF Auxiliary, Quebec City, 8 February 1949 to 11 October 1950 (Flying Officer and Flight Lieutenant).

Throughout a tour of operational duty as air gunner, Warrant Officer Masse has consistently displayed outstanding initiative and a fine fighting spirit. On a recent sortie he was rear gunner of an aircraft which was hit and damaged by enemy fire. Control having been temporarily regained, this officer then succeeded in locating the defective control rod and with the assistance of the flight engineer the damage was repaired. By his coolness and presence of mind Warrant Officer Masse contributed in good measure to the safe return of the aircraft.

DHH file 181.009 D.1730 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20607) has the original recommendation by W/C Lecompte drafted 7 August 1944 when he had flown 41 sorties (269 hours 30 minutes) as follows; note his name was spelled "Massey" in the submission:

Throughout an operational career that comprised 41 offensive sorties against enemy targets, Warrant Officer Massey has always conducted himself with great gallantry and outstanding devotion to duty. These operations include four attacks on Berlin and others on Cologne, Stuttgart, Leipzig, Gladbach and Frankfurt.

On his first operational flight, June 23rd, 1943, Warrant Officer Massey was mid-upper gunner of a Stirling bomber which was hit by flak while flying at 1,300 feet over the Frisian Islands. Though aware that the pilot had been seriously injured, and in spite of the fact that flak fragments had torn a hole in the perspex of this turret, this courageous gunner remained at his post. On a later occasion he was rear gunner of a Stirling bomber subjected to several attacks by an enemy fighter over Gladbach. Severe structural strain imposed on the Stirling as a result of violent evasive action rendered the elevators unserviceable. Out of control, the aircraft dropped from 17,000 feet to about 2,000 feet, and the pilot ordered the crew to bale out. The door leading to the rear turret had jammed, but Warrant Officer Massey managed to smash his way through. Level flight having been temporarily regained, he then succeeded in locating the defective control rod and assisted the Flight Engineer in repairing the damage. By his coolness and presence of mind, this non-commissioned officer extricated his crew from a perilous situation, thereby safeguarding lives and much valuable equipment. Another occasion on which Warrant Officer Massey acquitted himself with great gallantry was on an attack by an enemy fighter; this courageous Warrant Officer first gave directions regarding evasive action, then opened fire on the enemy which was successfully driven off.

This Non-Commissioned Officer's exceptional fighting qualities and resourcefulness have been an example and an inspiration to other members of his crew. I recommend that his outstanding devotion to duty be recognized by the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

AFRO does not give unit; No.6 Group Monthly Summary of Operational and Training Activities (June 1943) gives unit as No.405 Squadron.

MASSEY, F/O Cornelius (J11113) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.426 Squadron - Award effective 5 February 1944 as per London Gazette dated 15 February 1944 and AFRO 644/44 dated 24 March 1944. No citation other than "...completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.2624 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has recommendation dated 20 December 1943 when he had flown 20 sorties (203 hours 15 minutes) between 13 September 1942 and 3 December 1943. These included anti-submarine patrols flown 16 November 1942 to 18 February 1943 which in turn included two sightings of U-boats on 26 November 1942 (crashed at St.Eval) and one attack on a U-boat on 12 February 1943. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace, 11 August 1944.

This officer has proved himself a most courageous and skilful Bomb Aimer. He has completed many operational sorties, both in Coastal Command and Bomber Command, including attacks against many of the most heavily defended enemy targets. He has consistently achieved success over the most difficult targets in the face of intense enemy opposition. By his coolness and determination he has set a high example in the squadron.

The full sortie list was as follows:

RCAF Press Release No. 6388 dated 27 August 1944 from Sergeant John Badger, transcribed by Huguette Mondor Oates, reads:

WITH RCAF BOMBER GROUP OVERSEAS: -- Scientific by training and background, "Con" Massey of Plainfield, N.J., and Pointe Claire, Quebec, has just been made a squadron leader and appointed bombing leader at one of the bases of this Group. He flew a tour of operations with the thunderbird and the City of Vancouver Squadrons, as a result of which he wears the DFC. Massey left a career as textile engraver and designer to become a bomb aimer for the duration. First change the Air Force wrought in this studious quiet-spoken man was to streamline his Christian name, Cornelius, to "Con.".

It was not long before his careful work won him a posting to the renowned City of Vancouver Squadron. Massey was aboard one of the unit's Halifaxes on a return flight from Duisburg the night the rear gunner destroyed a Me.109. The Halifax was spiraling underneath the diving night-fighter when the gunner, Flight Lieutenant Dick Botkin of Wichita, Kansas, hammered a stream of bullets into the dark outline above. The fighter disintegrated in a blinding explosion. Fragments of its cowling lodged in an engine radiator of the Halifax. One of the scraps is Massey's most valued war souvenir.

Another night as his four-engined bomber was thundering through the black sky toward Stuttgart, a Me.110 winged in on their tail. For half an hour, the Halifax pilot threw his giant plane through one combat manoeuvre after another but the German would not be shaken. At last, just as rear-gunner Botkin barked new directions for evasive action over the intercom, the Messerschmitt got into position for a burst and let them have it, riveting 30 holes into a petrol tank on the port wing. But Botkin was in position too and he caught the Nazi with a hail of bullets as a result of which it immediately broke off the engagement. The gallant Kansan is now missing.

His tour completed, Massey was transferred to Group Headquarters where he joined the staff of experts who plan the missions of the Canadian heavy bomber fleet. Next, followed his promotion and appointment to head the bombing sections of one base.

Massey comes by his scientific talents naturally. His father, now deceased, won several medals at international textile exhibitions, while his brother, Edward, is an army major in chemical warfare work at Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, Ontario.

Notes: Assessed 2 October 1943 - "Above average air bomber. Has had an enviable record on operations. This officer has been a great help in the training of new air bombers." (W/C W. Swetman).

Assessed 31 July 1944 at Headquarters, No.6 Group - Had flown 614 hours (55 in last six months). "Very careful and accurate workman. Has done a good job at this Headquarters." (S/L G.A. Sweany). "A very hard working, conscientious and reliable officer. Lacking somewhat in forcefulness but thoroughly reliable."

Application for Operational Wing dated 2 April 1944 stated he had flown 26 sorties (259 hours 40 minutes), 28 September 1942 to March 1944.

Repatriation form dated 11 May 1945 states he had flown 27 sorties (266 operational hours), the last on 22 March 1944. Also 246 hours 35 minutes non-operational. Types experienced were Anson (50 hours five minutes), Wellington (58.00), Halifax II (228.30), Lancaster II (174.30) and Lancaster X (1.30).

Training: Attended No.1 ITS, 4 July to 8 August 1941. Courses in Mathematics (84/100), Armament, practical and oral (81/100), Signals (95/100), Hygiene and Sanitation (39/40), Drill (89/100) and Law and Discipline (60/60). Placed ninth in a class of 132. "Good type, serious, steady, dependable and anxious to make good in any capacity."

Attended No.12 EFTS, 8 August to 25 September 1941. Fleet Finch, seven hours 35 minutes of dual instruction. Was tense, swerved on take off, had trouble with airspeed. Ceased training.

Attended No.9 AOS, 13 October 1941 to 16 January 1942. Anson aircraft -32.09 as first navigator by day, 27.06 as second navigator by day, 11.45 as first navigator by night, 1.30 as second navigator by night. Also 2.25 on bombing practice. "Very good navigator." Ground marks were in DR Plotting (131/150), DR and DF, written (174/200), Compasses and Instruments (142/150), Signals (98/100), Maps and Charts (95/100), Meteorology (72/100), Photography (83/100), Reconnaissance (87/100), Bombing, written (81/100) and Bombing, practical (64/100)/ Placed third in a class of 23.

Attended No.6 BGS, 19 January to 28 February 1942. Battle aircraft - 12.15 day bombing, 2.40 night bombing, 6.05 day gunnery. Dropped 17 bombs high level by day, eight high level by night, 18 low level. "His bombing results are satisfactory." In gunnery scored 5.5 percent hits in Beam Test, 5.5 percent hits in Beam Relative Speed Test. No Under Tail Test due to bad weather. Fired 1,000 rounds air-to-air. Examinations in Bombing, written (115/150), Bombing, practical (116/150), Gunnery, written (78/100) and Gunnery, practical (71/100). Placed 19th in a class of 27. "He achieved a satisfactory position in the class, is keen and hard working. He is very level headed type of man, and will be an efficient observer."

Attended No.2 ANS, 2-30 March 1942. Anson aircraft - 2.15 as first navigator by day, 11.20 as second navigator by day, 6.05 as first navigator by night, 14.24 as second navigator by night. "Excellent student. Accurate and painstaking, Well organized in the air." Courses in Astro Navigation Plotting (102/150) and Astro Navigation, written (77/100). Placed 20th in a class of 67. "Above average."

MASSEY, G/C Denton (C1706) - Officer, Order of the British Empire - No.4 Release Centre - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/45 dated 5 July 1946. Born in Toronto, 20 June 1900. Attended St. Andrew's School, 1909-1913, University of Toronto Schools, 1914-1918 (junior and senior matriculation), University of Toronto School of Science (1919, mechanical engineering) and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (1919-1924, wrote thesis on Automotive Engineering). Employed by Massey Harris, Toronto, 1924-1942 (seven years in shop practice, application of mechanical energy to production, supervised building program of the company in Toronto). Junior Partner in Philip Massey and Company, Toronto, 1932-1934. Sold partnership to become Ontario organizer in election campaign of 1934. Enlisted in Toronto, 20 February 1940 as Administrative Officer. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 October 1940. To AFHQ, 15 December 1940 (Directorate of Technical Training but also active with Air Cadets). To Composite Training School, Trenton, 9 March 1941 for administrative course. To No.3 ITS, 26 April 1941. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 May 1941. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 October 1942. Posted overseas, 17 December 1942. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 10 January 1943. Promoted Group Captain, 15 September 1943. To Repatriation Depot, Warrington, to command, 30 November 1943. To Canada on leave, 11 March 1944, arriving New York 16 March 1944. Returned overseas, 1 June 1944. Repatriated 11 May 1945. To No.1 Air Command, 15 May 1945. To No.4 Release Center, 31 July 1945. To Composite Training School, 22 April 1946. To No.2 Release Center, 9 July 1946. Retired 10 July 1946. Best known postwar as radio evangelist. Died in Cambridge, Ontario, 25 January 1984 as per Airforce Magazine of June 1984. Photo PL-44041 (ex UK-21406 dated 16 May) is captioned as follows: "G/C Denton Massey, Toronto, officially signing over command of the RCAF Repatriation Depot at Warrington, Lancs., to G/C J.A. Hutchison, OBE, Edmonton; F/L R.V. Hacking, Aurora, Ontario, looks on." Photo PL-44042 taken on same occasion: G/C J.A. Hutchison signs while G/C Massey looks on; accompanied by their adjutants, F/L R.V. Hacking (Aurora) and F/O C.G. Smith (Belleville, extreme right).

This officer has contributed outstanding service to the Royal Canadian Air Force throughout the war and during the demobilization period following as Commanding Officer of the Reselection Centre, Trenton, Initial Training School, Victoriaville, Repatriation Centre, Warrington, England, and No.4 Release Centre, Toronto. He has administered these difficult units and the personnel passing through them with zeal, tact, personal energy and perseverance far beyond the normal call of duty. He has at all times exercised his ability and command in the studied improvement of good relations between the service and the individual and between the Royal Canadian Air Force and the citizens of the communities in which he has served, a feature which has been of incalculable benefit to the high standard of the Royal Canadian Air Force at home and abroad.

The recommendation was raised 6 March 1946 by Air Vice-Marshal E.E. Middleton, Air Officer Commanding, No.1 Air Command.

Notes: Assessed 10 October 1940 - "An efficient officer with good organizing ability. A loyal and untiring worker with a capacity to get things done." (G/C J.A. Sully).

Assessed 17 July 1942 - "Squadron Leader Massey assumed command of No.3 ITS, Victoriaville, Quebec, approximately two months ago and since his taking over this Station he has been functioning to my entire satisfaction. He has created good feelings between the RCAF and the municipality of Victoriaville and I would strongly recommend, in view of his ability, that he be promoted to the Acting rank of Wing Commander." (Air Commodore Albert de Niverville, Air Officer Commanding, No.3 Training Command).

MASSIE, F/O James Cardno (J38182) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.692 Squadron - Award effective 23 November 1945 as per London Gazette dated 7 December 1945 and AFRO 244/46 dated 8 March 1946. Born 23 December 1923 in Toronto; home there (student); YMCA Camp, Innisfil, 1936 to 1941. Attended Danforth Technical School completing grade 13 early to enter the RCAF. Enlisted in Toronto 23 April 1942. To No.1 Manning Depot, 12 May 1942. To No.9 BGS, 10 July 1942. To No.3 ITS, 12 September 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 7 November 1942 but not posted until 5 December 1942 when sent to No.11 EFTS. Ceased training and posted to No.1 Composite Training School, Trenton, 30 January 1943. To No.10 AOS, 26 April 1943; graduated and commissioned 12 November 1943. Posted that date to No.34 OTU. To "Y" Depot, 29 April 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 3 May 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 12 May 1944. Repatriated 5 August 1945. Retired 19 September 1945. Obituary states he was "stationed at Gravelly, England, where he flew 49 missions over enemy territory, in the Canadian built Mosquito." Married 23 October 1946. In 1946 he created C & M Lighting which he sold in 1949 to begin his career with General Motors and the automotive industry which lasted to his death. Purchased Georgian Pontiac Buick in Barrie with his family on 22 September 1981. Dedicated many volunteer hours within the community most recently as Honorary Chairman Salvation Army Red Shield Appeal. For the last 10 years of his life, he was an integral part of the Barrie Colts Hockey Team, showing tireless involvement as the Managing Director and #1 Fan of the team and players. Died in Barrie, 19 September 2006. Medal presented by Governor General at Government House, 24 January 1956. No citation, "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." Public Records Office Air 2/8772 has recommendation dated 19 May 1945 when he had flown 45 sorties.

This officer has completed 45 operational sorties against some of the most heavily defended targets in Germany, including twenty attacks on Berlin. He has at all times shown skill and courage in carrying out his duties and displayed the utmost determination to bomb his targets accurately. For his skill, courage and devotion to duty he is strongly recommended for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

RCAF Press Release No. 8384 dated 19 January 1945 from F/O George Sinclair reads:

WITH RCAF IN BRITAIN: -- When anti-aircraft fire over Munchen Gladbach damaged the controls of a Stirling bomber so badly that the pilot ordered his crew to bail out, a Montreal air-gunner's quick action saved the bomber and its crew.

Rear-gunner in a bombing attack on the Ruhr Valley target, P/O J.C. Massey[sic], DFC, (DeLaurier Street) revealed that the bomber was hit by a burst of heavy flak which damaged the doors of his tail gun turret so that he was trapped. At the same time, the bomber began to climb out of control and the pilot called to the crew to bail out. Massey turned round in the tiny turret and kicked open the jammed doors, a feat which he could not repeat on the ground and which his gunnery leader considered impossible. Crawling into the fuselage of the bomber, he discovered a broken control rod which he knew must be causing the bomber's wild flying. He quickly grasped the ends and held them together, enabling the pilot to level the big bomber and control it. "The pressure on that rod was pretty tough, it took all my strength," Massey declared. "I was off intercom so I couldn't tell if the others were getting out, but I didn't like the idea of going, so I took a chance." With the aid of the engineer, the broken rod was mended well enough to bring the airmen and their damaged bomber to England.

Now, at an RCAF Repatriation Depot on his way home, P/O Massey says: "What breaks my heart is to be going home without getting into Germany to see the job our bombing raids have done".

Promoted Sergeant, 1 October 1941. To No.13 SFTS, 13 December 1941. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 8 September 1942. To No.2 Aircrew Graduate Training School, 12 April 1944. To No.7 Release Centre, 16 January 1945. Retired 18 December 1945. Medal sent by registered mail 7 February 1956.

This non-commissioned officer possesses a knowledge of messing far surpassing the average and has the faculty of maintaining harmony in the operation of the mess. In several instances during his Air Force career he has been called upon to organize and carry out messing functions of all descriptions. These have all been carried out in a manner worthy of the highest commendation. Central messing has been in force at this unit and Flight Sergeant Massie has been chiefly responsible for its operating efficiency and extreme cleanliness. He has always been most active in holding instructional classes for chefs and chef assistants and with his help in the actual preparing of food he has raised the standard of mess hall personnel in the service.

MASTERS, F/L Thomas James (J9463) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.36 Squadron - Award effective 27 June 1944 as per London Gazette dated 7 July 1944 and AFRO 1861/44 dated 25 August 1944. Born 11 March 1916 in Toronto; home there; enlisted there 25 February 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.14 FTS (guard), 2 May 1941; to No.1 ITS, 9 June 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 15 July 1941 when posted to No.20 EFTS; graduated 13 September 1941 when posted to No.13 SFTS; graduated and commissioned 19 December 1941. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 19 December 1941; to RAF overseas, 2 January 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 19 December 1943. Served in both No.36 and No. 62 Squadron. Repatriated 9 November 1944. To No.1 Training Command, 12 December 1944. To No.1 Composite Training School, 14 March 1945. Released 6 December 1945. Moved from Toronto to Sarnia, 1955 to work at Polymer and then Cabot Canada, retiring 1981. Died in Sarnia, 31 January 2004. Photo PL-34155 is a wartime portrait. Medal presented by Governor General, 24 May 1946.

This officer has taken part in a large number of operational sorties throughout which his courage and devotion to duty have been outstanding. One night in January 1944 he was second pilot of an aircraft when a fully surfaced U-Boat was sighted. Despite intense anti-aircraft fire he pressed home his attack with the utmost vigour. During the bombing run his aircraft was hit and caught fire and the flames spread rapidly. Flight Lieutenant Masters was forced to bring his aircraft down on to the sea. His determination to press home the attack in the face of accurate fire from the enemy submarine is typical of this officer's fine fighting spirit.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9016 has recommendation dated 21 May 1944 when he had flown 42 sorties (330 operational hours); this tells a fuller story than that published:

This officer was second pilot of a Wellington aircraft engaged on Operation SWAMP on the night of the 8th January 1944, and was at the controls when a contact was obtained. Doubt existed as to the contact and an effort at establishing identification was made. Intense anti-aircraft fire was the response. Advantage was taken of the moon to recognize a fully surfaced U-boat. Flying Officer Masters began his attack and the aircraft was hit by accurate fire during the run in. His attack was pressed home with the utmost vigour and the depth charges dropped. Almost simultaneously the aircraft caught fire which, spreading rapidly and with great intensity, caused Flying Officer Masters to make a crash ditching under extremely adverse conditions. Four of the crew were rescued after some three hours in the water.

The determination of this officer in pressing home this attack despite the intense and accurate fire from the U-Boat is typical of his work generally with the squadron. Flying Officer Master is always keen to engage the enemy and anxious to fly in spite of bad weather conditions. His courage and devotion to duty have been outstanding, and this officer has set a high example to the remainder of the squadron.

MATHER, LAC Thomas Leslie (R173038) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Born 8 May 1918 in Toronto; educated there. Joined Bank of Commerce, 1938. Enlisted in Hamilton, 19 June 1942 as Aero Engine Mechanic and posted to No.1 Manning Depot; to Technical Training School, 14 August 1942; trained at Galt and St.Thomas. Promoted AC1, 11 November 1942. To "Y" Depot, 3 March 1943; to RAF overseas, 27 March 1943. Promoted LAC, 1 April 1943. Repatriated by air, 17 June 1945 and posted to No.8 OTU. To Greenwood, 31 July 1945. Released 28 September 1945, returning to bank duties. No citation in AFRO. The following is taken from War Service Records, 1939-1945, (Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 1947), p.9 and 167-168 (entries not fully consistent with each other):

Our men were also used in specialist capacities, as, for example, Corporal T.L. Mather, who after being badly injured in an accident while on duty, was posted to effect equipment liaison between the engineering and equipment administrations of Bomber Command. His report, submitted to the Air Ministry, was subsequently adopted almost in its entirety. He was also successful in tracing and remedying certain engine difficulties at one of the RCAF bases....

Exposure to dampness caused a condition which necessitated relinquishing his trade as mechanic. Thereafter employed on specialist work which later received high commendation. Upon cessation of hostilities, was selected to fly to Canada to assist in organizing the new 6 Group Bomber Bases to be formed on the East Coast for operations in the Far East. Suffered severe injuries to left foot while unloading a Lancaster.

MATHERS, F/O James Wilson (J12570) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.162 Squadron - Award effective 27 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1861/44 dated 25 August 1944. Born 1 February 1923 in Weyburn, Saskatchewan; home in Vancouver. Clerk in a meat department, Woodward's Store, 1938-1941. Also in Air Cadets, 1939-1941. Enlisted in Vancouver, 2 August 1941. To No.2A Manning Depot, Penhold on enlistment. To No.38 SFTS, Swift Current, 19 August 1941 (non-flying duties); to No.4 ITS, Edmonton, 10 October 1941.

Promoted LAC, 6 December 1941); to No.18 EFTS, Boundary Bay, 7 December 1941; course concluded on 13 February 1942; to No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon, 1 March 1942; to No.12 SFTS, Brandon, 15 March 1942; graduated and commissioned 3 July 1942. To No.1 General Reconnaissance School, 18 July 1942; to "Y" Depot, Halifax, 3 October 1942; to RAF overseas, 22 October 1942. Disembarked in Britain, 9 November 1942. To No.7 (Coastal) OTU, 30 November 1942; promoted Flying Officer, 3 January 1943; to Limivardy, 11 April 1943 and attached to No.1443 Flight. Posted away on 19 April 1943. Departed Britain for Middle East, 27 April 1943. To No.162 Squadron, 2 June 1943. Left that squadron 16 April 1944. To No.78 OTU, 30 April 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 3 July 1944. Killed in flying accident, No.78 OTU, 28 September 1944 (Wellington JA580). Took off on normal training flight. Starboard engine was seen to smoke, then fail. He commenced a wide left-hand circuit and was approaching field with wheels down (possibly lowered too soon). Aircraft was last seen at 500 feet when it went behind a hill and crashed into Baqa village. He appears to have alighted in the village and hit one of the few concrete structures there; aircraft burst into flames; two villagers also killed. At the time he had 783 hours solo on all types, 430 hours on Wellingtons. He also had time on Magisters (23.10), Blenheim (3.45), and Ansons (226.00). Buried in Palestine. Medal presented by Governor General to next of kin, 27 June 1945.

Flying Officer Mathers has completed a tour of operational duty. On several occasions he has shown great skill and resource in extricating his aircraft from perilous situations. At other times this officer has been detailed to fly along the coastline of defended enemy territory at low level. In many cases intense anti-aircraft fire has been encountered but Flying Officer Mathers has never let this or adverse weather prevent him from completing his allotted tasks. Throughout his courage and devotion to duty have been of the highest order.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9016 has recommendation (no date) giving incredible detail.

This officer has now completed an operational tour of 230 hours with this squadron.

On the night of 2/3 February 1944 Flying Officer Mathers was captain of a Wellington aircraft detailed to carry out a Signals Investigation flight in the Aegean. Whilst flying at 500 feet just north of Rhodes town the aircraft was suddenly illuminated by a coast searchlight and engaged by intense anti-aircraft fire of all calibres. Flying Officer Mathers immediately took violent evasive action but it was some time before he could get the aircraft out of range of enemy fire. During this time the aircraft was holed several times and it was due entirely to the captain's skill, tenacity and resource that it was not shot down.

On another occasion when this officer captained an aircraft flying at 1,500 feet near Rhodes the starboard engine failed and Flying Officer Mathers turned for base. At first a little power was obtained from the unserviceable engine and the pilot managed to gain height, but shortly afterwards the engine became useless and was stopped. Height could not be maintained on one engine, and once again it was the pilot's skill which enabled him to make a successful landing at base with just sufficient height to spare.

On a third sortie when flying at 500 feet in the Aegean the aircraft was engaged by an enemy convoy and the tail fin badly holed. Despite this the captain decided to carry on with the operation and completed it successfully.

All Flying Officer Mathers' operations have been carried out around Crete, Rhodes, north and south Aegean, Khice, Salonika, west coast Greece to Corfu and Corinth Canal. In many cases bad weather conditions have been encountered but this officer has whenever humanly possible completed the flights required.

No.162 Squadron has, until recently, been under the direct control of Headquarters, Royal Air Force, Middle East, Signals Department, and performs varied special duties of a highly secret nature. In order to understand the difficult and often dangerous duties performed by our pilots and crews, a knowledge of methods used in enemy radar investigation is necessary. These flights must be made at a height not exceeding 1,000 feet and preferably at about 500 feet. Our aircraft is required to be plotted continually by the transmissions, and is therefore usually fired on, especially if the transmission is of gunlayer type, and in most other cases is very likely to have night fighters vectored onto it.

In order to make positioning of enemy radar stations possible, it is necessary that the aircraft be held on a steady course, regardless of shelling, and often over heavily defended areas. At all times when Flying Officer Mathers has been the captain of the machine very successful results have been obtained owing to his appreciation of technical requirements and skill and tenacity in flying the course required. It will be remembered that our aircraft are not fitted with ASV or any radio navigation device (except loop) but must still fly accurate courses among the islands, even on moonless nights at low levels. The results of a flight depend entirely upon the accuracy of navigation.

The accurate flying and will to see a job well done is characteristic of Flying Officer Mathers and his crew and has materially increased the value of the work done in this squadron over the last year. His courage and devotion to duty has always been of the highest order, and an example to everyone in the squadron.

On 30 June 1943 he was flying Wellington T2878 on a communications mission (transport of urgently needed supplies to Gambut). At the time he had flown 355 hours solo (all types) including 160 hours on Wellingtons. Starboard engine began coughing. He managed to get it running normally for a time but trouble recurred when he climbed to 5,500 feet. He landed at El Adem. By now the engine had failed completely. It suddenly caught fire and extinguisher failed to work. He then cut the port engine and the crew evacuated as the Wellington was consumed by fire. Initial investigation officer wrote, "Pilot to be commended on the action he took."

On 26 September 1944, two days before his fatal crash, he had another accident, this one involving Wellington JA524. The port tyre went flat just after landing and the aircraft came to rest with the port wheel off the runway. The Wellington began to tip up, causing port propellor blades to nick the earth, even with the stick pulled all the way back. He was not held responsible. S/L W.B. Skinner wrote, in part, "An experienced Wellington pilot who has been flying Ansons only for a considerable period, was doing circuits and landings to get his hand in before returning to operational duties."

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9159 has recommendation drafted 25 July 1944.

Warrant Officer Matheson, navigator, has successfully completed 28 operational sorties over enemy territory, all at night. During this time his skill and determination in carrying out his navigational duties has resulted in the successful interception and shooting down of three enemy aircraft. His resourcefulness and outstanding skill in particular reflected in the successful interception and subsequent destruction of a Junkers 188 on the night of June 28/29th. In this engagement after being informed of an enemy aircraft, through his own skill, worked his way successfully against difficult odds, until his pilot was able to see and destroy the enemy plane. This navigator through his training has proven an above average airman, and has been an inspiration to the entire squadron.

RCAF Press Release No. 8079 dated 4 January 1945 from F/L Fred Jackson reads:

WITH THE RCAF IN BRITAIN: -- Pilot Officer Walter Kirkwood, DFC, 22-year-old, City of Saskatoon, Lynx Squadron Mosquito pilot, can tick off the number of his "kills" on the five fingers of his right hand.

Kirkwood, of Edmonton, Alberta (10747-104th Street) was out on his fourth trip with his RCAF squadron recently when he and Navigator P/O Neill Matheson, DFC of Winnipeg, Manitoba (123 Garfield Street) saw the navigation lights of a German aircraft twinkling at the far end of an airfield.

"The Hun had just turned the lights on and off after landing," explained Kirkwood. "We were cruising at about 1500 feet and went right after him. He turned off the end of the runway when we hit him with a couple of short bursts. He blew up when we were roaring over about 50 feet off the deck."

The Lynx team got out of there in a hurry. Searchlights went on and guns started firing but all too late to catch the Mosquito. On the trip home, this intrepid pair spied a German lorry lumbering along a highway. They went down to tree top height and blew it up. "Good thing it exploded," remarked Matheson. "The flash illuminated some trees dead ahead and we just managed to graze over the top of the branches."

Both Kirkwood and Matheson were with an RAF squadron before joining the Lynx squadron. They were on beach-head patrols after D-Day and Matheson teamed with his pilot to shoot down three German aircraft. Two were Ju88's and the other a Ju188. F/O Bill Ward, a Toronto, Ontario airman, was navigator with P/O Kirkwood when he gave the chop to his other victim, a Junkers188. Kirkwood and Matheson were awarded the DFC for their share of the exploit.

MATHESON, F/L Kenneth Albert (J24370) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.49 Squadron - Award effective 2 October 1944 as per London Gazette dated 13 October 1944 and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 14 May 1914 in Calgary; home in New Westminster, British Columbia (clothing store partner and player on New Westminster Adanacs lacross team); enlisted in Vancouver, 30 January 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay until 1 April 1942 when posted to No.10 Repair Depot. To No.4 ITS, 23 May 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 17 July 1942 but not posted to No.5 EFTS until 29 August 1942; may have graduated 23 October 1942 but not posted to No.3 SFTS until 7 November 1942; graduated and commissioned 5 March 1943). To "Y" Depot, 20 March 1943. To RAF overseas, 26 March 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 5 September 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 12 May 1944. Promoted Squadron Leader, 23 October 1944. Married Flying Officer Enid Faulkner, an RCAF nurse who worked with G/C Tilley at East Grinstead Hospital. See the book As for the Canadians - The Remarkable Story of the RCAF's Guinea Pigs of World War II for her story. Both DFC and Bar presented at Buckingham Palace, 13 July 1945. Repatriated 23 July 1945. To No.3 Repair Depot, 3 August 1945. To Central Flying School, 27 October 1945. Retired 12 December 1945. Postwar he was owner and president of the Fraser River Pile Driving Company. In 1948 it was especially busy repairing flood damage. It also drove piles used in bridges and ferry terminals in Lower Mainland of British Columbia. Died in New Westminster, 29 November 2003. RCAF photo PL-40149 (ex UK-16722 dated 21 November 1944) is captioned as follows: "From Western Canada, this trio have been comrades for more than 44 operational trips with an ace RAF Lancaster squadron. From left to right they are, F/O Ken E. Weaver, Kowichan Bay, Vancouver Island, a former Mountie in the Great Bear Lake area, air gunner, F/L Ken Matheson, DFC, pilot, who formerly played lacross with New Westminster's champion Salmon Bellies, and P/O F.G. Sheppard, air gunner, Stoney Beach, Saskatchewan, who flew on RCAF coastal patrols over the Pacific more than a year before coming to Britain." No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". Public Records Office Air 2/9015 has recommendation dated 15 July 1944 when he had flown 26 sorties (133 hours 25 minutes) and was a Deputy Flight Commander. For sorties, see entry for Bar to DFC; text with recommendation as follows

This officer has now completed 26 operational sorties as a captain of Lancaster aircraft. A great number of these sorties have been carried out against heavily defended targets including Essen, Munich, Schweinfurt and Creil. He has show exceptional determination to place his bombs accurately on the target regardless of the opposition encountered.

He has shown exceptional qualities of leadership and is an outstandingly keen and efficient captain. He has set an invaluable example to the less experienced crews.

For his devotion to duty in the face of the enemy and the thoroughness in which he has carried out every task allotted to him I strongly recommend the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MATHESON, S/L Kenneth Albert, DFC (J24370) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.83 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 22 May 1945 and AFRO 1147/45 dated 13 July 1945.

Since the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross, Squadron Leader Matheson has taken part in many more operational sorties. He has proved to be a most skilful pilot and successful captain of aircraft who has always faced the enemy with cool courage and determination. On one occasion in October 1944 he was captain of an aircraft detailed for an attack against Bremen. While over the target his aircraft was heavily engaged by anti-aircraft fire and illuminated by searchlights. Undeterred he kept his damaged aircraft steady and successfully completed his allotted task.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9015 has recommendation for DFC dated 15 July 1944; Public Records Office Air 2/9069 (Part One) has recommendation for Bar to DFC dated 8 February 1945. The sortie list below is compiled from both documents; the text is interesting for the comparison between initial proposal and final citation. As of this recommendation he had flown 50 sorties (281 hours 17 minutes), 26 March to 21 December 1944.

21 December 1944 - Politz

Squadron Leader Matheson is a very experienced captain of a Lancaster crew. He has now completed 50 sorties against the enemy. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross at the end of his first tour of operations, which he completed with Main Force, and he immediately volunteered to join the Pathfinder Force and continue operations. He has now completed 18 sorties in this work.

He has proved himself to be a most skilful pilot and a successful captain of his crew. They quickly mastered the Pathfinder technique and now they are classed as Best Blind Markers. In this capacity they have taken a leading part in the work of target marking and illumination, in many most satisfactory raids. Their work has required them to be one of the first aircraft over the target, and they have had to meet considerable opposition from the ground defences. Squadron Leader Matheson has always faced this with exemplary courage and has refused to be deterred from making the steady run required for accurate marking.

An example of this occurred on the night of 6/7th October, 1944. Squadron Leader Matheson's crew were detailed to drop the first flares by means of instruments in an attack on Bremen. While on their run, they were engaged by heavy flak and finally coned by searchlights. Undeterred by these hazards, Squadron Leader Matheson kept the aircraft steady until all the flares were released. The aircraft was considerably damaged.

For his fine and courageous work as captain of a Pathfinder crew, for his leadership and example to his squadron and for his determination to inflict the utmost damage to the enemy, Squadron Leader Matheson is recommended for the award of a Bar to his Distinguished Flying Cross.

MATHESON, W/C Samuel Henderson (C2082) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.15 Aeronautical Inspection District - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born 5 August 1914 in Winnipeg as per RCAF Press Release reporting award. Attended Boeing School of Aeronautics and University of Manitoba (Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering). Employed by Good Roads Department, Manitoba government. Enlisted in Toronto, 29 May 1940 in Engineer Branch. At No.16 Technical Detachment as of 15 July 1941, at which time he was Acting Squadron Leader. Confirmed as Squadron Leader, 1 February 1942. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 September 1943. To No.15 Aeronautical Inspection District, 3 January 1945. To Release Centre, 30 September 1945. Retired 15 October 1945. Medal presented 8 November 1945.

This officer continues to render outstanding and meritorious service in the performance of his duties. At all times he has put the service above his personal conveniences and his contribution to the Royal Canadian Air Force has been very great. His tact, fairness and firmness have been admired and respected by all personnel under him which has resulted in a fine esprit de corps and a highly effective Aeronautical Inspection District. His devotion to duty has been outstanding.

MATHESON, F/O Sidney Edward (J22227) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.162 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 28 July 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Born in Nelson, British Columbia, 27 October 1915 of a Norwegian father and Swedish mother; educated in British Columbia; worked one year as a labourer and nine years as a printer for a newspaper; home in Regina; enlisted in Calgary, 7 January 1942. Attended No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon, 23 January to 10 April 1942. At Station Calgary, 11 April to 9 May 1942. Posted to No.4 ITS, Edmonton, 10 May 1942 (graduated 3 July 1942 and promoted LAC); further trained at No.6 AOS, Prince Albert (5 July to 12 September 1942), No.1 CNS, Rivers (13 September to 6 November 1942 where he was described as "a man for details; a very exacting person; must know the whys and wherefores" although graded as "an average bomb aimer") and No.7 BGS, Paulson (graduated 18 December 1942 and promoted Sergeant but then commissioned with effect to 18 December 1942 but not struck off strength until 2 January 1943; he was on Ansons - 19.55 hours by day, 5.45 hours by night - and Bolingbrokes - 9.35 hours by day - graduated first in a class of 23). At No.4 SFTS, Saskatoon, 3 January to 22 January 1943; to No.1 GRS, Summerside, 23 January 1943 (graded as a "very sound and reliable navigator" and passed first in a class of 16); to Station Patricia Bay, 6 March 1943 where he attended No.3 OTU (Stranraers, 111.35 hours by day, 16.50 hours by night); to Eastern Air Command, 30 May 1943; to No.162 Squadron, Yarmouth, 1 June 1943. Subsequently moved with that squadron to Dartmouth (October 1943) and to Iceland (2 January 1944) before return of unit to Sydney, June 1945. Posted to staff of Station Sydney, 7 July 1945. To Release Centre, 5 September 1945; released 8 September 1945. Medal sent by registered mail 7 June 1950. Died in Regina, 27 December 2004. Cited with F/O B.C. Denomy (DSO), F/O Graham Campbell (DFC, see above for citation) and Flight Sergeants Israel J. Bodnoff and Sydney R. Cole (DFMs).

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9158 has recommendation raised 1 July 1944 by the Officer Commanding, RAF Station Wick. It noted that Matheson (misspelled "Mathieson") had flown approximately 36 sorties (400 operational hours):

Flying Officer Matheson was Navigator in Canso "P" of 162 Squadron on the 24th June 1944 when during the run in to attack a U-Boat in face of devastating anti-aircraft fire and at a time when the aircraft was being hit repeatedly, the starboard engine out of action and on fire, he coolly and courageously stood to his post and operated a hand held camera because the automatic camera had been wrecked by flak.

It is considered that he showed great courage and devotion to duty.

Immediately afterward the aircraft was forced to ditch owing to the starboard engine falling out. During the subsequent 21 hours spent in the water, this officer did all in his power to assist the others, to such an extent that due to over-exertion he was himself receiving artificial respiration when a High Speed Launch arrived.

It is considered that this officer not only showed exceptional courage and devotion to duty but also great self-sacrifice in his actions, which undoubtedly saved the lives of other members of the crew, at the risk of his own.

He is most strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguish Flying Cross.

To this the Air Officer Commanding, No.18 Group, added (2 July 1944):

Flying Officer Matheson who was Navigator of Canso P/162 during its successful attack on a U-Boat, behaved in an exemplary manner throughout the action. Finding the automatic cameras unserviceable he continued to take photographs with a hand-held camera despite the fact that the aircraft was blazing furiously. His behaviour after the aircraft had ditched did much to encourage the members of the crew throughout their long ordeal. Strongly recommended for the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

In applying for Operational Wings (25 February 1945) he provided the following sortie list:

6 June 1943 - Eastern Air Command - sweep (6.15)
21 June 1943 - Eastern Air Command - A.R. (7.15)
25 June 1943 - Eastern Air Command - sweep (8.10)

10 November 1944 - Iceland - escort (2.25)
13 November 1944 - Iceland - sweep (9.50)

His continued good work in No.162 Squadron is attested by the following assessments:

This officer was appointed Squadron Navigation Officer on December 1st. He has always been an outstanding navigator and is very strongly recommended for promotion to Temporary Flight Lieutenant, effective 18 December 1944 (S/L J.M. Thomson, Reykjavik, 15 December 1944)

This officer is an exceptionally efficient navigator and is doing an excellent job as Squadron Navigation Officer. (W/C J.K. Sully, Reykjavik, 16 February 1945).

MATHESON, FS Stuart Gordon (R101644, later J86089) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.44 Squadron - Award effective 17 November 1943 as per London Gazette dated 10 December 1943 and AFRO 410/44 dated 25 February 1944. Born 25 April 1922 in Winnipeg; home in Stonewall, Manitoba (farmer); enlisted in Winnipeg, 24 April 1941. Granted Leave Without Pay until 28 August 1941 when posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.4 SFTS (guard duty), 27 October 1941. To No.7 ITS, 21 December 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 13 February 1942 but not posted to No.19 EFTS until 28 February 1942; may have graduated 24

April 1942 but not posted to No.12 SFTS until 9 May 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 28 August 1942. To "Y" Depot, 11 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 26 October 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 28 February 1943. Promoted WO2, 28 August 1943. Subsequently commissioned, backdated to 4 May 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 7 November 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 7 May 1945. Repatriated 13 June 1945. Retired 29 August 1945. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace 14 November 1944. Photo PL-43389 shows him at right; the other man is described as his rear gunner, "F/O Karl Reed, DFM of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on his third tour of ops, [who] blasted an FW.190 out of the skies during an attack on the German port of Kiel." However, no aircrew named Karl Reed can be associated with a DFM.

This airman has taken part in a large number of sorties, including attacks on industrial centres in the Ruhr and many other important targets. In September 1943, Flight Sergeant Matheson piloted an aircraft detailed for a mine-laying mission. In spite of much anti-aircraft opposition he made two runs over the target to ensure accuracy. On another occasion, on the outward flight to Munich, the oxygen supply failed. Nevertheless, Flight Sergeant Matheson continued to the target and bombed it. This airman has invariably displayed skill, courage and determination of a high order.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/5020 has recommendation dated 17 November 1943, drafted when he had flown 24 sorties (143 hours 27 minutes). Signed by the Group Captain commanding Station Dunholme Lodge; endorsed by Commander of No.52 Base the same day and by Air Officer Commanding, No.5 Group, also on 17 November 1943.

On the 29/30 September, Flight Sergeant Matheson was captain of an aircraft detailed to carry out a special mining operation at Danzig. Weather conditions were difficult but good captaincy and navigation brought the aircraft onto the area on time. Immediately before the release point, however, the Lancaster was coned and held by searchlights and simultaneously engaged by accurate and concentrated light flak which caused some damage. Immediate defensive action had to be taken, and the aircraft was forced down to sea level, but to avoid the risk of inaccurate dropping Flight Sergeant Matheson did a second run and dropped his mines in the proper place.

Another example of this Non-Commissioned Officer's courage and determination was on the 2/3rd October when Munich was attacked; less than half-way to the target the oxygen supply failed completely and made it impossible to follow the flight plan; nevertheless, Flight Sergeant Matheson flew on to the target which was attacked successfully from a height of only 11,000 feet.

This Non-Commissioned Officer has set a fine offensive example to old and new crews alike and has now completed successfully 25 operations, all but two against Germany. Among the targets he has attacked [are] Berlin, Munich, the Ruhr and Peenemunde.

I strongly recommend Flight Sergeant Matheson for an immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

This Canadian officer has now completed 30 sorties against the enemy. Under a calm and quiet manner he has a fine offensive spirit which has inspired the members of both crews with whom he has operated with the same confidence and disregard for personal safety in the face of heavy enemy opposition.

His accuracy has been of high value to his captain and in adverse weather conditions and when heavily engaged by the enemy, he has navigated the aircraft skilfully out to the target area and back to base.

This officer's tenacity and untiring and fine offensive spirit make him well worthy of the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MATHEWS, P/O William Hooker (J8424) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.69 Squadron - Award effective 8 November 1942 as per London Gazette dated 20 November 1942 and AFRO 1962/42 dated 4 December 1942. Born 4 August 1916 in Blanchard, Iowa. Served in ROTC, September 1934 to June 1936; US Navy (Midshipman), June 1936 to June 1937. Home in Newark, New Jersey; enlisted in Montreal, 6 February 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.6 SFTS (guard), 24 March 1941. To No.1 ITS, 16 May 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 21 June 1941 when posted to No.3 EFTS; may have graduated 22 July 1941 but not posted to No.5 SFTS until 8 August 1941; graduated and commissioned, 24 October 1941. To No.31 GRS, Charlottetown, 15 November 1941; to No.31 OTU, Debert, 18 January 1942; emplaned in Newfoundland, 22 April 1942; taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 28 April 1942; to No.7 OTU, 11 May 1942; to No.1446 (FT) Flight, 11 August 1942. Killed in action, 9 November 1942 in a Wellington of No.69 Squadron. No known grave; name on Malta Memorial.

One day in October 1942, this officer executed a successful attack on a large heavily escorted merchant ship. Pressing home his attack with great skill, Pilot Officer Mathews obtained a hit on the vessel inflicting such damage that later it had to be run ashore and its cargo unloaded. His aircraft was damaged by anti-aircraft fire but he flew it to base. On another night towards the end of the month Pilot Officer Mathews attacked, with telling effect, another enemy merchant ship escorted by three destroyers. Later it was learned that the ship and its valuable cargo of fuel had become a total loss. This officer has displayed outstanding skill and determination to inflict loss on the enemy.

NOTE: He was involved in a flying accident at No.7 OTU, 4 July 1942, when Wellington HX424 piloted by Sergeant J.M. Watt, RAF, struck a marker ball on a target while flying over glassy water (Mathews was co-pilot). Damage repairable.

He was lost with Wellington HF883 (letter L) and a crew of four other RCAF plus Sergeant J.M. Watt. Aircraft took off from Luqa at 2155 hours and not seen again. He was to carry out a search (and if necessary a torpedo attack) in the Porto Stilo area. A subsequent letter on file states that "Porto Stilo" could not be found in gazetteers and suggested it was Faro Capo Stilo.

P/O Paul Hartman, RCAF was flying that night as well (crew Sergeant O.S. Evans, RAF, P/O R.R. Perry, RCAF, later killed, Sergeant Armando John Perno, RCAF, later commissioned, Sergeant George Arnold Phillips, RCAF, later commissioned, and Sergeant Sydney Joseph Thomas, RCAF, later commissioned). He reported receiving a message from "L" giving a target at Cape Stilo. He investigated, saw flares being dropped, but visibility was poor and radar blips, when followed up, turned up nothing. Later, at Gozzo Spadere he had more radar contacts, which seemed to be "E" Boats, but fuel short and starboard engine giving trouble.

Notes in the files of Hugh Halliday (source unknown) state that on 3 October 1942 flying a Wellington torpedo bomber he attacked the Italian motor ship Valfioita carrying tanks and motor transport. The ship was hit in the stern. The Wellington crew saw a glow amidships and at the same time the aircraft was severely damaged by flak. He crash landed at Luqa. The crippled Valfioita made Corfu for repairs. On 28 October he scored a direct hit on the motor vessel Etiopia, a 2,153 ton tanker carrying aviation fuel. The vessel was forced to put into Navarino for repairs.

MATHIESON, S/L John Gordon (C5441) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.2 Air Command Headquarters - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946. Born 31 December 1915 in Vancouver; educated there. Enlisted at Camp Borden, 19 February 1936 as a wireless operator. Commissioned at Rockcliffe in 1941 (Signals Branch). Served at Dartmouth, Gander and Torbay until April 1943 when he was posted as Signals Staff Officer, Eastern Air Command Headquarters. Soon afterwards was given command of Training Section, No.3 Wireless School, Winnipeg, where he remained until January 1945. Then went to staff duties at No.2 Air Command Headquarters, Winnipeg. Remained in postwar RCAF (2063), serving on Pacific Coast to May 1948. Exchange Officer with USAF, May 1948-June 1950. Then made Deputy Chief Technical Officer, Air Defence Group headquarters, St.Hubert. To RCAF Staff College, September 1952. After that to AFHQ (Directorate of Telecommunications). Named to command Station Clinton, August 1960. To NORAD HQ, August 1963 (Group Captain). Medal presented 27 November 1950. Retired in Ottawa, 14 January 1969. Died in Vancouver, 20 November 1999.

Squadron Leader Mathieson has served as Signals Officer (Non Flying List) at Operational Stations, Training Stations and Command Headquarters in Canada. Throughout his career he has displayed the utmost perseverance and devotion to duty. He has at all times placed his responsibilities to the Service in the foremost, and has contributed a great deal towards the efficient operation and function of the Royal Canadian Air Force Signals Branch.

Pilot Officer Matte, a Canadian, was posted to No.103 Squadron on 27th May, 1944 and has since completed 30 sorties as navigator on Lancaster aircraft, with a total of 166.05 hours operational flying.

In the course of these numerous sorties, extending over a period of six months, Pilot Officer Matte has taken part in attacks on a wide variety of targets in enemy and enemy-occupied territory, including operations in support of the Allied Expeditionary Force, large scale bomber attacks on enemy industrial objectives and marshalling yards, and minelaying operations. During these operations this officer has proved himself to be an outstanding operational navigator. His navigational skill, combined with his personal qualities of determination, endurance and reliability have been largely responsible for the remarkably successful tour of operations carried out by his crew.

He has therefore made a valuable contribution to the bomber offensive in recent months, and in doing so, has set a fine example for all navigators.

I strongly recommend that this officer's excellent work may be recognized by the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This Canadian officer has now completed 30 sorties as a navigator including attacks on heavily defended targets in Germany and enemy occupied territory. Of a lively nature, his cheerful bearing in the face of danger and his calm and steady concentration on his task have been a magnificent example to his crew.

On several occasions when his captain has been faced with difficult conditions, his steady encouragement has materially assisted in a successful attack being delivered. For his undoubted skill as a navigator, his cheerful spirit and example, he is recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Flying Officer Matthews, a Canadian, has recently completed his first tour of operations against the enemy as Navigator of a Lancaster aircraft. The outstanding success achieved by his crew can be attributed very largely to his exceptional skill and to his cool efficiency, which was never impaired even in most adverse circumstances.

This Canadian officer has proven himself a most reliable and conscientious navigator on operations, thus inspiring his captain and crew with the utmost confidence. He has been a most reliable member of a very successful crew. I strongly recommend the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross to Flying Officer Matthews.

As a mid-upper gunner, this officer has operated with a large diversity of crews, all of whom have been loud in their praises of his ability and worth as an operational crew member. At no time has he hesitated to fly even with the least experienced crews and, by his unceasing vigilance and excellent co-operation, the aircraft in which he has flown have always returned unscathed. In addition to his routine tasks he has always been active in the tuition of inexperienced gunners, who have benefited by his knowledge and attention to a marked degree. His tour of duty has been an excellent example of service before self.

NOTE: The following citation reads badly, as if a line or two has been dropped; CHECK CITATION.

While engaged on anti-submarine work this officer has completed his duties as navigator with great success. On convoy escort sorties, though often called upon to fly in adverse weather, he has never failed to reach his objective in an engagement with a U-boat. Flight Lieutenant Matthews by skilful co-operation with his captain placed a stick of depth charges across the submarine. One of these exploded directly under the quarry, which was destroyed. This officer's outstanding courage and devotion to duty have been most praiseworthy.

To No.4 AOS, 14 January 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 29 June 1944. To No.1 AOS, 19 November 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 25 April 1945. Retired 28 April 1945. Cited with Sergeant Edward John Lowans (above). Also cited with Sergeant G.B. Sylvester and Sergeant E.W. Tickler (RAF; CGM to Tickler, DFM to others). Following the war he enrolled in Osgoode Hall and received his law degree in 1958. Long associated with Falconbridge Mines. Died in Sunnybrook Hospital, Toronto, 7 June 2005, aged 87. RCAF photo PL-15929 (ex UK-3940 dated 20 May 1943) taken after investiture - FS A. Harrison (Cornwall), FS J.L. Matthews (Port Arthur, Ontario), FS E.J. Lowans (Gananoque, Ontario).

One night in February 1943, Flight Sergeants Matthews and Lowans and Sergeant Sylvester were members of a crew of an aircraft, captained by Sergeant Tickler, which was detailed for a mine-laying mission. When well on the outward flight an armed ship opened fire on the aircraft and the rear turret was hit, but the captain proceeded on his course. Visibility in the target area was poor and Sergeant Tickler had to bring the aircraft down to 700 feet to locate the objective. Whilst at this height during the commencement of its attacking run the aircraft was engaged by the ground defences. A number of anti-aircraft guns opened fire whilst it was held in the searchlights and the bomber was hit in the navigator's compartment, the rear turret, the pilot's cockpit and the port wing. The flight engineer was severely wounded in the head and became unconscious. Sergeant Tickler was hit in the left shoulder and side and became so dazed that he almost lost control of the aircraft, which commenced to dive. Sergeant Matthews, with great promptitude, however, pulled back the control column and brought the aircraft back to a height of 700 feet. Displaying great fortitude, Sergeant Tickler kept to his course and the mines were dropped in the correct place. Not until this was accomplished did he inform his comrades of his injuries. On the return flight, although his left arm was entirely useless, he remained at the controls, greatly assisted by Flight Sergeant Lowans, and Sergeant Sylvester did everything possible to mitigate his task. Meanwhile, Flight Sergeant Matthews displayed great navigational ability and, although deprived of all wireless aid, he set courses which enabled his captain to reach an airfield in this country. Despite his injuries, Sergeant Tickler effected a perfect landing before collapsing over the controls. This captain displayed courage, fortitude and devotion to duty of the highest order while the skill, gallantry and teamwork of his comrades who rendered such valuable support were worthy of the highest praise.

Public Record Office Air 2/4951 has recommendation drafted 10 March 1943. Those recommended were R96467 Flight Sergeant Edward John Lowans, R103101 Flight Sergeant John Lamont Matthews and 977392 Sergeant George Bernard Silvester (all awarded DFM), 1383853 Sergeant Edward Wells Tickler (awarded CGM [Flying]) and Sergeants Webb and Davies (recommended for Mentions in Despatches).

Sergeant Tickler and his crew were detailed to carry out mining operations off the Frisian Islands on the night of 27th February 1943. The pinpoint from which they were to make their run was the Island of Juist, which is known to be defended. The crew were briefed to avoid flying over the island if possible, but in the weather conditions at the time the visibility was poor and this was apparently unavoidable. There was no moon. The aircraft took off at 1859 hours. On the first part of their trip there were no untoward incidents until 2005 hours, at a height of 1,500 feet, a flak ship opened fire on them. The gunners in the aircraft returned this fire and silenced the guns, but the aircraft was hit in the rear turret, though no serious injury was done. They then continued on their trip, and owing to bad visibility and the dark night, they were forced to come down to 700 feet in order to make their pinpoint.

The crew located the island and immediately turned away from it and set course to make their timed run. At 2042 hours, just as they had set course at 700 feet, they were engaged by seven or eight light flak guns and searchlights. The guns were out to sea and all opened fire at the aircraft which was held in searchlights and silhouetted against the dark background. The aircraft was hit several times in the rear turret, in the Navigator's cockpit, in the port wing and in the pilot's cockpit. The Flight Engineer, Sergeant Downing, received severe head injuries, lost consciousness, and died later. The pilot, Sergeant Tickler, was wounded in the left shoulder and left side and for a few minutes was so dazed that he almost lost control of the aircraft. The aircraft started to dive into the sea but the Air Bomber, Sergeant Lowans, and the rear gunner, Sergeant Silvester, both shouted

“We are getting near the waves.” The Navigator, Sergeant Matthews, quickly left his table and pulled back the control column and brought the aircraft up again to 700 feet.

The pilot did not mention his own injuries but indicated that they were to carry out their task and make the timed run and drop their mines. The Navigator gave him the course and despite his own injuries and the damage to his aircraft, the correct run was carried out and the mines dropped in the correct place. It was not until after this that Sergeant Tickler informed the rest of his crew that he had been wounded. The Navigator had a slight wound on his hand and one shell splinter tore the top of his helmet, although without injury to him. The Navigator, after the mines had been dropped, gave the correct course to return to base, but as the pilot's left arm was quite useless, he could not set the course on the compass, so the Air Bomber, Sergeant Lowans, did this for him, kept him on course and helped him with flying the aircraft. He performed the duties of Flight Engineer and gave the captain tea and encouraged him. The Navigator, at this time, was giving first aid to the Flight Engineer, dividing his time between navigation and this task.

After a time the Wireless Operator, Sergeant Webb, came up and gave first aid to the pilot and also the Flight Engineer, and then went back to his set and tried to get in touch with base and to send an S.O.S. He could get no reply from the ground station so he locked the key down for some time as a distress signal so that the ground station might get a “fix” on the aircraft in case they had to ditch. They carried on, on their route back to base, and entirely without wireless aids of any sort, including the TR.1335, succeeded in navigating the aircraft and, under extremely difficult conditions, the aircraft was brought back to this country.

During this time the Air Bomber, Sergeant Lowans, was helping the pilot to fly the aircraft and they flew for about two hours in this state. The captain constantly gave instructions to the Navigator to change fuel tanks at the correct times, switch on the correct fuel pumps, and generally check the engines from time to time. The crew, who knew the state they were in, worked magnificently together to hold the pilot's interest and stimulate him as much as possible.

Just before crossing the English coast, the Bomb Aimer went down to the front in order to pinpoint and the Rear Gunner, Sergeant Silvester, came up to help the pilot and act as Flight Engineer. He did so because he considered that he knew more than anyone else in the crew, except the Captain, having previously watched the Flight Engineer at work on local flying. After crossing the coast, the Wireless Operator called “Darky”, and a flare path was lit for them. The Rear Gunner, acting as Flight Engineer, lowered the undercarriage and managed, with some considerable difficulty, to get the flaps down. After lowering the undercarriage he noticed that they were losing speed and opening the throttles made little difference. He then remembered the constant speed levers and, putting the airscrews into fine pitch, gained flying speed once again. In the meantime, Sergeant Davies, the mid-upper gunner, from his position, was of considerable help in keeping a lookout and telling the pilot when to turn in to land. At one time he turned in too soon and Sergeant Davies corrected him and told him to make a wider circuit. They finally approached the flare path correctly and by a supreme effort Sergeant Tickler mustered sufficient strength and judgement to make a perfect landing on the flare path, but the effort was too much for him and after touching down he collapsed over the controls. The aircraft unfortunately ran on, swinging to the left and struck an obstruction on the aerodrome, though the aircraft itself was not badly damaged.

Sergeant Tickler, the pilot, displayed courage and devotion to duty of the highest order in that after his aircraft had been damaged, his Flight Engineer fatally wounded, himself wounded in the left shoulder, side and back, with his left arm quite useless, he continued to carry out his orders, and flew the aircraft at the correct speed and height to lay the mines in the correct place. Then, with great skill and endurance, flew the aircraft for two hours to bring his aircraft and crew safely home. The Navigator, Sergeant Matthews, by his prompt action saved the aircraft from diving into the sea and then with great skill and devotion to duty, carried out the operation as ordered and, under the most difficult circumstances, navigated back to this country. Sergeant Silvester, rear gunner, was responsible for assisting the pilot in landing and, by his prompt action, in keeping the R.P.M. up, prevented the aircraft from stalling. Sergeant Lowans, Air Bomber, by exerting his will power on the pilot, and encouraging him, and helping him to fly the aircraft, no doubt made it possible for Sergeant Tickler to last out until they had landed. Sergeant Davies, mid-upper gunner, displayed very sound judgement in assisting the pilot on his circuit prior to landing and was the only gunner able to remain at his post in the event of attack by hostile aircraft. Sergeant Webb, wireless operator, helped to render first aid and did everything in his power to obtain R/T assistance, remaining calm during moments of peril and encouraging the pilot and other members of the crew. By their joint efforts in bringing a damaged aircraft and badly wounded Captain back to this country after having completed their sortie, the crew exhibited determination and crew cooperation of the highest possible order. The Captain's conduct is particularly praiseworthy. He was badly wounded but not until he had completed his mission did he inform the rest of the crew of his injuries. Each man in his turn rendered invaluable assistance without which the aircraft could not have failed to crash. If any one of them had failed in his duty, it is highly possible that the aircraft and crew would have been lost and I have no hesitation in most strongly recommending them all for the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

It was the Air Officer Commanding of the Group who altered this to the CMG (Flying) for Tickler and Mentions in Despatches for Webb and Davies.

MATTHEWS, Sergeant Lionel Wollaston (R103566) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.150 Squadron - Award effective 17 March 1943 as per London Gazette dated 13 April 1943 and AFRO 809/43 dated 7 May 1943. Born 19 September 1920 in Sampsonville, Alberta; educated in Alberta; home in Calgary (telegraph clerk); enlisted there 5 May 1941 and posted that day to No.2A Manning Depot, Penhold. To No.15 SFTS, Claresholm, 22 June 1941 for non-flying duties. To No.4 ITS, Edmonton, 28 July 1941; promoted LAC, 30 August 1941); to No.5 EFTS, High River, 31 August 1941; to No.10 SFTS, Dauphin, 26 October 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 16 January 1942. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 15 February 1942. To RAF Trainee Pool, 11 March 1942; taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 23 March 1942. To No.11 (P) AFU, 23 April 1942. Damaged Oxford V3894, 29 May 1942 when he taxied into another aircraft at night (assessed as "carelessness" and admonished. Damaged Oxford N4596, 4 June 1942 when landing (structural failure of starboard axle causing aircraft to swing round on touchdown, collapsing port undercarriage - no blame attached to him. Attached to No.1524 Beam Approach Training Flight, 16-24 May 1942. To No.16 OTU, 23 June 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 16 July 1942. Damaged Wellington HD946, Upper Heyford, 26 August 1942 during night practice flying (too fast when landing); logbook endorsed "Carelessness - swung off flare path after landing." To No.150 Squadron, 16 September 1942. Damaged Wellington X3805, 30 September 1942 when landing in poor visibility during daylight training - touched down fast, half-way down runway at Tern Hill and undercarriage collapsed as he attempted to ground loop - assessed as an example of poor airmanship when he should have opened engines and gone around again. To North Africa with No.150 Squadron, 18 December 1942. Promoted WO2, 16 January 1943. Embarked from Algiers for United Kingdom, 23 March 1943; arrived in Britain 9 April 1943. Posted to No.22 OTU, 28 April 1943. Commissioned with effect from 19 January 1943 (RCAF Overseas Orders dated 14 June 1943). Medal presented at Buckingham Palace 18 May 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 19 July 1943. Killed in flying accident, 30 January 1944 at No.22 OTU (Wellington DF566). Took off at 1924 from Wellesbourne for bombing practice. Six minutes later another Wellington crew reported seeing it on fire in the air before it dived steeply into the ground and exploded. Seven crew (all RCAF) killed. In the six months prior to the accident he had flown 26 hours on Oxfords (ten hours day dual, 14 hours day solo, one hour night dual, one hour night solo) and 269 hours on Wellingtons (186 day as captain, 83 hours night as captain). His total flying time was 746 hours day solo or captain on all types (626 hours on Wellingtons), 382 hours night solo or captain on all types (371 hours on Wellingtons), 136 hours on instruments and 72 hours in Link. These figures appear to be overseas flying, not including training time in Canada. The accident investigation report noted that "Flying Officer Matthews was a very good pilot with considerable experience both operational and as an instructor on Wellington aircraft. In the event of one engine failure I consider that Flying Officer Matthews would immediately commit himself to single engine flying, feather the propellor of the dead engine and fly the aircraft back to base on the good engine” (S/L W. Spooner). In fact, it appeared that he had just begun this procedure when the port engine failed. The report concluded, “The extremely rapid break-up of the engine followed by the fast developing fire did not permit the pilot to use complete procedure for fire in the air, nor allow sufficient time for the crew to abandon the aircraft.”

This airman has completed 31 operational sorties over Germany, Italy and Tunisia. He has invariably pressed home his attacks with courage and determination and has obtained many excellent photographs. On one occasion, when taking part in an operation over Sicily, his aircraft sustained damage and his rear gunner received wounds which subsequently proved fatal. Sergeant Matthews brought his damaged aircraft back safely, landing with his wounded comrade at an aerodrome where hospital attention was available.

MATTHEWS, W/C Paul Whiteside (C2232) - Member, Order of the British Empire - RCAF Overseas Headquarters - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946. Home in Toronto; enlisted there 6 June 1940 in Administration Branch. Proceeded overseas almost at once and attached to No.400 Squadron. Flight Lieutenant as of 1 July 1941. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 25 January 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 15 September 1942. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 May 1944. Repatriated 9 July 1945. To No.1 Air Command, 20 July 1945. To No.4 Release Centre, 24 August 1945. Retired 30 August 1945. Medal sent by registered mail.

This officer has served with the Royal Canadian Air Force since 1940. In 1942 he opened No.6 District Headquarters at Edinburgh which was one of the main RCAF Field Headquarters, and served there until 1944 when he was posted to Command District Headquarters, Cairo, where he remained until the end of hostilities. The outstanding manner in which this officer represented the Royal Canadian Air Force is most worthy of recognition.

MAU, Corporal Herbert William (R161879) - Mention in Despatches - Eastmoor - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1647/45 dated 26 October 1945. Born 18 April 1912. Home in Pembroke, Ontario; enlisted Ottawa, 21 May 1942 as “Tradesman”. To No.1 Manning Depot, 15 June 1942. Reclassified as Armorer (Guns), 23 August 1942 and posted to Mountain View. To No.4 BGS, 13 October 1942. Promoted AC1, 23 November 1942. To “Y” Depot, 3 March 1943. To RAF overseas, 27 March 1943. Promoted LAC, 1 April 1943. Repatriated by air, 18 June 1945. To No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945. To Greenwood, 31 July 1945. To Halifax, 6 September 1945. Retired 10 September 1945. No citation in AFRO. DHist file 181.009 D.1719 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation dated 3 February 1945, confirming he was Armourer (G) and had served ten months overseas, 18 months overseas.

LAC Mau has at all times displayed the highest degree of efficiency and skill, not only in gun armament but also as the leading members of a bombing-up crew. His cheerful acceptance and efficient execution of all orders has always inspired those working with him to double their efforts. During a period a short time ago when LAC Mau's flight was suffering from an acute lack of staff, this airman, despite adverse weather conditions and extremely long hours of work, always displayed such great zeal, determination, efficiency and cheerfulness whilst working both on gun maintenance and as the leading member of his crew, that he was largely instrumental in his flight always meeting all operational and training commitments fully and on time.

Enlisted in Montreal, 19 September 1939 for General Duties. To No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto, 2 October 1939; to No.118 (Coastal Artillery Cooperation) Squadron, Saint John, 22 April 1940. Reclassified as Disciplinarian, 1 June 1940; promoted AC1 that date. To No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon., 24 June 1940. Promoted Corporal, 15 July 1940. Promoted Sergeant, 15 September 1940. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 April 1941. To No.2A Manning Depot, Penhold, 29 April 1941. To No.4 ITS, Edmonton, 16 July 1941. To No.7 BGS, Paulson, 17 November 1941. To No.9 BGS, Mont Joli, 23 November 1941. Promoted WO2, 7 January 1942. To No.3 Training Command Headquarters, 6 May 1942. Remustered for aircrew, 18 July 1942 at which time he reverted to Sergeant. To No.5 ITS, Belleville, 19 July 1942; to No.13 EFTS, St.Eugene, 10 October 1942; to No.5 SFTS, Brantford, 28 December 1942. Promoted WO2 again, 1 April 1943 and graded as pilot, 30 April 1943. Subsequently commissioned as of 30 April 1943. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 22 June 1943. Embarked from Canada, 23 June 1943. Disembarked in Britain, 1 July 1943. To No.14 (P) AFU, 10 August 1943 where he flew Oxfords and was described as follows: "This pilot has derived full benefit from the course. Starting slowly, he worked hard and now has reached a high average standard. His general attitude and his discipline have been exemplary and he should make an excellent Captain of Aircraft." . Promoted Flying Officer, 30 October 1943. To No.16 OTU, 16 November 1943 where he flew Wellingtons and was assessed as follows: "A good average pilot and captain. Flying is safe and steady and captaincy is above average. Recommended as Captain. Recommended for heavy aircraft." To No.51 Base, 29 February 1944. Attached to No.1661 Conversion Unit, 29 February 1944. Attached to No.5 Lancaster Finishing School, 23 March 1944. To No.106 Squadron, 30 May 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 18 August 1944. Killed in action 12 September 1944. Others in crew were J2716 F/O R.L. Montador (RCAF air bomber, POW), J27568 F/O J.A. Kitley (RCAF navigator, POW), 178473 P/O G.A. Timothy (RAF mid-upper gunner, POW), 1867002 Sergeant F.T. James (RAF flight engineer, killed), 1579439 Sergeant A. Marlow (RAF WOP, killed) and R202646 P/O L.R. Van Horne (RCAF rear gunner, killed). Aircraft shot down on bombing run. F/O Montador reported he had been first to bale out and believed that Mavaut had been wounded. F/O Kately reported that Mavaut still had control of aircraft when he baled out. Medal presented by Governor General to next-of-kin, 2 December 1946. Medals with Canadian War Museum (AN 19920099-001).

As captain of aircraft Flight Lieutenant Mavaut has completed many successful operational sorties. He has attacked heavily defended targets at Stuttgart, Gelsenkirchen, Givors and the submarine pens at Lorient. In July, 1944, he participated in daylight attacks on flying bomb installations. On one occasion when making his bombing run his aircraft was attacked by an enemy fighter and badly damaged, one member of the crew being mortally wounded. Nevertheless, Flight Lieutenant Mavaut pressed home his attack and secured an excellent photograph.

NOTE: Flying Officers Kately and Montador (the two RCAF survivors) subsequently visited Mavaut's father, who then wrote (November 1945) that they reported Mavaut had been recommended for the DFC and DSO.

MAW, F/O John Thompson (C4269) - Mention in Despatches - No.113 Squadron (Canada) - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 89/45 dated 19 January 1945. NOTE: Name may be John Thomas Maw. Born in Nashville, Ontario, 10 December 1912 (RCAF press release 4907 announcing award). Home there. Attended Weston High School and University of Toronto. Prewar he worked in Waite Amulet Mines, Noranda; enlisted in North Bay, Ontario, 15 March 1941 in Administration Branch; Flying Officer as of 12 April 1941; assigned on 27 June 1941 to Station Dartmouth. To Newfoundland, 14 March 1942. To No.4 Repair Depot, 31 March 1943. To Aero Engineer School, 27 May 1943. Reclassified in Air Engineer Branch, 28 October 1943; posted that date to Eastern Air Command; to No.113 (BR) Squadron, 30 November 1943. To Pennfield Ridge, 10 August 1944. To Eastern Air Command, 1 October 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 January 1945. To No.1 Release Centre, 6 May 1946. Retired 8 May 1946.

This officer's untiring efforts in supervising and maintaining serviceability has contributed in a large degree to the excellent record of this squadron's operational sorties. He has displayed great skill and leadership and has earned the respect and willing co-operation of his subordinates during long hours of work and under difficult conditions.

To No.8 OTU, Greenwood, 19 June 1945. To Station Greenwood, 1 August 1945. To Moncton, 7 September 1945. Retired 11 September 1945. Died at Treherne, Manitoba, 24 December 1962 as per Legionary of March 1963. AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas"; DHist file 181.009 D.1725 (PAC RG.24 Vol 20607) has list of MiDs this date with unit. No citation in AFRO. DHist file 181.009 D.1719 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation forwarded 3 February 1945 when he had served one year in Canada, 27 months overseas.

This airman has proved to be outstanding in his ability to carry out the most difficult work under adverse conditions. His untiring efforts combined with his determination and devotion to duty have shown exceptional results in the efficiency of his Flight in Daily Servicing Squadron Armament Section.

Note: Report dated 16 February 1942 stated he had attended Air Armament School, 13 January to 16 February 1942. Graduated second in a class of 35. "Keen, intelligent and industrious. Will make an excellent practical armorer."

MAWDESLEY, G/C Frederick Joseph (C49) - Air Force Cross - No.5 Bombing and Gunnery School - Award effective as of 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date, Canada Gazette dated 6 January 1945 and AFRO 89/45 dated 19 January 1945. Born 11 March 1891 in Castle Caulfield, Tyrone, Ireland. Enlisted as Gunner, 31st Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, 22 June 1915. Went overseas, 11 March 1916; to France, 14 July 1916 with Third Division Artillery Column. Served as Corporal and Acting Sergeant. Returned to Canadian Artillery Regimental Depot, England, 2 May 1917, for officer training. To 3rd Reserve Battalion, 1 September 1917; commissioned 2 September 1917. To 123rd Pioneer Battalion, 17 November 1917. To France, 28 November 1917. Returned to England, 20 May 1918. Seconded that date to RAF for training as Observer.

Observer in the RAF; to No.1 School of Aeronautics and School of Aerial Gunnery, 15 June 1918. To Eastchurch, 22 June 1918. Gazetted as Observer, 1 August 1918. To France, 11

August 1918. To No.49 Squadron, 12 August 1918. Wounded in foot, 25 August 1918. Hospitalized, 28 August 1918; to No.1 School of Aeronautics, 28 October 1918. To No.1 T.W. School (whatever that is), 13 May 1919. Relinquished commission, same date. Demobilized from CEF, 23 December 1919. Had taken some courses with RAF, early 1919. Reported his flying as Observer to be ten hours on Avro 504K, 25 on Bristol Fighter, 225 on DH.9 and 20 on Handley-Page.

Appointed Flying Officer (Observer), Canadian Air Force, 18 February 1920. To No.1 Wing, Camp Borden, 3 January 1921. On 17 August 1921 he is shown as Adjutant of No.1 Squadron, Camp Borden, and continued as such when it became Training Depot Station (October 1921). Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 September 1921. To Air Headquarters, 25 October 1922 (staff duty as assistant to Staff Officer Personnel and special duties relating to drafting of Pay and Allowance Regulations as well as King's Regulations and Orders for the new RCAF .

Commissioned in RCAF, 1 April 1924 in Ottawa. With F/L Higgins, told that he would have to learn to fly as condition of promotion. Posted from Air Headquarters to Camp Borden for flying training, 6 April 1924, reporting 7 April 1924. There was a lack of aircraft and in April he logged only 45 minutes dual. In May he got 4.40 dual (total 5.25). In August 1924 he got 4.50 dual (total 27.35) and 16.10 solo (total 18.40) but progress was slow. He made a cross-country flight of 69 miles on 25 September 1924, a landing test on 26 September, and a second cross-country flight of 102 miles on 2 October. His height test was on 3 October 1924. On 16 October 1924 his instructor, F/L Brookes, reported that he had 34.20 dual and 43.15 solo; his approaches and landings were erratic and often dangerous. S/L Anderson doubted his ability to improve, and after some further instruction and a test by S/L Anderson, his flying was discontinued on 27 October 1924, pending further orders from Air Headquarters. He had not crashed or damaged any aircraft, During his time at Camp Borden he had lectured to Second Term pupils on Army Organization and to Third Term pupils on Air Force Law and Administration. Because of his keenness to fly and qualities in other respects, on 29 November 1924 the Director, RCAF (G.C J.S. Scott) authorized Mawdesley to receive three more hours of instruction with an instructor of his choice. He went on leave, 4 December 1924 to 11 January 1925, and on his return to RCAF duty, R.S. Grandy took over Mawdesley's instruction. Between 13 January and 11 February 1925, Mawdesley flew 3.55 dual and 1.05 solo (total 41.05 dual and 45.20 spread over nine months and 29 days since 7 April 1924. Grandy reported that he had passed some tests (height, landing, cross-country, turns, figures of eight, stalling, side-slipping and forced landings), leaving tests in passenger carrying, cloud and rough weather flying, use of vacuum controls and compass test still to be done. The forced landing test had been passed in the period. He still lacked judgement in distance but later improved. He showed outstanding keenness for flying but little natural flying ability. He was over-confident. Grandy recommended that he be given two hours dual and two hours solo to allow him to finish the course. Air Headquarters agreed. On 25 March 1925, Grandy reported that Mawdesley had completed all tests for his flying badge (total 43.55 dual and 48.30 solo on Avro 504K). He was authorized to wear wings as of 25 March 1925.

Posted to Vancouver, 14 July 1925, for seaplane training and subsequently serving there with No.1 Squadron to 15 May 1926 (much work at Prince Rupert). Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 25 January 1926. To Winnipeg, 15 May 1926 and service at No.1 Wing. On command to RAF Pilotage Course, Calshot, England, 15 December 1926 to 29 May 1927. While there he flew 107 hours, mostly on Southampton flying boats with a little time on Fairey IIID (18 January to 18 May 1927). To Winnipeg Air Station, 1 July 1927. On command from Winnipeg to Headquarters, 26 November 1927, and to Camp Borden, 1 December 1927 to 3 March 1928. To Air Headquarters, 4 March 1928 to 11 April 1928. Assumed temporary command of Winnipeg Air Station (vice Stevenson), 15 December 1928. Relinquished command of Winnipeg Air Station, 5 February 1929 (to Anderson).

From Winnipeg Air Station to Civil Government Air Operations Branch, Ottawa, 12 December 1929. To be Superintendent of Personnel, CGAO, 1 March 1930. On command to No.2 General Purpose Detachment, 3 July 1930. From CGAO HQ to Camp Borden, 15 August 1931. On command from Camp Borden to Ottawa Air Station, for duty with Belle Isle Detachment, 25 July 1932. On exchange from Camp Borden to RAF, 23 March 1933 (No.210 Squadron, Pembroke Dock). Ceases that and transferred from Courses Abroad to No.4 (Flying Boat) Squadron, Vancouver, 8 May 1935. Promoted Squadron Leader, 8 September 1936. While with No.4 (FB) Squadron he made a mercy flight in Fairchild 633 to transport injured employee of Consolidated Mining and Smelting from Anyox to Prince Rupert (15 December 1937), while in Temporary Duty at Prince Rupert.

Also in 1937 he flew the Governor-General (Lord Tweedsmuir) in British Columbia during his visit to that province.

Posted from Vancouver to Trenton, 23 February 1938. To No.4 (BR) Squadron, 1 October 1939. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 January 1940. Posted to Trenton, 24 March 1940 to command School of Administration. To No.1 Training Command Headquarters, 16 May 1941. To Western Air Command Headquarters, 25 November 1941 (Staff Officer Training in December 1942). Promoted Group Captain, 1 May 1943 and posted to No.5 BGS, Dafoe that date. Left No.5 BGS, Dafoe, 10 January 1945. Retired 7 July 1945. As of 8 January 1945 he had accumulated 5,269 hours flying (Hitchins cards). See also Jack Hunter, "Mawdie", Journal of the Canadian Aviation Historical Society, Volume 33, No.2 (Summer 1995).

This officer, as commanding officer of a Bombing and Gunnery School, by his energy and good leadership, has brought the functioning of this station to a high level of efficiency. Throughout a long flying career he has made an excellent record as a pilot and instructor and has at all times taken a keen and active interest in the progress and welfare of those undergoing flying training. By his personal example of leadership, ability and devotion to duty he has set a high standard for all officers to follow.

NOTES:

R.A. Logan recounted, "When the time came that observers had to learn to fly, Mawdesley had a very hard time. Grandy proved to be the only one who could teach him to fly. Eventually, to everybody's relief and amazement, Mawdesley received his pilot's wings. Grandy received the OBE."

It is little known that this officer, a notorious "character" in RCAF lore, was recommended for the Trans-Canada Trophy (McKee) Trophy by S/L N.R. Anderson, Commanding Officer, Station Winnipeg. The letter in question, dated 18 January 1930, was from Anderson to the Department of National Defence (RCAF file 821-4, Volume 2, National Archives of Canada, RG.24 Volume 17795).

It is desired to draw your attention to the following facts concerning an officer of this Station who is considered fully qualified, on account of the specially meritorious work performed by him in 1929, to receive the award of the Trans-Canada Trophy.

Flight Lieutenant F.J. Mawdesley, a Permanent Officer of the RCAF, Commanding Cormorant Lake Base of the Winnipeg Air Station, performed continuous excellent service as a pilot during the year 1929. His efforts were instrumental in proving the exceptional merit and usefulness of the air service afforded Canada in general and Dominion Government in particular by the Directorate of Civil Government Air Operations.

His flying time for the year will probably not compare favourably with that of some Commercial Pilots, whose long continuous air journeys soon pile up flying hours. Nevertheless, Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley's flying time for March 12th to December 12th, 1929, amounted to 533 hours, and included no less than 566 landings, many of which were carried out under difficult and trying conditions. On one suppression flight carried out on May 10th, this officer made no less than eleven landings to disembark fire fighters at forest fires.

On March 28th this officer carried out a detection patrol to Island, God's and Oxford Lakes from Cormorant Lake, landing at the Settlements on each lake. He discovered that there had been considerable sickness at the Settlements, resulting in about 22 deaths at Island Lake and six deaths at God's Lake during February 1929. On the return journey he reported these facts to the Indian Agent at Norway House, and on March 31st he again flew to Island and God's Lake carrying with him the Indian Agent, Doctor and RCMP Constable from Norway House. The Indian Agent sent the following message at the conclusion of the flight:

"Appreciate prompt manner in which plane responded to request for flight to Island and God's Lake. Reports of recent deaths, sickness and destitution necessitated immediate action. Alternative transport by dog train considered hazardous at present and would have subjected all concerned to serious delay. Special flight enabled me to make immediate arrangements for relief of distress occasioned by deaths, opportunity to conduct inquiries. The Doctor was also essential for teeth extraction and provision of medicine.”

A message received from the Bishop of Keewatin on May 2, 1929, requested a special flight from Cormorant Lake to York Factory on the Hudson's Bay, for the purpose of carrying a Doctor and two nurses in to Archdeacon Faries, who was seriously ill with typhoid fever. His wife was breaking down under the strain and required assistance of two nurses.

At daybreak on the 3rd May Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley got off from Cormorant Lake in Fairchild XT with a Doctor and two nursing sisters from The Pas, and a mechanic. They reached York Factory at 2.15 in the afternoon. The ice on Hudson's Bay in front of the Post was very rough, but Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley landed the Fairchild without damage.

Shortly after arrival a terrific gale and snow storm came on which piled the snow in enormous drifts around the aircraft as high as the wings, and prevented the departure for Cormorant Lake for three days. At 6.50 a.m. on May 6th, the Pilot after skilful manoeuvring between the drifts finally got the aeroplane off and reached Cormorant Lake at 12.25 p.m., bringing the Doctor and mechanic out with him.

The Bishop of Keewatin said, “We appreciate the fine service rendered by your Cormorant Lake Sub-Station, which evidently was the means of saving the life of a valuable Missionary.”

This Flight was carried out at a time when the Commercial Aviation Companies operating in the vicinity had removed their aircraft from the ice to await the Spring break-up.

During the period March 12th to May 11th, 1929, when the ice was still on the lakes around Cormorant this Pilot dealt with eleven forest fires for the Forest Service, transporting fire hose, fire pumps, fire fighters and supplies to fires, which could not be reached quickly enough, and in some cases not at all, by any other means of transportation.

From May 6th to May 11th the fire hazard was very bad. At this time of year the snow had disappeared and the sun is strong enough to dry out the moss and undergrowth of the forest before the leaves come on. Unobserved fires, which may have been smoldering in the muskeg all winter log break out at this time of the year and spread to the adjoining coniferous forest, doing great damage. The streams are free of ice, but the lakes are only free along the shore line and travel across country by other means than air is impossible.

Under such conditions Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley changed his Fairchild from skis to wheels and continued to land fire fighters and fire fighting equipment on the ice in the centre of the lakes, sending them ashore across the intervening water space in a collapsible canoe, which he carried in the aircraft. This action enabled the Forest Service to deal with fires until the ice in the centre of the lake became too soft to operate aircraft any longer.

His work for the Forest Service at the dangerous fire hazard period, just before break-up, was exceptionally commendable, and proved of great assistance in controlling the fire situation in the Cormorant Lake District at the most difficult time of the year.

A transportation aircraft was prepared to take a Government Survey party into Pukkatawagan from Cormorant Lake, but during the preliminary test flight the propellor was badly damaged owing to the radiator filler cap working loose and falling onto the airscrew. The nearest spare airscrew available was at Berens River, but the only means of sending it to Cormorant Lake by ground transportation, which consisted of boat to Selkirk and then rail to Cormorant Lake, would take a week at least and greatly retard the Survey party.

Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley flew his large Varuna Flying Boat to Berens River, a distance of 200 miles, lashed the large four-bladed airscrew to the centre section on top of the flying boat hull and flew back to Cormorant Lake. Within two hours of arrival at the base the new airscrew had been tested and the Survey Party were away by air to Pukkatawagan.

The above are just a few instances taken from the continuous excellent work of Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley during the year 1929. He has flown through storm and smoke and darkness in carrying out the work of his Sub-Station. He has flown as much as eight hours in one day and afterwards worked long into the night attending to administrative details at his Unit. He has demonstrated to officials of Government Departments in a remarkable manner the great assistance which air transportation can be to them in their work, when arranged for and supplied by a well organized, well equipped and efficient Air Service like the Directorate of Civil Government Air Operations.

He has proven that there is no other manner in which the Government of the Country can win and hold the gratitude, admiration and loyalty of the people in outlying Settlements of Canada more quickly than by keeping Government aircraft available to supply their needs in time of distress and sickness.

It is considered that Flight Lieutenant Mawdesley has done more in a practical way to further the cause of sound, sane, sensible aviation in the Dominion of Canada during 1929 than any other Pilot, and is respectfully recommended for the award of the Trans-Canada Trophy.

On 15 January 1935, while on attachment to No.205 (Flying Boat) Squadron, he departed Pembroke Dock in Singapore III K3594, one of four aircraft bound for Singapore. Aircraft held up by weather, but on resuming flight, one (K3595) crashed into a mountainside near Messina, killing eight service personnel and one civilian passenger. Mawdesley's flight was uneventful. His crew on this occasion was F/O H.J.L. Hawkins, Sergeant Pilot R. Rudd, and Leading Aircraftmen A. Cargill, N. Young, and H.T. Baker and A. Mullinger. His passenger at departure was a civilian, R.J. Penn (technical officer) who transferred to K3595 and was killed in the crash of that aircraft. See Aeroplane, 17 January 1935 and subsequent. When recommended for AFC he had flown 5,174 hours (check figure) to date, 1,115 hours as instructor.

MAWHINNEY, F/O Bruce Alger (J23880) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.431 Squadron - Award effective 6 January 1945 as per London Gazette dated 19 January 1945 and AFRO 508/45 dated 23 March 1945. Born 2 September 1923 in Toronto; home there (labourer); enlisted there 8 January 1942. To No.1 Manning Depot, 18 January 1942. To Trenton, 28 February 1942. To No.6 ITS, 23 May 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 17 July 1942 but not posted to No.9 EFTS until 15 August 1942; may have graduated 9 October 1942 but not posted to No.2 SFTS until 24 October 1942; graduated and commissioned, 19 February 1943. To No.1 GRS, 5 March 1943. To "Y" Depot, 5 June 1943. To RAF overseas, 22 June 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 19 August 1943. Repatriated 7 February 1945. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 19 February 1945. To No.4 Release Centre, 19 March 1945. Retired 16 April 1945. Medal presented 22 June 1949. Died in Bowmanville, Ontario, 11 December 2011.

This officer has flown many operational sorties against such heavily defended targets as Bremen, Kiel and the Ruhr. On one occasion in September 1944, during an attack against Sterkrade, his aircraft sustained damage from anti-aircraft fire and the navigator was wounded. Flying Officer Mawhinney handled his aircraft with outstanding skill and flew it safely back to base. He has proved himself an excellent pilot and captain of aircraft whose fearless determination and devotion to duty have largely contributed to the successful completion of all the missions detailed to his crew.

DHist file 181.009 D.5526 (RG.24 Volume 20667) has recommendation dated 9 November 1944 when he had flown 26 sorties (127 hours 54 minutes), 5 July to 9 October 1944.

5 July 1944 - Biennais (4.50, second pilot)
12 July 1944 - Biennais (4.47, second pilot)
23 July 1944 - Donges (6.15)
5 August 1944 - St. Leu d'Esserent (3.35)
7 August 1944 - Caen (5.15)
8 August 1944 - Foret de Chantilly (5.20)
9 August 1944 - La Bretique (3.55)
10 August 1944 - La Pallice (6.40)
12 August 1944 - La Neuville (4.15)
14 August 1944 - Falaise (4.37)
15 August 1944 - Soesterburg (4.00)
16 August 1944 - Kiel (5.37)
18 August 1944 - Bremen (5.45)
25 August 1944 - Brest (4.36)
27 August 1944 - Mimoorecques (3.15)
31 August 1944 - Cezembre (4.29)
9 September 1944 - Le Havre (3.51)
10 September 1944 - Le Havre (4.54)
12 September 1944 - Wanne Eickel (5.09)
13 September 1944 - Osnabruck (4.53)
25 September 1944 - Calais (4.39)
26 September 1944 - Calais (4.10)
27 September 1944 - Sterkrade (6.18)
4 October 1944 - Bergen (6.38)
6 October 1944 - Dortmund (5.55)
9 October 1944 - Bochum (6.10)

In air operations, as captain of aircraft, Flying Officer Mawhinney has displayed courage, initiative and skill of the highest order.

This officer has flown 26 operational sorties against such heavily defended targets as Bremen, Kiel and the Ruhr, his crew being fully confident in his ability to make quick decisions, skillful and cool judgement at all times.

On one occasion on September 27th, 1944, whilst attacking Sterkrade his aircraft received several hits by flak and the navigator was wounded. Flying Officer Mawhinney's brilliant handling of his aircraft and crew was responsible for their return to base.

In view of this officer's achievements I strongly recommend that he be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAWHINNEY, F/O Clifford Stuart (J46888) - Air Force Cross - Station Torbay - Award effective 1 December 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 183/46 dated 22 February 1946. Born 3 April 1922. Home in Toronto; enlisted there 21 April 1941 and granted Leave Without Pay. To No.1 Manning Depot, 4 August 1941. To No.6 BGS, 1 September 1941; graduated 22 November 1941 when promoted LAC and posted to No.4 WS; graduated 5 June 1942 when posted to No.1 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 6 July 1942. To Torbay, 27 July 1942. To No.5 Coastal Artillery Cooperation Detachment, 12 December 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 6 January 1943. Promoted WO2, 6 June 1943. Promoted WO1, 6 January 1944. Commissioned 24 March 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 24 September 1944. To Station Torbay, 1 July 1945. To No.1 Radio and Navigation School, 15 September 1945. Retired 17 November 1945. Medal presented 22 June 1949. As of award had flown 585 hours.

In the middle of the night of the 1st-2nd May 1945, in Newfoundland, a pilot and crew were requested to fly penicillin to Buchan's, Newfoundland, where a child was dying. The weather at base was so poor that it was necessary to ask for volunteers. Flying Officer Mawhinney volunteered as wireless operator of the crew and, fully aware of the risk involved, they took off in almost zero-zero conditions. After encountering severe icing conditions, which rendered the radio almost useless, and making several attempts to break through the cloud at 200 feet, the penicillin was successfully dropped. This officer's shown skill as a wireless operator contributed to the success of the mission which saved the child's life.

MAWSON, F/L John Douglas (J19057) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.427 Squadron - Award effective 2 October 1944 as per London Gazette dated 13 October 1944 and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 13 January 1921 in Kingston, Ontario; home there; enlisted in Trenton, 21 August 1939 as a clerk/stenographer. Promoted AC1, 21 February 1940. To No.1 WS, 22 February 1940. Promoted LAC, 21 May 1940. To "OMP", 18 June 1940. Promoted Corporal, 1 July 1940. To No.1A Manning Depot, 30 November 1940. Remustered to Clerk/Stenographer, 1 April 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 1 July 1941. To No.20 EFTS, 8 October 1941. Applied for aircrew status and posted to No.1 ITS, 28 February 1942 (reverted to AC2; promoted Sergeant again on 1 April 1942); may have graduated 25 April 1942 but not posted to No.10 EFTS until 9 May 1942; graduated 17 July 1942 but not posted to No.9 SFTS until 1 August 1942; graduated 20 November 1942 as Sergeant Pilot. To "Y" Depot, 4 December 1942. To RAF overseas, 10 December 1942. Arrived in Britain on 18 December 1942. Further trained at 15 (P) Advanced Flying Unit (posted there 29 March 1943), promoted Flight Sergeant 20 May 1943; to No.22 Operational Training Unit on 1 June 1943; to No.1659 Heavy Conversion Unit, 11 August 1943. To No.431 Squadron, 4 September 1943; to No.427 Squadron, 9 September 1943. Commissioned 7 October 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 26 February 1944. Posted away to No.1666 HCU, 31 July 1944; to No.1659 HCU, 12 July 1945; to Station Topcliffe, 6 September 1945; to No.427 Squadron, 2 October 1945; repatriated to Canada, 7 May 1946. Medal presented by Governor General at Government House, 7 November 1949. RCAF photo PL-46400 (ex UK-23867 dated 27 December 1945) is captioned as follows: "Flying to Italy and back with leave troops is a tame thing to these two officers of the Lion Squadron, one of the only two Canadian bomber squadrons still operating with the Occupational Air Force. Both did tours on operations with the Lion Squadron before VE Day. On the left is F/L J.D. Mawson, DFC, of Kingston, Ontario and on the right is F/L W.B. Britton, DFC of Eston, Saskatchewan. Mawson is a member of the permanent force." Photo PL-48191 shows him after investiture with his wife (left), son Michael, aged three, and Mrs. A. Mawson of Kingston. Remained in postwar RCAF with the following postings: Mountain View, 18 June 1946 to 10 March 1947; Trenton, 11 March 1946 to 27 February 1949; No.412 Squadron, 28 February 1949 to 31 January 1950; No.413 Squadron, 1 February to 1 November 1950; No.408 Sqn, 1 November 1950 to 12 March 1951; Air Transport Command Headquarters, 13 March 1951 to 1 November 1953; Air Force Headquarters, 2 November 1953 to 10 July 1956; Air Material Command Headquarters, 11 July 1956 to 1 March 1957. Killed in the crash of a Mitchell, 1 March 1957, en route back from Churchill. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.2609 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 22 July 1944 when he had flown 34 sorties (222 hours 45 minutes) from 15 September 1943 to 12 July 1944.

This captain has completed thirty-four operational bombing sorties against the enemy nineteen of which have been on major targets. He is a Deputy Flight Commander and his work generally has been of the highest calibre. This officer's ability to make instant decisions in emergency, skillful pilotage and cool judgement has been an inspiration to both his crew and the squadron.

The sortie list was as follows:

15 September 1943 - Mont Lucon (6.05, duty not carried out)
16 September 1943 - Modane (6.30)
22 September 1943 - Hanover (6.20)
23 September 1943 - Mannheim (8.00)
27 September 1943 - Hanover (3.40, duty not carried out)
29 September 1943 - Bochum (6.05)
3 October 1943 - Kassel (7.35)
8 October 1943 - Hanover (6.35)
3 November 1943 - Dusseldorf (6.05)
19 November 1943 - Leverkusen (7.10)

20 January 1944 - Berlin (7.50)
15 February 1944 - Berlin (7.10)
20 February 1944 - Stuttgart (7.35)
24 February 1944 - Schweinfurt (8.05)
25 February 1944 - Augsburg (7.30)
6 March 1944 - Trappes (4.40)
7 March 1944 - Le Mans (5.05)
19 March 1944 - Frankfurt (5.30)
30 March 1944 - Nuremberg (7.50)
9 April 1944 - Villeneuve St. Georges (4.55)
20 April 1944 - Lens (4.20)
26 April 1944 - Villeneuve St. Georges (5.05)
27 April 1944 - Aulnoye (4.50)
10 May 1944 - Ghent (4.05)
12 May 1944 - Louvain (4.30)
22 May 1944 - Le Mans (4.30)
27 May 1944 - Bourg Leopold (5.15)
31 May 1944 - Au Fevre (4.15)
4 June 1944 - Calais (3.35)
6 June 1944 - Conde sur Noireau (5.30)
7 June 1944 - Acheres (5.20)
21 June 1944 - Neuville (4.00)
28 June 1944 - Metz (7.40)
12 July 1944 - Acquet (4.30)

NOTE: During his tour of duty at Air Transport Command Headquarters he was on Temporary Duty in the Far East (22 August to 9 September 1952). According to a letter he wrote in applying for the Korea Medal, he flew two Meteor sorties with No.77 Squadron (RAAF) out of Kimpo, 1 September and 3 September 1952. However, RAAF writes to say they know nothing of him.

MAXHAM, P/O Arthur Gilbert (J90125) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.415 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 25 May 1945 and AFRO 1291/45 dated 10 August 1945. Born 19 April 1915 in Melbourne, Australia; home in Montreal (clerk, office equipment mechanic); enlisted there 29 June 1942. To No.5 Manning Depot, 7 September 1942. On strength of Montreal Recruiting Centre, 28 December 1942. To No.3 Training Command, 13 January 1943. To No.31 SFTS, 31 March 1943. To No.5 ITS, 1 May 1943; promoted LAC, 9 July 1943; to No.1 Aircrew Education Detachment, 23 July 1943; to No.9 BGS, 18 September 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 29 October 1943. To "Y" Depot, 12 November 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 23 November 1943. Commissioned 8 September 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 8 March 1945. Repatriated 13 June 1945. Retired 6 September 1945. Medal presented in Montreal, 25 November 1949. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1761 (RG.24 Vol.20609) has recommendation dated 18 January 1945 when he had flown 35 sorties (167 hours 15 minutes), 22 May to 29 December 1944.

This officer has completed a very successful tour as Mid-Upper Air Gunner involving attacks on many heavily defended German targets. Although attacked by two enemy aircraft in quick succession, major damage to his aircraft has been averted by his good judgement and accurate fire. Always displaying a high standard of skill and determination, his fine co-operative spirit and devotion to duty have contributed materially both in the air and on the ground.

RCAF photo PL-33236 (ex UK-15515 dated 4 October 1944) is captioned as follows: "Slight scepticism concerning P/O J.B. Ward's fondness for flowers (center on bicycle) are Warrant Officer Herb Kendall of Winnipeg; FS Ken Russell of Montreal, F/O E.T. Steele of Stratford and Warrant Officer John Maxwell of Chemainus, B.C. Ward hails from Woodstock, Ontario, and with the other Canadians is attached to a squadron in RAF Bomber Command overseas." Note - Kendall was killed in action, 21 December 1944.

In July 1944, Warrant Officer Maxwell was detailed to participate in an attack on Bordeaux. Whilst over the target his aircraft was repeatedly hit by heavy anti-aircraft fire, seriously injuring two of the crew. Warrant Officer Maxwell administered first aid to his injured comrades and was of invaluable assistance to the navigator in bringing the aircraft safely back to England. This airman has also rendered valuable service in the training of less experienced air crews while his imperturbable coolness in the face of enemy opposition has set an inspiring example to all.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/8827 has the complete recommendation dated 15 August 1944 when he had flown 36 sorties (207 hours 30 minutes). This consisted of ten sorties flown prior to No.97 Squadron (2 December 1943 to 20 February 1944) and the balance with No.97 Squadron, 18 March to 9 August 1944. The list and recommended citation is given below as additional information.

This non-commissioned officer has completed 36 sorties, on which 26 have been with the Pathfinder Force, 22 of them as marker. Seven of these sorties have been carried out against Berlin. He is the set operator of one of the squadron's best crews, and his efficiency has played a large part in the consistently fine results obtained by his crew.

In addition to his fine work in the air, Warrant Officer Maxwell has rendered valuable service in the training of inexperienced set operators and has obtained excellent results. His imperturbable bearing and coolness in the face of enemy opposition have been a source of inspiration to all other members of his crew.

For his fearlessness and strong sense of duty he is strongly recommended for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAXWELL, WO (now P/O) Joseph John Horace (R162983/J88575) - Mention in Despatches - No.97 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 379/45 dated 2 March 1945.

RCAF Press Release No. 8370 dated 19 January 1945 from F/O George Sinclair readsL

WITH RCAF IN BRITAIN: -- Although he began his two tours of bombing with the Battle of Berlin, carrying out eight attacks on the "Big City", this Chemainus navigator had his most dangerous experience in attacking a lightly defended oil refinery in France.

Navigator of a Lancaster bombing an oil refinery near Bordeaux, P/O J.H. Maxwell, DFC, MiD, Chemainus, B.C., revealed that his aircraft was so badly damaged over the target that it could not be repaired. It was broken up for scrap after its emergency landing at a British south coast airfield. "We had to bomb visually in France to avoid the possibility of inaccurate bombing of French civilians. This day, there was cloud that forced us down to less than half our briefed height, and the light flak was really deadly," he explained. "They put 165 holes in the kite, according to the ground crew who examined it later. Both the bomb-aimer and mid-upper gunner were seriously wounded," he declared.

MAXWELL, FS Robert Burton (R165426) - Conspicuous Gallantry Medal (Flying) - No.428 Squadron - Award effective 24 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 239/45 dated 9 February 1945. Born 20 January 1924 in Toronto; home there enlisted there 12

May 1942. To No.1 Manning Depot, 3 June 1942. To No.5 SFTS (guard duty), 24 July 1942. To No.1 ITS, 12 September 1942. Promoted LAC, 6 November 1942; to No.12 EFTS, 9 December 1942; to No.5 SFTS, 20 February 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 11 June 1943. To "Y" Depot, 25 June 1943. To RAF overseas, 29 June 1943. Commissioned 28 August 1944. Promoted Flying Officer 28 February 1945. Incident described was 25 August 1944 (target, Russelshein). Repatriated with No.408 Squadron, 20 June 1945. Training for "Tiger Force" when war ended. To Greenwood, 1 October 1945. To No.1 Composite Training School, 10 April 1946. To No.9 (Transport) Group, 10 June 1946. To No.124 Squadron, 11 June 1946. To No.1 Air Command, 29 December 1946. Released 7 January 1947. Rejoined RCAF Auxiliary (No.400 Squadron), 1 January 1949 in Flying Control Branch until 15 November 1950. Medal sent by registered mail 10 June 1948. DFC was sent by registered mail, 28 June 1949. RCAF Photo PL-42149 (ex UK-18985, circa 22 February 1945) has the following caption: "Wounded by flak himself and with his fatally wounded flight engineer lying beside him, F/O R.B. Maxwell (66 Glen Road, Toronto) was awarded a Conspicuous Gallantry Medal when he went on to bomb Russelheim. It was his first operation with an RCAF Lancaster squadron. His wireless operator, centre, P/O J.G. Feasby (RR.3, Kitchener, Ontario) and P/O E.D. Chisholm (197 Atlantic Street, Halifax) were along. Chisholm, right, was struck by flak but his heated flying suit stopped the red-hot chunk of metal."

In August 1944 Flight Sergeant Maxwell was detailed to attack a target in Germany. When nearing the objective, his aircraft was struck by anti-aircraft fire, disabling an engine and damaging the electrical system. Despite loss of height and a wound in the leg, this airman pressed on to the target where the bombs had to be released manually. Flight Sergeant Maxwell then flew his aircraft back to England and effected a safe landing. His coolness, courage and determination to achieve success have been of a high order.

DHist file 181.009 D.1634 (RG.24 Volume 20604) has recommendation by S/L G.J. Edwards dated 28 August 1944 when he had completed two sorties (14 hours 47 minutes) as follows:

On the night of 25th August 1944, on his first trip as captain of aircraft, Flight Sergeant Maxwell was detailed to attack a German target. While still 40 minutes from the target his aircraft was struck by flak, fatally wounding his Flight Engineer, disabling the starboard outer engine, wounding his Wireless Operator, and damaging the electrical system and he, himself, received a wound in the leg. Despite the losing of height and his wound, Flight Sergeant Maxwell pressed on to the target and went in at the lowest possible bombing height in an endeavor to bomb. The failure of the electrical system prevented bombing and bombs had to be jettisoned manually. Flight Sergeant Maxwell then brought his aircraft back to England and made a successful three engine landing. His coolness, courage and great determination on this first trip have proved an inspiration to the Squadron and I recommend the immediate award of the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal.

His sorties to date had been as follows:

18 August 1944 - Bremen (6.27, as second pilot)

25 August 1944 - Russellheim (8.20)

MAXWELL, F/O Robert Burton, CGM (J89628) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.405 Squadron - Award effective 8 September 1945 as per London Gazette dated 25 September 1945 and AFRO 1768/45 dated 23 November 1945.

Since the award of the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal this officer has flown on a large number of operational sorties. He has taken part in attacks against such heavily defended targets as Kiel, Chemnitz, Merseburg and Berlin. Flying Officer Maxwell is an outstanding leader who has invariably displayed courage and devotion to duty of a high order.

MAXWELL, WO1 (now F/O) William Christie (R93153/J35980) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.10 Squadron - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1380/44 dated 30 June 1944. Born 3 July 1920 at Mount Dennis (Toronto suburb); employed by a motor shaft company; enlisted in Toronto, 12 February 1941. Trained at No.3 ITS (graduated 21 June 1941), No.6 BGS (graduated 7 November 1941), No.9 AOS (graduated 29 September 1941) and No.2 ANS (graduated 8 December 1941). To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 1 January 1942. To No.11 (BR) Squadron, 31 August 1942. To No.20 EFTS, 12 December 1942. Returned to No.11 (BR) Squadron, 5 March 1943. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 29 April 1943. Commissioned 12 July 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 12 January 1944. To No.11 (BR) Squadron, 4 August 1944. To No.121 Squadron, 13 November 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 3 March 1945. Retired 12 March 1945. Rejoined Interim Force almost immediately, being retained by No.121 Squadron. Flight Lieutenant as of 1 August 1946; promoted Squadron Leader, 1 September 1947 (300076). Appears to have been released in Guelph area, late 1949. Legion Magazine of December 1986/January 1987 reported the death of "Wing Commander Padre William Maxwell, DFC" in London, Ontario, 19 August 1986, age 68. It is not clear if this is William Christie or William Mead Maxwell. Medal presented 6 March 1945. As of award had flown 1,087:15 hours (630:40 operational, 86 sorties).

This navigator has completed many operational flying hours in the North Atlantic area. Upon one occasion when participating in an attack against an enemy submarine, he was wounded in the head and leg by anti-aircraft fire. He kept the bomb doors open to ensure release of the depth charges and, after first aid was administered, successfully navigated his aircraft over 700 miles back to base in very bad weather. He has at all times proved himself to be a navigator of exceptional ability.

MAXWELL, PO William Mead (J17114) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.426 Squadron - Award effective 6 August 1943 as per London Gazette dated 17 August 1943 and AFRO 2005/43 dated 1 October 1943. Born in New Jersey, 1 August 1920; home in Leamington, Ontario; enlisted in Windsor, 4 March 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 16 March 1941. To Trenton, 10 April 1941. To No.3 WS, 5 July 1941; promoted LAC, 7 August 1941; to Trenton, 7 January 1942; to No.4 BGS, 31 January 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 30 March 1942. To "Y" Depot, 31 March 1942. To RAF overseas, 30 April 1942. Commissioned 4 March 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 4 September 1943. Repatriated at uncertain date; retired 27 September 1943. Rear gunner in S/L C.S. Dowie's crew and later in S/L J.B. Millward's crew. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace 15 February 1944. RCAF photo PL-26982 (ex UK-8200 dated 22 February 1944) taken in front of Buckingham Palace after investiture.

This officer has an excellent operational record. He has participated in attacks on such heavily defended enemy targets as Kiel, Duisburg, Bochum and Wuppertal and in several successful mine-laying sorties. The initiative and vigilance which he has always displayed have been assets of high value to his crew and in no small measure contributed to the safe return of his aircraft on several occasions. His courage, skill and devotion to duty have been most praiseworthy.

DHH file 181.009 D.2624 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20628) has recommendation by W/C L.Crooks drafted 14 June 1943 when he had flown 22 sorties (130 hours 45 minutes).

14 January 1943 - Lorient (5.31)
15 January 1943 - Lorient (5.00)
3 February 1943 - Hamburg (6.15)
7 February 1943 - Lorient (6.35)
12 February 1943 - Gardening (5.00)
13 February 1943 - Lorient (6.50)
16 February 1943 - Lorient (6.50)
18 February 1943 - Gardening (3.55)
24 February 1943 - Wilhelmshaven (4.15)
26 February 1943 - Cologne (6.15)
3 March 1943 - Hamburg (6.15)
5 March 1943 - Essen (5.30)
10 March 1943 - Air-Sea Rescue (4.00, counted as one-half sortie)
4 April 1943 - Kiel (6.45)
8 April 1943 - Duisburg (5.25)
11 April 1943 - Gardening (3.25)
14 April 1943 - Stuttgart (7.45)

23 May 1943 - Air-Sea Rescue (5.55, counted as one-half sortie)
29 May 1943 - Wuppertal (5.39)

This officer has an excellent operational record with the squadron. He has taken part in attacks on most of the heavily defended areas of Germany and occupied Europe and has also participated in several successful mine laying sorties.

The initiative and vigilance displayed by this officer have proven him a definite asset too his crew and are in no small measure responsible for the safe return of his aircraft.

On the ground he has rendered valuable assistance to the training of new crews. I recommend the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.4431 (RG.24 Vol.20649) has recommendation (undated) when he was a Flight Lieutenant and had flown 21 sorties (99 hours 45 minutes), 19 May to 4 August 1944.

This officer has completed a good number of successful operations against German and French targets. He has always shown himself to be cool and confident under all circumstances and displays fearlessness and aggressiveness in the face of danger and enemy opposition. He has always shown a keen desire to press home his attack with the greatest accuracy possible. As Deputy Flight Commander he has always been of great assistance in maintaining a high degree of efficiency in his flight. His personal keenness and devotion to duty have set a real example to the pilots in the squadron.

The sortie list was as follows:

19 May 1944 - Franceville (4.20)
22 May 1944 - Le Mans (4.35)
24 May 1944 - Trouville (3.35)

MAY, F/O John Walter (J16246) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.432 Squadron - Award effective 4 November 1944 as per London Gazette dated 14 November 1944 and AFRO 239/45 dated 9 February 1945. Born 25 December 1910 in Edmonton; home in Vancouver (cashier); enlisted in Edmonton, 11 October 1940. To No.1 ITS, 8 February 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 16 March 1941; to No.5 AOS, 29 March 1941; graduated 22 June 1941 when posted to No.5 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 4 August 1941; posted next day to No..1 ANS; graduated 1 September 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 2 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 11 October 1941. Commissioned 16 September 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 16 March 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 16 September 1944. Repatriated 16 October 1944. To No.5 OTU, 20 November 1944. To No.9 Release Centre, 7 September 1945. Retired 12 September 1945. Medal presented 22 June 1949. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.5557 (RG.24 Vol.20668) has recommendation dated 12 August 1944 when he had flown 47 sorties (271 hours 25 minutes). First tour was 29 May 1942 to 16 February 1943 (26 1/2 trips - the half trip was likely an abandoned sortie to Hamburg, 15 October 1942). Second tour was 24 July 1943 to 27 May 1944 (20 1/2 trips - actually 22 sorties of which three were sea searches).

Flying Officer May started his operational career in May 1942 and has now twenty and one-half trips on his second tour. His wide variety of targets include some of the enemy's most heavily defended, such as Essen, Cologne, Kiel, Stuttgart, Mannheim, along with many mine-laying sorties and objectives in France. During his long tour of duty, his loyalty, keenness and fighting spirit has never wavered. A most skilful navigator, this officer's cheerful confidence and devotion to duty have always merited the highest praise. He is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MAY, F/O Lewis Farnell (J14318) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No. 414 Squadron - Award effective 24 November 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1/45 dated 5 January 1945. Born 13 April 1916 in Orangeville, Ontario; home in Toronto; enlisted there 18 December 1940. To Trenton, 31 March 1941. Promoted Sergeant and posted to No.1 EFTS, 2 May 1941 to instruct. To No.5 Manning Depot, 19 June 1942. To No.6 SFTS, 18 July 1942; graduated and commissioned, 11 September 1942. To Eastern Air Command, 25 September 1942. To No.123 Squadron, 26 September 1942. To "Y" Depot, 14 November 1942. To RAF overseas, 10 December 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 11 March 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 11 September 1944. Repatriated 3 November 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 17 December 1944. Retired 17 February 1945. Medal presented 14 May 1948. Photo PL-34101 shows him with P/O A.V. Boyer, DFC.

Flying Officer May has completed many sorties against the enemy and as a reconnaissance pilot has continuously displayed exceptional skill and courage in completing the many tasks assigned to him, frequently in the face of the most intense enemy opposition. He has also attacked a variety of ground targets in enemy occupied territory. On the first day of the assault on the coast of Normandy this officer performed two very successful co-operation flights in support of the naval bombardment.

MAYOU, P/O Francis David (J18381) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.405 Squadron - Award effective 5 February 1944 as per London Gazette dated 15 February 1944 and AFRO 644/44 dated 24 March 1944. Born 12 December 1920 in Verdun, Quebec; home in Montreal; enlisted there 13 June 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 6 July 1941. To No.4 WS, 27 September 1941; promoted LAC, 29 October 1941; graduated 11 April 1942 when posted to No.9 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 11 May 1942. To "Y" Depot, 12 May 1942; to RAF overseas, 31 May 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 11 November 1942. Promoted WO2, 11 May 1943. Commissioned 11 July 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 11 January 1944. Repatriated 19 August 1944. To No.168 Squadron, 28 September 1944. To No.2 Release Centre, 17 January 1946. Retired 25 January 1946. Medal sent by registered mail 12 July 1946. No citation other than "...completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." Public Records Office Air 2/8782 has recommendation dated 22 December 1943 when he had flown 45 sorties (362 hours 28 minutes), 7 December 1942 (A/S patrol) to 20 December 1943 (Frankfurt). Although his total times differ by 19 minutes from those of H.C. Banks, their list of sorties and times are virtually identical, with one exception; an A/S patrol recorded by Banks on 17 January 1943 is recorded with Mayou as 18 January 1943. They are almost certainly members of the same crew. Photo PL-25536 (right) shows him.

During his many sorties against enemy targets, Pilot Officer Mayou has displayed exceptional skill as a Wireless Operator Air Gunner. Always keen to proceed on operations, this officer has invariably performed his duties in a highly commendable fashion. His courage and devotion to duty have been an example to all. This officer is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MEADEN, P/O William Harold David (J18290) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.432 Squadron - Award effective 19 June 1944 as per London Gazette dated 30 June 1944 and AFRO 1861/44 dated 25 August 1944. Born in Edmonton, 8 October 1922; enlisted there 1 September 1941. Trained at No.19 EFTS (Virden) and No.10 SFTS (Dauphin). Commissioned 1943; promoted to Flying Officer, December 1943. Instructed at an OTU after his tour. Retired 31 August 1945. In postwar commercial aviation (Hamilton and Yukon), 1945 to 1948, after which he rejoined the RCAF, 13 December 1948. Retired to Willowdale, 9 April 1970. Died in Toronto, 3 May 2000; obituary notice stated he had flown with both No.432 and 436 Squadrons; the latter was likely postwar service. No citation other than "completed...many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.5557 (RG.24 Vol.20668) has recommendation dated 16 March 1944 when he had flown 27 1/2 sorties (167 hours 23 minutes), 10 March 1943 to 30 January 1944.

This officer has shown an unconquerable spirit of determination to achieve his objective. The majority of his many operational sorties have been over heavily defended areas, including five against Berlin, and his coolness and his unusual initiative have won him the respect of his crew and the whole squadron.

For his exceptional qualities of leadership, for his coolness in face of danger, for his spirit of determination and devotion to duty, this officer is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Note: Public Record Office Air 50/248 has a Combat Report for 26/27 March 1944 when he was with No.405 Squadron. Target was Essen (Lancaster U/405, JB684) and crew were J18290 P/O W.H.D. Meaden, J18687 P/O J.D. Barker, J51564 F/O G.J. Smith (later killed in action), 162625 P/O W. Calderwood, 6190 Warrant Officer K.A. McEwan (mid-upper gunner), R134962 Warrant Officer R.R. Alexander (rear gunner), and P/O H. Chamberlain (RAF).

While over the target area just before dropping the bombs Lancaster aircraft "U" Serial No.JB684 of 405 (RCAF) Squadron encountered two FW.190s. The first sighting was made at 2230 hours flying at 20,000 feet altitude. Visibility was very good aided by numerous searchlights and 7/10 cloud below, tops 1,400 feet [14,000 feet ?].

The enemy aircraft were first sighted by the rear gunner on either quarter at 600 yards range coming in to attack. The rear gunner directed the pilot to corkscrew starboard and as the Lancaster commenced to turn the fighter on the starboard quarter opened fire with one short burst, the trace of which was seen to pass below the starboard wing. As the dive progressed both fighters broke the attack by diving steeply and disappearing below.

Neither of the Lancaster gunners opened fire and no hits were scored by the fighter which opened fire. Monica only gave odd pips, possibly by rear gunner's turret movement.

MEADES, FS Albert Langton (R72252, later C28419) - British Empire Medal - AFHQ, Administration Branch - Award effective 28 May 1943 as per London Gazette dated 2 June 1943 and AFRO 1459/43 dated 30 July 1943. Born in Toronto, 17 August 1919; enlisted there, 18 September 1940 as Clerk/Stenographer. To AFHQ, 2 November 1940. Promoted AC1, 18 December 1940. Promoted LAC, 1 April 1941. Promoted Corporal, 1 May 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 1 October 1941. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 May 1942. To No.5 Manning Depot, 3 June 1943. To No.10 EFTS, 9 June 1943. Commissioned 10 June 1943. To No.13 SFTS, 26 July 1943. To Rockcliffe, 31 August 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 10 December 1943. To No.3 Training Command, 21 December 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 August 1944. To No.9 (Transport) Group, 5 February 1945. To No.4 Release Centre, 17 October 1945. Retired 25 October 1945. Award presented by Governor General, 23 November 1943.

This NCO has been outstanding in the performance of his duties as NCO in charge of airmen employed in the Officer's Promotion Branch. During the period of transfer of American citizens from the Royal Canadian Air Force to the United States Armed Forces by the Joint Canadian-American Military Board, Flight Sergeant Meades' devotion to duty and cheerful spirit while working long hours under trying conditions was a matter of favourable comment from senior American officers. His leadership, tact, personality and exemplary conduct set a splendid example to his juniors and gained the confidence of his superiors.

To Composite Training School, 6 March 1943. Promoted LAC, 16 April 1943. To No.3 BGS, 17 April 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 28 May 1943. To "Y" Depot, 11 June 1943. Embarked 15 June 1943. Arrived in Britain, 24 June 1943. At No.18 OTU as of 6 July 1943; then to No.1656 Conversion Unit. Reported to No.166 Squadron, 12 November 1943. CGM sortie was 28 November 1943 (Berlin). Posted non-effective after that, he reported back to No.166 Squadron on 28 December 1943 although he flew no more sorties until 27 April 1944. Commissioned 17 November 1944. Repatriated 27 November 1944. To No.2 Air Command, 11 January 1945. To No.16 SFTS, 31 March 1945. Promoted Flying Officer, 17 May 1945. To No.5 Release Centre, 31 October 1945. Retired 2 November 1945. Died 19 November 1998 in Prince George, British Columbia as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of March/April 1999. Photo PL-33889 shows him after investiture.

This airman was the rear gunner of a bomber detailed to attack Berlin one night in November 1943. During the operation the aircraft was attacked by a fighter. Bullets from the enemy aircraft hit and damaged the mid-upper and rear turrets, one bullet struck Sergeant Meadows in the back, which was deflected by the wiring in his electrically heated clothing, and came out in the groin. Another attack developed, and the mid-upper gunner, the wireless operator and navigator were wounded. Despite his injury, Sergeant Meadows remained in his turret and by his excellent co-operation with the pilot, together with his good shooting, beat off a further eight attacks by fighters. This airman showed skill, courage and fortitude of a high order.

Public Record Office Air 50/292 has the following Combat Reports relevant to this night's action, arranged in chronological order, although the actual Report Numbers are out of sequence.

First Combat:

1. Report No.424, night 26th/27th November 1943; Lancaster I, ZZ/166, DV365, Berlin.
2. 5017 North, 0437 East, 1930 hours, 19,500 feet.
3. No cloud. Visibility hazy. No moon.
4. No searchlights or ground activity observed.
5. No unusual phenomena.
6. Enemy aircraft not seen.
7. Not observed.
8. Cannon and machine guns used.
9. Enemy aircraft not observed.
10. One attack. Enemy aircraft attacked from dead ahead. Breakaway not seen.
11. No evasive action was taken.
12. Our gunners did not open fire.
13. No damage to enemy aircraft. D.R. compass and master unit hit, also Mid-Upper and Rear Turrets hit. Rear Gunner wounded.
14. No rounds fired..
15. Mid-Upper: 1615703 Sergeant Cushing, 4 AGS, 28 OTU, 1662 CU. Rear Gunner: R191205 Sergeant Meadows, AGS Trenton, Macdonald.
16. Monica fitted. Warning received approximately five minutes before attack.
17. The attack definitely took air crew by surprise and the pilot stated that it was all over before he could take evasive action or do very much about it. Rear Gunner and Mid-Upper did not see enemy aircraft during this attack. All crews have been warned of the possibilities of the enemy carrying out a head on attack.
18. Tracer first observed ahead by the pilot of our aircraft. Range could not be estimated. No evasive action was taken. No damage to enemy aircraft observed. D.R. compass and master unit hit, also Mid-Upper and Rear Turret and Rear

Gunner wounded.

Comments by S/L Cox, G.G.L. - An unusual attack, which cannot be disregarded. A search plan for every available crew member is the only method to avoid surprise.

Second Combat.

1. Report No.417, night 26th/27th November 1943; Lancaster I, ZZ/166, DV365, Berlin.
2. 5017 North, 0425 East, 1935 hours, 19,000 feet.
3. Visibility hazy. No cloud or moon.
4. No searchlights or ground activity observed.
5. No unusual phenomena.
6. FW.190 (one)
7. No lights carried.
8. Disposition of armament not observed.
9. Enemy aircraft was first seen by the Mid-Upper Gunner on the port quarter at approximately 800 yards range.
10. One attack. Enemy aircraft attack from the port quarter up to dead astern, breaking away to port bow in shallow dive.
11. Our pilot corkscrewed to port as soon as enemy aircraft had committed himself to an attack at 600 yards range. Mid-Upper gave the evasive orders "corkscrew port", "go".
12. Enemy aircraft opened fire at 600 yards range, firing two short bursts until breakaway, scoring hits on starboard mainplane and tailplane.
13. Both Mid-Upper and Rear Gunners opened fire at 600 yards range, firing long bursts until breakaway. Port gun became unserviceable in Mid-Upper turret owing to being hit by cannon shell. Wireless Operator and Navigator injured, Wireless Operator in the back of the head, Navigator in the left shoulder. Damage to enemy aircraft not observed.

14. Mid-Upper fired 250 rounds. Stoppage in left-hand gun due to damage by cannon shell. One of the left-hand guns in the Rear Turret was also hit and put out of action after the Rear Gunner had fired 150 rounds.

15. Mid-Upper: 1615703 Sergeant Cushing, 4 AGS, 28 OTU, 1662 CU. Rear Gunner: R191205 Sergeant Meadows, AGS Trenton, Macdonald.

16. Monica fitted, warning received five minutes before attack. Pilot corkscrewed on warning but as no attack was made resumed course.

17. The enemy aircraft carried out a normal attack and the correct evasive action was carried out by our crew.

18. Enemy aircraft was first seen by Mid-Upper at 800 yards range. The combat manoeuvre ordered by the Mid-Upper was the corkscrew. Enemy aircraft opened fire at 600 yards range, firing long bursts until the breakaway. No damage to enemy aircraft observed. Enemy aircraft scored several hits on our aircraft starboard mainplane and also tailplane. Wireless Operator and Navigator wounded.

Third Combat:

1. Report No.425, night 26th/27th November 1943; Lancaster I, ZZ/166, DV365, Berlin.

2. Position between Charleroi and Caen. Time between 1935 and 2030 hours,

3. Visibility hazy. No cloud.

4. No unusual phenomena.

5. (Space not used)

6. Ju.88 (one)

7. No lights carried.

8. Armament situated in nose of aircraft.

9. Mid-Upper first sighted enemy aircraft at 400 yards on the starboard quarter, slightly up.

10. One attack. Enemy aircraft attacked from the starboard quarter up, breaking away to starboard beam level.

11. Mid-Upper gave the evasive order "corkscrew starboard", "Go" on first sighting enemy aircraft/
12. Enemy aircraft opened fire at 400 yards, firing one continuous burst until the breakaway. Mid Upper opened fire until ammo in the right hand gun was expended. Left hand gun was out of action due to being hit. The crew are not certain if the Rear Gunner [Meadows] opened fire on this attack or not as he is now in hospital wounded, no information can be obtained at the present time.
13. No claims of damage to enemy aircraft. No hits occurred to our aircraft.
14. 100 rounds from the Mid-Upper. Unknown from the rear turret.
15. Mid-Upper: 1615703 Sergeant Cushing, 4 AGS, 28 OTU, 1662 CU. Rear Gunner: R191205 Sergeant Meadows, AGS Trenton, Macdonald.
16. Monica fitted. No warning given.
17. Enemy aircraft carried out a normal attack and the correct evasive action was taken. The Gunners were rather handicapped in the shooting, having had some of their guns put out of action and also servo ducts damaged.
18. Enemy aircraft was first sighted by the Mid-Upper at 400 yards range on the starboard quarter, slightly up. The combat manoeuvre given was "corkscrew starboard". Enemy aircraft opened fire at 400 yards range; Mid-Upper opened fire with one gun firing until he ran out of ammo. No damage to enemy aircraft observed and no damage to our aircraft.

German Construction, Montreal, 1938-1939 (field engineer and office engineer); E.G.M. Cape Construction, Montreal, October to December 1939 (field engineer). Wife living in Pointe du Chene, New Brunswick when decorated. Enlisted in Montreal, 16 November 1940, commissioned that date and posted to No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto. To Aero Engineer School, Montreal, 8 December 1940. Promoted Flying Officer, 15 May 1941. To No.8 SFTS, Moncton, 18 May 1941. To Embarkation Point, Halifax, 16 August 1941. To No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 23 August 1941. To No.413 Squadron, 12 September 1941. Attached to Burtonwood Repair Depot, 1-14 November 1941 for Aero Engine course. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 March 1943. Posted from No.413 Squadron to Station Koggala, 24 December 1943. Promoted Squadron Leader, 2 February 1944. To United Kingdom, 19 August 1944. Repatriated to Canada via Rockcliffe, 29 October 1944. To No.2 Air Command, Winnipeg, 10 December 1944. To No.8 Repair Depot, Winnipeg, 18 December 1944. To Release Centre, Vancouver, 15 January 1945. Retired 3 February 1945. Died in White Rock, British Columbia, 21 October 1969, age 65 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. He had been recommended by W/C L.H. Randall on 12 November 1943, noting that Meadows was the Squadron Engineer Officer and writing:

Flight Lieutenant Meadows joined this squadron as Engineer Officer in September 1941. While in Ceylon he has combined the duties of Station and Squadron Engineer Officer. During this difficult period when adequate spares and maintenance facilities were not available, he has shown exceptional resourcefulness and devotion to duty.

Training:

Course at Aeronautical Engineering School was 8 December 1940 to 10 May 1941. Examined in following subjects: Trade Test, Practical Fitting (26 ½ /50); Written, Practical (59/100); Oral, all subjects (158/200); Written, administration and organization (81/100); Written, theory (33 ½ / 50). "Thoroughly industrious and conscientious student. Keen, reliable and intelligent. General knowledge of Aeronautical Engineering sound. In spite of a bad stammer and apparent nervous manner, this officer inspires confidence and will do a good job in any capacity." (Illegible signature of instructor).

Assessments:

The functions of squadron maintenance has improved vastly since this officer took over. (W/C J.D. Twigg, 3 March 1942).

A conscientious engineer officer. (G/C R.L. Mills, 5 August 1943).

A good engineer officer. His health has not been good in the tropics which has probably made him appear listless. His stammer is to his disadvantage. He gets on well with his fellows and has done well as Station Engineer Officer. (G/C R.L. Mills, 8 July 1944).

MEAGHER, FS James Marcellus (R56325) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.158 Squadron - Award effective 31 December 1942 as per London Gazette dated 12 January 1943 and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Born 9 January 1913 in Mulgrave, Nova Scotia; home there; enlisted in Quebec, 21 June 1940. To No.2 ITS, 30 June 1940; promoted LAC, 17 August 1940 and posted that date to No.1 WS; graduated 19 January 1941 and posted to No.1 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 15 February 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 11 March 1941; to RAF overseas, 8 May 1941. Commissioned with effect from 17 September 1942 (J16504). Invested with award at Buckingham Palace 13 April 1943. Repatriated to Canada 15 November 1944. To No.3 Training Command, 8 January 1945; to No.2 ANS, 11 January 1945; to Station Mountain View, 8 July 1945; to Release Centre, 29 September 1945; released 31 October 1945. Photos PL-13624 and PL-24025 are shots of him alone. PL-15732 taken after investiture. Photo PL-34306 shows him on right with an unidentified DFC recipient. PK-34344 shows him as a Flight Lieutenant (left) with P/O R.C. Zwicker.

As wireless operator and air bomber this airman has participated in numerous sorties including several attacks on Essen. His wireless skill has been invaluable. His success as an air bomber has been achieved by untiring efforts and dogged determination to ensure that his bombs were dropped on the enemy with the most destructive effect. The calm and gallant manner in which Flight Sergeant Meagher has performed his tasks has set a splendid example.

Records Office Air 2/9230 has recommendation for a Military Cross (downgraded) and refers to Interrogation Reports Nos. M.I.9/S/PG - 2387 and 2388. Cited with F/O Alfred S. Coldridge (also Mentioned in Despatches). See Coldridge for text and for MI.9 interrogation report. The specific recommendation for Medland (dated 4 November 1944) notes that he had flown 48 sorties and gives the following account of his adventures:

One night in May [1944] the aircraft in which Flying Officer Medland was Wireless Operator developed engine trouble and the crew abandoned aircraft. Shortly after landing, Flying Officer Medland contact his pilot who had sprained his ankles badly on landing and was unable to walk. Disregarding the fact that he might be captured, Flying Officer Medland assisted and carried the pilot to a wood over a mile away. After ensuring that he was concealed, he made his way to a small village where he contacted a peasant. He then went back and helped bring his pilot in to a house where he was attended by a doctor of the Maquis. Flying Officer Medland remained with his captain for about three weeks until he was well enough to travel.

Flying Officer Medland and his pilot remained with the Maquis for some time, taking part in some of their operations, i.e. blowing up trains, etc. During the time with them, however, he and his pilot made arrangements to return to this country and eventually, after several narrow escapes, succeeded.

The self-sacrifice and determined and resolute manner shown by Flying Officer Medland is exemplary and in being with the highest traditions of the service. His behaviour at all times was most commendable.

MEDLAND, F/L Harry Delbert (J24931) - Croix de Guerre with Silver Star (France) - Award as per Canada Gazette dated 20 September 1947 and AFRO 485/47 dated 12 September 1947. External Affairs file "French Awards to Canadian Armed Forces - Particular Cases" (Library and Archives Canada, RG.25, Box 4140) has the following citation:

Flight Lieutenant Medland was shot down near the French-Belgium border. He evaded capture and joined the underground forces, aiding them in forays against the enemy and in perfecting escape and evasion methods, before effecting his own return to a neutral country.

Flying Officer Meek, a Canadian Bomb Aimer, has completed 34 sorties comprising 212 hours on his first tour of operations. These operations include sorties to heavily defended targets in Germany, such as Stuttgart (two), Dortmund (two), Merseburg Leuna, Nuremburg and Hanover.

He has carried out these attacks with consistent skill and courage. Throughout his tour he has set a high example of accurate bomb aiming, cool judgement and determination in the face of strong enemy opposition which has been an inspiration to the rest of the squadron.

As deputy Bombing Leader, his leadership has contributed in no small measure to the repeated successes of the squadron, maintaining morale at a very high level, and is worthy of the highest praise. On more than one occasion, over heavily defended targets, he has made several bombing runs in order to place his bomb load on the target.

I strongly recommend this officer for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross in recognition of his outstanding ability and his dogged determination to inflict the maximum damage on the enemy.

MEEK, WO Richard Jack (R138466) - Conspicuous Gallantry Medal (Flying) - No.626 Squadron - Award effective 9 February 1944 as per London Gazette dated 22 February 1944 and AFRO 644/44 dated 24 March 1944. Born 28 December 1908 in Vancouver; home there (wireless engineer with British Columbia Government, 1930 onwards); member of 29th Battalion (militia), 1929-1930, Enlisted in Vancouver, 11 November 1941. To No.3 Manning Depot, 12 December 1941. To No.7 ITS, 11 April 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 3 July 1942); to No.3 AOS, 4 July 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant on 23 October 1942. To "Y" Depot, 7 November 1942; to RAF overseas, 22 November 1942; disembarked in Britain, 30 November 1942. To No.6 AOS, 5 March 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 23 April 1943. To Wymeswood, 8 June 1943. To No.1662 Conversion Unit, 14 September 1943. Promoted WO2, 23 October 1943. To No.626 Squadron, 21 November 1943. To No.41 Base, 31 January 1944 for medical treatment, having been wounded by a night fighter attack (struck on left side of chest by fragment from a cannon shell). Commissioned 21 March 1944. To No.626 Squadron again, 1 April 1944. To No.1667 Conversion Unit, 31 July 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 21 September 1944. Repatriated via Greenwood, 8 August 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 17 August 1945. Released 9 October 1945. Settled in Whitehorse, Yukon after the war. Seconded from RCAF Class "E" Reserve to Canadian Army Reserve, 25 May 1948 for appointment in Rocky Mountain Rangers (TM.90379), serving to 3 April 1959. Incident occurred 30/31 January 1944, Lancaster LM584 (UM-Y2). See Alan W. Cooper, In Action With the Enemy (London, William Kimber, 1986). Died in Vancouver, 8 January 1995 as per Legion Magazine of April 1995. Cited with W.S. Breckenridge and P/O W.B.Baker (RAF).

Flying Officer Breckenridge, Pilot Officer Baker and Warrant Officer Meek were pilot, mid-upper gunner and navigator respectively of an aircraft detailed to attack Berlin one night in January 1944. Whilst over the target area, the aircraft was hit by bullets from a fighter. Much damage was sustained, the wireless operator was killed and the rear gunner was wounded. Pilot Officer Baker was also wounded, being hit in the face and rendered unconscious. Nevertheless, Flying Officer Breckenridge evaded the attacker and, displaying great determination, resumed his bombing run and successfully attacked the target. Almost immediately the bomber was again hit by machine gun fire from the enemy aircraft, which had closed in. This time, Warrant Officer Meek was severely wounded, a bullet penetrated his breast bone close to the heart and another one hit him in the shoulder. Coolly and skilfully Flying Officer Breckenridge manoeuvred his badly damaged aircraft, however, and finally evaded the attacker. By now, Pilot Officer Baker had recovered consciousness and, realizing that the aircraft was unprotected, immediately made his way to the rear turret and manned it in spite of his physical suffering, the intense cold and the lack of oxygen. Pilot Officer Baker remained in the turret throughout the homeward flight, except for a short time when he left it to extinguish a fire which had commenced. Meanwhile Warrant Officer Meek, though desperately wounded and suffering intensely, refused to leave his post. Although deprived of practically all his navigational equipment, he plotted the route home with great skill. Eventually Flying Officer Breckenridge reached base where he effected a successful crash landing. His skill, courage and coolness in the face of heavy odds were worthy of the highest praise. Pilot Officer Baker and Warrant Officer Meek proved themselves to be valiant members of aircraft crew, displaying great courage, fortitude and devotion to duty. In spite of their injuries and much suffering they did all that was possible to assist in the safe return of the aircraft.

MEEK, P/O Richard Jack, CGM (J85486) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.626 Squadron - Award effective 4 November 1944 as per London Gazette dated 17 November 1944 and AFRO 239/45 dated 9 February 1945. Presented 20 July 1947.

Since the award of the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal, Pilot Officer Meek has completed many sorties against targets in Germany, including four on Berlin. His outstanding technical skill, exceptional, efficient and gallant fortitude have won the admiration of all members of his squadron.

Public Records Office Air 2/8827 has recommendation dated 1 August 1944 when he had flown 28 sorties (144 hours 50 minutes), 16 December 1943 to 6 July 1944. The contrast between the citation (above) and the recommendation (below) is striking:

Pilot Officer Meek, a Canadian, is a Navigator who has carried out 28 operational flights against the enemy. Since the award of the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal in February 1944 he has done 22 operational flights, many of them against such distant and heavily defended targets as Berlin, Magdeburg and Friedrichshaven, the enemy capital city having been his targets on four occasions.

Pilot Officer Meek has at all times carried out his duties in a most exemplary manner, his work being of the highest order under the strongest opposition the enemy could muster. His cool, quiet disregard of personal safety and the efficiency with which he navigated his aircraft inspired his crew to the highest standard of morale they achieved, and ensured a maximum safety for his aircraft and crew.

I strongly recommend that the gallantry displayed by this officer, coupled with the high order of his technical achievements, which were an inspiration not only to his crew but to all the navigators in the squadron, be recognized by the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Notes: Application for Operational Wing dated 9 July 1944 states he had flown 29 sorties (149 hours 50 minutes), 21 November 1943 to 7 July 1944.

Form on repatriation dated 14 July 1945 stated he had flown 29 sorties (171 hours 40 minutes), the last on 7 July 1944. Also 166 hours 45 minutes non-operational. Types experienced were Anson (37 hours five minutes), Halifax (25.40), Lancaster (203.00), Oxford (4.40) and Wellington (68.00)

Training: Interviewed in Vancouver, 6 September 1941 by F/O K.M. Macdonald - "Will be 33 in December. Very keen, studious type. Has taken technical courses to better himself. Now a radio operator and a keen student of astronomy and meteorology, Suitable for observer.:

MELIA, LAC John Francois (R110701) - Mention in Despatches - No.428 Squadron (No.64 Base in AFRO) - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 425/45 dated 9 March 1945. Born 21 February 1913. Home in St.Boniface, Manitoba; enlisted in Winnipeg, 19 June 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot.. To No.14 SFTS, 14 July 1941. To technical Training School, St. Thomas for Aero Engine Mechanic training, 22 August 1941. Promoted AC1, 27 December 1941. To No.8 BGS, 1 January 1942. Promoted LAC, 1 April 1942. To "Y" Depot, 5 February 1943; to RAF overseas, 2 March 1943. Repatriated to Canada with No.419 Squadron, 11 June 1945. To Halifax, 5 June 1945, apparently to prepare for Tiger Force. To No.5 Release Centre, 30 August 1945. Released 4 September 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.4364 (RG.24 Vol.20648) has recommendation dated 22 June 1944 (for a BEM); he was with No.428 Squadron and W/C W.A.G. McLeish composed the recommendation.

LAC Melia was in charge of the groundcrew of one of his unit's aircraft. The serviceability of this aircraft was maintained at the maximum at all times despite inclement weather and adverse conditions. It is considered that the efforts of LAC Melia contributed to a major degree to the longevity of the aircraft, which flew 45 sorties including many major targets, and to the efficiency of the unit as a whole.

RCAF Press Release No.4537 dated 17 April 1944 from P/O Fred Jackson (transcribed by Huguette Oates), associated with photos UK 9658, 9659,9660,9661,9662,9663, reads:

WITH THE RCAF BOMBER GROUP OVERSEAS: -- X-Ray rates as the champion aircraft of the Ghost squadron and the credit for the best bit of work ever turned in by a Halifax of the squadron headed by Wing Commander Dave French, 110 Province Street South, Hamilton, Ontario, goes to a ground crew staff that just about lives out by the giant aircraft's parking place.

Up to the time of writing X-Ray had been on 34 operations without a turnback, had no non-starts and still had her original four engines and the same tires that it started out on its series of missions. "There's never been the slightest trouble with the aircraft," said F/O Al. Lawrence of Rexton, New Brunswick, flight engineer for F/O Norm Brown, Fort Q'Appelle, Saskatchewan, who is the regular captain of X-Ray. "Those fellows really have it functioning 100 per cent."

As far as the ground crew is concerned, they figure it's their aircraft. They take a personal pride in the big Halifax and will work 24 hours a day if necessary to make sure that it's in perfect running order when it's time for takeoff. "You sort of get that way about them," said LAC Frank Melia of Norwood, Winnipeg, one of the fitters. "Sometimes the crews change and somebody else takes her out and we don't like that so much because we know how well F/O Brown and his crew look after her. One of us sleeps in the hut every night and we always wait up for her to come home. We wouldn't feel right if we didn't."

Melia was an apprentice mechanic with Starrett airways back in Winnipeg before the war. He is rated as an outstanding fitter not only by his ground crew mates but by the entire squadron, LAC Wallace Martin, Bobcaygeon, Ontario, aircraftman Syd. Nowa, 166 Frill Street, Ottawa, Ontario, aircraftman Harvey Peterson, Kelvington, Saskatchewan, and Sergeant Jim McMillan, Alexandria, Ontario, in charge of the crew are the other fitters. Riggers on the X-Ray ground crew are LAC Jack Hemming, 1152 Algoma Avenue, Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, and LAC Jim MacDonell of Erindale, Ontario.

The aircraft has had some major targets to contend with during its run of 34 without a turnback. It has been over Berlin six times during that series and also to Leipzig and Frankfurt. "We've never had an aircraft like it," declared W/C French. "We are proud of it but more so of the ground crew. They have done a magnificent job."

MELLIN, Sergeant Arthur Alured (R110157) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.419 Squadron - Award effective 21 April 1943 as per London Gazette dated 23 April 1943 and AFRO 985/43 dated 28 May 1943. Born 6 December 1917 in Duncan, British Columbia. Former bank employee; enlisted in Vancouver, 24 June 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.2 BGS, 5 August 1941 (guard duty). To No.2 ITS, 1 September 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 9 October 1941; posted that date to No.15 EFTS. Ceased training and posted elsewhere, 28 October 1941; to No.3 AOS, 5 February 1942; graduated 14 March 1942 when posted to No.2 BGS; graduated 25 April 1942 when posted to No.1 CNS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 25 May 1942. To "Y" Depot, 21 June 1942. To RAF overseas, 14 July 1942. Further trained in North Wales. Incident described took place on 27 February 1943. Hospitalized in England until August. Repatriated to Canada 28 August 1943 where treatment continued at Rockcliffe and Shaunnassy Hospital, Vancouver (on strength of Western Air Command from 2 October 1943 onwards). Returned to duty, February 1944 as Navigation Officer, Western Air Command, but when grounded for medical reasons he remustered to Flying Control, 19 August 1944, serving at Rockcliffe and Abbotsford (on strength of No.5 OTU from 10 December 1944 to 10 September 1945). Released 28 September 1945. See Field of Honour (Bank of Montreal, c.1950). Medal presented 27 June 1947. Died in Nanaimo, 16 May 1998.

One night in February 1943, this airman was the navigator of an aircraft detailed for a mine-laying mission off the Frisian Islands. In the course of the operation an enemy fighter engaged the aircraft raking its fuselage with machine-gun fire. The flight engineer and the rear gunner were killed while Sergeant Mellin was hit in the leg by a bullet which caused a compound fracture to the fibia and tibia bones. Despite the severity of his injuries, this airman assumed the duties of the flight engineer, while other members of the crew were quelling flames which had broken out in the bomber. He afterwards returned to his navigational duties, proving of great assistance to his pilot who flew the damaged aircraft to an airfield in this country. Although he had lost much blood and was in intense pain, it was only when the aircraft was about to be landed that Sergeant Mellin would consent to leave his post. His exemplary conduct and great fortitude were worthy of the highest praise.

NOTE: Ian Tavender records, in The Distinguished Flying Medal Register for the Second World War (London, Savannah Publications, 2000) the following recommendation from Public Record Office Air 2/4956, drafted 30 March 1943 when he had flown two sorties (nine hours 40 minutes).

On the night of 27th/28th February 1943, Sergeant Mellin was the navigator of a crew detailed to carry out mining operations in the vicinity of the Frisian Islands. One mine had been dropped when the aircraft was suddenly attacked from the rear and below by an enemy aircraft. The flight engineer and the rear gunner were killed instantly by cannon and machine gun fire which raked the whole length of the fuselage. At the same time Sergeant Mellin was struck on the left leg by a cannon shell, suffering in consequence compound fractures of the fibia and tibia. Fire broke out in the bomb bays and while this was being extinguished by the other members of the crew, Sergeant Mellin took over the Flight Engineer's duties and occupied himself in checking the petrol gauges, etc. He then returned to his navigational duties and succeeded in obtaining a D.R. position without the aid of Gee, proving of great assistance to his pilot who flew the damaged aircraft to an airfield in this country. Although he had lost much blood and was in intense pain, it was only when the aircraft was about to be landed that Sergeant Mellin would consent to leave his which had been put out of action. The D.R. position put the aircraft in the vicinity of the Wash and the Navigator then set course for RAF Station Coltishall. His E.T.A. at coast and aerodrome were accurate to within one minute. Only when the aircraft had reached the aerodrome and was about to land did Sergeant Mullin accept assistance when he was helped back to the rest position. In spite of the fact that he had lost a large quantity of blood and had suffered a compound fracture of the fibula and tibia, Sergeant Mellin at no time made any complaint but carried on with his task of getting the aircraft back to the nearest aerodrome. This Non-Commissioned Officer's tenacity, skill and courage in ignoring his own injuries were undoubtedly responsible for bringing the aircraft safely back and I consider that this feat fully merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Medal.

To No.124 (Ferry) Squadron, 21 February 1946. To No.164 Squadron Detachment, Winnipeg, 24 July 1946 (which became No.435 Squadron). Reverted to Corporal in postwar air force as of 1 October 1946 (number 20810). Promoted Sergeant, 1 October 1949. To No.2 Technical Training School, Camp Borden, 10 June 1952. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 April 1953. Promoted WO2, 1 April 1957. To Station Gimli, 22 June 1957. To No.115 Air Transport Unit, El Arish, 20 April 1959. Returned to Gimli, 9 March 1960. Died in Vancouver, 9 September 1966 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. DHist file 181.009 D.2619 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has recommendation forwarded 1 February 1945 to No.63 Base HQ when he had served 23 months in Canada, 32 months overseas.

This NCO has exceptional qualities of leadership. For the last year, he has had to assume a Flight Sergeant's responsibilities and has discharged them in commendable manner. When operational necessity demanded it, he has worked for thirty-six hours without ceasing. This quality of not leaving a job until it is satisfactorily completed has been the driving influence of his section.

His high reputation followed him into the postwar RCAF as the following assessment excerpts indicate:

Corporal Mellis is the quiet, confident and efficient type who is respected by all his subordinates. The manner in which he handles his section and the quality of the work turned out indicates the thorough knowledge he has in his trade and his capabilities as a leader. His secondary duty of NCO in charge Maintenance Control Room has shown an outstanding ability in Service knowledge and as an administrator. He is strongly recommended for promotion to the rank of Sergeant. (F/L W.H. Smith, No.435 Squadron, 24 June 1949).

Sergeant Mellis is NCO in charge Engine Shop at this unit. He is a practical man, very capable, very reliable. He has a jovial, easy-going disposition and commands respect by setting the example. He is recommended for promotion to Flight Sergeant (F/L C.J. Evans, No.435 Squadron, 24 October 1951).

WO2 Mellis has filled two positions on this unit since his arrival, that of Technical Service Officer and Unit Warrant Officer; both of these he has carried out in a most efficient manner. He sections under him as TSO have all shown remarkable improvement both in appearance and in the service they perform. This is undoubtedly due to WO2 Mellis' past experience and his fine knowledge of the technical field. As Unit Warrant Officer he has displayed a keenness to improve conditions on this unit, quite often under very difficult conditions, and at this time it is possible to notice these changes which has improved discipline and morale greatly. WO2 Mellis has set a fine example of a Warrant Officer with a fine service history and sets a good example to all those he comes in contact with. (F/O P.S. Perry, No.115 ATU, 30 September 1959).

MELLISH, FS (now WO2) Henry Herbert Mellich (Can 11578) - British Empire Medal - No.11 Aeronautical Inspection District - Awarded 1 January 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 89/45 dated 19 January 1945. Born 9 February 1916 at Union Road, King's County, Prince Edward Island (RCAF Press Release 4907 announcing award). Educated there and Prince of Wales College. Enlisted in Halifax, 15 August 1939. Medal presented, 22 June 1945. Retired from the service, 23 December 1971 (11578).

This non-commissioned officer, throughout an extensive career with the Royal Canadian Air Force, has at all times displayed an exemplary attitude in all he undertakes and has set a very high standard of efficiency and devotion to duty. By his fine example he has helped to maintain discipline and efficiency in his juniors. He is understanding in the way he subordinates all other activities to those demanded in a whole-hearted war effort and at the same time is wholly co-operative with seniors and juniors.

MELLOR, FS Joseph William Howard (R82862) - British Empire Medal - No.13 EFTS - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Born 7 April 1909. Home in Ottawa; enlisted there 10 February 1941 for General Duties and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.3 Repair Depot, 10 March 1941. Promoted AC1, 10 May 1941. Promoted LAC, 10 August 1941. Promoted Corporal, 1 November 1941. To "B", 3 November 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 1 April 1942. Reclassified as Canteen Steward, 1 August 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 April 1943. To Boundary Bay, 23 April 1943. To No.32 OTU, 13 May 1944. To No.6 OTU, 31 May 1944. To No.19 SFTS, 4 April 1945; to No.13 EFTS, 2 May 1945. To No.3 Release Centre, 4 September 1945. Discharged 10 September 1945. Presented by Governor General, 9 December 1947.

This non-commissioned officer, since the opening of this unit a year and a half ago, has operated the Central Warehouse. The shortage of staff has made it necessary throughout this period for this non-commissioned officer to work many hours over and above his normal duty. He has at all times been most conscientious. His keenness has made possible the smooth and efficient operation of all canteens and messes. His example has gained high esteem amongst all personnel and has contributed in a large degree to the morale of the unit.

MELLOWS, Corporal Sylvia Lucy (W311868) - British Empire Medal - No.5 OTU - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Home in Victoria; enlisted in Vancouver, 29 March 1943 and posted to No.7 Manning Depot. To No.3 Repair Depot, 3 June 1943. Promoted AW1, 29 June 1943. To No.2 GH, 9 July 1943. Promoted LAW, 1 January 1944. To Boundary Bay, 15 March 1944. To No.5 OTU, 31 March 1944. Promoted Corporal, 1 October 1944.. To No.8 Release Centre, 3 October 1945; discharged 10 October 1945. She appears to have been enlisted under the name "Cunningham" (subsequently married).

This non-commissioned officer has been employed as a clerk stenographer in the orderly room of the Training Wing since the inception of this unit. During the period of organization she has worked long and arduously in a valiant effort to keep her phase of the work up to date. By her devotion to her duties, which have been carried out in a cheerful and conscientious manner, this airwoman has set an excellent example to her fellow workers, which has had a most beneficial effect in the section.

Flying Officer Mellstrom is a very keen and excellent Air Gunner who has attacked some of the most difficult targets in Germany, including Stuttgart, Frankfurt, Essen and Cologne. His skill, devotion to duty and his ability to size up a difficult situation quickly, makes him a very valuable crew member. On the ground, his personality and keenness are an inspiration to the less experienced Air Gunners.

NOTE: On 11 April 1945, No.405 Squadron filed a report respecting his loss, as follows:

On the afternoon of 10th April 1945, Lancaster aircraft "K", ME315 of No.405 (RCAF) Squadron was detailed to attack Leipzig, The time of take off was approximately 1441 hours on 10.4.45 and the crew were as follows:

C.1639 S/L C.H. Mussells - pilot
188493 P/O E.L. Tempest - Nav/Plot
188718 P/O P. Young - Nav/Set/Opr.
R.178080 WO2 J.L. Larrimore - W/Air
J86847 F/O R.T. Dale - M/U/Gunner
C.18414 F/L M.L. Mellstrum - R/Gunner
185424 P/O C. Ryan - F/Engineer
154601 F/O J.P. Dooley - Visual/Air/B.

In the target area, immediately following release of T.I.'s, Lancaster aircraft "K" ME315 was attacked by an enemy fighter, ME.163. The attacking aircraft approached from the rear and above, and with one burst completely shot away the rear turret, rudder and elevator. Damage was also caused to the H2S set and mid-upper turret. The rear gunner, F/L Mellstrom, was in his turret when the attack commenced and is believed killed. This Officer is missing, no further information available. A number of Mustangs who were acting as fighter escort moved in closer to the disabled aircraft and covered it until it reached the front lines. The pilot, due to the fact that he had only partial control of the aircraft, ordered the W/Air, Nav, B/A and V/B/A to bale out over RAF Station, Woodbridge. Had not the M/U/G been injured the whole crew would have baled out. The pilot was successful in making a reasonable landing at RAF Station Woodbridge. All members of this crew, with the exception of the rear gunner, are back at this unit.

Curiously, Mellstrum was buried by British POWs as reported on 24 June 1945 by 1098208 Gunner Robert David Williams, 11th (HAC) Regiment, Royal Horse Artillery. He was then at Stalag IVG at Engelsdorf and the Chaplain had asked him to preside at the burial of a British POW soldier killed by an air raid (a man named Gregory) plus an airman found by the Germans. Gunner Williams asked about the identity of the airman after the service, and this was duly provided some hours later. He passed this information to British officers after liberation. His description of the burial is striking:

The burial took place in the evening of the 13th of April at the cemetery of a Luthren Evangelical Church (the only one in the place) at Engelsdorf. Engelsdorf is situated about ten kilometres to the east of Leipzig. The bearers and all the burial party were from Lager 29. The men were under the command of Lance Sergeant Frank Cole. They slow-marched from outside the mortuary to the grave. The coffins were draped with the Union Jack. They were lowered into the grave simultaneously by two different parties. After the service the men saluted. The Germans were unable to supply the usual firing party as the Americans were just outside Leipzig and the guns could be heard constantly. We ourselves were evacuated by the Germans at 3 a.m. the following day.

MELTON, FS John Earl (R60410) - Mention in Despatches - Skipton-on-Swale - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1600/45 dated 12 October 1945. Born 27 July 1915. Home in Calgary; enlisted there 3 September 1940 as Instrument Repair Technician. To Technical Training School, St. Thomas, 25 October 1940. Promoted AC1, 16 March 1941; to No.2 Equipment Depot, 19 March 1941; promoted LAC, 15 June 1941. To Calgary, 15 September 1941. To "Y" Depot, 2 January 1942. To RAF overseas, 17 February 1942. Promoted Sergeant, 1 January 1943. Repatriated 7 August 1945. To No.7 Release Centre, 7 August 1945. Released 14 August 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.2619 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has recommendation forwarded 1 February 1945 to No.63 Base HQ when he had served 18 months in Canada, 35 months overseas.

This NCO has been in charge of the Instrument Section at this Station. During that time he has displayed much resourcefulness and energy in generally improving the efficiency of the Section. By a thorough knowledge of equipment procedure and close supervision, he built up an adequate stock of spare parts and tools. He has shown considerable ingenuity in improving the instrument calibration room, also in equipping the oxygen and nitrogen charging tenders. At the same time he has, by reason of his own technical skill, generally raised the quality of work of the airmen under him.

MENAU, F/O Arthur (J13695) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.404 Squadron - Award effective 27 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 7 August 1914 in Lindsay, Ontario; home there; enlisted in Toronto, 20 August 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 1 October 1941. To No.1 ITS, 21 December 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 28 February 1942; posted that date to No.1 EFTS; may have graduated 24 April 1942 but not posted to No.5 SFTS until 8 May 1942; graduated and commissioned 28 August 1942. To No.31 GRS, 25 September 1942. To "Y" Depot, 14 December 1942; to RAF overseas, 2 February 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 28 February 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 28 August 1944. Repatriated 4 September 1945; retired 15 December 1945. Cited with F/O John Tomes (RCAF navigator, awarded DFC). Presented 14 June 1949. Died 21 November 1994 in Lindsay, Ontario as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of March 1995.

As pilot and observer respectively, these officers have completed a very large number of sorties and have displayed great skill, courage and co-operation. In September 1944 they participated in an attack on an enemy shipping convoy off Kristiansand. During the attack the starboard propeller and the pilot's windscreen were damaged by anti-aircraft fire. Despite this the attack was pressed home. In the action, Flying Officer Menaul had been hit, a fact unrealized until the turn for home was made. Flying Officer Tomes promptly rendered efficient first aid and afterwards gave valuable assistance to his pilot in his endeavours to reach base. After bringing his aircraft down safely, Flying Officer Menaul collapsed. He had displayed great courage and fortitude. Flying Officer Tomes also proved himself a valiant member of aircraft crew, setting a fine example of coolness and determination.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9160 has recommendation drafted by S/L R.A. Schoales, 16 September 1944, when he had flown 42 sorties (563 hours).

On September 14th, 1944, Flying Officer Menaul was a member of a formation that went out to attack enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast. The target - an enemy convoy consisting of three escort vessels and three merchant vessels - was sighted off Kristiansand. After the order to attack was given, Flying Officer Menaul immediately turned in to attack. During the attack the starboard propellor and pilot's windscreen were damaged by flak. Despite this, Flying Officer Menaul pressed home his attack with great determination, relasing his Rocket Projectiles at close range and securing hits on the vessel he attacked. It was not until after the attack that he realized he had been wounded himself. With the assistance of his navigator, Flying Officer Menaul continued to show courage in bringing the aircraft back to base under extreme stress. He persevered until the aircraft was safely on the ground, where he collapsed over the controls.

For this display of fortitude and devotion to duty, I highly recommend him for the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

G/C Max Aitken, Commanding Station Banff, wrote on 18 September 1944:

This officer has carried out 42 operational trips with a total of 563 operational hours. He has at all times shown great gallantry and keenness.

On his last sortie flak hit his starboard propellor on the run in which caused considerable vibration. However, he presses home the attack and a cannon shell then hit and penetrated the windscreen, wounding him in the arm. He flew the aircraft back across the North Sea and having made a successful landing collapsed over the controls. Strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This was duly supported by the Air Officer Commanding, No.18 Group (23 September 1944) and approved by the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Coastal Command, on 27 September 1944.

Shot down 16 July 1943; evaded capture; reported safe, 10 September 1944. Commissioned 6 October 1944 (J90115). Repatriated 28 October 1944. To No.1 Training Command, 12 December 1944. To No.1 Flying Instructor School, 18 December 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 6 April 1945. To No.4 Release Centre, 17 August 1945. Retired 20 August 1945.

Flight Sergeant Merchant has taken part in a number of operational sorties and has at all times displayed a high degree of efficiency together with great courage and determination.

NOTE: Public Record Office WO 208/3323 has MI.9 interrogation report of his evasion. Lancaster left Station Bardney, 2100 hours, 15 July 1943 to bomb a power station in Italy. Over Mirandola, Italy they collided with another aircraft (possibly another Lancaster) and crew baled out. He hid his parachute and Mae West in a culvert and joined his rear gunner hiding in bushes, but Italians found them. They were taken to Mirandola where they were reunited with other members of the crew except the Flight Engineer (a Sergeant Edwards) who had been killed in landing. After one night at Bologna and about 15 days at Poggio quarantine camp, he went to Rome (four days) and then to a camp at Chieti. While at that camp the Italian Armistice was signed, but the Senior British Officer forbade prisoners to leave the camp. Four days later German troops arrived and took it over.

Merchant was part of a group taken to PG.78, Sulmona. On 1 October they were put on a train in box cars for transport to Germany. En route, POWs made a hole in the side of his car and on 3 October, in company with Sergeant G.E. Pearson, RASC, he jumped off the train near St.Benedetto Val Di Sambo. They contacted a civilian and stayed with him until 10 October. The civilian took them by train to Milan where they stayed one night before going to Como. They crossed the lake, picked up a guide (courtesy of the civilian) and reached Switzerland on 13 October 1943. He remained in that country until 20 August 1944 when he crossed to France, contacted the Maquis and was passed on, reaching England once more (via Casablanca) on 10 September 1944.

This captain of aircraft has only one more sortie to carry out to complete his first tour of operations.

This officer has shown such consistency of purpose throughout his attacks on heavily defended enemy targets that he has obtained one of the best bombing records on the squadron. On a number of occasions persistent attacks from enemy fighters have been encountered whilst on his bombing run in to the target, but in each case he has brought back excellent results.

It is considered that Flying Officer Merlin has shown a very high standard of captaincy and efficiency and he is strongly recommended for an award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

As air gunner he has taken part in numerous operational sorties and has destroyed two enemy night fighters. In July 1942, whilst on a bombing sortie over Saarbruecken [sic], his aircraft was attacked by enemy fighters on five separate occasions and it was mainly due to his accuracy and coolness that two hostile aircraft were driven off and another shot down. His fine aggressive spirit has earned him the respect of all.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9604 has recommendation dated 30 September 1942 when he had flown 18 sorties (101 hours 45 minutes) on operations; it provides a sortie list and a slightly longer text than that published:

- 1 July 1942 - GARDENING, Nasturtiums (5.40)
- 8 July 1942 - Wilhelmshaven (2.15, DNCO, engine trouble)

- 16 September 1942 - Essen (5.15)
- 19 September 1942 - Munich (7.50, attacked by Ju.88, claimed it damaged)

As mid-upper gunner, Flight Sergeant Merrick has flown 18 operational sorties and has already definitely destroyed two enemy night fighters as well as damaging others.

On the 29th July 1942, whilst on a bombing sortie over Saarbrucken, his aircraft was attacked by fighters on five separate occasions and it was mainly due to his accuracy and coolness that two of them were beaten off; they were claimed as damaged and another was shot down. His other confirmed victory was over Frankfurt, an FW.190 being shot down in flames within a few seconds of being sighted.

Flight Sergeant Merrick displays always a fine aggressive spirit which has brought him considerable success and has earned him respect of all other gunners in the squadron.

Public Record Office Air 50/292 has the following Combat Reports bearing on his career:

29/30 July 1942:

Herewith Combat report for Lancaster "M" of No.106 Squadron, who encountered an enemy fighter on the night of 29/30th July:

Captain: Sergeant Cassels; Flight Engineer, P/O E.F. White; Observer, Sergeant Woollard; Air Bomber, Sergeant Helmsley; WT/OP, Sergeant Wakerley; Mid-Upper Gunner, Sergeant Burcher; Rear Gunner, Sergeant Merrick.

On the night of 29/30th July a Lancaster "M" was attacked at 0052 while flying at 10,000 feet by a single engined aircraft, at position 5140 N 0230 E. The enemy aircraft came in from the starboard quarter at the same height firing cannon from 500 yards. The Lancaster took evasive action losing height to 5,000 feet. The enemy aircraft was lost and our own aircraft did not return fire.

At 0117 hours at 10,000 feet 15 miles S.E. of Lille, Lancaster "M" was attacked by an unidentified aircraft. The enemy aircraft came in from starboard beam, tracer passed ahead of the aircraft, rear gunner and mid-upper gunner returned the fire. The enemy aircraft was then seen to pass from starboard to port a few feet below the Lancaster; the enemy aircraft was then lost.

Five minutes after leaving the target approximately 20 miles west of Saarbrucken at 0220 hours at 5,500 feet a single-engined enemy aircraft was sighted by the rear gunner of the Lancaster dead astern at approximately 400 yards. It passed from astern to port quarter and opened fire with cannon at about 200 yards. The rear gunner returned the fire and the fighter passed then from port to starboard; as he did so tracer was seen to enter the enemy aircraft's fuselage. The enemy aircraft then passed to the starboard beam to make another attack. The mid-upper gunner gave instructions to the pilot to turn to starboard into the attack; as the pilot did so the enemy aircraft closed in on the starboard beam to 150 yards and the mid-upper gunner opened fire and tracer was seen to enter the engine and fuselage.

The enemy aircraft then broke into [sic] flames and dived to the ground. It was seen to crash by the observer, mid-upper and rear gunners. The pilot also saw it burning on the ground.

The enemy aircraft was claimed as definitely destroyed.

At 0225 hours near Squlay [?] while flying at 7,500 feet the Lancaster was shadowed for ten minutes by two unidentified aircraft. One on the starboard beam that did not open fire and one astern that opened fire from 600 yards. The pilot then took evasive action and both aircraft were lost.

24/25 August 1942:

106 Squadron, Lancaster R5731, "M"

At 2347 hours on 24/25th August 1942, Lancaster "M" was flying at 11,000 feet when a single engined aircraft was sighted by the Mid-Upper Gunner (Flight Sergeant Hobson). The aircraft was flying on a reciprocal course to our own aircraft and was on the starboard side slightly up. The range was judged by the mid-upper gunner to be about 400 yards and he positively identified the aircraft as a FW.190I at this time the enemy aircraft was flying out of the moon. Our aircraft was approaching the target area, Frankfurt, and the pilot made a steep turn to port and completed his circuit; during this circuit the enemy aircraft was lost to view. Whilst making the second circuit of the target our aircraft was flying just above cloud and the rear gunner (Flight Sergeant Merrick) sighted a FW.190 which he believed to be the same aircraft, as it broke cloud below him and at a range of no more than 150 yards; it was approaching in a steep climb from the dark side of the sky; Sergeant Merrick is of the opinion that the enemy aircraft was in such a position that it could not open fire; he immediately opened fire, firing a burst of about 250 rounds during which the cowling of the FW.190 was shot away. The enemy aircraft appeared to go into a sliding turn and Sergeant Merrick fired another burst of about 250 rounds and observed the engine to catch fire. The mid-upper gunner was unable to open fire as the enemy aircraft was below and dead astern.

The front and mid-upper gunners both saw the enemy aircraft on fire and a few seconds later all three gunners saw a fire on the ground. The FW.190 is claimed as destroyed.

During the combat, there was some searchlight activity but our aircraft was not held in the beams. The enemy aircraft carried no lights. I.F.F. was not on.

16/17 September 1942 (W.T. Lewis, RCAF was Air Bomber; the Mid-Upper Gunner was Sergeant W.T. Merrick):

On 16th September 1942 at 2236 hours Lancaster V/106 Squadron was on course 195 - position about 20 miles S.W. of Bonn, A.S.I. 200 mph. Sergeant Newman, the Mid-Upper Gunner reported what he believed to be an aircraft at about 700 yards range. This was also observed by Flight Sergeant Merrick, the Rear Gunner. Evasive action was taken but the aircraft continued to shadow, varying its position from the port to starboard quarter. There was some cloud, but general visibility was good. Bombs had been dropped. There was no flak and no searchlight activity. Shadowing continued for about three minutes, the range of the aircraft lessening to 500 yards. Neither of the gunners identified it beyond saying that it was single-engined. The range was not closed any more, so the Rear Gunner of our aircraft fired a long burst and the enemy aircraft was then lost to view and did not return. There was no danger to our aircraft or the crew. No claim is made.

Crew: Captain, F/L Hopgood; Navigator, Sergeant Bates, Air Bomber, Flight Sergeant Lewis; Flight Engineer, Sergeant Brennan; W/Op, Sergeant Hobson; Rear Gunner, Flight Sergeant Merrick; Mid-Upper Gunner, Sergeant Newman.

19/20 September 1942 (W.T. Lewis, RCAF was Air Bomber; the Mid-Upper Gunner was another member of the RCAF, Sergeant W.T. Merrick); Lancaster M/106:

On 19th September 1942, at 2204 hours, when Lancaster M/106 was at Chalons-sur-Marne at 7,000 feet, 180 A.I.S. about to alter course for Munich, the pilot, F/L Hopgood, reported an aircraft which he could not identify in the dead ahead position, flying in the opposite direction to himself. Visibility at this time was excellent and as the aircraft came into view, Sergeant Newman (Mid-Upper Gunner) was able to identify it as a Ju.88. The aircraft veered away to port and was lost, next being seen by the Rear Gunner on the port beam at a range of about 100 yards, when it opened fire with machine guns. Its fire was immediately answered by Flight Sergeant Merrick, the Rear Gunner, and the Wireless Operator, Sergeant Hobson, and the Mid-Upper Gunner, Sergeant Newman; both say that they saw his tracer enter the enemy aircraft. Flight Sergeant Merrick fired in all about 300 rounds. The Ju.88 broke off the attack at very close range and was not seen again.

During the attack visibility was excellent, there was neither flak nor searchlight activity, the bombs had not been dropped, enemy aircraft was carrying no lights, there was no action with I.F.F.

The Ju.88 is claimed as damaged.

Crew: Captain, F/L Hopgood; Navigator, Sergeant Bates, Air Bomber, Flight Sergeant Lewis; Flight Engineer, Sergeant Brennan; W/Op, Sergeant Hobson; Rear Gunner, Flight Sergeant Merrick; Mid-Upper Gunner, Sergeant Newman.

15/16 October 1942 (W.T. Lewis was Air Bomber; the Mid-Upper Gunner was another member of the RCAF, Sergeant W.T. Merrick; aircraft was R5731 "M"):

The following is a report of the encounter with an enemy aircraft by Lancaster "<" of No.106 Squadron.

Captain, F/L Hopgood
Air Bomber, Flight Sergeant Lewis
Navigator, Flight Sergeant Bates
W/Op, Sergeant Hobson
Flight Engineer, Sergeant Brennan
Rear Gunner, Flight Sergeant Merrick
Mid-Upper Gunner, Sergeant Lewis.

On the night of 15/16th October 1942, Lancaster "M" was returning from target, Cologne, bombs having been dropped, flying at 15,000 feet, A.S.I. 200 and losing height, when about ten minutes from the Dutch coast it was attacked from a range of 150 yards from 200 feet below by a Ju.88 identified by both gunners and firing cannon and machine gun. Its fire was answered by the Rear Gunner (Flight Sergeant Merrick) and violent evasive action taken, steep diving turn was taken by the pilot. This attack was broken above and the Mid-Upper Gunner (Sergeant Lewis) fired about 100 rounds from each gun. Two more attacks were made, each from about 150 yards range and astern but these were broken below. The Ju.88 only fired on the second attack, but the evasive action taken by our aircraft on the third attack was so effective that the enemy aircraft did not open fire. Flight Sergeant Merrick the rear gunner states that he saw tracer from Sergeant Lewis's guns entering the fuselage of the enemy aircraft. The Ju.88 was firing short bursts and breaking away at very short range. Our gunners fired about 100 rounds per gun on each attack.

Visibility throughout was good. There were no searchlights, no flak, no action was taken with our I.F.F.; the enemy aircraft carried no lights and there was nothing that could be associated with shadowing. No casualties to our crew and no damage to aircraft. The Ju.88 is claimed as damaged.

METCALF, Corporal Alexander Anderson (R58729) - Mention in Despatches - No.1659 Conversion Unit - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 425/45 dated 9 March 1945. Born 4 April 1914; home in Vancouver; enlisted there 12 September 1940 as Fabric Worker. To Technical Training School, 5 February 1940. Promoted AC1, 3 May 1941. To No.11 SFTS, 7 May 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 October 1941. To No.3 Repair Depot, 13 December 1941. To "Y" Depot, 1 February 1943; to RAF overseas, 8 March 1943. Promoted Corporal, 1 April 1943. Repatriated by air, 18 June 1945; to No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945; to Greenwood for Tiger Force, 31 July 1945. To Halifax, 4 September 1945; released 7 September 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.2993 (RG.24 Vol.20634) has recommendation sent from No.61 Base to Headquarters, No.6 Group, 27 July 1944; NOTE: Name also spelled METCALFE.

This Non-Commissioned Officer is in charge of the Fabric Component Repair Section, doing work for the Conversion Unit and Base. He has shown outstanding interest in his work in which he is both dependable and untiring. Through his own initiative and drive his section has been able to effect a considerable saving of time and material to the advantage of the service. While only recently promoted to Corporal, he has been in charge of the section for a year and has been a "Shadow" Corporal since 1 April 1943.

METCALFE, F/O Earle Garth (J37196) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.420 Squadron - Award effective 5 July 1945 as per London Gazette dated 20 July 1945 and AFRO 1619/45 dated 19 October 1945. Born in Winnipeg, 25 May 1922; home there (clerk); enlisted there 15 May 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay until 25 August 1942 when posted to No.3 Manning Depot. To No.11 SFTS (guard duty), 9 October 1941). To No.7 ITS, 6 February 1943; graduated and promoted LAC, 16 April 1943 when posted to No.23 EFTS. Ceased training, 9 May 1943 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot; to No.7 AOS, 29 May 1943; graduated and commissioned 15 October 1943. To "Y" Depot, 29 October 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 31 October 1943. Promoted Flying Officer, 15 April 1944. Repatriated 9 July 1945. Retired 18 September 1945. Graduated from the University of Manitoba. He worked at the TB Sanatorium, Western Grocers, MGEA and Greater Winnipeg Gas. Died in Winnipeg, 3 April 2008. Medal sent by registered mail 11 March 1950.

Flying Officer Metcalfe has almost completed a very successful tour of operations. On his first sortie to Kiel his aircraft was badly damaged by anti-aircraft fire and he was wounded in the forehead. In spite of this he guided the crew safely back to base. Since then he has navigated his aircraft safely on sorties to Munster, Osnabruck, Ludwigshaven and Hamburg, frequently encountering difficulties from adverse weather and enemy action. He has always navigated with skill and accuracy.

The original submission was drafted 29 March 1945 by F.S. McCarthy when he had flown 28 sorties (156 hours 25 minutes); see also the award recommendation for W/C McCarthy:

Flying Officer Metcalfe has almost completed a tour of operations. He did his first trip to Kiel and his second on the RAF's longest daylight penetration at that time, to Osnabruck. Since then he has taken his crew and brought them safely back from targets such as Munster, Ludwigshaven and Hamburg, often without navigational aids, and always with confidence in spite of the difficulties encountered.

On the trip to Kiel, his aircraft was badly damaged by flak, losing an engine and part of a wing and he was struck in the forehead by a piece of spent flak; nevertheless he insisted on guiding the aircraft back to base.

On the ground he has competently and willingly led the navigators through ground training and briefing for instructional and operational flying. At all times he has been an inspiring example both as a brilliant navigator and gentlemanly officer, and has contributed to a large extent to the good navigational record achieved by the squadron. I strongly recommend this officer for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Warrant Officer Metcalfe has taken part in twenty-six successful operational sorties as Bomb Aimer. These sorties include five attacks on Berlin and many attacks on other heavily defended targets in Germany.

He is an excellent Bomb Aimer and was most resolute in his attacks, never being satisfied to release his bombs until he was sure they would fall on the target, and he was never deterred by intense and accurate anti-aircraft fire. The accuracy of his bombing was proved by the numerous photographs he secured of the targets he attacked.

Warrant Officer Metcalfe is recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross in recognition of his good work as an operational bomb aimer.

Retired 21 September 1945. Photo PL-35207 shows him. Medal sent by registered mail 30 March 1949. Recommended when he had flown 108 sorties (106 operational hours).

Flight Lieutenant Metcalfe has completed a large number of armed reconnaissances and attacks on targets in close support of Army operations. These have been completed in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire in attacks at Mortain, Vimontiers and Falaise. He destroyed many tanks and motor transport vehicles. In September 1944, Flight Lieutenant Metcalfe led eight attacks on enemy shipping in the Scheldt Estuary, destroying or damaging many barges and other craft. He is a fine leader whose courage and devotion to duty have always been outstanding.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9043 has recommendation drafted 16 November 1944:

This officer has now completed 108 operational sorties on Hurricanes and Typhoons. These have included 62 armed reconnaissances and 26 attacks on close support targets, usually in the face of intense flak. In 15 sorties at Mortain, Vermoutiers and Falaise he destroyed many tanks and motor transports. Between 6th and 14th September 1944 he led and took part in eight attacks on shipping in the Scheldt Estuary when between 20 and 30 barges and other craft were destroyed and severely damaged.

METFORD, F/L Lionel Seymour, OBE (C9114) - Mention in Despatches - Station Sea Island - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born in Folkstone, England, 3 March 1888. Educated in England, 1896-1906. Served as a Lieutenant, the Rifle Brigade, 1908 to 1913. In applying to RCAF, 7 September 1940, he wrote, "I taught myself to fly on a 25-h.p. Bleriot monoplane at handon in 1911 (International Aviator's Certificare No.146), served as a pilot in the RAF all through the last war and joined the RCAF in 1921 when I did a course at Camp Borden. In the meantime I have been privately experimenting with gliders and aircraft here and the last of my experimental waterplanes I built and flew last October. I had very bad luck with that as it was wrecked and sunk in 140 feet of water during a storm a few days later." Royal Flying Corps, 1913 to 1919 (attained rank of Major and served with RFC/RAF Canada; see First World War awards). Migrated to Canada. Appointed Squadron Leader in CAF, 17 June 1921 and posted to No.1 Wing, Camp Borden, for refresher flying. Posted to ir Headquarters and granted Leave Without Pay, 27 July 1921. To No.11 Squadron (British Columbia), 31 March 1922 (inactive without pay). Operated Metford Brothers of Salmon Arm (boat builders, gliders), 1919-1941; he was also a part-time fruit inspector; helped found the Salmon Arm Aero Club (1928). Member of Military Rifle Association, 1932 onwards. Home in Vancouver; applied to RCAF as early as September 1939 but initially refused on grounds of age. Finally enlisted in Vancouver, 1 December 1941 in Provost and Security Service and commissioned with rank of Flying Officer. To Station Coal Harbour, 29 December 1941. To No.2 Equipment Depot, 5 November 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 April 1943. To Boundary Bay, 26 August 1943. To Sea Island, 5 December 1943. Certificate sent to Sea Island, 29 June 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 2 December 1945. Retired 7 December 1945. Died in Salmon Arm, British Columbia, 16 June 1950 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

This officer's steadfast devotion to duty and personal example have been an inspiration to all and have made an important contribution to the efficiency and morale of the service. As a provost and security services officer he has worked with ability and zeal beyond the requirements of normal duty and with a commendable disregard for personal leisure. His devotion to duty has been outstanding.

Recommendation raised 27 December 1944 by G/C C.M.G. Farrell; wording as above. Correspondence indicates he was an excellent (and prolific) writer of articles and supervised the publication of station newspapers as well as serving in Station Defence Supervisory posts.

No sign of an OBE !.

METHERAL, P/O Kenneth James (J15683) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.408 Squadron - Award effective 26 December 1942 as per London Gazette dated 29 December 1942 and AFRO 232/43 dated 12 February 1943. Born in Rosetown, Saskatchewan; 20 November 1917; home in North Edmonton, Alberta; enlisted in Edmonton, 22 August 1940. To No.3 Training Command, 15 September 1940. To No.1 ITS, 28 November 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 3 January 1941; posted that date to No.3 AOS; graduated 28 April 1941 and posted that date to No.3 BGS; graduated 8 June 1941 and promoted Sergeant. Posted that date to No.1 CNS; graduated 21 July 1941 when posted to an RAF Operational Training Unit. To overseas, 31 July 1941. Commissioned June 9 June 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 9 December 1942. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace 23 March 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 24 July 1943. Repatriated 9 November 1944. Released at uncertain date. Rejoined on Short Service Commission, 13 March 1951 (36708); period of service uncertain. Died in South Surrey, British Columbia, June 1992 as per Airforce Magazine, issue of April-May-June 1993.

As navigator this officer has taken part in many sorties including such heavily defended targets as Bremen, Wilhelmshaven, Hamburg, Essen and Cologne. He has also completed many mine-laying operations. His outstanding skill, extensive knowledge and determination have contributed materially to the successes achieved.

RCAF Press Release No. 2771 dated 17 September 1943 (associated with photo portrait UK-1809) reads:

Halifax Lancaster and Stirling were new names to Bomber Command when F/L Ken Metheral (J15683), North Edmonton, Alberta, started operational flying in December 1941. Ken, an observer, did his tour in venerable twin-engined Hampdens, now relegated to minor duties in Bomber Command. He visited some of the most heavily defended targets in Germany, made two daylight sorties and nine minelaying operations. For skill and navigational efficiency during his ops career, Ken was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

F/L Metheral left the Edmonton Bulletin in August 1940 to enlist in the RCAF. On completion of his training, he navigated a Hudson bomber on delivery to England. The zenith of Ken's ops tour is centred on a raid on Kiel. "After that raid," he said, "things seemed to quieten down."

"They were making their bombing run over the harbor installations of Kiel when they were coned by searchlights. Flak poured up the beams of light, reaching out at the wildly evading Hampden. The skipper was in a steep turn when flak burst under the wing tip and flipped the Hampden over on its back," said Ken. "We were carrying a two thousand pounder that night too." The pilot righted the bomber, levelled out, dropped their load and dived after it. The lights followed the aircraft relentlessly right down to ground level. "The skipper levelled out at about twenty feet and we thundered out over the estuary towards the Baltic. We dared not climb or we'd lose speed and make a better target for A.A. and believe me we were going faster than Jerry ever expected a Hampden to be going. Right down on the water, we almost hit a flak ship. I guess the skipper saw it at the same time I yelled 'up'. He lifted a wing, cleared it and we were away with the flak ship firing wildly after us."

"Our daylight forays into Western Germany were uneventful," continued Ken. "We'd nip in and out of the clouds, bomb our target and nip back into the clouds again."

On their minelaying sorties they collected a few holes from flak ships lurking in the area. Only once did they have a brush with an enemy fighter. "Every time the Hun came in to attack, the skipper turned to meet him. He seemed to get tired of these tactics, fired a parting burst and left," Ken said.

The greatest thrill of Ken's tour was on the 1000 bomber raid to Cologne. "To look everywhere and see your own aircraft going to and coming from the target was an inspiring sight," he said, "and apart from that, the place was burning like merry hell".

Every time the squadron was on ops the cats in the Sergeant's Mess were missing. "Yeah, we swiped the Mess cats for mascots," Ken laughed. "The staff didn't like the idea of their best mousers going on operations. Each cat had a log book and their flying time was faithfully recorded."

After Ken finished his tour of operations, he was posted to a distant station to instruct at an operational training unit. He would often come back to his old station to visit his girl who lived nearby. He came back on December 28 last year with marriage in his eye. By this time, news had reached his old station that Ken had won the DFC. His friends, not knowing he was to be married, approached him and congratulated him on this award. Ken, not knowing he had won the gong, assumed they were marriage congratulations. Finally, an RAF lad he knew well approached him and the conversation went....

"Congratulations old boy. How about a drink?"

"Don't mind if I do," Ken replied.

"As a matter of fact I think you should be buying old boy."

"Why?" Ken. "Because I'm getting married?"

"No. Because you're a bally hero. You've won a gong."

That's how Ken found out he had won a decoration. The citation accompanying the award reads: "As Navigator, this officer has taken part in many sorties including such heavily defended targets as Bremen, Wilhelmshaven, Hamburg, Essen and Cologne. He has also completed many minelaying operations. His outstanding skill, extensive knowledge and determination have contributed materially to the successes achieved."

METHERAL, P/O Robert Keith (J18989) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.419 Squadron - Award effective 28 December 1943 as per London Gazette dated 7 January 1944 and AFRO 410/44 dated 25 February 1944. Born in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, 4 January 1923; home in Wapella, Saskatchewan; enlisted in Regina, 5 August 1941. Trained at No.7 ITS (graduated 27 February 1942), No.19 EFTS (graduated 5 June 1942) and No.11 SFTS (graduated 9 October 1942). Commissioned 1943. Released 29 June 1945. Rejoined RCAF, 22 July 1952 (209521); retired 5 February 1970, settling in Lindsay, Ontario. Medal presented at Buckingham Palace 1 August 1949. RCAF photo PL-26859 (ex UK-7325 dated 13 January 1944) is captioned as follows: "Immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross is P/O R.K. Metheral, Wapella, Saskatchewan, has been announced by the Air Ministry. The Saskatchewan flier is a pilot with the Moose Squadron, of the RCAF Bomber Group and is a veteran of 26 operational trips over enemy territory. On one occasion during an attack on Kassel his aircraft was attacked five times by a FW.190." Caption continues that all his operations were with No.419 Squadron; also that he had a brother overseas with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. Photo PL-32424 is a portrait.

This officer has completed many sorties and has set a fine example of skill, courage and devotion to duty. His determination to complete his missions successfully has always been evident. This was well illustrated on a recent occasion when detailed to attack Leipzig. On the outward journey, with the target many miles distant, one of the bomber's engines failed. Although some height was lost, Pilot Officer Metheral went on to make a successful attack and afterwards returned safely to base. On another sortie his aircraft was subject to fighter interference at five different periods but this did not prevent him from completing his mission successfully.

MEYER, FS Rean Egerton (R73711) - Mention in Despatches - No.9426 Servicing Echelon (No.62 Base in AFRO) - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 379/45 dated 2 March 1945. Born 7 February 1902 in Grandby, Quebec; home there. Electrician's Helper for five years; electrician for three years with Ford Motor Company; Assistant Plant Manager for Bell Telephone (five years); electrician with Imperial Tobacco for eight years. Enlisted in Montreal, 10 October 1940 as Electrician. Posted next day to No.1 Manning Depot. To Technical Training School, St. Thomas, 6 December 1940. Promoted AC1, 10 May 1941. To No.11 SFTS, Yorkton, 14 May 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 October 1941. Promoted Corporal, 1 April 1942. To "Y" Depot, 1 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 20 October 1942. Disembarked in Britain, 4 November 1942. To No.5 PDC (whatever that is), 5 November 1942. To No.426 Squadron, 27 November 1942. Attached to Vickers Armstrong, 3-20 March 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 May 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 August 1943. Attached to Linton-on-Ouse, 24 July to 28 November 1943. To No.9426 Servicing Echelon, 29 November 1943. To No.62 Base, 12 August 1944. To No.63 Base, 8 June 1945. Repatriated 7 August 1945; to No.2 Release Centre, 14 August 1945; discharged 21 September 1945. As of 1947 he was living in Granby, Quebec. Died in Granby, 16 June 1960 as per Legionary of August 1960. No citation in AFRO; DHist file 181.009 D.1719 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation forwarded 31 July 1944. Enlisted 10 October 1940; served 24 months in Canada, 21 months overseas.

Flight Sergeant Meyer was appointed Non-Commissioned Officer in charge of the Electrical Section when the Echelon was formed. His keen attitude towards his work and the efficient organization of his section have marked him out as a Non-Commissioned Officer of the highest type. Often required to be on the job for long hours at a stretch working on aircraft needed for operations, his untiring energy and enthusiasm have set a splendid example for all ranks.

Note: Assessment dated 4 February 1945: "This man is an excellent Non-Commissioned Officer and tradesman." (F/O J.W. Lee).

Retired 8 November 1945, settling in Town of Mount Royal. Medal presented 24 April 1948. Died May 1977 in Bryn Mawr, Delaware

Flight Lieutenant Meyer is a highly skilled navigator. He has taken part in many operational sorties, several of which were by night and involved landings in enemy territory. The high degree of navigational skill attained by his wing is largely owing to the high standard set by this officer during training.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9627 has recommendation dated 5 April 1944 when he had flown 353 hours five minutes including 20 sorties since joining No.177 Wing; this document cleared Headquarters, 3 Tactical Air Force (Southeast Asia) on 15 April 1944. Operation THURSDAY was a Chindit offensive launched in February 1944; see Henry Probert, The Forgotten Air Force: The Royal Air Force in the War Against Japan, 1941-1945 (Brassey's, London, 1995).

This officer carried out 254 operational hours as navigator on Hudson aircraft prior to joining the wing. Since the formation of the wing he has been Wing Navigation Officer, and navigator in Officer Commanding Wing's crew. The high degree of skill shown by crews of the wing in navigating across Burma by night during Operation THURSDAY is undoubtedly due to the high standard he set during training. In addition to the above, he carried out seven sorties himself to both strips used in Operation THURSDAY. On three of these sorties VIPs were carried. He has since carried out a further thirteen night sorties involving landings in enemy territory. The skill and accuracy of his navigation in all these sorties has been a model of exactitude and inspired complete confidence.

On repatriation to Canada (17 November 1944) he filed a form on service overseas. On this he listed the following (which do not coincide completely with movements given above):

17 OTU - 16 August 1941 - crewing and training on Blenheims (52 hours 55 minutes)
No.1428 Flight - 3 January 1942 - training and conversion, Hudsons (29 hours)

No.1444 Flight - 7 March 1942 - training and finishing, Hudsons (20 hours 15 minutes)
Flying own Hudson to India, 1 April to 20 April 1942 (45 hours 50 minutes)
No.139 Squadron - 20 April 1942 - Hudson (29 hours 25 minutes)
No.62 Squadron - 1 May 1942 - Hudsons (104 hours five minutes)
General Reconnaissance School, India - 4 August 1942 - training on DH.89A (14 hours five minutes)
No.62 Squadron - 4 September 1942 - Hudson (232 hours 20 minutes)
No.62 Squadron - 23 May 1943 - conversion - Dakota (56 hours)
No.177 Wing - 7 November 1943 - detached operations, Dakota (366 hours 50 minutes)
No.229 Group - 20 August 1944 - administration (no flying)
BRD, Worli - 30 August 1944 - waiting.

On the same form he stated he had flown eight hours on bomber operations, 263 hours 50 minutes on Coastal operations and 161 hours 40 minutes on transport operations. He tallied these to 425 hours 30 minutes on operations. In addition, he stated he had flown 151 hours 15 minutes on training and 374 hours 40 minutes on "Miscellaneous Time on Squadron". His last sortie had been on 7 July 1944. He described his work as "Conversion to Dakotas - training in paratrooping and supply dropping."

Assessments: "Plenty of energy and drive. His work is characterised by thoroughness and expedition. Will do well when he has gained more experience." (W/C D. Halliday, No.62 Squadron, 1 August 1943; form states he had joined squadron 20 April 1942; assessment covers period of 1 August 1942 to 31 July 1943; noted as having flown 680 hours ten minutes to date).

"Plenty of tact and common sense; shows thought and consideration for the men. An outstanding officer, resolute and skilful as a practical Navigator, competent and conscientious as a Staff Navigator, with sound judgement and common sense above his years. A most likeable personality, popular with his colleagues, NCOs and men. Well fitted to hold a Squadron Leader post." (G/C G.F.K. Donaldson, 1 August 1944, when Meyer was Wing Navigation Officer to No.177 Wing. Form noted he had joined No.177 Wing on 1 February 1944; assessment covered period 1 February to 1 August 1944; statement was that he had flown 1,053 hours, 240 in previous six months.).

"This officer has been at No.6 OTU for only a brief period but he has made a good first impression. He is most cooperative, is an excellent lecturer and seems to be a first class instructor." (S/L E.C. Kendall, No.6 OTU, Comox, 4 February 1945).

Training: Interviewed by F/O P.O. Gadbois, 19 August 1940, who wrote: "Danish citizen. Very quick, intelligent. Smart appearance, very anxious. Above average, athletic type, polite and refined. Highly educated. Very recommendable."

Course at No.1 ITS was 15 January to 3 February 1941. Courses in Mathematics (93/100), Armament, practical and oral (88/100), Signals (95/100), Drill (93/100), Law and Discipline (84/100). Placed ninth in a class of 37. "Excellent Observer material; recommended for a commission. Keen, alert with plenty of dash. Steady and methodical. Bachelor of Science.” (W/C G.S. O’Brian, 7 February 1941).

Course at No.1 AOS was 3 February to 27 April 1941. Flew in Anson aircraft (28 hours 30 minutes as first navigator by day, 30 hours ten minutes as second navigator by day; three hours ten minutes as first navigator by night; three hours 25 minutes as second navigator by night). In air work described as “Exceptional - 4th out of 40. Very capable, wide awake man in the air, exceptionally neat and accurate logs.” Ground school courses and marks were DR Plotting (139/150, DR and DF written (158/200), Compasses and Instruments (116/150), Signals (85/100), Maps and Charts (55/100), Meteorology (69/100), Photography (83/100), Reconnaissance (50/100). In Ground School he was 22nd in a course of 40. “Above average; very capable; catches on quickly. Ground work is better than marks indicate. Got careless around exam time.”

Course at No.1 BGS, 28 April to 9 June 1941. Flew in Fairey Battle aircraft (15 hours 35 minutes on bombing, eight hours 40 minutes on gunner, all by day). Placed 21st in a class of 37, but G/C G.E. Wait wrote of him, “As class leader his industry and cooperation set a fine example. While his marks were average, his outstanding qualities of leadership and his sense of responsibility fit him for commissioned rank.”

Course at No.1 ANS was 9 June to 7 July 1941. Flew six hours ten minutes as first navigator by day, nine hours as second navigator by day, eight hours five minutes as first navigator by night, nine hours 25 minutes as second navigator by night. Air work described as “Conscientious hard worker. Will improve with experience. Turns out very neat, accurate charts and logs.” Ground school assessment was as follows: “Has difficulty grasping new subjects, but when understood knows how to apply them. Good student, works hard and rapidly.”

MEYERS, P/O Jacques W. (J96537) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.10 Squadron (AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas") - Award effective 28 December 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 155/46 dated 15 February 1946. Born in Chicago, Illinois, 22 August 1918. Home in Winnipeg (clerk); enlisted there 18 July 1940. To Trenton, 20 August 1940. To No.2 ITS, 31 August 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 26 October 1940; posted next day to No.2 AOS; graduated 19 January 1941 when posted to No.2 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 2 March 1941 when posted to No.1 ANS; graduated 12 April 1941; posted that date to CPR (i.e. Ferry Command). Departed Montreal 12 May 1941 aboard Hudson AM710; departed Gander, Newfoundland, 16 May 1941. Shot down as a Sergeant and taken prisoner, 16 August 1941 while with No.10 Squadron. Promoted WO2, 1 June 1942. Promoted WO1, 1 December 1942. Commissioned May 1945 with effect from 1 December 1943 and promoted Flight Lieutenant with effect from 1 June 1944. Repatriated to Canada on 8 July 1945; released 27 September 1945 Medal presented 13 September 1947. RCAF photo PL-44428 (ex UK-22013 dated 7 June 1943) shows him with another ex-POW, F/O J.A. Armstrong (Winnipeg) receiving fresh clothes following liberation; caption says he was in Stalag 4B, Muhlburg. No citation, but honours card at DHist states that he was a Flight Lieutenant in January 1946. States that he became "man of confidence" for over 9,000 POWs at Stalag IVB for nearly two years. Elected by men to represent them in dealing with Germans, and responsible to British authorities for administration and discipline of POWs and distributing of Red Cross parcels, etc. Camp was located near Dresden on banks of the Elbe near spot where Americans and Russians met in 1945. In 1946 he was working in advertising department of a Winnipeg department store. A brother, Melvin, was shot down and killed 27 June 1943 with No.427 Squadron. The DHist card also gives the following statement which appears to be close to an official citation.

For distinguished service while a prisoner of war.

At Stalag IVB, Warrant Officer Meyers fulfilled an exceptionally difficult task with outstanding efficiency. In spite of threats, he was always resilient in complaining to the Germans and in attempting to obtain betterment of the living conditions for the prisoners of war. He invariably proved himself thorough and capable and worked continuously for the benefit of the camp for eighteen months.

NOTE: Public Records Office Air 2/9104 deals with awards to former prisoners of war. It includes many brief testimonials to Meyers (and one letter from an officer complaining that Meyers did not support escape attempts to the point that he was almost a "collaborator"). The balance of opinion was clearly in his favour. The following statement was prepared by Warrant Officer R.P. Mogg, RAF, "Late Adjutant Luftwaffe 6 and Stalag 357" respecting "J96537 P/O Jack Washington Meyers, RCAF, formerly R59567 Warrant Officer."

I would like to draw particular attention to the splendid work of this Warrant Officer during his period of imprisonment.

While he was with me at Stalags Luft 3 and Luft 6 he played an extremely important part in camp life, particularly in the sporting side of the camp. He was instrumental in getting basketball, ice hockey and a number of other sports going.

At the end of July 1943, Warrant Officer Meyers was posted away from Stalag Luft 6. I had no close contact with him after this date but I heard of the good work he was doing from a number of sources and make a report herewith.

After leaving Luft 6, Warrant Officer Meyers travelled to Luft I, Stalag 7A and finally to Stalag 4B where he remained until he was liberated. On arrival he found 75 newly captured airmen of the Royal and Dominion Air Forces in the camp and was asked by them to take over the organization as far as they were concerned. This he did in a most excellent manner. With the fall of Italy prisoners of all services began to flow into 4B, and by the end of 1943 there were some 20,000 Allied prisoners in the camp, 1,500 of them being airmen and airborne troops as the Germans insisted on treating air troops as members of the RAF; 9,000 Army Non-Commissioned Officers remained in the camp with the airmen while the rest of the 20,000 of the rank of Corporal and below were despatched by the Germans to working parties in the area. All this entailed a considerable amount of work and for a time it was done by Warrant Officer Meyers in conjunction with an Army camp leader.

In February 1944, the good work of Warrant Officer Meyers was recognized when the whole camp, British and American Army and Air Force, elected him as chief Man of Confidence. He then took over the administration of the whole camp which was by then divided into four separate compounds. After D Day there was another great influx of British and American prisoners and by this time the administration of Warrant Officer Meyers had complete control of internal affairs so that newly arrived prisoners were deloused, fed and housed as rapidly as possible.

The Ardennes offensive in December 1944 brought many more men to the camp and the strength increased to over 13,000. Conditions at Stalag 4B were extremely bad. Up to the end of 1944 the Germans attempted to treat British and American prisoners in the same manner as they had treated the Russians. An example of this was an order which attempted to force all British Non-Commissioned Officers to salute German Non-Commissioned Officers. This order was not carried out and continued protests were made by Warrant Officer Meyers in the face of threats from the enemy. Eventually, the Germans had to relax and by the beginning of 1945 the prisoners had things much more their own way. This was due mainly to the untiring efforts of Warrant Officer Meyers.

In the normal life of the camp, Warrant Officer Meyers was instrumental in getting sport, recreation and education functioning. He also played a great part in stimulating the work of the Escape Committee and in assisting escapes so that the enemy were always in trouble due to these activities.

Throughout his imprisonment Warrant Officer Meyers measured up to the standards and traditions of his service and was an inspiration to every prisoner in the camp.

NOTE: Canadian Army file 54-27-94-56, "Honours and Awards - Prisoners of War - Northwest Europe", in National Archives of Canada, RG.24 Volume 2249 has a letter from Brigadier Marcel Noel to Air Member for Personnel (and particularly S/L J.A. Vila) dated 8 November 1945 mentions him, calling him "Snowy" Meyers and stating in part:

In a camp tenanted mainly by British and Americans, Meyers was re-elected time and again as "Man of Confidence", a liaison appointment as representative of 15,000 PWs, dealing with the Germans. This post placed Meyers in a position to be of great assistance to his fellow PWs, and the fact that he was re-elected several times by his fellows is sufficient indication of his usefulness.

It was ascertained that there were in the camp a number of Warrant Officers (British and American) senior to Meyers who would normally have been appointed on seniority alone, particularly as the voting power lay in the hands of the other nationals.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his being shot down. Whitley V, Z6794 (ZA-C), No.10 Squadron, target Cologne, 16/17 August 1941. This was one of three No.10 Squadron Whitleys lost on this operation; the others were Z6586 and Z6805. Airborne 2209 hours, 16 August 1941 from Leeming. From later de-briefings, it appears that four of the crew baled out, leaving Sergeant E.H. Lager in his cockpit to keep the Whitley stable for the evacuation. Unable to vacate his seat he attempted a crash-landing and was killed in the process. The parachute of Sergeant V/Y/H. Sewell (RCAF) failed to deploy and he fell to his death. Others in crew were Sergeant S.S.Shapiro, RCAF (POW), Sergeant J.W.Meyers, RCAF (POW), Sergeant J.E.Fulkerson, RCAF (POW).

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire based on interview of 28 May 1945; he stated he had flown ten sorties as Observer (navigator).

We took off from Leeming at 2200 hours for our target, Cologne. Due to change in wind and the fact that the captain handed over the controls to the second pilot we were 20 minutes late on arriving at the target. We encountered very heavy flak all the way to the target and amidst flak dropped our bombs. We were at 14,000 feet when flak came again, caught us as the pilot in his evasive action put the kite in a vertical position and both engines cut. He dived to 4,000 feet before the engines came on. At this point we were hit heavy by light flak and fires were starting in the fuselage and wings. After attempts to put out fire and on orders of the captain, I baled out. The spot was Moers, Germany and I hit the ground 1.38 on August 17, 1941. In my opinion we caught it from our lateness on the target.

MEYERS, FS John Reuben Leonard (R94804) - British Empire Medal - Station Fort Nelson - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born 2 June 1897 at Stillwater, Minnesota, 2 June 1897. Trained as a mechanic before war. Home in Midale, Saskatchewan; enlisted in Regina, 20 March 1941 as Aero Engine Mechanic and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To Technical Training School, 9 May 1941. Promoted AC1, 13 September 1941. To No.11 SFTS, 17 September 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 January 1942. Promoted Corporal, 1 October 1942. To Western Air Command, 13 March 1943. Reclassified as Diesel Fitter, 17 April 1943. To Northwest Staging Route, 15 May 1943. To No.4 Staging Unit, 14 June 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 1 November 1943. To No.3 Staging Unit, 6 April 1944. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 4 December 1944. To Northwest Air Command, 28 May 1945. Promoted WO2, 1 March 1946. Reverted to Sergeant, 1 December 1946. Promoted WO2, 2 December 1946. Discharged 29 April 1947. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Volume 59, file 190-I, dossier 7) has citation.

This non-commissioned officer has shown unusual devotion to duty in his untiring efforts to further the war effort by carrying out his duties diligently and efficiently under the most trying circumstances. It is to such non-commissioned officers as Flight Sergeant Meyers who, in the early days of construction and organization of the North West Staging Route when personnel were scarce, frequently carried out the work of several men that is owed the success of the North West Staging Route as it is today. By his efforts, unflagging zeal and devoted service he has made a valuable contribution to the successful flying operations in North West Air Command.

MICHAEL, P/O Frances Edward (C86456) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.424 Squadron - Award effective 4 November 1944 as per London Gazette dated 17 November 1944 and AFRO 239/45 dated 9 February 1945. Born 3 October 1919 in Calgary; home in Gleichen, Alberta. Served five months in Royal Canadian Artillery. Enlisted in RCAF at Calgary, 10 June 1940 as Airframe Mechanic. To Technical Training School, St. Thomas, 24 July 1940. Promoted AC1, 30 November 1940. To No.7 SFTS, 4 December 1940. Promoted LAC, 1 July 1941. To "Y" Depot, 16 November 1942. To RAF overseas, 10 December 1942. Promoted Sergeant, 14 August 1943 on remuster to Flight Engineer. Commissioned 2 March 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 2 September 1944. Repatriated 2 August 1945. Retired 27 September 1945. Medal presented 9 July 1949. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.2609 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 15 August 1944 when he had flown 33 sorties (197 hours 15 minutes) from 2 September 1943 to 3 August 1944. Recommendation gives name as Frank Edward.

Pilot Officer Michael has completed between thirty and forty operational sorties over many of the most heavily defended enemy targets in the capacity of Flight Engineer. His knowledge and skill has been a great source of comfort and his quiet efficiency has created confidence in all members of his crew. He has accepted responsibility eagerly and has acted in the capacity of Deputy Section Leader on many occasions. His splendid record both in the air and on the ground has been an outstanding example to all on the squadron.

This Senior NCO has been employed as the NCO in charge Repair and Inspection Squadron, Leeming. Due to the exigencies of the Service, Flight Sergeant Michael has stayed with his men long after normal working hours. Quite often it has been necessary for him to stay the whole night with his crews so that the maximum number of aircraft may be serviceable for an operational sortie. He has the full confidence of his superior officer and the support of all the airmen under his jurisdiction. He has proven a bulwark of strength in his Section, achieving outstanding results due to the ready response the airmen gave to his leadership. His quiet, efficient and steady characteristics mark him as an exceptional Senior NCO, well deserving of recognition to his contribution to ultimate victory.

This young Canadian officer has now completed his first operational tour consisting of 30 sorties involving 200.30 flying hours against the enemy as captain of a Lancaster bomber. This enthusiastic and gallant captain has carried out attacks on a wide number of targets throughout the Reich such as Politz, Chemnitz, Mannheim, Essen, Merseburg, Nuremburg and Plauen.

In the face of the heaviest flak and fighter defences or in overcoming the most severe winter weather the cheerfulness and determination of this courageous officer was an inspiring example. He led his crew with a quiet efficiency and confidence which inspired their highest sense of duty and morale.

No matter how arduous the battle over the target, he pressed home his attacks with the utmost bravery and determination to ensure a successful completion of each attack. Such gallantry, efficiency and fine leadership, combined with skilful pilotage, well merit the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

To No.5 Air Division, Victoria, 17 October 1960 for duty at Esquimalt and Executive Assistant to Air Commodore G.C. Truscott. To Maritime Headquarters Pacific, 8 August 1963. Retired 9 November 1964. Medal sent by registered mail, 25 November 1948. Died in Victoria, 18 September 1970 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. No citation in Canadian sources. Public Records Office Air 2/9019 has recommendation drafted when he had flown 873 hours of which 230 were in previous six months.

This officer has been outstanding as a pilot and has fulfilled the duties of deputy flight commander efficiently and conscientiously. He has set a very high standard in airmanship and has excelled in flying in adverse weather conditions. Flying Officer Mick has inspired confidence in all who have flown with him, particularly aircrew personnel under training.

Notes: On repatriation to Canada, 6 March 1945, he stated he had flown 857 hours 40 minutes (all non-operational) overseas as staff pilot (64.00 on Oxfords, 783.40 on Ansons).

Course taken at Central Flying School, 18 June to 5 September 1945. Course involved 62.40 day solo on single engine elementary aircraft, 30.50 day dual on single engine aircraft; 9.30 day dual, 2.00 night dual on solo on single engine advanced trainer, 12.00 day solo and 4.00 night solo on single engine advanced trainer; 4.50 day dual and 7.30 on day solo, twin-engined advanced trainer. "A very good pilot with a good knowledge of sequences." (F/O I.A. Hare). Tested on 5 September 1945 on Cornell and Harvard when assessed under following headings: Sequence - "Just average"; Voice - "Clear"; Manner - "Pleasant"; Ability to impart knowledge - "Average"; Ability as pilot - "Above average"; Remarks - "Has the ability to become a good instructor but must improve general knowledge and organization of briefing." (S/L L McLeod, Examining Officer and W/C D.J. Brooker, 21 September 1945).

Courses taken following No.2 (M) OTU training were listed as follows - Julie Training (Naval Air Station, North Island, California, February-March 1959), Joint Anti-Submarine School, Londonderry (April-May 1959) and P2V-7 conversion course (Summerside, September 1958).

Selected Assessments: "A definite improvement in instructional ability has been displayed by Flying Officer Mick in the past three months. He appears to be more sure of himself and is now considered to be an asset to the unit. Flying Officer Mick is keen and sports and takes an active interest in softball, golf, etc. He takes an active interest in mess activities, is a keen bridge player, and his social conduct is beyond reproach. Flying Officer Mick enjoys a happy family life and his financial affairs appear to be secure. // Flying Officer Mick is a good lecturer, and if his instructional ability continues to improve, it is considered that he would be an asset to any training unit." (F/L E.R.B. Gray, No.4 FTS, Calgary, January 1953).

"Flight Lieutenant Mick was employed at No.2 Personnel Selection Unit (Officers) for more than three years as an aircrew assessor. During this time he worked for three different officers who all considered him to be one of their best men. He was a capable and methodical officer and although somewhat lackadaisical, could be relied upon to organize and produce when required. I cannot recall an occasion when he was assigned a job whether as editor of the station newspaper or as an ALCO that the task was not completed to the satisfaction of all concerned. He was a regular supporter of station functions and was always amongst the first to complete his flying requirements. I shall be very surprised if he is other than a welcome addition to Maritime Air Command." (S/L J.H. Phillips, Station London, 19 February 1957).

"Flight Lieutenant Mick was selected as captain of the 407 Squadron Training Analysis and Tactics crew because of the ability, energy, aggressiveness and maturity he has displayed during the previous two and one-half years on the squadron. The selection proved to be correct in that this officer has continued to demonstrate these attributes. Flight Lieutenant Mick should do extremely well in his new position as Aide to the Deputy Commander Maritime Pacific." (S/L R/G.P. Chisholm, No.407 Squadron, Comox, 27 September 1960). To this, W/C J.C. McCarthy (Commanding Officer, No.407 Squadron) added on 6 October 1960, "A mature and capable officer possessing a wealth of service knowledge and experience. Flight Lieutenant Mick has done a commendable job as a Maritime Captain and is capable of assuming the responsibilities of a higher rank."

"Flight Lieutenant Mick served as a pilot in 407 Squadron when I was in command and for the last three months has been on the same staff at Esquimalt. // Flight Lieutenant Mick is an above average officer in every respect. He is an excellent pilot and he has displayed, as captain of maritime crews, a very high sense of responsibility and an energetic approach to any assigned tasks. In the three months he has been executive assistant to the Commander, 5 Air Division, Flight Lieutenant Mick has demonstrated that he can be firm in his dealings with civilian and service personnel and still be tactful and discreet. His obvious sincerity and self-confidence creates an immediate good impression. // This officer is interested in sports and takes an active part in social activities. His family and financial affairs are beyond reproach. Flight Lieutenant Mick is highly recommended for promotion." (W/C W.D. Foster, RCAF Component Esquimalt, 12 January 1961).

Anderson (Woodstock), and F/L H.J. Jennings (DFC, Toronto).

Flight Lieutenant Middlemass has taken part in many attacks on the enemy's most heavily defended targets. He has consistently proved himself to be a highly skilful navigator while his unflinching courage and determination when under fire have set a magnificent example.

Document DHH 79/507 has a brief Escaper report notes his capture on 19 November 1942 and states:

Baled out on bombing raid near Turin. Ordered to do so by the Captain.
Rounded up by Italians and taken to Camp. Broke camp 12th September [1943] and made own way slowly down the line remaining in the hills for some time.

He had been held in Camp PG.78. The report noted that some 2,400 persons had escaped the camp and about 700 had been recaptured.

MIDDLEMISS, F/L Robert George (J15958) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.403 Squadron - Award effective 12 May 1944 as per London Gazette dated 19 May 1944 and AFRO 1380/44 dated 30 June 1944. Much of what follows, including quotations, are from a biography he prepared when appointed Honorary Colonel of No.427 Squadron. Born in Montreal, 30 July 1920; home there; educated at Commercial High School of Montreal. Early in 1940 he approached the RCAF but was told that he would be called when an opening came. On 12 July 1940 he joined 3rd Canadian Motorcycle Regiment, Canadian Active Service Force. Called for RCAF service, enlisted in Montreal, 14 September 1940. Reported to No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto, 17 September 1940 ("oufitted with uniforms, drill and route marches, medicals and inoculations). Guard duty at No.5 (BR) Squadron, North Sydney, 8 October to 13 November 1940 ("guarded the hangar, fuel and ammunition dumps. My first flight was in a Stranraer aircraft.") Posted to No.1 ITS, Toronto, 14 November 1940. Subjects were navigation, mathematics, Morse code, Air Force regulations, physical training, drill and Link Trainer; graduated 21 December 1940 and posted next day to No.13 EFTS, St. Eugene, Ontario where he flew Fleet Finch aircraft (27.45 hours dual, 25.05 solo. Graduated 10 February 1941 and posted to No.9 SFTS, Summerside; Harvard aircraft, flying 47.30 dual and 40.35 solo. Graduated 3 May 1941. Further trained at No.57 OTU, Hawarden, Cheshire, 2 July to 10 August 1941 (Master aircraft, 2.35 dual and 5.10 solo; Spitfire aircraft, 35.55 hours). Served with No.145 Squadron, Catterick, Yorkshire, 11 August to 19 September 1941 ("Flew Mark II Spitfires and gained operational experience. Carried out operational flights protecting convoys in the North Sea and Air Defence patrols in the area.") With No.41 Squadron, Merston and Satellite West Hampnett, 20 September 1941 to 1 April 1942 ("Flew Spitfire Mk. V. Operations consisted of convoy patrols in the English Channel, Fighter Sweeps, Rhubarbs, Bomber escorts. Air Defence patrols in 11 Group Sector including defence against low flying fighter-bomber attacks.") . With No.403

Squadron, 28 April to 11 May 1942, North Weald and South End, Essex ("Squadron required a number of operational experienced pilots to help rebuild the squadron after recent losses.") With No.249 Squadron, Takali, Malta, 3 June to 1 August 1942, arriving after fly-off from HMS Eagle (Operation STYLE, when four of 31 aircraft were shot down by Bf.109s). Victories as listed; shot down and wounded on 7 July 1942. At No.52 OTU, Aston Down, 9-23 September 1942 following recuperation in hospital. With No.53 OTU, Llandow, Wales, 23 September 1942 to 19 April 1943 ("We trained recently graduated pilots on Master and Spitfire aircraft; this consisted of checking pilots out on Spitfire aircraft, formation flying, gunnery, tactics and aircraft recognition.") With No.130 Squadron, Drem, Scotland and Ballyhalbert, Ireland, 19 April to 9 May 1943 ("Flew Spitfire Mk. IX aircraft. The aim was to sharpen our operational skills before returning to an operational squadron in the South."). At AFHQ, 1 May 1946 to 1 June 1948 ("AMSO/DOE spent one year preparing amending Kings Rules and Regulations and preparing submissions for the Governor-General in Council. The second year was with AMOT/DADO as Fighter Operations Officer. During my stay I ferried four Mustang aircraft to Gimli; these were acquired from the USAF and I prepared a full report on their condition on my return.") At RAF Central Fighter Establishment, West Raynham, Norfolk, 2 June 1948 to 13 June 1950 ("I was the first RCAF Exchange Officer posted to this unit. CFE was the home of the Day Fighter Leaders Course, Night Fighter Leaders Course and Air Fighting Development Squadron. AFDS developed and tested operational procedures for fighter squadrons of the RAF. Flew Vampire and Meteor aircraft".) From 14 June to 14 December 1950 he was with No.421 Squadron, Chatham, New Brunswick ("I was posted in as 'B' Flight Commander. Flew Harvard and Vampire aircraft. In December the squadron was to move to Odiham, England, and having just spent two years overseas I was moved to a Unit on base.") From 14 December 1950 to 18 March 1951 he was with No.1 (Fighter) OTU, Chatham ("Posted as a Flight Commander to train newly graduated pilots from Service Flying School to jet aircraft. This course on graduation was to form 441 Squadron at St. Hubert. Flew Harvard and Vampire aircraft.") On strength of No.441 Squadron, St. Hubert, 18 March to 29 November 1951 ("Flew T-33 and Sabre aircraft. I was posted in as a Flight Commander. While with the squadron I was sent to Central Experimental and Proving Establishment, Ottawa to check out in the new all-Canadian CF-100 All Weather Fighter, then to take it across Canada and demonstrate it to RCAF bases and public air shows. On my second flight a cracked main spar was discovered, grounding the aircraft and delaying the aircraft entering Service for six months. On November 14th I was promoted to Squadron Leader.") From 29 November 1951 to 26 September 1953 he was with No.421 Squadron, initially at St. Hubert ("Took command of the newly formed squadron. Flew T-33 and Sabre aircraft. From 22 June to 7 December 1962 at No.3 Strike/Reconnaissance Operational Training Unit, Cold Lake, Alberta ("Flew T-33 and CF-104 Starfighter aircraft. The 25 pilots completed the course but on December 8th, AFHQ divided the group into two Squadrons - 13 pilots to form 427 Strike/Attack Squadron and the other twelve plus an instructor to follow several months later as 434 Squadron.") From 8 December 1962 to 19 June 1964 he was overseas again; ("427 Strike/Attack Squadron, 3 Wing, Zweibrucken, Germany. Flying progressed smoothly along with the necessary training required by all sections on the Base. It was necessary for us to become fully operational and ready to pass the Tactical Evaluation Requirements for the Wing to be considered fully operational. On returning from Christmas leave in England to 1 Wing, Marville, France, in a Bristol Freighter aircraft, on the approach in bad weather, crashed short of the runway. All aircrew and passengers, including my wife, were killed with the exception of a crew member, my daughter and myself. After recuperating in hospital I was repatriated to Canada.") From 20 June 1964 to 7 July 1965 at

AFHQ (“VCAS/COPS/DADO and placed in charge of Fighter Operations.”) From 29 July 1965 to 27 April 1967 he was Commanding Officer, No.6 Strike/Reconnaissance OTU (“On a trip back from vacationing on the west coast and in Calgary, Alberta I suffered a mild heart attack and was hospitalized, and consequently relieved of my Command.”) From 6 August 1967 to 12 November 1968 at NORAD Headquarters, Colorado Springs with the Fighter/Bomber Exercise Branch. On 12 November 1968 his medical category was lowered. With a loss of flying status he requested retirement and was posted back to Ottawa. Final retirement date was 13 June 1969. Died in Barrie, Ontario, 31 July 2013. Chris Shores, Those Other Eagles (London, Grub Street, 2004) provides the following victory list: 10 April 1942, one FW.190 probably destroyed, Boulogne (No.41 Squadron, Spitfire BL405); 27 June 1942, one MC.202 destroyed plus one MC.202 damaged, Malta (No.249 Squadron, Spitfire BR184, coded T-C); 2 July 1942, one Bf.109 destroyed, Malta (No.249 Squadron, Spitfire BR295, coded T-H); 4 July 1942, one Z.1007 destroyed, shared with another pilot, Malta (No.249 Squadron, Spitfire BR295, coded T-H); 12 July 1943, one Bf.109 damaged, Caudebec area (No.403 Squadron, Spitfire LZ839); 23 August 1943, one FW.190 damaged, Gosnay area (No.403 Squadron, Spitfire MA585). Appointed Honorary Colonel, No.427 (Tactical Helicopter) Squadron, 31 October 2003 (term to run to 30 October 2006). RCAF photo PL-22150 (ex UK-5804 dated 1 November 1943) shows him subscribing to a victory loan “at an advanced Canadian airfield in England.” PL-22151 (ex UK-5805 dated 1 November 1943) shows him with Flying Officer Don Stewart of Toronto (squadron adjutant) as he completes victory bond purchase.

This officer has completed two tours of operational duty and has completed sorties both from Malta and the United Kingdom. He has destroyed three enemy aircraft and damaged others. His standard of leadership as a section leader and flight commander has always been high and he has invariably shown outstanding courage.

Public Record Office Air 2/9626 has recommendation drafted 12 March 1944 by S/L R.A. Buckham, noting he had flown 140 sorties (215 hours ten minutes).

The above-mentioned officer has completed two tours of operations in Fighter Command. In his first tour he completed 23 sorties in England and 18 in Malta. He was wounded in Malta and returned to England. In his second tour he completed 99 sorties over enemy territory. He has destroyed three enemy aircraft and damaged five others. His leadership as a section and flight commander has been of a very high standard, and he has been an excellent example to the pilots under his command.

G/C W.R. MacBrien added his remarks the same day:

Flight Lieutenant Middlemiss has completed two tours of Fighter Operations and throughout has displayed the greatest keenness and ability as a fighter pilot. He has been wounded and has destroyed three enemy aircraft, damaging a further five. I consider that his efforts in Malta and in England merit the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

This recommendation was accompanied by an exceptionally detailed listing of his sorties, as follows:

NOTE: RCAF file 821-4-55 (National Archives of Canada RG. 24 Volume 17797) deals with McKee Trophy recommendations. About April 1956 he was recommended for the McKee Trophy by W/C G.J.J. Edwards. He was then a Squadron Leader with No. 1 Overseas Ferry Unit. Although not approved, the document is interesting for his postwar career, reading thus:

Squadron Leader Middlemiss, Commanding Officer, No.1 Overseas Ferry Unit, has made an outstanding contribution to Canadian aviation in the development of fast and efficient delivery of single engined aircraft to NATO forces in Europe.

During the past 2 ½ years, Squadron Leader Middlemiss's unit has ferried more than 500 single engined jet aircraft over the North Atlantic ferry route without the loss of a single life. The fine record of Operation Random reflects highly on the direction and example set by the Officer Commanding.

As a result of the experience gained on Random operations a new concept of fighter replacement supply is now evident. The latest jet fighter aircraft can now be delivered in an operational state to NATO squadrons within a matter of hours after take-off from bases on this continent. The energy and sound operational planning that Squadron Leader Middlemiss has displayed in organising and developing this overseas ferry supply route is considered an important contribution to the progress of Canadian aviation.

To No.4 SFTS (guard), 20 December 1941. To No.7 ITS, 15 March 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 8 May 1942 but not posted to No.2 EFTS until 6 June 1942; graduated 1 August 1942 when posted to No.5 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 20 November 1942. To "Y" Depot, 4 December 1942. To RAF overseas, 10 December 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 20 May 1943. Commissioned 7 December 1943. Promoted Flying Officer and Flight Lieutenant, 7 January 1944. Repatriated 23 July 1945. Retired 10 August 1945. Medal presented 6 November 1948. Died at Invermere, British Columbia, 30 November 1999 as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of November/December 2000. No citation other than "completed... many successful operations against the enemy in which [he has] displayed high skill, fortitude and devotion to duty." Public Records Office Air 2/8780 has recommendation dated 25 February 1944 when he had flown 19 sorties (136 hours) as follows:

22 October 1943 - Kassel
3 November 1943 - Dusseldorf
21 November 1943 - Berlin
22 November 1943 - Berlin
26 November 1943 - Berlin
3 December 1943 - Berlin
16 December 1943 - Berlin

20 December 1943 - Frankfurt
23 December 1943 - Berlin
29 December 1943 - Berlin
2 January 1944 - Berlin
5 January 1944 - Stettin
27 January 1944 - Berlin
28 January 1944 - Berlin
30 January 1944 - Berlin
15 February 1944 - Berlin
19 February 1944 - Leipzig
24 February 1944 - Schweinfurt

This officer is the Canadian captain of a Lancaster aircrew and has completed 19 sorties comprising 136 hours of operational flying. He has a fine record of achievement, having attacked Berlin no less than twelve times, with a cool and calm deliberation and a confident and capable crew. Other targets which he has attacked include Hanover, Kassel, Dusseldorf and Leipzig.

This officer has continually inspired his crew with his own calm confidence and has made them into one of the most reliable and efficient fighting units. He invariably approaches each ordered task with the same steady, unruffled determination and his most outstanding quality is his capacity for making each sortie a most successful one.

An excellent leader, he is determined to let nothing put him off his task and that outlook is evident in all his actions. As a Captain he has the complete confidence of his crew and has shown to the remainder of the squadron a magnificent example. His continual gallantry and persistence deserve the highest praise and I unhesitatingly recommend him for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MIDDLETON, F/L Allan Henry (J13604) - Air Force Cross - No.13 SFTS - Award effective 21 April 1945 as per London Gazette dated 24 April 1945 and AFRO 802/45 dated 11 May 1945. Born in Brighton, England, 8 June 1919. Educated in St. James, Manitoba. Enlisted in Winnipeg, 29 June 1940. Trained at No.4 ITS (graduated and promoted LAC, 27 February 1941), No.5 EFTS (graduated 24 April 1942) and No.14 SFTS (graduated and commissioned, 28 August 1942). Posted from No.1 Flying Instructor School to No.13 SFTS, St. Hubert, 14 November 1942. Flying accident (no details), 27 November 1942, Promoted Flying Officer, 28 February 1943. To No.14 SFTS, Aylmer, 14 February 1944. To No.13 SFTS (now at North Battleford), 22 February 1944.

Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 June 1944. To No.3 SFTS, Calgary, 1 April 1945. To Staff, Canadian Forces School, Toronto, 29 November 1945. To Station Trenton, 20 June 1946. Remained in postwar RCAF (19764), retaining rank of Flight Lieutenant as of 1 October 1946. To Composite Training School, Toronto, 21 March 1947. To Central Flying School, Trenton, 18 May 1947. To AFHQ, Ottawa, 7 March 1949. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 January 1950. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 July 1953. To RCAF Staff College, 9 September 1953. To Canadian Service College, Royal Roads, 27 June 1954. To Directing Staff, RCAF Staff College, Toronto, 16 August 1956. To Reserve Officer School, St.Jean, Quebec, 8 May 1960. To Air Force College, 1 July 1960. Promoted Group Captain, 16 July 1960. To Training Command Headquarters, Administrative Unit, Winnipeg, 17 July 1960 as Senior Personnel Staff Officer. To National Defence College, Kingston, 7 September 1964. To CFHQ/Career Planning (Director Officer Cadets), 1 August 1965. To Canadian Defence Liaison Staff, Washington, 21 March 1967 and assigned to Colorado Springs, same date. Awarded Centennial Medal, 1 July 1967. To Camp Borden, 10 August 1970 as Base Commander. Retired, 8 June 1974. Died in Delta, British Columbia, 25 February 1982 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. Medal sent by registered mail, 29 December 1948. When recommended he had completed 1,846 flying hours to date, 1,400 hours as instructor, 264 hours in previous six months.

For the past year this officer, as flight commander, has devoted himself to his duties in an exceptional manner and to the exclusion of all other interests. By his efficiency, initiative and tireless energy, this very capable pilot and instructor has achieved splendid results. The splendid example of loyal and devoted service that he has set has been an inspiration to those under his command and their morale has greatly benefitted thereby.

Notes: As of November 1948, while at CFS Trenton, his flying times were reported as follows: Tiger Moth, Fleet and Cornell - 107.00; Lancaster - 39.00; Yale - 26.00; Mitchell - two hours; Vampire, Mustang and Firefly - 4.00; Anson II and V, Crane - 28.00; Harvard II - 2,188 (of which 1,925 was instructing); Expeditor - 38.00 of which nine hours was instructing.

Selected Assessments: "A good keen type of officer and instructor." (F/L R. Molyneaux, No.13 SFTS, 2 March 1943).

"This officer has been doing a very good job as flight commander for the past two months." (F/L G.H. Hackett, No.13 SFTS, St. Hubert, 30 January 1944).

"This officer has carried out the duties of a Flight Commander in a most capable manner and is strongly recommended for promotion to Temporary Flight Lieutenant." (S/L M.A.C. Smith, No.13 SFTS, North Battleford, 20 January 1945).

"Flight Lieutenant Middleton takes a keen interest in unit sports during the summer months; besides his normal flying instructor duties this officer was employed as aircrew leadership officer for the University Air Training pilots' courses. He took a keen interest in this type of work for which he is well suited." (W/C F.R. Sharp, Station Trenton, 20 September 1948).

"A capable, experienced instructor who with further experience on twin engine types will be able to qualify for the highest category." (F/L A.E. Banville, Station Trenton, 26 November 1948).

"I consider Flight Lieutenant Middleton to be an above average officer in all respects. Without any previous experience in personnel work, he has learned rapidly and has proved extremely capable. Prior to transfer to this Headquarters he was employed at Central Flying School, Trenton, and held an A.2 instructor's category. He has also had experience in accounting since at the end of hostilities he was mis-employed in the accounts branch at RCAF Station Trenton. He keeps in flying practice. This officer takes an above average interest in sports and actively engages in hockey, softball, golf, etc." (W/C R.I. Trickett, Directorate of Personnel Careers, 28 September 1949).

"Wing Commander Middleton is an alert, intelligent officer with a tall, athletic, prepossessing appearance. An excellent staff officer, he works rapidly and thoroughly with little or no supervision. He is well liked and respected and one of his strongest qualities is his ability to work smoothly with others. His conscientious and determined approach to problems, together with his clear and logical mind, produce highly effective results. A keen sportsman, Wing Commander Middleton participates actively and skillfully in a number of sports and keeps himself in top physical condition. His family and financial affairs are well managed. Though somewhat shy, his social conduct is well above the average. Wing Commander Middleton is well suited for employment in any staff or field assignment in his present or next higher rank." (G/C G.H. Newsome, RCAF Staff College, 1 March 1959)

"Colonel Middleton, who was transferred from normal staff duty within NORAD to fulfill special responsibilities as one of the five Command Directors in the NORAD Combat Operations Centre (COC), has performed in a truly professional manner during this period. Quick to grasp all of the special and minute details of this critically important job, he qualified himself rapidly and strived always to improve his effectiveness. Over the period he gained exceptional knowledge of his job and in turn, did much to raise the job knowledge level of his entire crew. Training of his people to a high degree of job effectiveness always stood out as one of his prime objectives, and resulted in top notch crew efficiency. Working this closely with his subordinate also made it easy for him to organize and direct their efforts, and therefore the team effort of his crew greatly exceeded the norm." (excerpt from a longer report by Brigadier-General N.L. Magnusson, Deputy Director of Combat Operations, NORAD, 22 May 1969).

"I have been impressed with the quiet competency with which this officer gets on with the task at hand. He runs a large base with little fuss or bother and I regret it was not possible to have him promoted in this his final posting in view of the fact that he has been discharging the dual responsibilities of a one star and a Colonel's position for some time." (Rear Admiral R. St.G. Stephens, Commander Training Command, 25 June 1973).

MIDDLETON, F/L Borden Earl (J7820) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.442 Squadron - Award effective 24 November 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1/45 dated 5 January 1945. Born in Toronto, 25 April 1916; home in Richmond, Virginia although not an American citizen. Educated at Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Enlisted in Toronto, 19 December 1940 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1A Manning Depot, 8 January 1941. To Rockcliffe, 31 January 1941. To No.1 ITS, 22 April 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 25 May 1941 when posted to No.3 EFTS; may have graduated 15 July 1941 but not posted to No.1 SFTS until 27 July 1941; graduated and commissioned, 7 October 1941. To Trenton, 8 October 1941. To No.1 BGS, date uncertain. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 May 1942. To No.1 OTU, 29 October 1942. To No.14 (Fighter) Squadron, 14 July 1943. To "Y" Depot, 12 January 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 20 January 1944. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 February 1944. Repatriated 2 August 1945. To No.4 Release Centre, 12 August 1945. To Technical Training School, 5 December 1945. To No.4 Release Centre again, 24 January 1946. Retired 25 January 1946. Died 1994. Medal presented 22 June 1949. Shown in RCAF photo PL-29088 (ex-UK-9998 dated 25 April 1944).

Flight Lieutenant Middleton has completed very many sorties against the enemy. He has destroyed a large quantity of enemy mechanical transport, often pressing home his attacks in the face of intense enemy anti-aircraft fire. He is extraordinarily keen and daring, deliberately attacking the most heavily defended areas, thus setting a fine example of courage and ability.

NOTE: DHist file 181.009 D.2833 (RG.24 Volume 20632) has recommendation dated 5 October 1944 which bears comparison. As of that date he had flown 142 sorties (173 hours 35 minutes):

This officer has always set an example for his squadron in his keenness and ability. In only a few months of operating he has destroyed and damaged at least 93 MET [Mechanical Enemy Transport]. In order to achieve this score he has always been daring in his attacks on ground targets, pressing home his attacks at all times to point-blank range. In particular from mid-day August 18th 1944 to mid-day August 19th, 1944 he destroyed or damaged 50 MET. He has also damaged one enemy aircraft. His ability to attack targets successfully has contributed largely to the achievements of the squadron and earned its admiration and respect.

To the above, G/C G.R. McGregor added (7 October 1944):

This pilot's record against enemy aircraft is negligible due to the fact that his squadron has made contact with enemy aircraft on very few occasions during his tour. On the other hand, his score against ground targets is most exceptional and the accuracy, determination and dash of the attacks carried out by this pilot are clearly reflected in his cine films. It is further to be noted that at least an equal degree of flying skill and a far greater disregard for the hazards involved are required of the pilot carrying out close attacks on ground as opposed to air targets. For his daring and great success in the former most important fighter function this officer is recommended for an immediate Distinguished Flying Cross.

Joined Army, 1917 (signals) and RNAS, 1918. Trained as a pilot, joining No.80 Squadron in August 1918. Returned to Canada; commissioned in RCAF (Reserve) 21 April 1925 and RCAF (Permanent) 1 April 1926. Obtained pilot's badge, 2 March 1926. Took Army Co-Operation Course in UK (December 1926-May 1927) and attended RAF Staff College (1934). Group Captain as of 25 February 1941. At AFHQ as of 12 November 1941, chiefly involved in Personnel (Postings, etc). Promoted Air Commodore, 3 June 1942. To No.5 Manning Depot, 23 September 1943. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 25 September 1943. Repatriated 1 June 1945. Promoted Air Vice-Marshal, 25 June 1945. Awarded Honourary Czechoslovak wings, 9 April 1942. In post-war air force to 15 March 1950; awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 23 October 1953 (Air Vice-Marshal, retired). Died 23 July 1975. RCAF photo PL-42315 (ex UK-19221 dated 2 March 1945) taken following investiture at Buckingham Palace.

This officer has given many years of loyal service to the Royal Canadian Air Force. He has done outstanding work during the war in various branches of personnel services. By exceptional knowledge, ability and good judgement he has contributed in large measure to the successful solution of many difficult personnel problems. His leadership in personnel administration is outstanding. By his outstanding devotion to duty and the very capable manner in which he has performed his work, this officer has set a splendid example to all those with whom he has been associated and has rendered highly meritorious service to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

19 March 1945 - Vlotho (6.10)
20 March 1945 - Nienburg (5.00)
22 March 1945 - Bremen (4.35)

This NCO has now completed 31 sorties as navigator. His targets included many of the most heavily defended areas including Nuremburg, Munich (2), Hamburg, Bremen and the attack on the Tirpitz. Many have required accurate navigation over very long distances, in some cases far beyond the range of normal navigational aids. An example of this latter type of operation was the attack on the battleship Tirpitz when in spite of an exceptionally long flight he maintained his usual high standard of navigation.

Apart from his normal duties as navigator, Warrant Officer Middleton has frequently been called upon to find a bombing wind in the vicinity of the target, a task only given to a small number of specially picked crews and requiring considerable accuracy. The success of his attacks during special daylight operations have been largely attributable to the accuracy of the winds found.

At all times Warrant Officer Middleton has shown the greatest keenness to operate and has proved himself to be a valuable member of a sound operational crew. His courage, skill and determination in action have been an inspiration to his squadron.

MIDDLETON, F/L (now W/C) Robert Bruce (C874) - Air Force Cross - Test and Development Establishment, Rockcliffe - Award effective 1 January 1943 as per Canada Gazette dated 9 January 1943 and AFRO 55/43 dated 15 January 1943. Born in Fort Francis, Ontario, 5 May 1912; home in Souris, Manitoba. Granted RAF short service commission as Acting Pilot Officer on Probation and posted to RAF Depot, Uxbridge, 16 March 1934. Posted to No.3 Flying Training School, Grantham for flying training, 3 April 1934. Confirmed as Pilot Officer on Probation, 2 September 1934. Posted that date to No.22 (Bomber) Squadron and attached to Base Gosport for torpedo course. Still with No.22 Squadron took instrument flying course, 23 September 1934. Confirmed in rank, 16 March 1935. Another instrument course with No.22 Squadron, 25 November 1935 and returned to unit. Promoted Flying Officer, 2 April 1936. To Reserve of Officers, Class "A", 16 March 1937. Resigned RAF commission, 7 October 1938 on transfer to RCAF Reserve of Officers. With British Overseas Airways Corporation he flew the London-Stavenger route until the invasion of Norway, and then flew London-Stockholm trips. Mobilized in RCAF at Ottawa, 7 October 1940 with rank of Flight Lieutenant. With No.12 (Communication) Squadron as of 10 October 1941. To Rockcliffe, 22 January 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 15 May 1942. Promoted Wing Commander, 15 October 1942. To No.164 Squadron, 22 January 1943. To AFHQ, 31 July 1943. To Rockcliffe, 31 October 1943. To No.168 (Heavy Transport) Squadron, 18 November 1943. To AFHQ, 11 March 1944. To "Y" Depot, 21 September 1944. To United Kingdom, 5 October 1944. Repatriated 16 August 1945. To No.1 Air Command, 20 August 1945. To Rockcliffe, 3 October 1945. Retired 30 October 1945. Citation is misleading; he was with TCA in 1938-1939 (Vancouver routes), but then was employed by Imperial Airways, 1939-1940 on runs to Norway and Sweden. In India, 1944 with G/C C.C. Truscott (liaison on transport operations) and claimed more than two operational transport flights from Akyab and Hathezari to Mandalay; rejoined TCA, March 1946; subsequently head of Air Transport and Reservation Department of Imperial Oil. Died 24 March 1970 in Mexico. RCAF photo PL-922 taken as Flight Lieutenant, 1941. Photo PL-60416 (ex UK-20747 dated 12 April 1945) taken at Mandalay Hill, Burma shows G//C D.S. Patterson, G/C G.G. Truscott and W/C Bruce Middleton.

Flight Lieutenant Middleton resigned from Imperial Airways on 7 October 1940, taking a commission with the RCAF. He has served both in Test and Development Establishment and No.12 Communications Squadron between 7 October 1940 and the present. He was attached to RAF Ferry Command from 16 January 1941 to 7 July 1941 and completed four delivery flights to the United Kingdom under severe conditions of weather. He has always displayed zeal and initiative and complete disregard for his own comfort.

This officer is the outstanding test pilot in the Test and Development Establishment at RCAF Station Rockcliffe. He has always displayed exceptional devotion to duty and has always taken the initiative in the testing of new types of aircraft. For his outstanding work and excellent flying record he is very strongly recommended for the award of the Air Force Cross.

The original recommendation was raised on 29 November 1941 by W/C J.L. Hurley and read as follows:

Flight Lieutenant Middleton resigned from Imperial Airways on 7 October 1940, taking a commission with the RCAF. He has served both in Test and Development Establishment and No.12 Communications Squadron between 7 October 1940 and the present. He was attached to RAF Ferry Command from 16 January 1941 to 7 July 1941 and completed four delivery flights to the United Kingdom under severe conditions of weather. Flight Lieutenant Middleton has flown a total of 406.40 hours composed of 208 hours on Atlantic ferry, 81 hours as captain of aircraft on Duke of Kent's tour of Canada and 116 hours in testing of new types of aircraft. He has always displayed zeal and initiative and complete disregard for his own comfort. In view of his outstanding work and excellent flying record, he is recommended for the award of the undersigned [i.e. Air Force Cross].

A Ferry Command report by W/C C.J. Powell, circa 1 September 1941, reads:

This officer was employed at Bermuda on ferry duties to the United Kingdom from January 16th, 1941 to July 7th, 1941, and completed four delivery flights. This officer had most difficult conditions to contend with on his delivery flights and their successful accomplishment was a good tribute to his airmanship. On one occasion it was necessary for him to remain in the air for 24 hours in the vicinity of Bermuda to wait for the passing of a tropical storm.

It was reported (7 April 1942) that he had two brothers in the RAF. These would be D.D.

Middleton (killed in action, 19 July 1940) and F.D. Middleton (POW). Late in 1942 he was pressing for an overseas posting to a bomber squadron.

Selected Assessments: "This officer is an energetic, keen and highly skilled ocean and airline pilot - thorough knowledge of practical Astral and radio navigation as well as meteorologically. Has fine personality." (S/L H.M. Kennedy, OC No.12 Squadron, 12 December 1941). To this, W/C J.L. Hurley (OC Rockcliffe) adds, "Abilities of this officer wasted at present."

"Exceptional ability as a pilot and wide knowledge of flying. Keen, enthusiastic officer who, despite a decided personal preference for operational flying duties, has adapted himself well to staff duties. Inclined to be somewhat 'sweeping' in his ideas, which arises from an enthusiastic nature and a genuine interest in the Service, but he is fundamentally practical and sound. This officer requires further experience in present work but has the natural ability to accept further responsibilities in due course." (G/C .E. Wray. AMAS Division, AFHQ, 17 August 1942).

"Has done an outstanding job in the organization and operation of No.164 Squadron." (G/C P. P. Campbell, EAC HQ, 18 July 1943)

"This officer did an outstanding job in the organization and operation of No.164 Transport Squadron followed by very satisfactory service as Assistant Director, Transportation Wing at DATC at AFHQ. He is now organizing No.168 (Heavy Transport) Squadron for overseas airmail service after which it is planned to have him return to his recent position at AFHQ." (G/C Z.L. Leigh, 18 November 1943).

"Has worked tirelessly with the organization of this new squadron [168]. Qualified airline captain and excellent pilot. All his energies have been directed towards getting this squadron going and he takes no interest in station matters. Functionally responsible to AFHQ." (W/C D.D. Findlay, OC Rockcliffe, 28 December 1943).

MIDDLETON, F/O Robert Sherlock (J88159) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.190 Squadron - Award effective 23 May 1945 as per London Gazette dated 1 June 1945 and AFRO 1219/45 dated 27 July 1945. Born 11 September 1922 in Killarny, Manitoba. Home there; served briefly with Royal Canadian Artillery. Enlisted in Winnipeg, 8 January 1942 and posted to No.5 Manning Depot. To No.3 ITS, 9 May 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 4 July 1942 but not posted to No.19 EFTS until 29 August 1942; graduated 23 October 1942 and posted next day to No.10 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 19 February 1943. To No.34 OTU, 5 March 1943. To "Y" Depot, 12 June 1943. To RAF overseas, 22 June 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 19 August 1943. Commissioned 13 June 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 13 December 1944.

Repatriated 26 September 1945. Retired 5 November 1945. Medal presented 9 November 1946.

Flying Officer Middleton has completed a tour of operational duty which has included seventeen supply dropping missions to France, the Low Countries and Norway, and participation in the airborne landings at Normandy, Arnhem and the Rhine crossing. Throughout, as pilot and captain of aircraft, he has displayed coolness and determination in the face of difficulties. On one occasion during a mission to Arnhem this officer's aircraft was severely damaged and set on fire by enemy action. He succeeded in controlling the fire and after dropping his supplies correctly he flew the crippled aircraft back to base where he executed a masterly landing. At all times Flying Officer Middleton's skill, cheerfulness and imperturbability have inspired the members of his crew with confidence.

Public Record Office Air 2/9087 has recommendation drafted 10 April 1945 when he had flown the 24 sorties (122 hours 45 hours), all on Stirling IV aircraft. Sortie sheet and submission as follows:

11 April 1944 - SOE, France (6.05)
5 June 1944 - D Day, paratroops (3.30)
8 June 1944 - SOE, France (2.25)

14 February 1945 - SAS, Holland (3.35)
2 March 1945 - SOE, Norway (9.45)

24 March 1945 - Operation Varsity, Rhine Crossing (6.00)

7 April 1945 - SAS, Holland (5.10)

This officer has completed a most successful tour of operations which has included 17 supply dropping missions to France, the Low Countries and Norway and participated in the airborne landings at Normandy, Arnhem and the Rhine.

Throughout his tour, he has displayed sterling qualities as a pilot and captain and his coolness and determination in the face of difficulties is most praiseworthy. This was demonstrated on one of his missions to Arnhem when his aircraft was severely damaged and set on fire by enemy action. He succeeded in controlling the fire and after dropping his supplies correctly returned with difficulty to his base where he carried out a masterly landing with a punctured main wheel tyre.

His keenness and competence have made his crew a most useful team and their efforts are a considerable contribution to the success of the squadron.

This was endorsed by the Officer Commanding, Station Great Dunmow (11 April 1945), A/V/M J.R. Scarlett-Streatfield, Air Officer Commanding, No.38 Group (18 April 1945) and Air Marshal Roderic Hill, Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Fighter Command (24 April 1945).

MIDDLETON, F/L Warren Martin (J6220) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.430 Squadron - Award effective 10 July 1945 as per London Gazette dated 24 July 1945 and AFRO 1619/45 dated 19 October 1945. Born 1 October 1918 in Chatham, Ontario; home there or in Fletcher, Ontario (clerk); enlisted in Toronto, 22 October 1940. To "B", 25 November 1940. To No.2 ITS, 3 January 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 21 February 1941 when posted to No.15 EFTS; may have graduated 22 April 1941 but not posted to No.32 SFTS until 4 May 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 15 July 1941. To Trenton, 16 July 1941. To No.16 SFTS, date uncertain. Commissioned 1 July 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 16 July 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 December 1942. Dates of postings overseas and back unclear. Remained in postwar RCAF (26334) and retired after 27 years service with included 3 Wing (Zweibrucken) and command of RCAF unit in Sardinia. Moved to Victoria, 1976 to work for Canada Permanent Trust; retired 1978. Died in Victoria, 1 December 2002. Medal presented 1 April 1949.

This pilot has completed many outstanding tactical and photographic reconnaissance sorties. On all his missions he has produced excellent results regardless of enemy opposition from anti-aircraft defences and fighter aircraft. In April 1945, Flight Lieutenant Middleton, while on tactical reconnaissance duty in the Lunenburg area, destroyed an attacking Focke Wulf 190 while the other aircraft of his section was obtaining information required by the 2nd Army. He has always displayed the utmost keenness and has proved himself a first class leader.

Died in Simcoe, Ontario, 21 March 2008 as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of November/December 2008. Medal presented 5 July 1944.

As captain of aircraft, Flight Lieutenant Midgley has participated in many sorties against very heavily defended targets, including Berlin, Hamburg and Kassel. On one occasion, during an attack against Hanover, his aircraft was heavily hit by anti-aircraft fire. Considerable damage was sustained but, despite this, he continued his mission and bombed the target. On another occasion his aircraft was held by searchlights for some four minutes but, by skilful airmanship, he succeeded in flying clear and completed his task in harassing circumstances. Flight Lieutenant Midgely has displayed skill, courage and devotion to duty.

Died in Burlington, Ontario, 3 August 2003.

Flying Officer Miles has completed many sorties. Although his aircraft has often met fierce opposition, he has always endeavoured to press home his attacks with accuracy. His skilful captaincy and courageous conduct have set an inspiring example.

MILES, S/L Harold Thomas, DFC (J6946) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.408 Squadron - Award effective 10 May 1944 as per London Gazette dated 23 May 1944 and AFRO 1380/44

dated 30 June 1944.

This officer, now on his second tour of operational duty, has taken part in a large number of sorties including attacks against some of the enemy's most distant and heavily defended targets. An outstanding captain of aircraft he has always performed his duties in a cheerful and efficient manner while as a flight commander Squadron Leader Miles has led his formation with determination, skill and courage.

DHH file 181.009 D.1513 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Box 20600) has original recommendation by W/C J.S. Jacobs, 26 December 1943 when he had flown 44 sorties (238 hours). No sortie list:

This officer, as captain of aircraft, has participated in a great number of sorties over heavily defended targets in enemy territory. He has terminated one tour of operations and is well on his way towards completion of his second tour. An extremely capable and reliable pilot, he has always displayed exceptional keenness and devotion to duty. As a Flight Commander, his leadership and the confidence he has inspired in new crews has materially contributed to the success achieved by the squadron.

MILES, G/C Harold Thomas, DFC (J6946) - Mention in Despatches - No.64 Base - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 337/45 dated 23 February 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.2993 (RG.24 Vol.20634) has recommendation for an American Silver Star dated 3 August 1944 when he was Chief Instructor at No.1659 Conversion Unit. It noted that he had flown 52 sorties (277 operational hours). As the American award was not granted, it may be assumed that this recommendation was the basis of his Mention in Despatches.

This officer has completed two tours of operations with Bomber Command. His first tour was carried out in 1942 during which he made 32 sorties. During this period he operated against such targets as Essen, hamburg, Stuttgart, Munich and Nuremburg. Although many times seriously damaged by anti-aircraft fire, his skill and determination on each occasion resulted in a successful landing on an aerodrome. On one sortie he lost one engine over the French coast while en route to Munich. He continued on and successfully bombed the target. On the return trip another engine was put out of action. However, he was able to bring the aircraft back to England on two engines and successfully reached an aerodrome. His keenness was such that after being screened he obtained permission to make one sortie against an Italian target. After a very short period as an instructor he returned and carried out his second tour of operations with No.408 Squadron. During this tour he completed six sorties against Berlin as well as other distant and heavily defended targets such as Hamburg, Stuttgart and Leipzig. At all times he has displayed courage, skill and determination of a high order. He is an exceptional pilot and organizer and has played no small part in the successes achieved by his squadron.

Note: Public Record Office Air 2/4798 has a recommendation raised late in 1943 or early 1944 for an unspecified Russian award. Although not granted, the text is transcribed for the historical record. At the time he was a Squadron Leader with No.408 Squadron.

Acting Squadron Leader Miles has completed 42 sorties, during which he has displayed courage in fighting operations against the enemy.

RCAF Press Release No. 3743 dated 22 January 1944 from: F/O Vic Baker read as follows:

WITH THE RCAF BOMBER GROUP OVERSEAS: -- You are never safe on these operational bombing trips until you have both feet on the ground and the aircraft parked in its dispersal or a hangar.

S/L H.T. "Hal" Miles, DFC, Toronto (8 Idyllwood Avenue) Goose Squadron flight commander, on 14th trip of his second tour, found the trip to Magdeburg very normal, the bombing "bang on" and the return very easy. "Guns tested well over the North Sea, we had no trouble, just a nice trip," said rear-gunner P/O B.D. "Doug" Boynton, DFM, of Abbotsford, B.C.

On the way back, they were diverted to another aerodrome because the landing weather was ruff back at base. At the strange base, there was a heavy cross-wing blowing across the airfield and across the landing runway in use. S/L Miles brought his heavy four-engined Lancaster in for a landing very cautiously but just as she was about to touch down, the tricky wind struck the kite and ruined all chances of preventing the bomber from striking the ground too heavily.

As the aircraft struck the uneven ground, the undercarriage collapsed and the giant Lancaster went sliding along on its belly before coming to an abrupt stop. "I saw something big and black go flashing by my turret in the rear," said P/O Boynton. "It wasn't until we had got out of the kite that I realized that the landing wheel on one side had been wrenched from his oleo leg and tossed backwards through the elevators and past my turret."

No injuries were sustained by anyone but the aircraft had to be written off and returned to the aircraft manufacturers for salvage. Flying with the crew on the second and last of his co-pilot trips before taking his own crew on operations was F/L F.W. Hales of Edmonton (11421-96th Street), former flying instructor at Claresholm, Alberta, SFTS.

Website <http://www.yorkshire-aircraft.co.uk/aircraft/yorkshire/york43> records that on the night of 3-4 July 1943, No.408 Squadron Halifax JD174 was hit by flak during an attack on Cologne. Starboard wing tip damaged. Crew landed it safely at Leeming. Crew were - F/L Harold Thomas Miles, DFC, RCAF (J.6946, captain), F/O John Eugene Marier, RCAF (J.13819, navigator, DFC with No.434 Squadron, 5 April 1945), F/O David Bryson Young, RCAF (J.14819, bomb aimer, DFC, November 1945), Sergeant P. M. Hughes, RAFVR (wireless operator), Sergeant S. C. Shepherd, RCAF (air gunner), Sergeant Benjamin Douglas Boynton, RCAF (R.110387, air gunner, DFC awarded 6 August 1943) and Sergeant Harold Lewis Grayson, RCAF (R.68020, flight engineer, awarded DFC 13 August 1943).

MILES, F/L Willard Fraser (C4153) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Born 7 February 1912. In his teens he landed the job of maritime radio operator. These were the Prohibition years, and "Sparky" soon discovered that the ship's only cargo was booze destined for enterprising American smugglers. Slow Boat on Rum Row, Fraser's autobiographical memoir of his youth in Mission and his years on the rum boats, was published in 1992 (Harbour Publishing). Rum-running earnings financed an electrical engineering degree from the University of Michigan. Home in Vancouver; enlisted there 20 February 1941 and granted rank of Flying Officer, Radio Branch. To RAF Overseas, 6 April 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 March 1943. Radio operator on anti-submarine patrols off the coast of West Africa. His most harrowing wartime experience involved a hungry African crocodile that turned a relaxing swim into an aquatic duel. Repatriated 23 September 1944; to No.2 Technical Support Unit, 10 November 1944. To No.8 Release Centre, 18 July 1945; retired 19 July 1945. Resumed his engineering career. For many years he was the General Manager of International Power & Engineering Corp. (IPEC), and he served as Assistant General Manager (Engineering) of the BC Hydro and Power Authority, working on projects such as the W.A.C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River. Died in Vancouver, 2 November 2011. No citation in AFRO.

MILL, F/L David John (J5091) - Mention in Despatches - No.161 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 1 December 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 183/46 dated 22 February 1946. Note that the RCAF pay card renders his name as John David Mill, although RCAF Gradation List shows him as "D.J. Mill". Born 6 June 1919. Home in Westmount, Quebec; enlisted in Quebec, 21 June 1940. To No.2 ITS, 30 June 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 1 September 1940 although posting to No.4 EFTS was with effect from 30 August 1940. To No.1 ITS, 13 October 1940; to No.1 AOS, 10 November 1940; graduated 2 February 1941 when posted to No.1 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 15 March 1941; posted that date to No.1 ANS; graduated and commissioned, 5 May 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 13 May 1941. To RAF overseas, 14 May 1941. Repatriated 27 March 1942. To Eastern Air Command, 30 April 1942. To No.116 (BR) Squadron, 3 May 1942. To Eastern Air Command Headquarters, 15 July 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. To No.161 (BR) Squadron, 2 August 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 June 1944. To Halifax, 1 June 1945. To No.2 Release Centre, 29 August 1945. Retired 11 September 1945.

This officer has completed a large number of operational flights. He is a navigator of great merit and throughout his tour of duty he has displayed the highest standard of determination and devotion to duty. As Squadron Navigation Leader he has been a constant inspiration to the remainder of the Squadron.

MILLAR, S/L David Dewar (C3576) - Mention in Despatches - No.6 Group Headquarters - Award effective 1 June 1943 as per London Gazette dated 2 June 1943 and AFRO 1247/43 dated 2 July 1943. AFRO gives no unit; No.6 Group Monthly Summary of Operational and Training Activities (June 1943) identifies. Born in Hawksbury, Ontario, 14 February 1909; home in Ottawa; enlisted in Montreal, 11 December 1940 in Aeronautical Engineer Branch (he was a professionally trained engineer). Promoted Flying Officer, 28 February 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 July 1942. Promoted Squadron Leader, 9 November 1942. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 April 1943. Date of overseas posting uncertain but repatriated to Canada, 12 September 1944. To Western Air Command, 16 October 1944. To Sea Island, 26 October 1944. To No.22 Sub-Repair Depot, 30 March 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 11 October 1945. Retired 16 October 1945. No citation. RCAF photo PL-32557 (ex UK-13639 dated 26 August 1944) shows him at time of investiture.

MILLAR, W/C David Dewar (C3576) - Officer, Order of the British Empire - No.6 Group Headquarters (AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas") - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Medal presented 11 August 1944. No citation in Canadian sources. Public Records Office Air 2/9004 has recommended citation.

This officer is the Group Engineer Officer and has taken a conspicuous part in the formation of No.6 Group. His work has been outstanding in that, owing to his efforts, the re-arming and expansion has been carried out with efficiency and the servicing of aircraft has been maintained at a high level. The Group has expanded from six to thirteen squadrons and the re-arming of existing squadrons was a major task, particularly in view of new and inexperienced personnel from Canada taking over from experienced RAF personnel. Wing Commander Millar has at all times had full control of the situation and has performed very valuable work.

MILLAR, F/O James Benjamin (J92066) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.419 Squadron - Award effective 8 September 1945 as per London Gazette dated 25 September 1945 and AFRO 1768/45 dated 23 November 1945. Born 25 December 1923 in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan; home there (store clerk); enlisted in Regina, 12 January 1943. Granted Leave Without Pay until 7 June 1943 when posted to No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon. To No.2 ITS, Regina, 11 July 1943; to No.1 Central Navigation School, Rivers, 21 August 1943; to No.1 Air Gunner Ground Training School, Quebec, 2 October 1943; promoted LAC and posted to No.3 BGS, Macdonald, Manitoba, 12 November 1943; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 23 December 1943 but not posted to "Y" Depot until 14 January 1944. To No.4 Aircrew Graduate Training School, 16 January 1944. To "Y" Depot again, 11 February 1944. Embarked from Halifax, 5 March 1944. Disembarked in Britain, 14 March 1944. To No.82 OTU, 21 March 1944. To No.61 Base, 25 June 1944. Attached to No.1664 Conversion Unit, 1 July to 7 August 1944. To No.419 Squadron, 7 August 1944. . Commissioned 16 October 1944. To No.22 OTU, 3 March 1945. Promoted Flying Officer, 16 April 1945. Repatriated 18 June 1945. To No.8 OTU, 19 June 1945. To Greenwood for Tiger Force, 31 July 1945. To Halifax, 19 September 1945. Retired 23 September 1945. Died in Salmon Arm, British Columbia, 2 May 1993 as per Legion Last Post. Medal presented 18 June 1949. No citation other than "completed... numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1941 (RG.24 Vol.20612) has recommendation by W/C M.E. Ferguson dated 22 March 1945 when he had flown 29 sorties (181 hours 40 minutes), 29 August 1944 to 2 February 1945. Mid-upper gunner.

This Gunner has completed a tour of 29 sorties, 11 of which were daylight, against most of the heavily defended targets in Germany. On many occasions Pilot Officer Millar's experience and attention to duty have resulted in the carrying out of a large number of successful operations against the enemy.

I consider that this officer's skill in the face of danger and his coolness against all odds, fully merits the award of the Non-Immediate D.F.C.

The sortie list (which closely resembles that of F/O Robert Douglas Ronnebeck) was as follows:

29 August 1944 - Stettin (9.55)
6 September 1944 - Emden (4.20)
10 September 1944 - Le Havre (4.30, day)
12 September 1944 - Dortmund (4.50, day)
25 September 1944 - Calais (4.25, day)
26 September 1944 - Calais (3.45)
27 September 1944 - Bottrop (5.30, day)
28 September 1944 - Cap Gris Nez (3.50, day)
4 October 1944 - Bergen (6.15, day)
6 October 1944 - Dortmund (6.05)
9 October 1944 - Bochum (6.30)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (4.50, day)
14 October 1944 - Duisburg (5.40)
19 October 1944 - Stuttgart (7.15)
2 November 1944 - Dusseldorf (6.35)
16 November 1944 - Julich (5.00, day)
18 November 1944 - Munster (5.30, day)
21 November 1944 - Castrop Rauxel (6.35)
30 November 1944 - Duisburg (6.25)

5 December 1944 - Soest (7.25)
28 December 1944 - Opladen (5.50)
30 December 1944 - Cologne (6.10)
7 January 1945 - Munich (8.35)
14 January 1945 - Merseburg (9.25)
16 January 1945 - Zeitz (8.20)
28 January 1945 - Stuttgart (7.15)
1 February 1945 - Ludwigshaven (7.20)
2 February 1945 - Wiesbaden (6.35)

Notes: Application for Operational Wing dated 7 February 1945 stated he had flown 29 sorties (180 hours 30 minutes), 29 August 1944 to 2 February 1945.

Training: Interviewed 12 January 1943 in Regina. "Average type, clean, alert, sincere, dependable, self reliant; keen to qualify for flying duties. Has won Dominion Bronze Medal for shooting, participates in all sports. Should do well."

Attended No.3 BGS, 15 November to 23 December 1943. Fairey Battle aircraft - flew 23 hours ten minutes. On ground spent 15 hours in turret manipulation (fired 1,100 rounds in turrets). Exposed seven films; fired 400 rounds air-to-ground and 3,500 air-to-air (8.7 percent hits). Graded in Guns, Ammunition and Pyrotechnics (215/300), Sighting, written (174/250), Turret, practical (175/200). Aircraft Recognition (138/150) and Signals (80/100). "Above average student, hard worker; reliable; good air gunner type."

MILLARD, WO (now F/O) Robert Syrell (R129923/J85642) - Mention in Despatches - No.15 Squadron - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 625/45 dated 12 April 1945. Born in Aylmer, Ontario, 22 February 1922. Educated there (1928-1935). Grocery store clerk and stock keeper in Aylmer. Enlisted in London, Ontario, 16 January 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay until 31 January 1942 when posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To Trenton, 28 February 1942. To No.6 ITS, 23 May 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 17 July 1942; posted next day to No.1 BGS; graduated 11 September 1942 and posted next day to No.1 AOS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 23 October 1942. To "Y" Depot, 6 November 1942. To RAF overseas, 22 November 1942; disembarked in Britain, 30 November 1942. To No.9 (Observer) AFU, 1 March 1943 (Ansons, 30 hours). To No.26 OTU, 20 April 1943 (Wellingtons, 80 hours). Promoted Flight Sergeant, 23 April 1943. To No.1651 Conversion Unit, 29 July 1943 (Stirlings, 70 hours). To No.15 Squadron, 25 August 1943. Promoted WO2, 23 October 1943. Commissioned 14 March 1944. Reported missing, 15 March 1944; reported interned in Switzerland by 27 March 1944. Reported safe in United Kingdom, 31 December 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 14 September 1944. Repatriated 7 February 1945. Taken on strength of No.1 Composite Training School, Toronto, 18 February 1945 while undergoing treatment at Christie Street Hospital. To No.4 Release Centre, 12 November 1945. Retired 15 November 1945. Died 23 June 1994 in St. Thomas, Ontario. No citation in AFRO.

Reported missing, 15 March 1944 in Lancaster W4355, "A"; crew were 115303 F/L W. Blott (captain), 151161 F/O C. Nabarro (navigator), 1247559 Sergeant G.D. Gill (WOP), E129923 Warrant Officer R.S. Millard (bomb aimer), 1567659 Sergeant W. Forster (mid-upper gunner), 1565303 Sergeant D. Murphy (rear gunner), 1607073 Sergeant G.R. Mattock (flight engineer). Airborne at 1915 from Mildenhall. Letter to next-of-kin stated he had completed nine sorties. Message to RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 20 March 1944 stated he had been admitted to hospital with "severe bullet wound in shoulder and lung slightly affected" but condition was not considered dangerous. The aircraft is described as "shot down over Switzerland" which raises the question as to whether it was shot down by Swiss or German forces. It appears that he baled out of the aircraft, and that damage had been sustained by flak, although one medical summary suggests fighters.

Medical reports state that he was admitted to hospital at Neuchatel with a shrapnel wound in the left upper chest. "He remained semi-conscious for two or three days during which time he knew little of what was going on around him or what treatment he was receiving. It is stated on his documents that no operations were performed nor at any time was chest aspirated. He remained in hospital for nearly four and one-half months, escaping on 23rd December 1944." In Canada, he received extensive medical treatment including removal of a "metallic foreign body" from the left lung on 3 May 1945. On 1 August he went to No.1 Convalescent Hospital. By 17 September 1945 there was consensus that he could be "returned to non-flying duty."

On repatriation form dated 19 January 1945 he confirmed he had flown nine sorties (50 operational hours) and had also flown 195 non-operational hours.

MILLARD, G/C Victor Stephen James (C185) - Officer, Order of the British Empire - Maintenance Command Headquarters - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/45 dated 5 July 1946. Born in Toronto, 20 October 1911; graduated University of Toronto (Bachelor of Applied Science, Mechanical Engineering, 1934). Enlisted in Toronto, 13 June 1935. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 June 1941. Appointed RCAF Supply Liaison Officer to RCAF Overseas Headquarters, 12 December 1941. Repatriated via Rockcliffe, 29 August 1942. To AFHQ, 28 February 1943 as Director of Aircraft Procurement. Also described as having commanded of Technical Spares Requirement Detachment, Dayton, Ohio (possibly before AFHQ assignment). Promoted Group Captain, 1 May 1943. To Headquarters, Maintenance Command (later Air Material Command), 18 September 1945. To No.1 PTU (whatever that is), 14 November 1946. To United Kingdom, November 1946. To AFHQ, Ottawa, 22 May 1947. OBE presented 9 December 1947. Remained in postwar RCAF, attaining rank of Air Commodore, 1 May 1951; awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, November 1953 when he was at AFHQ. To Air Vice-Marshal, July 1963 when he was appointed Comptroller of the RCAF. Died in Orangeville, Ontario, 14 September 2004 as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of March/April 2005.

This officer has occupied many key positions in the Supply Organization of the Royal Canadian Air Force during the war. At any task assigned to him, either at Command, Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters, overseas or in the United States of America, he has always carried out his duties in an energetic and most capable manner. His clear judgement and determination have marked him as an outstanding officer in his branch and has led to his selection for many responsible posts where outstanding knowledge and administrative ability are required. He has always carried out any and all assignments in such a manner as to bring credit upon himself and the Service.

MILLER, F/O Alex Kennedy (C4724) - Air Force Cross - No.6 Repair Depot - Award effective 1 January 1944 as per London Gazette and Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 113/44 dated 21 January 1944. Born 14 July 1906 in New York City, New York (RCAF press release reporting award). Operated Miller's Flying Service in 1930, in Montclair, New Jersey; provided mail and other delivery services by means of an autogyro, as well as listing "Expert Automobile Repairing" and "Aeroplanes Rebuilt & Overhauled" on his business card. Enlisted in Ottawa, 28 March 1941. Promoted Flying Officer, 26 June 1941. To Rockcliffe, 26 November 1941. Posted to No.6 Repair Depot, 31 August 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 October 1944. To No.4 Release Centre, 24 April 1945. Retired 1 May 1945. Moved to East Orange, Vermont where he became a recluse and hoarder; see Wikipedia entry https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Alexander_Kennedy_Miller and New York Times article of 18 August 1996, "A Recluse and His Long-Hidden Trove of Cars", <http://www.nytimes.com/1996/08/18/arts/a-recluse-and-his-long-hidden-trove-of-cars.html>. Died 23 October 1993. See H.A. Halliday, Not in the Face of the Enemy: Canadians Awarded the Air Force Cross and Air Force Medal (Robin Brass Studio, Toronto, 2000), page 103. Medal presented 26 April 1944.

Flying Officer Miller, as test pilot at this unit, has displayed exceptional courage and flying ability when diving aircraft to extreme limits, enabling medical scientists to photograph and record the effects of "blackout", to further research in aviation medicine. Last February, at great personal risk, he flew an Anson aircraft equipped with skis, that had previously been abandoned, from the surface of a small lake and again in April and June he flew two more Anson aircraft from difficult and inaccessible fields, thereby saving intact three of His Majesty's aircraft.

MILLER, FS Audrey Alexandra (W304650) - British Empire Medal - AFHQ - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1127/45 dated 6 July 1945. Born in Winnipeg, 26 May 1920. Educated in Windsor, Ontario. A stenographer with Hiram Walker before the war. Enlisted in Windsor, 29 October 1942 as "Tradeswoman". To No.7 Manning Depot, 4 November 1942. Classified as Clerk/Stenographer, 12 November 1942. To No.2 Composite Training School, 3 December 1942. To AFHQ, 6 February 1943. Promoted Leading Airwoman, 1 April 1943. Promoted Corporal, 1 June 1943. Promoted Sergeant, 24 September 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 April 1944. Classified as Clerk Administration, 1 August 1944. To No.3 Release Centre, 5 June 1945. Retired 7 June 1945. Medal presented by Governor General, 2 December 1946. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Volume 59, file 190-I, dossier 7) has citation.

This non-commissioned officer has at all times displayed a high standard of efficiency and devotion to her duties which have included work of a highly secret nature. She has frequently been called upon to discharge duties and to assume responsibilities over and above those which she might normally have been expected to undertake and in all such instances she has amply justified the confidence placed in her. Possessing to a high degree those qualities most desirable in a non-commissioned officer, Flight Sergeant Miller, through her quiet and unostentatious efficiency, has gained the respect and confidence of her superior officers and has been an inspiring example to the members of her staff. She was employed in secretarial duties at the Quebec Conference in 1943 and was highly commended for her services. Her consistent demonstration of efficiency, enthusiasm and integrity is worthy of high praise.

16 sorties (103 hours), 12 August to 5 December 1944.

As captain of aircraft this officer has led his crew through a successful tour of operations. On many occasions his aircraft has been damaged by anti-aircraft fire and during one mission the mid-upper gunner was killed and the wireless operator was wounded. Despite these trying experiences Flight Lieutenant Miller has maintained a high standard of airmanship, courage and devotion to duty, which together with his fine fighting spirit and tenacity of purpose have set an inspiring example to all.

The sortie list was as follows:

12 August 1944 - Brunswick (6.30, second pilot)
6 October 1944 - Dortmund (7.10)
9 October 1944 - Bochum (4.05)
23 October 1944 - Essen (6.40)

6 November 1944 - Gelsenkirchen (5.45)
16 November 1944 - Julich (5.50)
18 November 1944 - Munster (6.40)
21 November 1944 - Castrop (7.05)
27 November 1944 - Neusse (6.20)
30 November 1944 - Duisburg (6.25)
2 December 1944 - Hagen (7.30)
4 December 1944 - Karlsruhe (7.15)
5 December 1944 - Soest (7.05)

NOTE: RCAF Routine Order 1099 published 17 July 1942 states the following:

R59343 Warrant Officer 2nd Class Bernard Bryce Miller, serving at No.15 Service Flying Training School, Claresholm, Alberta, was tried summarily by the Air Officer Commanding, No.4 Training Command, Calgary, Alberta, under authority of Section 47 of the Air Force Act, on the 10th day of June 1942, and was found guilty of an act likely to cause damage to one of His Majesty's aircraft, and was severely reprimanded.

Notes: On 14 July 1941, at No.15 SFTS, he executed a forced landing when a short circuit in wiring started a fire; no injuries.

Assessed 29 October 1942 at No.2 FIS - "A very hard working instructr who has produced above average results at 2 FIS. Keen and willing. Smart on parade. Recommended for commissioned rank." (S/L J.B. Harvey)

Assessed 26 June 1943 - "An experienced and capable instructor who is doing an excellent job at this unit." (W/C F.R. Sharp, No.2 FIS).

Application for Operational Wing dated 26 February 1945 stated he had flown a total of 32 sorties (227 hours), 6 August 1944 to 24 February 1945.

Repatriation form dated 31 March 1945 stated he had flown 32 sorties (227 operational hours), the last on 21 February 1945, plus 210 non-operational hours. Types flown were Oxford (100 hours), Wellington (70), Halifax II and V (40) and Lancaster X (227).

There is considerable evidence that he was under great strain on operations and it is to his credit that he persevered. See notes of training at No.2 SFTS. A Re-Selection Board report dated 17 April 1945 notes, "On third sortie mid-upper gunner was killed by flak and WAG had eye injury - one engine unserviceable, no crashes but landed in Southern England satisfactorily. On next ten sorties had flak almost every night. In February flew 21 out of 28 hours on two sorties." Having listed several ailments, and diagnosing "psychoneurosis, anxiety state", it went on quote the opinion of W/C D.R. Easton (Neuropsychiatrist at Repatriation Depot) - ""With his pre-disposition and the amount of stress he has suffered, Flight Lieutenant Miller has done remarkably well." The Board itself concluded, "This is a very well motivated officer who, it is felt, has done his best. It is to his credit that he has been an instructor for approximately 2 ½ years and has completed a tour of operations. When he appeared before the Re-Selection Board, Flight Lieutenant Miller expressed a desire to leave the Service and return to civil life, and in view of his present condition it is considered to be in the best interests of the Service that he be retired. The Warrington Board decided to repatriate him to Canada. It is presumed that the Retirement Board will note his wishes and facilitate his return to civil life in the proper course."

A DVA report dated 23 July 1945 (the date of his release) described him as "Fit, except may have to avoid work with much excitement or nervous strain." Further on it noted, "Would like to take university course in medicine but is suffering from a nervous condition and this is not recommended. He likes outdoor life and thinks farm work would appeal to him which will build up his health and if he finds he is interested he can take a short course in Agriculture and later apply for a farm under DVA."

Training: Interviewed in Winnipeg, 22 May 1940; described as "Fine type. Courteous. Practical/"

Attended No.1 ITS, 22 July to 4 September 1940. Courses in Mathematics (93/100), Armament, practical and oral (65/100), Drill (60/100) and Law and Discipline (91/100). Rated "Good" in Visual Link. Placed 166th in a class of 193. "Big husky type. Should be very good pilot."

Attended No.2 EFTS, 16 September to 16 November 1940. Tiger Moth aircraft - 26 hours five minutes dual and 25 hours 25 minutes solo; logged five hours in Link Trainer. Rated as high average; "Has been an attentive student - believe he is better than test shows. Can show more Instrument Flying; if this is brought up to standard should make a good twin-engine pilot. Can do better forced landings than on final test." (G. Douglas, Chief Flying Instructor). Courses in Airmanship (149/200), Airframes (152/200), Aero Engines (142/200), Signals, practical (45.5/50), Theory of Flight (84/100), Air Navigation (198/200), Armament, oral (138/200); rated 195/200 in Qualities as an Officer. Placed 13th in a class of 24. "Good material, officer type. He gives the impression that he will become a good leader. His flying ability is a good average. He has shown keenness in his work and should develop into a really useful man." He may have landed a Harvard wheels up (minor damage). At one point he had expressed lack of confidence and a preference not to solo, but his superiors persisted. His mother had just died, his father's business was in disarray, and an MO reported he in danger of cracking up. He was given two weeks leave, then resumed and completed the course (see remarks above about stress).

Course at No.2 SFTS was 4 January to 17 March 1941. Yale aircraft (2.05 day dual, 3.55 day solo) and Harvards (34.55 day dual, 44.55 day solo, 4.20 night dual, 4.40 night solo. Logged ten hours in Link. "Average pilot, rough on turns - lacks confidence in himself - no outstanding faults. Recommended for twin engine." (F/L C.E. Wilmot, CFI). Ground training in Airmanship (128/200), Armament, written (77/100), Armament, practical (83/100), Air Navigation (111/200) and Signals (131/150). "Conscientious and willing but initiative rather below average. Lacks confidence." Placed 33rd in a class of 44.

Attended Central Flying School, Trenton, 8 April to 25 May 1941. Flew single engine types (17.10 dual, 11.40 solo) and twin engine types (16.15 dual, 4.45 solo). "Above average pilot, good voice and pleasant manner. Learns quickly. Will make a suitable twin instructor with more practice on twins as he trained on Harvards,," (F/O J. Loughheed). Ground training in Airframes (88/100), Engines (78/100), Airmanship (74/100) and Air Navigation (53/100). Tested 28 May 1941 on Lockheed 10A by F/L J.B. Harvey and described as follows: Sequence (Fair); Voice (Clear), Manner (Calm), Ability to impart knowledge (Good), Ability as pilot (Above average). and Remarks (A above average pilot with a practical knowledge of sequence - Sequence slightly disordered - should become capable). Awarded Category "C".

Retested on an Anson by Visiting Flight, 15 January 1942, by which time he had flown 400 hours at No.15 SFTS. Described as follows: Sequence (Above average); Voice (Clear, Good), Manner (Quiet, Positive), Ability to impart knowledge (High Average), Ability as pilot (High Average). and Remarks (A very capable instructor on twin engine aircraft). Awarded Category "B" by F/L B. Sparks and S/L A.J. Shelfoon).

Retested on a Crane by No.4 Visiting Flight, 1 February 1943, at which time he was described as having instructed 341 hours on single engine and 900 hours on twin engine aircraft. Described as follows: Sequence (Above average); Voice (Good), Manner (Keen), Ability to impart knowledge (Above Average), Ability as pilot (Above Average). and Remarks (An above average flying instructor with a very good knowledge of the principles of flying). Awarded Category B-2 by F/L Barrett or Bassett and S/L H.H. Langford.

Attended No.82 OTU, 11 April to 15 June 1944. Wellington III and X aircraft - 6.00 day dual to first day solo (6.40 total day dual), 30.45 day solo, 4.10 night dual to first night solo (total night dual was 4.10) and 37.00 night solo. Logged ten hours in Link. Flying tests in General Flying (300/400), Applied Flying (140/200), Instrument Flying (185/250), Night Flying (76/100) and Link (30/50). Ground examinations in Airmanship (256/300), Armament (162/300), Navigation (182/200) and Signals (61/100). "A steady above average pilot who has had considerable flying experience and should show a good future in Bomber Command." (W/C R.M. Cox).

Instructed at No.1664 Conversion Unit by P/O J. Harkins who described him as "Very keen pilot and captain who can be reloaded on to carry out any detail." He had begun on 18 July 1944 with Sequences 2 (dual circuits and landings), 3 (dual circuits and landings, overshoot procedure), 4 (dual, three engine flying including one demonstration landing) and 5 (solo). His first extended solo was 21 July 1944 (three hours, 20 minutes, exercise 10, solo with complete crew, all practicing their skills. His first night flying was 25 July 1944 (2.25 dual, 1.55 solo). On 28 July 1944, on a day flight (1.50 solo) he first operated with H2S radar and on 28 July 1944 he flew a 5.50 night solo with H2S. Total flying at No.1664 CU was 6.35 day dual, 23.05 day solo, 2.25 night dual and 12.05 night solo.

MILLER, F/L Burton Leigh (J17436) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1478/45 dated 21 September 1945. Born 20 June 1920. Home in Moncton, New Brunswick; enlisted there 20 May 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 27 May 1941. To Technical Training School (guard), 20 June 1941. To No.1 ITS, 27 July 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 1 September 1941 when posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.4 AOS, 28 September 1941; graduated 3 January 1942 when posted to No.4 BGS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 14 February 1942 when posted to No.2 ANS; graduated 16 March 1942. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 17 March 1942; to United Kingdom, 24 April 1942. Commissioned 19 March 1943. Shot down and taken prisoner, 11 June 1943 with No.405 Squadron (Halifax HR797). Promoted Flying Officer, 19 September 1943. Promoted Flight

Lieutenant, 19 March 1945. Reported safe in United Kingdom, 14 May 1945. Repatriated 17 July 1945. To "K", 20 July 1945. To No.1 Composite Training School, 15 November 1945. To Eastern Air Command, 23 December 1945. To "K" again, 8 January 1946. To No.1 Release Centre, 22 May 1946. Released 29 May 1946.

The website "Lost Bombers" has information of the circumstances of his being shot down (below). See also entry for James Caldwell Harty:

11/12 June 1943: Halifax HR797 (LQ-A), target Dusseldorf. Airborne at 2300 hours, 11 June 1943 from Gransden Lodge. Hit by flak in the vicinity of Amsterdam and turned back, losing height. Subsequently, ditched while roughly 25 minutes flying time from the English coast. The survivors were able to clamber into their dinghy, but to their chagrin the tide took them back in the general direction of the Dutch coast and captivity. It is reported that F/O T.A. Fillingham (RCAF) baled out soon after the bomber was hit, but his body was never identified. along with Flight Sergeant N.H.A. Taylor (RCAF) he is commemorated on the Runnymede memorial. WO2 J. Somerville (RCAF, POW) was later repatriated, probably during 1944, after undergoing an operation to amputate one of his feet. Other crewmen were P/O J.C.Harty (RCAF, POW), Sergeant W.N.Tatham, (RCAF, POW), P/O B.L.Miller, (RCAF, POW), P/O J.E.Paterson (POW), P/O F.E.MacKay, (RCAF, POW).

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire based on interview of 16 May 1945. He stated he had flown 19 sorties as navigator. Narrative as follows:

June 11th, 1943. Arrived at aircraft for operation and started up. Found our bombsight was unserviceable and informed Wing Commander, who sent mechanics out to repair. In the meantime we taxied up to take off position where the mechanics said bombsight was OK and we got going. After crossing enemy coast, Bomb Aimer tested bombsight and found it to be unserviceable again. We were carrying marker flares and bombs so the bombsight was set manually and we carried on over target dropping only bombs. Approaching enemy coast on the way out, pilot decided to come down and go under heavy clouds. We were doing about 200 knots when we crossed the coast and I gave WOP time to turn on IFF. Second pilot was just getting back into seat (having been back at the rear blister on look-out) and said what a swell trip it was when there was an explosion followed by fire which set off the green flares. The intercom being unserviceable, I put on chute and opened hatch only to verify the fact we were over the North Sea. The WOP seemed to be uninjured and very agile for he pushed me to one side and jumped out. The second pilot was now down by WOP position and told me he couldn't jump because his leg was broken. I put him in WOP seat (now empty) and tried W/T which seemed to be unserviceable. I handed my fire extinguisher to engineer who had used his. I then picked up my navigation bag which was burning and then put it down again. I dragged myself to rest position, picking up Very pistol, but no cartridges on account of fire in engineer's position. I got the radio and first aid kit, after we had ditched and we got into the dinghy. Twenty hours later we contacted FW.190 etc. On account of severe injuries of second pilot we were flown to Amsterdam by Do.24.

Interrogator's Notes: Dinghy came out OK. Aircraft did not sink for about 15 minutes. All crew got in dinghy. Used Verey pistol to attract FW.190s.

Died in Comox, British Columbia, 13 November 2011. Medal sent by registered mail 7 June 1950. RCAF photo PL-32745 (ex UK-14795 dated 13 September 1944) taken after daylight raid on Emden has F/O Carl Miller (Saskatoon) showing his wallet to F/O Ted Sewell (Saskatoon); caption identifies Miller as graduate of University of Manitoba; states that Sewell worked for CPR Vice-President (Western Lines) in Winnipeg. Photo PL-36288 is a portrait. No citation other than "...in recognition of gallantry and devotion to duty in the execution of air operations against the enemy." DHist file 181.009 D.5557 (RG.24 Vol.20668) has recommendation dated 9 September 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (139 hours 56 minutes), 10 April 1944 to early September 1944 (page torn; last target was Emden).

Flying Officer Miller has shown a high degree of skill as a navigator. He has made thirty-two operational sorties over a wide variety of targets, all of which have been successful in bombing the target. He has inspired a high standard of morale in both his crew and fellow navigators. His unconquerable spirit of determination and success in achieving his objective coupled with his unfailing devotion to duty warrant a strong recommendation for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The sortie list was as follows:

Miller of Saskatoon points to a transport plane preparing to land while F/O J.E. Patterson of Toronto broadcasts instructions to the aircrew of the landing plane. F/O Patterson who does most of the broadcasting from the flying control tower has been nicknamed 'the voice of Odiham' by aircrew members." Citation found in Public Record Office Air 2/9117, drafted when he had flown 2,963 hours, 380 on current duties and 152 in previous six months.

This officer has been in command of his squadron since July 1944. He has proved himself an exceptional squadron commander and has set a high standard of discipline. His squadron has done valuable work and under his leadership has maintained the highest standard of efficiency. This officer is above the average of transport captains and has completed many important overseas flights, notably in flying in equipment to [the] Crimea to establish No.150 Staging Post.

This officer has participated in many operational sorties and has always shown persistent determination to bomb his target and bring back photographs of the aiming point. In this he has been singularly successful. In March 1943, during an attack on Stuttgart the port outer engine of Pilot Officer Miller's aircraft failed and his port inner engine became overheated. Despite these handicaps, with great skill he flew safely back to base. An excellent captain of aircraft, this officer has set a fine example to the younger and less experienced crews in the squadron.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/8955 has recommendation drafted 19 April 1943 when he had flown 27 sorties (181 hours 45 minutes). Sortie list and submission as follows; information in square brackets by David Wallace consulting Operational Record Book and sharing information via e-mail; this has included some sorties flown after submission of recommendation:

27 September 1942 - Anti-submarine patrol (8.45)
3 October 1942 - Anti-submarine patrol (12.45)
11 October 1942 - Anti-submarine patrol (11.10)
15 October 1942 - Anti-submarine patrol (9.30)
21 October 1942 - Anti-submarine patrol (8.40)

Pilot Officer Miller has now completed 27 operational sorties. He has always shown keen determination to bomb his target and has been persistent in his efforts to bring back photographs of the aiming point. His efforts have been singularly successful.

On the 11th March 1943, during an attack on Stuttgart, his port outer engine failed and his port inner overheated. He skilfully flew his aircraft back to base.

This officer has always set an excellent example and is a thoroughly reliable operational pilot.

DHist file 181.009 D.2619 (RG.24 Vol.20628) has recommendation dated 20 August 1944 from A/C J.G. Bryans (Commanding No.63 Base).

Group Captain Miller has been the leading officer in Navigation training in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada since its start. He commanded the unit that trained the first instructors and subsequently opened two major Navigation Schools. He was later appointed Director of Air Training at RCAF Headquarters. His excellent work and sound planning have been major factors in the RCAF Air Training during the war.

In April of this year he came overseas to command RCAF Station, Skipton-on-Swale. At this post he has applied his energy and ability to excellent account during the very heavy operational demands made upon the Station.

He is an outstanding organizer and commander.

MILLER, A/C Frank Robert (C139) - Commander, Order of the British Empire - No.63 Base (AFRO gives unit only as "Overseas" - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 155/46 dated 15 February 1946. No citation in Canadian sources. Public Records Office Air 2/9121 has recommendation.

This officer formerly commanded RCAF Station Skipton, and later became Base Commander of No.61 (Heavy Conversion) Base. He is now in command at No.63 (Operational) Base. Under his brilliant direction No.63 Base has laid over 25 percent of the mines dropped by Bomber Command from the beginning of 1945. This work involved a great amount of detailed planning and Air Commodore Miller was largely responsible for the great success achieved. He has shown outstanding leadership and under his wise and careful guidance the base has achieved a high standard of efficiency.

MILLER, F/O George Norman (J21288) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.418 Squadron - Award effective 2 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1444/44 dated 7 July 1944. Born in Virden, Manitoba, 6 March 1914; home in Edmonton; enlisted there 17 December 1940 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot. To No.38 SFTS (guard), 15 January 1941. To No.2 ITS, 5 March 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 9 April 1941 when posted to No.5 EFTS; graduated 28 May 1941 when posted to No.10 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 8 August 1941. To Trenton, 9 August 1941. To No.1 Manning Depot, 18 October 1941. To Rockcliffe, 11 December 1941. Posted to No.2 BGS, 6 January 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 8 February 1942. Commissioned 30 September 1942. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 23 November 1942; to RAF overseas, 23 December 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 30 March 1943. Repatriated 11 May 1944; to No.36 OTU, 19 June 1944; Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 30 October 1944. To No.8 OTU, 30 November 1944; retired 19 September 1946. Served again in No.418 (Auxiliary) Squadron, 1 October 1949 to 17 May 1951 (60233). Medal presented 6 July 1945. Died 22 February 2000 in Edmonton as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of November/December 2000. DHist file 181.009 D.1509 (RG.24 Vol.20599) has application for Operational Wings submitted 21 December 1944 when he was at No.8 OTU, Canada. Had flown 32 sorties (108 hours 35 minutes), 20 September 1943 to 24 April 1944. RCAF photo PL-28010 (ex UK-8879 dated 13 March 1944) shows F/O G.D. Miller (left, Vancouver) and F/O G.N. Miller (right, Edmonton) who "never met before Operational Training Unit " but are now teamed together.

This officer has completed a large number of hours flying at night over enemy territory and has displayed commendable skill and gallantry. He has at all times shown the greatest keenness and his determination to complete his missions successfully has impressed all. He has destroyed at least two and assisted in the destruction of another enemy aircraft.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9156 has recommendation drafted by Wing Commander A. Barker, 17 April 1944, when he had flown 31 sorties (102 operational hours).

This pilot has completed 31 operational sorties over enemy territory on intruder or bomber support operations. Of these sorties, two have been by day. Flying Officer Miller has been employed continuously on operations since September 1943, and has patrolled many of the main enemy bases in France, Belgium and Germany, with a keenness and devotion to duty of a very high order.

On April 9th, Flying Officer Miller carried out a Day Ranger sortie to St. Dizier during the course of which he destroyed a Focke Wulfe 190 and damaged two others on the ground at Toul, damaged a Bucker Jungermeister at St. Dizier and shared in the damage of a trainer at Toul. On the 12th April, Flying Officer Miller carried out successfully one of the longest night intruder sorties yet attempted, at Kolberg. This involved a return flight of 1,200 miles. At Kolberg he shot down and destroyed a Heinkel 111, probably destroyed a Heinkel 177 and another unidentified twin-engined aircraft in the air.

Flying Officer Miller's perseverance and keenness to seek out and engage the enemy has been a very fine example to other members of the squadron and his general conduct and operational ability has been a source of inspiration to aircrew and groundcrew alike. At all times during his operational tour, Flying Officer Miller could be relied upon to successfully fulfill any task allotted to him and has given unfailing support to the squadron.

MILLER, F/L Gordon (J11239) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.426 Squadron - Award effective 9 October 1945 as per London Gazette dated 19 October 1945 and AFRO 1822/45 dated 7 December 1945. Born 2 August 1914 in Norfolk County, Ontario; home in Paris, Ontario (miner); enlisted in North Bay, 9 January 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1A Manning Depot, 29 January 1941. To No.5 SFTS (guard duty), 2 March 1941; to No.3 ITS, 3 May 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 8 June 1941 when posted to No.10 EFTS; ceased training and posted to Trenton, 25 June 1941; to No.1 AOS, 26 October 1941; may have graduated 29 January 1942 but not posted to No.1 BGS until 31 January 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 14 March 1942 when posted to No.2 ANS; graduated and commissioned 13 April 1942. To "Y" Depot, 14 April 1942; to RAF, 8 May 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 4 October 1942; promoted Flight Lieutenant, 13 September 1944. Repatriated 1 June 1945. To Composite Training School, 12 June 1945; to Release Centre, 22 August 1945; released 28 August 1945. Medal presented in Toronto, 30 November 1949. In No.426 Squadron, January 1943; navigator in Sergeant I.R.A. Runciman's crew. Incidents described took place 12/13 May 1943 and he became a POW.

This officer has taken part in many operational sorties. On one occasion in May 1943 he was navigator in an aircraft detailed for an attack against Duisburg. After bombing the target his aircraft was hit by anti-aircraft fire and severely damaged. The second pilot was killed, the main petrol cock to both engines and the control cables and rods to the elevator and rudder controls severed, and a six-foot hole blown on each side of the fuselage. Displaying great coolness and initiative, Flight Lieutenant Miller, with the hasty use of linen maps, managed to mend the broken petrol lines, thus enabling his captain to restart the port engine despite most erratic flight. He then spliced the elevator and aerial wire. As a result of this officer's gallant efforts, his captain was able to keep the crippled aircraft airborne until the Dutch coast was reached where, owing to lack of petrol, he was forced to abandon it. Throughout this harassing experience Flight Lieutenant Miller showed courage, determination and initiative and his success in accomplishing such ingenious repairs was largely responsible for giving to other members of his crew an opportunity to leave the aircraft by parachute and land safely.

RCAF Press Release 5491D issued 5 March 1945 deals with the ground crew of an RCAF Spitfire Wing on the Continent, dealing with several personnel (but only Miller is decorated). Excerpts:

WITH THE RCAF OVERSEAS:- An RCAF Spitfire wing is a flying outfit, but it runs on wheels. It has almost as many motor transport drivers as it has pilots, and perhaps three times as many vehicles as it has aircraft.

The massive, heavy-duty tires of the three-tonner trucks, their rugged tread looking like an aerial photo of the Rockies, churn through the mud and snow that alternate to make driving a sardonic joyride in Belgium's variable winter. From jeeps to the heaviest truck, almost everything on wheels has four-wheel drive - has to, to get in and out of the ruts and holes. And now and then the mobile crane that is also carried on strength of the M.T. section, is called upon to rescue some piece of transport from a bog that even a steam shovel couldn't chew its way out of....

Up until fall, the M.T. section lived and worked in the open, but winter made a move indoors essential for maintenance work, and an abandoned factory some distance from the field was requisitioned as "Main M.T." garage.

Here Sergeant Howie Miller of Simcoe, Ontario and Corporal Joe Bannon of Weston, Ontario boss a crew of 16 fitters and electricians. Both NCOs were experienced garage men in their home towns before the war - and many a super service garage manager in Canada would marvel to see how these lads with their crews of fitters and electricians, working from cramped little machine shops on wheels, sweat and improvise to keep these all-important truck wheels turning.

When Howie and Joe found need of an extra van as an office and spare parts store, one of the drivers with a handyman flare, LAC H.D. "Red" Fisher of Middle Steuracke, Nova Scotia, went to work and remodded an open truck to provide them with a snug headquarters, and a built-in bedroom as well.

Taken on strength of postwar RCAF as Flying Officer, pilot, 1 October 1946 (19895); promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 January 1949. Attained rank of Wing Commander, 1 June 1961. Date of retirement uncertain. Died in Okanagan, British Columbia, 4 May 1990 as per Airforce Magazine of October-November-December 1990. Public Record Officer Air 2/8959 (material provided courtesy of Steve Brew) has citation, drafted when he had flown 1,324 hours (340 in previous six months).

Flying Officer Miller is a most confident, capable and reliable Captain of aircraft. His skill and judgement have been well proved during the three monsoon seasons through which he has flown. His ability as a pilot of Hudson aircraft is well above the average and he is conscientious, keen and has a fine sense of discipline.

Joined the Toronto law firm headed by Guysborough native J.A. Torey which in a few years became Torey, Miller, Thompson, Hicks and Sedgwick. Died in Toronto, December 1986 (reported in New Glasgow Evening News of 22 December 1986).

The courage, skill and devotion to duty this officer has always shown were well illustrated during an operation against Hanover in January 1945, when the aircraft in which he was navigator was attacked and the two inboard engines caught fire. He quickly worked out a course via a safe route to an airfield. It was found impossible to land at the airfield owing to fog and a forced landing had to be made. Two members of the crew were injured. Flying Officer Miller immediately took charge of the situation, organized a search for help and made arrangements for the injured to be moved to a hospital. His coolness and initiative throughout this trying experience were worthy of the highest praise.

Recommendation in DHH file 181.009 D.1941 (National Library and Archives of Canada RG.24 Volume 20612), filed 22 May 1945 by W/C M.E. Ferguson on completion of twelve sorties (80 hours 20 minutes) includes following sortie list and text:

2 January 1945 - Nuremberg (7.50)
5 January 1945 - Hanover (5.15)
11 March 1945 - Essen (5.55)
14 March 1945 - Zweibrucken (7.30)
15 March 1945 - Hagen (7.30)
20 March 1945 - Hemmingstadt ((5.20)
22 March 1945 - Hildesheim (5.55)
24 March 1945 - Bottrop (6.20)
25 March 1945 - Hanover (6.05)
10 April 1945 - Leipzig (8.05)

13 April 1945 - Kiel (6.00)

16 April 1945 - Schwandorf (8.30)

On the night of January 5th, 1945, whilst en route to attack Hanover, the aircraft in which this officer was navigator was attacked and the two inboard engines caught fire. The bomb-load was jettisoned and engines feathered. The navigator remained cool and confident; he quickly worked out a course to a nearby aerodrome in France via a safe route. It was found impossible to land there due to fog, and it was decided to try to return to this country. However, en route it became imperative to crash land in France.

The landing was reasonably successful but two crew members were severely injured. The navigator immediately took charge of the situation after giving what help he could to the two injured members and making them comfortable, he organized a search for aid. Despite several setbacks he was undeterred and finally able to locate a hospital where he made arrangements to have the injured moved for treatment.

His coolness and steadfastness under dangerous circumstances and his proven leadership and willingness to accept responsibilities did much to relieve the suffering of the injured and may even have prevented unnecessary loss of life.

I consider the outstanding coolness and devotion to duty displayed by this officer duly merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MILLER, FS (now P/O) John Newton (R83897/J18754) - Mention in Despatches - No.185 Squadron (now deceased) - Award effective 14 January 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 874/44 dated 21 April 1944. Born 18 March 1921 in Toronto. Home there (clerk and labourer in grocery stores). Enlisted there 9 December 1940. At No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto, 9 December 1940 to 8 January 1941; at No.1 AMD, Picton, 9 January to 27 January 1941. At Trenton from 27 January to 10 April 1941 when posted to No.1 ITS; graduated and promoted LAC, 16 May 1941; posted that date to No.9 EFTS; graduated 3 July 1941 when posted to No.1 SFTS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 13 September 1941. To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 15 September 1941. To RAF Trainee Pool, 27 September 1941. Taken on strength of No.3 Personnel Reception Centre, 14 October 1941. To No.9 SFTS, 3 November 1941; to No.52 OTU, 30 December 1941; to No.164 Squadron, 14 July 1942. Commissioned with effect from 18 October 1942 (but he appears still to have been wearing Flight Sergeant rank when killed). To Peterhead, 21 October 1942 and sent to Gibraltar. Posted to No.185 Squadron, 29 October 1942. On 1 March 1943 (Spitfire BR534) he was on a sweep over Sicily, about 23,000 feet, and about to engage enemy aircraft, his engine cut for no apparent reason. After attempts to start it again he glided to 5,000 feet and baled out; in the water for between 75 and 90 minutes when picked up by High Speed Launch 107. Killed in action, 20 March 1943 (Spitfire BR109); no known grave; name on Malta Memorial.

On 23 March 1943, No.185 Squadron prepared the following report:

At 1440 hours on 20th March, 1943, Flight Sergeant Miller was despatched with one other pilot on a Rhubarb flight. Upon completion of attack, this pilot followed his Leader who was compelled to bale out over the sea, approximately 6 to 8 miles off the coast of Sicily. Flight Sergeant Miller then orbited his Leader who successfully got into his dinghy. Flight Sergeant Miller was attacked by two ME.109s and a short dog-fight ensued, which took the combatants above cloud out of sight. Shortly afterwards the pilot in the dinghy saw a Spitfire come down in a slow flat spin, but did not actually see it enter the water, although certain that it must have done so. There was no further trace of Flight Sergeant Miller.

On 23 March 1943, S/L H.A Crafts, Station Hal Far, wrote to his mother with the following information:

When returning from operations from enemy territory, his leader was forced to abandon his aircraft. Your son remained circling this pilot who successfully got into his dinghy, and your son was able to direct another aircraft to rescue his leader. Whilst circling, however, he was attacked by two enemy aircraft and after the dog-fight which followed his plane was seen to dive into the sea. There was no sign of a parachute. No further information is at present available, but personally I hold no hope.

Your son was a very keen and efficient pilot, well liked by all with whom he came into contact, and his loss to the squadron is very deeply felt, all the more so because of his action which ensured that his leader would be rescued.

His brother, P/O Bruce A. Miller, had been killed in action with No.57 Squadron (29/30 June 1942) after a tour of 30 missions and on his fifth additional mission. The Commanding Officer of the unit, writing to the family, had mentioned that Bruce Miller had been recommended for a DFM. An item in the Toronto Evening Telegram of 15 July 1943 had reported on the death of J.N. Miller. In an undated letter, his father, William Harry Miller, wrote asking if his son might receive a gallantry medal. This was the subject of letters to RCAF Overseas Headquarters, March 1944. On 15 April 1944, Air Commodore E.E. Middleton wrote back to AFHQ, explaining that only a VC or MiD could be granted, and also noting that no recommendation for a DFM had been found for Bruce Miller; the conclusion was that such a recommendation had not gotten past Group level.

Other documents indicated he had been shot down nine miles southeast of Sampieri at 1519 hours. A section of Spitfires later escorted a Walrus to the position which picked up the downed pilot. Two Messerschmitt 109s attacked and two Spitfires were shot down.

A letter dated 26 March 1947 but not translated until 27 November 1947 from a German pilot, Heinz Schlechter (Innsbruck, Austria), was directed to W/C Maurice A. Smith, RAFVR, apparently Assistant Editor of Flight. It read as follows:

I must first apologize for writing in German, but my school days English is not good enough to tell you all that I want to say. This letter comes from my heart and I can see no other way of sending you some information which will certainly be of interest to you and will also perhaps bring a little pleasure to the people whom it concerns. Please be so kind therefore to have this letter translated and read it. I should naturally be glad of an answer. I found your address in "Flight"...

On 20th March 1943, between 1523 and 1545 hours I was engaged in air combat with an RAF fighter off the south coast of Sicily and I have never been able to forget it. My opponent was a remarkably brave man and I experienced no feeling of triumph afterwards, but as though I had slain a friend. I will tell you how it happened. At the time I was stationed with my squadron at San Pietro, Sicily, I was a young lieutenant and had carried out my first operational flight in the autumn of 1942 in Africa, on the El Alamein front with Jagdgeschwader 27 (Hauptmann Joachim Marseille). I was reckoned as an "old hand" after I had taken part in the Arica campaign and I always flew (in a Me.109G) with a friend of my boyhood whom I had encountered in Africa. He too was a lieutenant and was 21 and I was 22.

On the day in question (20th March 1943) the alert was given. The weather was very bad. We both took off at 1523 hours and soon reached the coast and were glad to be out of the bad weather. We climbed higher and after five minutes flying time we saw below us, at a height of some 500-300 metres a single Spitfire (probably IX) who paid no attention to us. We saw at once that the pilot was circling an air-sea rescue post, two or three kilometres from the enemy coast at this low altitude. Apparently one of his formation had crashed in the sea. Bernd attacked at once but the Spitfire got away so quickly that the attack was fruitless. I should explain that Bernd Schneider (also from Innsbruck) had already 27 confirmed "kills" to his credit and was on his way to become a great "ace". The engagement went on like this for some time. I did not fire at the Spitfire but covered my friend from the rear. The renowned manoeuvrability of the Spitfire stood our unknown enemy in good stead. He dodged every attack cleverly, constantly remaining 50 to 100 metres below us, following all our twists and dodges, and we put up a fine show. He did not think of drawing away and hiding himself in the clouds which hung like a thick curtain before the coast, only 1-2 kilometres away. 15 minutes passed and we had received a few hits, but we could not catch up with him. The cockpit was hot for we were flying with engines all out, and the pitiless sun hurt our eyes and we were tired. We were ready to break off the engagement as our fuel was getting short and we were wondering how we should get back to base. Just at this moment, however, the Spitfire managed to get behind us and we realised what we were up against. This was no novice but a first rate man who meant to settle his fight one way or another. In the meantime we had gradually drawn closer to the clouds. The Spitfire was at the same altitude and had a lead of 500 to 600 metres. Now we thought something will happen. The Spitfire could have vanished in the cloud, but he did not ! Suddenly he came towards us, with the evident intention of shooting one of us down. A clever dodge; I was so surprised that I forgot to fire, but Bernd fired a fraction of a second before the Spitfire pilot who flew clean into the hail of fire and was almost certainly hit at once; the Spitfire passed 50 metres away from me and I saw it breaking up; out of control it plunged into the sea without catching fire. The waves rose high, like a memorial which the unknown man himself erected as a token of parting with life, then they swirled together and closed the gap made by the aircraft.

Just afterwards we flew over the point of crash at a height of only a few metres, but no trace could be seen.

Quiet and exhausted we flew back to base after an unforgettable experience. Who could this man have been ? How old was he ? What did he look like ? When Bernd climbed out of his aircraft he was very quiet and said little, only, "Come, Heinz, get ready quickly, they will try to recover him, we shall have to take off again very son." At the end of ten minutes we were in the air again and had to deal with our enemy's comrades (8 to 10 Spitfires). It was clear that they were missing their outstanding leader. We were under heavy fire but we shot two down.

War had its will and we lived only from day to day. Years have passed and I have never forgotten this man. Who mourned for him ? What has become of Bernd ? On the 2nd May of the same year, after 35 air victories he was shot down into the Mediterranean and his body lies in the same grave as that of his most valiant opponent. This was his hardest and greatest fight. I was shot down four days before Bernd and was four days in the Mediterranean. I had to continue the fight on different fronts and was shot down more than once and shot others down. I was one of the few who returned home; we two, Bernd and I were Austrians, but we were soldiers and did our duty. We should so much have liked to be friends with you and flown with you.

Now to my request, Mr. Smith. Will you try to find out who this man was and will you drop this belated wreath from his former opponent on his watery grave. I suppose that the RAF presumes this airman is missing, for I am the only witness of this combat who is still alive. Will you be so kind as to send on this letter to his parents or relations and friends; perhaps one of the men of the RAF who was in his unit will still be alive. I should be so glad if my wish could be fulfilled. I should not mind if my letter was published...

Date of incident 20th March 1943, at about 1535 or 1540 hours. Place 2 or 3 km south of Cap Passero (South Coast of Sicily near Comiso), 200 to 300 metres above the sea. Afterwards there was a search by ten Spitfires at the same spot from about 1610 to 1650 hours.

In conclusion I should be glad of an answer and I hope that those who loved this outstanding pilot have, by my letter, been freed from a painful uncertainty. He was vanquished by no unworthy foe, for Bernd too was a wonderful person, there are few of his equals in this world. This however is poor comfort. The grief for our opponent will be none the less bitter.

On 13 June 1947 Heinz Schlechter was advised as to the identity of the pilot (Miller). On 6

November 1947 Heinz Schlechter wrote again, asking if the contents of his letter had been communicated to the family. RCAF Overseas Headquarters pondered whether this should be done and decided on 27 February 1948 to inform the family. However, any letter to them does not appear on the file of J.N. Miller.

For all these remarks about his fine flying, Miller had been only an average student in Canada; at SFTS he graduated 46th in a class of 59 and the assessment damned with faint praise - "Has shown a marked improvement after a slow start. Inclined to lack confidence. Has no outstanding faults."

At No.52 OTU, however, he improved. He had been posted there in December 1941, but soon after reporting he stumbled in a blackout, struck his head on a brick wall, and was unconscious for nine hours. Treatment for concussion and other ailments held him back until he was able to take Course No.18 - 12 May 1942; to 14 July 1942. He arrived with 84 hours 35 minutes dual flying (day), 84 hours 30 minutes solo flying (day), six hours 20 minutes dual (night) and five hours 20 minutes solo (night), along with 25 hours 45 minutes of instrument flying, five hours 15 minutes formation flying, and 31 hours "Link" time. At OTU he flew two hours 35 minutes day dual on the Master, nine hours 50 minutes day solo on Master, 58 hours ten minutes day solo on Spitfires, plus three hours 45 minutes instrument flying (Spitfires), 16 hours five minutes formation flying (Spitfires) and 13 hours "Link" time. He fired 5,300 rounds air-to-air (and had 1.5 percent hits), 1,600 round air to ground. He was graded "Average" in all categories except "Skill in Landing" and "Formation Flying" (graded "Above Average" in both) and generally assessed as "Should make a goof fighter pilot".

When shot down, his Flight Commander, F/L H.C. Knight, wrote, "An excellent pilot of good character and a definite loss to the squadron".

1945. Medal presented 25 February 1949. Shown in RCAF photos PL-28063 (ex UK-8952) and PL-28064 (ex UK-8953), dated 18 March 1944.

This officer has completed many sorties. During all these operations his determination to attack the enemy has been outstanding. On two occasions Flying Officer Miller has led formations against enemy convoys. On both flights the attacks were pressed home courageously in the face of persistent anti-aircraft fire from shore and escort vessels. This officer has also led formations which have accompanied torpedo-carrying aircraft and has never failed to display the greatest resolution in this dangerous task.

MILLER, S/L Robert Fred (J15481) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Lived in Marshal, Saskatchewan before enlistment in May 1940. Trained at No.1 WS and No.2 BGS. Remained in postwar RCAF (20032). Queen's Coronation Medal, 23 October 1953, at which time he was a Group Captain in No.1 Air Division Headquarters. Commanded Station Comox, 1958 to 1962. Retired 1971. Died in Nanaimo, 25 March 2003. MILLER, S/L Robert Fred (J15481) - Air Force Cross - No.1666 Conversion Unit - Award effective 1 September 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. No citation in AFRO or biographical file. First recommended for AFC, 18 June 1943. DHist file 181.009 D.2993 (RG.24 Vol.20634) has recommendation dated 25 January 1944 when he was with No.1659 Conversion Unit as Chief Ground Instructor.

Since coming to this unit on 28.10.42, after completing tour of operations, Squadron Leader Miller has applied himself untiringly to his duties as a Chief Ground Instructor at this unit. He has been responsible for the introduction of several Ground Instructional Working Models of aircraft equipment and aircraft lay-out, and has organized the Ground Training in such a manner as to be most receptive to the trainees. He has shown unselfish application of his time, and the leadership which he has given has been an inspiration and an example to all other instructors under his command. The success of this unit is attributed to his untiring efforts.

Same file has recommendation from No.1666 HCU, 25 July 1944:

Squadron Leader Miller has, by his magnificent leadership, contributed to the excellent results of the Conversion Units in this Group. He pioneered the job of CGI in No.1659 Heavy Conversion Unit, and then became CGI at No.1666 Heavy Conversion Unit. His fine record of achievement has been proved by the excellent results obtained in so short a time, with poor and inadequate equipment and personnel. Since he completed his first operational tour he has amassed a great store of knowledge of all branches of aircrew training, and both on the ground and in the air he has proved by personal demonstration to Navigators, Engineers, Wireless Operators and Gunners, his outstanding ability to transmit to them his practical knowledge.

To this, G/C N.S. McGregor adds:

Squadron Leader Miller has shown himself to be an outstanding organizer and administrator. He has designed and constructed personally a very great number of novel and original instruction devices that have contributed in an inestimable degree towards the high standard of training carried out in this Base [Wombleton]. His example of industry and enthusiasm have at all times been a marked incentive to all those with whom he has been associated, both on the ground and in the air. A truly brilliant mind, coupled with tireless energy which deserve tangible recognition as an incentive to others...

Public Records Office Air 2/9019 has what may be deemed as the final recommendation which noted he had flown 200 non-operational hours, 150 in previous six months.

This officer, a wireless operator/air gunner, has, by his splendid leadership, outstanding organizing and administrative abilities, contributed to the excellent results of the conversion units in the Group. He was the first Chief Ground Instructor in No.1659 Heavy Conversion Unit and afterwards held the same appointment in No.1666 Heavy Conversion Unit. His great skill has been proved by the good results obtained in so short a time, with poor and inadequate equipment and personnel. He has personally designed and constructed a very great number of novel and original instruction devices that have contributed in an inestimable degree towards the high standard of training carried out at the unit.

RCAF Press Release 1259 dated March 18, 1943:

THIS BOMBING BUSINESS

by Squadron Leader R.F. Bob Miller

(Squadron Leader R.F. Bob Miller is now the Chief Ground Instructor of an RCAF Conversion Squadron in the new RCAF Bomber Group. A twenty-seven-year-old wireless operator/air gunner, he joined the Air Force in May 1940 and after training in Canada crossed to England and has completed seventeen operational bombing flights over enemy territory).

The one thing that really strikes me about this bombing business is the grand spirit of comradeship which springs up among bomber crews. Once you've been out with a crew and encountered the flak and the searchlights and the night fighters and really lousy weather all together – all together as a team I mean – then each one of you becomes possessed of a number of brothers. Brothers nearer and dearer perhaps than real brothers. It certainly impressed me and has meant quite a lot to me.

I never gave much thought to that side of Air Force life when I joined up in Saskatoon in the spring of 1940. Born in North Battleford, Saskatchewan, I went to school at Marshall and when I'd thought I'd learned enough I took up all manner of jobs. I must have held forty odd. I don't know whether it was the roving spirit or not but I left a job to take on another job, only to return to the original one eventually. I was working on Government telephone lines, after a long trick as a truck driver, when I decided to join up. My father really made up my mind. He is one of the best soldiers in the world. He has been through the South African War and through the Great War and the stories he told me of his experiences certainly gave me the itch to get cracking when the present war broke out.

So I went to Saskatoon in the spring of 1940 to join up. It was just like applying for another job and I was used to that so it didn't give me any worry. I remember going up the steps of the Bessborough Hotel where the recruiting people were with quite a buoyant feeling though. At the top of the steps I met Captain Braley, my home town padre, and he took me along to the recruiting room. I thought the fellows there would be very tough and military but I found them very courteous and helpful. I told them I wanted to be a wireless operator. I have been tinkering with radio all my life as a hobby, hence my choice. They took down copious notes about me and I had a medical examination which I passed successfully.

Then I went home and waited. But I heard nothing and the days went by. I'd almost made up my mind to have a try at the Army when my Air Force papers came through. Back to Saskatoon I went and there I was sworn in and told to report to the Toronto Manning Pool. I think the whole town came to see me off. I was the first of our town to go away for the Air Force so I guess they thought they would give me a real good send off. It seemed as if I was leaving home forever.

At the Manning Pool I found quite a number of Western Canadian lads and we sort of grouped together. Many of them have since been killed or are missing. We did drill and all the preliminaries. But I was also given my uniform and I felt pretty proud of myself. At last my ambition to fly was coming true – an ambition I had held since the day war broke out. I liked that drill and training although I had expected to get straight away on to radio work. But that was to come later.

We moved from the Pool to the Hunt Club where we were taught airmanship and discipline. Then we were broken up into our classes – pilots, navigators, wireless operators and gunners. We each had to go in and say which we preferred. I was about the only one who stuck out for a wireless operator's job. Most of the chaps – in fact all of them – were keen to be pilots, as is to be expected. They didn't know then that one can be as proud to wear a navigator's or air gunners' badge as the pilot's wings.

The Montreal Wireless School was the next step and here I took my first flight in a Norseman aircraft, practising communication with the ground. I can't remember much about that first flip. I was kept too busy perhaps to realize I was off the ground at long last. I guess it was my natural enthusiasm for radio work that brought me out top of the course. Then I went back to Saskatchewan – to Mossbank – for my gunnery. I was very interested in that and always liked it and came second on the course. We flew Fairey Battles with free guns and had ground instruction on operational turrets. At the end of this gunnery course I ceased to be a non-entity and proudly wore my sergeant's stripes and wireless operator/air gunner's wing. With them sewed up I went home on leave. It was about Christmas time. It was my last Christmas in Canada before I went overseas and it was the best Christmas I've ever had.

All this time we had been watching the war news and like many another newly-fledged airman, I was itching to get down to the real thing. In the spring of 1941, with thousands more trained airmen, I set sail for England. It was terribly rough and I must confess I was sea-sick. Fortunately we weren't troubled by German subs.

It was good to see England, or at least know we had arrived for the first thing we saw were searchlights weaving around. There was no air-raid on; the searchlights were just practising as we learned later. We stumbled ashore in the darkness and with all our kit were packed on a train and off we went. We couldn't see much from the train because they were all blacked-out. It seemed very eerie and we were all excited and I suppose nervous but we did plenty of singing to keep our spirits up. Then we arrived at our dispersal center. It was a great camp some miles from London. On our visits to London in the evening we had our first experience of air raids. Some of our personnel were killed in London. I had one or two scares – once when a high explosive fell near enough to give me quite a shock. But I wasn't scared too much. I've been scared plenty of times in the air but I feel pretty safe on the ground somehow.

I was next posted to an Operational Training Unit and we flew in a real bomber for the first time. It was a two-engined Whitely. I didn't like this type of bomber at first but I got to like it and I still think it is a pretty good job although it is out-dated now. I flew with a full-blooded Maori New Zealander skipper, an Australian second pilot, an English navigator and a Scotch rear gunner, so we were a pretty mixed bunch. With this crew I joined an R.A.F. Whitely Bomber Squadron in the north of England.

I was there about a week and then I went on my first 'op' as a wireless operator to Hamburg. I was pretty well keyed up for it and didn't know what to expect. I had heard plenty of tales but it turned out better than I expected. There were bags of flak and searchlights and although I felt pretty nervous I was excited too and that helped me to tide over. It was a pretty good trip all round. But it doesn't stick in my mind very much. It just seemed to happen and seemed but a natural consequence of all my training. It was good to get back to earth though.

With this squadron I went on twelve operational trips. Berlin was the worst trip. It was the night thirty-seven of our kites went missing. We had a pretty rough time but we got back OK. Everything froze up on us but we got thawed out. The kite began to shudder as the ice formed on the wings, on the gun turrets, on the window and none of the automatic instruments worked. You couldn't see where you were; you didn't know what speed you were doing or how low you were. The only thing that kept on working was the navigational compass – but direction didn't help much when the kite was losing height. But we got thawed out by using the heat of the motors although we were pretty hot round the collars ourselves. I was pretty well upset and thought at one time we had “had it.” It was a terrifying time because we all felt so helpless.

On one of these twelve trips I went as a rear gunner for a change. It was to my old friend Hamburg – altogether I've been there five times and each time the flak seemed to get worse. I liked the change over to the rear turret. It gave me a new perspective of things, particularly the organization of the crew and the importance of the rear gunner. It gave me a better view too of the target and of the flak curling up.

Our Commanding Officer at this time was Wing Commander P.C. Pickard, D.S.O., D.F.C., and our squadron was detailed to train paratroops. We hadn't been on this training long when the King and Queen came to our station to see a display of paratroop dropping. As I was flying I wasn't able to meet Their Majesties as some of the luckier Canadians did who were on the ground.

Soon afterwards we went to Malta. We flew all day on Christmas Day 1941. We were training paratroops there too but we were on a special job so I can't say much about it. Malta at this time was suffering under the German raids. In the two weeks we were there we had no less than one hundred and fifty-six raids. We really got used to the raids for they came at all hours of the day and night. Again I had some near escapes. Our kite was blown to bits on the ground in one attack so when it was time to make our departure we had to take to the sea. We had to make a criss-cross journey by way of Egypt and Africa sailing most of the way. But I wasn't sea-sick again.

Back in England I rejoined my squadron and received the commission which had been waiting for me since October 1941. I did one more operational trip to the enemy submarine base of Lorient and then I was shifted to the first RCAF Bomber Squadron to be formed in Britain. They were converting from Wellington two-engined bombers to Halifax four-engined bombers and I went along as an instructor. This famous squadron just finished its conversion in time for the four big one thousand bomber raids on Germany and I went out on every one of them and that brought my number of 'ops' up to seventeen.

Then, with the formation of the new RCAF Bomber Group I was promoted to Squadron Leader and became the Chief Ground Instructor to a Conversion Squadron which provides instruction for all members of crews coming off two-engined kites to go onto the big stuff. I rather like the work I'm doing. It's true I'm not flying any more – I hope to get a trip in though now and again – but I know how valuable proper instruction is and, of course, the training back home in Canada for air crews can never properly reach the pitch of operational instruction and that is our job. Under me are twenty-five instructors and the Commanding Officer of the outfit is Wing Commander Bob Turnbull, DFC, who also comes from Saskatchewan.

That's about all of my story. Perhaps I haven't stressed enough the "flying upside down over the Alps" sort of stuff. The only real shaky 'do' I had was once when we crash-landed with a full bomb load. We had just got up when the engines cut and we began to lose height. We were just able to make an aerodrome where we crashed into some defence barriers. Fortunately the bomb load didn't go up otherwise I wouldn't be able to write this. Nor were we hurt. We were just bruised a bit. The most exciting part of any trip, in my opinion, is the waiting for the take off when we are all pretty jumpy. Once we are in the air and have settled down to our various jobs – well, we have something to do to keep our minds occupied.

MILLER, S/L Ronald Duncan (J3263) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - No.3 SFTS - Award effective 14 November 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2684/44 dated 15 December 1944. Born in Riverhurst, Saskatchewan, 26 September 1915. Clerk accountant for four years; postmaster for two years. Enlisted in Regina, 3 June 1940 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto. To No.1 ITS, 14 June 1940. Promoted LAC, 19 July 1940; posted next day to Moose Jaw Aero Club; to No.1 SFTS, 14 September 1940; may have graduated 21 November 1940 but not commissioned until 1 January 1941. To Central Flying School, 11 January 1941. Posted to No.3 SFTS, 26 February 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 July 1942. To Central Flying School, Trenton, 25 March 1943. Returned to No.3 SFTS, 18 April 1943. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 August 1943. To AFHQ, 20 July 1944. Attended Empire Central Flying School, Hullavington, England, 20 July to 5 December 1944. To No.2 Air Command, 7 December 1944. To No.4 SFTS, 12 December 1944. Released 21 May 1945. Rejoined RCAF in Regina, 21 January 1952 as a Primary Reserve Officer (131629), serving with No.435 Squadron from 23 February 1952 to 10 March 1952; same unit again, 17 January 1953 to 7 February 1953, and finally from 6 October to 21 October 1956. Transferred to Supplemental Reserve, 10 April 1958. Died at Riverhurst, Saskatchewan, 4 January 1981 as per Legion Magazine of July 1981.

This officer has been employed on flying training for the past three years and throughout this period has shown exceptional zeal and competence in the execution of his duties.

The original recommendation was for an Air Force Cross and raised by G/C W.R. Irwin on 12 July 1944. His appointment was that of Squadron Commander and Acting Chief Instructor; he had flown 1,775 hours (146 in previous six months) of which 1,337 were instructional (115 in previous six months). Text was as follows:

Employed in training since March 1, 1941. Has shown exceptional zeal and devotion to duty. Has shown unusual willingness to study and apply improved methods and has given freely of his time in passing on his knowledge to others and in the organization of instruction. Throughout, he has retained his enthusiasm and his work has been an excellent example and inspiration to junior officers.

On 1 August 1944, A/V/M G.R. Howsam (Air Officer Commanding, No.4 Training Command) recommended a change to Commendation and this was followed through to AFHQ, Notes: As of 24 December 1945 he recorded his total flying as 2,003 hours 20 minutes (all non-operational) of which 303.35 was single-engine and 1,699.45 was multi-engine. Types flown were Crane (1,111.20), Harvard (121.45), Moth (63.25), Anson (474), Nomad (18.10), Oxford (38.40), Lockheed 10 and 12 (30), Magister (9.20), Hurricane (5.45), Hudson and Ventura (eight hours).

Selected Assessments: "Examining Officer and is now acting Squadron Commander and doing a good job." (W/C J.L. Berven, No.3 SFTS, Calgary, 6 January 1943).

"This officer has been doing a very good job as Squadron Commander since 3 March 1943 in the rank of Flight Lieutenant. It is the considered opinion of the undersigned that this officer merits promotion to higher rank. It is therefore recommended that he be immediately promoted to the rank of Acting Squadron Leader." (S/L M.C. McDiarmid, No.3 SFTS, 27 July 1943).

"A conscientious and capable officer who has been carrying out the duties of Acting Chief Instructor very capably. A valuable officer who profits by experience." (W/C W.R. Irwin, No.3 SFTS, 23 November 1943).

"This officer has maintained a good average standard throughout the course. He is not outstanding in any respect, but the course should have served to broaden his horizon and to make him more valuable in a position of authority. His essay and course record were of good average standard." (W/C A.C. Kermode, Empire Central Flying School, 29 November 1944, noting that course had been 23 August to 22 November 1944, and that he had flown 107 hours 35 minutes. Other instructors noted he was quiet but competent.)

MILLER, Sergeant (now WO1) Thomas Breech (R64816) - George Medal - No.78 Squadron - Award effective 6 January 1942 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1870/42 dated 20 November 1942. Born in Waubaushene, Ontario, 6 May 1921; home in Saint John, New Brunswick; enlisted in Moncton, 18 July 1940. To No.1 Manning Depot, 2 August 1940. To No.8 (BR) Squadron, 16 August 1940. To No.1 ITS, 11 October 1940; graduated and promoted LAC, 8 November 1940; posted that day to No.1 AOS; to No.1 BGS, 2 February 1941; promoted Sergeant, 15 March 1941 and posted that date to No.1 ANS. To Embarkation Depot, 4 May 1941; to RAF overseas, 18 May 1941. To No.19 OTU, 15 June 1941; to No.78 Squadron, 30 August 1941. First operation was 2 September 1941 (Frankfurt); second operation was 6 September 1941 and brought him the George Medal. Following medical treatment he rejoined the squadron, flying four operations - 11 February 1942 (Le Havre, on Whitleys, after which unit converts to Halifax aircraft), 29 April 1942 (Ostend), 30 May 1942 (Cologne), and 1 June 1942 (Hamburg). Shot down and taken prisoner on this last sortie. Commissioned while a POW (1 June 1943, J96500); released and in UK, 12 May 1945. Repatriated 1 June 1945. Released 2 October 1945. Died in Thunder Bay, 10 August 1996 as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of March/April 1997. Obituary notice stated that following his second crash he spent four days in a dinghy off the Dutch coast, paralyzed with a back injury, until rescued by Germans. Following the war he studied history at the University of Toronto and diplomatic history at the London School of Economics (Ph.D., 1954). Accepted a teaching position with Lakehead Technical Institute (later Lakehead University); active in Canadian Institute of International Affairs and numerous local organizations. Retired in 1988.

One night in September 1941, Sergeant Miller was the air observer of an aircraft which, following a successful attack on a target in North West Germany, had been attacked by an enemy fighter. The controls were damaged, and the starboard engine was put out of action, and the pilot had to effect a forced landing. The aircraft landed heavily with undercarriage retracted, came to rest half over a hedge, and caught fire.

The rear gunner and second wireless operator were only slightly injured and escaped from the rear of the aircraft. Sergeant Miller was also uninjured and escaped through the top hatch. He then noticed that the pilot and first wireless operator were still in the aircraft, which was now blazing furiously.

Undeterred, Sergeant Miller re-entered the aircraft through the top hatch and found the captain lying in a dazed condition, as he had been wounded about the face and head. Sergeant Miller pulled the captain through the hatch and carried him away from the aircraft. He returned for the first wireless operator, who was lying in the rear of the cabin, very badly hurt and with his clothing on fire.

Sergeant Miller succeeded in lifting him through the hatch and carried him to a place of safety, where he beat out the flames from the injured man's clothing with his hands, after rolling him on the ground in an attempt to smother them. The flares, oxygen bottles, ammunition and petrol tanks began to explode immediately after Sergeant Miller got clear of the aircraft. He received severe burns to his hands while rescuing his comrades, whose lives were undoubtedly saved by his prompt and extremely brave action.

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on the sortie that ended in his capture. Halifax R9364, target Essen, 1-2 June 1942. This was one of three Halifaxes of No.78 Squadron lost on this mission; the others were W1143 and W7698. It was airborne at 2303 hours, 1 June 1942 from Croft. Damaged by flak which caused the rudders to stall, followed by a flat spin into the sea off the Dutch coast. On impact the fuselage broke into two sections and the two survivors were thrown into the sea. Both were quite badly hurt, but they managed to get into the dinghy and were rescued four days later by a German vessel. Crew consisted of P/O J.S.Lawson, RCAF (killed), Sergeant R. McGlen (killed), Flight Sergeant T.B.Miller GM, RCAF (POW), Sergeant D.E.West (killed), Sergeant W. Thompson (killed), P/O P.J.Jones (POW). Jones was interned in Camp L3, POW number 550; Miller was held in Camps L3, L1, L6, L4, and L1, POW number 514.

Note: An on-line history of Lakehead University includes the following:

Who first thought of creating a postsecondary educational institution in the Canadian Lakehead? It is hard to say, but the first visible action was when Mayor Fred Robinson put the idea before the Port Arthur city council and got its support. Lakehead Technical Institute, established on June 4, 1946, by an Order-in-Council of the Province of Ontario, was the first result of his proposal.

A critical move toward developing a university-level institution was the hiring in 1955 of Thomas Breech Miller, PhD, a war hero and a recent doctoral graduate in History from the University of London. Miller had served in the Royal Canadian Air Force, survived being shot down twice, spent four years as a prisoner of war in Germany, and was the first Canadian to win the George Medal. As an undergraduate supported by the Department of Veterans Affairs, he had not concentrated on getting top marks. Instead he concentrated on getting as broad an education as possible. Thus when Lakehead Tech asked him to teach first-year History, English, Philosophy, and Political Science, he accepted with alacrity. By all reports he taught those four Arts subjects successfully and, one by one, established the needed departments.

With his foot in the door, Miller along with Doug Fisher and many others agitated for the establishment of Lakehead University which came about when The Lakehead University Act, 1965, was given royal assent by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. Miller headed the History department and for one year doubled up as Director of Extension, which meant sending faculty members out to teach weekend courses in every Northwestern Ontario community large enough to have a high school. Miller received offers for appointments to more prestigious universities but turned them all down. His heart was in the Lakehead, his wife's home town, and in Lakehead University where he was a prominent figure until his retirement. He died in 1996.

MILLER, S/L Thomas Langford (C1431) - Member, Order of the British Empire - Station Sea Island - Award effective 13 June 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 660/46 dated 5 July 1946. Born 8 September 1906 in Winnipeg (published in War Service Records, 1939-1945, Canadian Bank of Commerce, 1947). Educated at Public and High Schools in Brandon. Bank Clerk (Bank of Commerce). Enlisted 30 November 1939 as Equipment Officer. As of 1 November 1940 he was a Flight Lieutenant and as of 27 March 1941 he was at No.3 SFTS. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 January 1942. To Western Air Command, 22 April 1942. To No.4 Group Headquarters, 6 September 1943. To No.32 OTU, 9 April 1944. To No.6 OTU, 31 May 1944. To Sea Island, 19 November 1944. To Western Air Command Headquarters, 3 October 1946. Released 9 October 1946.

This officer has been an outstanding example to officers and other ranks of his section. He has been cheerful and co-operative under all conditions and has maintained an excellent standard of efficiency in personnel under his command, which has contributed noticeably to the general efficiency of the station.

MILLER, P/O William Donald (J85773) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.434 Squadron - Award effective 4 November 1944 as per London Gazette dated 17 November 1944 and AFRO 239/45 dated 9 February 1945. Born 10 April 1922 in Peachland, British Columbia; home there (farm labourer); enlisted in Vancouver, 26 January 1942. To No.3 Manning Depot, 8 March 1942. To No.4 ITS, 6 June 1942; graduated and promoted LAC on 31 July 1942 but not posted to No.2 AOS until 29 August 1942; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 18 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, 2 January 1943; to RAF, 25 January 1943. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 18 June 1943. Commissioned 4 April 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 4 October 1944. Repatriated 24 December 1944. To Western Air Command, 13 January 1945. Released 19 July 1945. Medal presented in Vancouver, 22 October 1949. Died 23 March 2008, possibly in Cranbrook, British Columbia. No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.3080 (RG.24 Vol.20636) has recommendation dated 20 August 1944 when he had flown 38 sorties (190 hours 35 minutes), 29 January to 14 August 1944 (98 "points"). Navigator to P/O Hegseth.

This officer has completed a notable tour of thirty-eight operations. An exceptional navigator, his skill, cheerful confidence and unceasing vigilance have been largely responsible for the successful completion of many missions. His courage and determination to make every sortie a success have won high praise.

MILLER, S/L Wilmer Earl (J8654) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.432 Squadron - Award effective 23 November 1945 as per London Gazette dated 4 December and AFRO 212/46 dated 1 March 1946. Born in Hagersville, Ontario, 7 March 1917; home there (Department of Highways employee); enlisted in Hamilton, 20 December 1940 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To No.1A Manning Depot, 8 January 1941; to No.31 SFTS (guard duty), 17 March 1941; to No.3 ITS, 4 May 1941; graduated and promoted LAC on 1 July 1941; posted that day to No.15 EFTS; graduated 20 August 1941 and posted to No.11 SFTS; graduated and commissioned 7 November 1941 To No.6 SFTS, date uncertain. Promoted Acting Flying Officer, 1 June 1942; confirmed in rank, 1 October 1942. To Mountain View, 11 October 1942. To Debert, 24 September 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 21 October 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 7 November 1943. Repatriated 11 September 1946. Released 25 October 1946. Medal presented 9 April 1948. Rejoined RCAF Auxiliary at Sea Island, 17 September 1950, serving with No.2442 Aircraft Control and Warning Unit. Released 1 May 1951. Appears to have moved to England (Stainer, Middlesex). No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty". DHist file 181.009 D.2618 (RG.24 Vol.20627) has recommendation dated 15 May 1945 when he had flown 27 sorties (179 hours five minutes) between 23 October 1944 and 13 April 1945.

The above mentioned officer has completed twenty-seven operational sorties over some of the most heavily defended targets in Germany as captain of aircraft. In his capacity as Flight Commander his work has at all times been of a high standard. His cheerful confidence and courage has inspired a high standard of morale in his crew and has been an inspiration to those associated with the squadron.

This officer has completed 38 operational sorties, all of them with the Pathfinder Force. Thirty-five of these sorties have been as Marker and the crew, of which he is a member, have on a great many occasions acted a Master Bomber. Flight Lieutenant Milligan, as Air Bomber, has always set his mind on the task in hand, and with utter disregard to self. His courage, skill and determination has set a fine example to the squadron.

The website "Lost Bombers" has details of sortie when he was shot down, 6 October 1944. Lancaster PB241 (MG-X) of No.7 Squadron, target Scholven-Buer. This aircraft was delivered to No.7 Squadron in July 1944. When lost this aircraft had a total of 159 hours. PB241 was one of two unit Lancasters lost on this operation; the other was PA964. Airborne at 1502 hours, 6 October 1944 from Oakington. Shot down by flak. Crew consisted of Cause of loss and crash-site not established. Crew was F/O R.G.Beaune, RCAF (POW), Sergeant J.G.Forster (POW), Flight Sergeant F.G.Etheridge, RCAF (POW), Flight Sergeant K.I.R.Milligan, RCAF (navigator, POW), Flight Sergeant A.C.Davidson, RAAF (killed), Flight Sergeant W.H.Sweet (POW), Flight Sergeant W.A.McWilliam, RCAF (air gunner, killed). F/O R.G.Beaune was interned in Camp L3. (POW number .8225) with Flight Sergeant Milligan, (POW number 8240). Flight Sergeant Etheridge held in Camp L7 (POW number 1067) with Sergeant Forster, (POW number 1021 and Flight Sergeant Sweet (POW number 1084).

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire based on interview of 16 May 1945. He stated he had flown 55 sorties.

Normal trip to target area. Hit by flak on runup about 8-10 miles from release point. Feathered both port engines and continued on track to bomb target. This happened southeast of Wesel on track to target. Prepared to abandon aircraft at this time. After bombing gave course of 355 True until clear of Wesel, then turned onto 270 True for our own lines. The engines I believe must have been restarted at this time. The fire caught again and the pilot gave orders to bale out. Mid-Upper and Rear Gunner and Wireless Operator had been given orders to stay near rest position but thought they must have gone back. Engineer went out front hatch followed by Navigator.

Training: Interviewed at Vancouver Recruiting Centre, 13 March 1942 when described as "Alert and active, very keen to fly. Good aircrew."

At No.7 ITS he placed 61st in a class of 119. "A good type airman - Scotch background. Keen for pilot and action. States a preference for seaplanes. Is alert and active and can apply self but worries a bit over minor difficulties. Should have no difficulty in making a satisfactory service pilot." (W/C L.C. Russell).

At No.6 EFTS he logged 27.35 dual and 17.25 solo daytime on Tiger Moths and three hours night dual on same. Also logged ten hours in Link. Appears to have had a minor accident, 16 February 1943. "Progress test revealed this airman to lack good airmanship. It is considered he would do the wrong thing in an emergency. Instrument flying was found to be definitely below average. This airman is strictly a mechanical pilot. LAC Milligan has been re-selected as an Air Bomber by the Unit re-selection board and posted to No.2 Manning Depot, Branson, effective 18 February 1943." (S/L A.T. Chesson, Chief Flying Instructor).

Course at No.2 BGS was 8 March to 30 May 1943. On bombing training flew in Anson aircraft (29.50 day, 7.15 night). In all he dropped 97 bombs by day (high level), 34 bombs by day (low level), and twelve bombs by night (high level). Most exercises involved dropping six bombs. He also took gunnery training on Bolingbroke (17.20 by day) and spent thirteen hours in turret manipulation. Deemed average in bombing and gunnery, placed 27th in a class of 31.

Course at No.7 AOS was 31 May to 9 July 1943. Flew in Anson aircraft (24.30 day, 23.25 night). Marked as follows: Navigation, day air work (210/300), Navigation, night air work (140/200), Bombing air work (213/300), Photography air work (156/200), Elements of Navigation (146/200), Signals, practical (250/250), Photography (93/100), Reconnaissance (126/150), Aircraft Recognition (212/250). Placed 19th in a class of 41. Although described as "average bomb aimer" his navigation was assessed as follows - Day: "Has shown considerable improvement after a poor start. Not quite enough Reconnaissance observations, but pinpointing ability is above average." Night: "Seems interested and asks many questions. Never makes the same mistake twice. Makes it a point to understand everything thoroughly." Overall described as "Near appearance, good bearing and seems well liked by rest of class; keen, active and reliable."

Note: Application for Operational Wing and Bar dated 28 May 1945 stated he had flown a total of 55 sorties, 15 March to 6 October 1944.

MILLIKEN, P/O Samuel Ethelbert MacLeod (J86842) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.425 Squadron - Award effective 3 October 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. Born 24 May 1916 in Hamilton; educated at Earl Kitchener Public School (Hamilton), Lobo Continuing Education School and London Central Collegiate. Home in Toronto (book keeper). Enlisted in Galt, 28 August 1940 as Airframe Mechanic. To No.6 Repair Depot, 9 October 1940. Promoted AC1, 26 November 1940. To No.8 Repair Depot, 11 January 1941. Promoted LAC, 1 July 1941. Remustered to aircrew and posted on 20 August 1942 to No.2 ITS; course completed 24 October 1942). To No.15 EFTS, 6 November 1942. Course completed 30 December 1942. To No.3 SFTS, 9 January 1943. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 30 April 1943. To "Y" Depot, date uncertain. To RAF overseas, 26 May 1943; disembarked in Britain,, 4 June 1943. To No.11 (Pilots) AFU, 27 July 1943 (Oxfords, 83.30). Detached to No.1534 Beam Approach Training Flight, 10-17 August 1943. To No.24 OTU, 5 October 1943 (Whitley aircraft, 97.40). Promoted Flight Sergeant, 30 October 1943. To No.61 Base, 5 January 1944. Attached to No.1664 Heavy Conversion Unit, 2 February 1944 (Halifax, 32.40). To No.425 Squadron, 3 March 1944. Commissioned 1 June 1944. To No.86 OTU, 16 September 1944. To No.18 OTU, 15 October 1944. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 December 1944. Repatriated to Canada on 22 January 1945. To No.1 Air Command, 2 February 1945. To Test and Evaluation Center, 4 March 1945. Accepted for postwar RCAF (service number 20446), Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 January 1946. Medal presented by Governor General, 10 December 1947. To No.412 Squadron, 19 April 1948. To Station Rockcliffe, 22 September 1950. Appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Governor General, 1 November 1950, serving to 8 November 1952. To Station London, 9 November 1952 for service with Personnel Selection Unit. To No.102 Communications and Rescue Flight, Trenton, 11 March 1957. Attended RCAF Searchmaster Course, Trenton, 21-24 October 1957. To Station Trenton, 3 July 1960. Detached to Resolute Bay, 18 July to 3 September 1960. To AFHQ, Ottawa, 16 January 1961. Postwar in RCAF (service number 20446), Retired 3 December 1963. Later he taught in Carleton Board of Education and was prominent in Meals on Wheels program. Photo PL-128271 is a portrait taken at Trenton, 1959. Died in Ottawa, 5 September 1986, aged 71, as per Airforce Magazine of January-February-March 1987.

This officer has completed a tour of operational duty during which he has successfully attacked very many enemy targets. He has invariably displayed a high standard of gallantry and determination, setting a fine example to his crew. On one occasion, Pilot Officer Milliken was detailed to attack Karlsruhe. Very early on the outward flight the distant reading compass became unserviceable. Some other necessary equipment also became useless. Despite this, Pilot Officer Milliken continued his mission. When over enemy territory icing conditions were encountered and shortly before the target the airspeed indicator became unserviceable. Even so, this determined pilot executed a successful attack in the face of considerable fire from the ground defences. He afterwards flew to base where he effected a safe landing, although deprived of the effective use of the brakes on touching down. His resolution on this occasion was typical of that which he has shown throughout his tour.

The original recommendation by W/C Lionel Lecomte is in DHH file 181.009 D.1730 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20607); drafted 10 August 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (158 hours 50 minutes) as follows:

15 March 1944 - Stuttgart (7.10, second pilot)
9 April 1944 - Villeneuve St. Georges (5.45)
10 April 1944 - Ghent (4.10)
22 April 1944 - Dusseldorf (5.35)
24 April 1944 - Karlsruhe (7.35)
26 April 1944 - Essen (4.40)
27 April 1944 - Aulnoye (4.20)
30 April 1944 - Somain (4.20)
1 May 1944 - St. Ghislain (4.45)
8 May 1944 - Haine St. Pierre (4.10)
10 May 1944 - Ghent (3.50)
12 May 1944 - Louvain (4.45)
19 May 1944 - Merville (4.05)
22 May 1944 - Le Mans (4.55)
31 May 1944 - Au Fevre (4.30)
2 June 1944 - Neufchatel (3.40)
5 June 1944 - Houlgate (5.05)
6 June 1944 - Coutrances (4.25)
7 June 1944 - Acheres (4.40)
21 June 1944 - St. Martin (4.00)
23 June 1944 - Bientiques (4.25)
24 June 1944 - Bamieres (3.55)
27 June 1944 - Foret d'Eawy (4.20)
3 July 1944 - Biennais (4.30)
12 July 1944 - Thiverny (5.10)
15 July 1944 - Nucourt (4.40)
17 July 1944 - Caen area, A.1 (4.40)
18 July 1944 - Wesseling (5.05)
20 July 1944 - Foret de Forestel (1.45, duty not carried out)
24 July 1944 - Ferfay (4.05)

25 July 1944 - Stuttgart (7.50)
28 July 1944 - Hamburg (6.10)
30 July 1944 - Amaye sur Seulles (5.20)

A veteran pilot of 32 operational sorties, this officer has participated in attacks on such heavily defended targets as Karlsruhe, Stuttgart, Dusseldorf, Essen and Hamburg. By his display of courage, skill and initiative in all these operations, he has provided a fine example to his crew.

On one occasion [24 April 1944] he was pilot of a Halifax bomber detailed to attack Karlsruhe. While the aircraft was still over England, both the "Gee" and the Distant Reading Compass became unserviceable. With praiseworthy determination, Pilot Officer Milliken decided to continue to the target. Icing conditions were encountered and shortly before the target was reached the Airspeed Indicator became unserviceable. Despite heavy flak opposition and the presence of numerous searchlights, this courageous pilot successfully bombed the target. Due to defective air pressure the landing at base had to be effected without brakes. Under these trying conditions, Pilot Officer Milliken executed a skillful landing, thus safe-guarding lives and much valuable equipment.

This officer's superb airmanship and leadership have been an inspiration to others. I consider that these qualities, as well as his outstanding devotion to duty, fully merit the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Notes: On repatriation form dated 11 January 1945 he stated he had flown 37 sorties (181 operational hours) plus 240.25 non-operational. Last sortie was 31 September [sic] 1944.

A summary of his flying to 31 December 1956 listed the following types and times - Tiger Moth (60.20), Cornell (2.20), Norseman (109.45), Harvard (63.05), Crane (146.05), Anson (87.20), Oxford (83.30), Whitley (104.15), Hudson (144.00), Canso (26.00), Goose (50.25), Mitchell (1.55), Expeditor (663.05), Dakota (1,308.10), Lancaster (13.50), Liberator (2.00), Privateer (7.00), Halifax (277.25), Powered Glider (28.40), Helicopter (300.50) and North Star (32.20).

Training: Course at No.2 ITS was 31 August to 24 October 1942. Courses in Mathematics, Law and Discipline, Navigation, General Studies, Anti-Gas, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill, Signals (written) and Meteorology. Scored 722 points of a possible 1,000. Placed 80th in a class of 133. "He is a quiet and serious minded airman. He is comparative and willing and an excellent team worker. He should do well in aircrew."

Course at No.15EFTS was 9 November to 30 December 1942. Tiger Moth aircraft - 8.20 dual to first solo, 34.00 day dual, 29.40 day solo, 3.20 night dual and 40 minutes night solo. Was seven hours on instruments. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written and practical), Aircraft Recognition, and Signals (written). Scored 406 points of a possible 700. Placed 32nd in a class of 32. "Below average student. Inclined to be too sure of himself, there by not getting ahead as he might, Personal discipline is only fair, This airman has shown good progress for amount of time. A little rough but will improve with experience."

Course at No.3 SFTS was 11 January to 30 April 1943. Crane aircraft - 62.30 day dual (7.05 to first solo), 59.55 day solo, 7.45 night dual, 9.15 night solo. Was ten hours in formation and 19.55 on instruments. Also did four hours day dual in Ansons. Ground courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written and practical), Aircraft Recognition, Signals (written and practical) and Meteorology. Scored 573 of a possible 700 points. Placed 51st in a class of 57. "Average pilot, much too tense while in the air, careless of airspeed on gliding and descending turns. Seems to try a little too hard; is very reliable and cooperative. Good service background, quiet and well spoken,"

MILLMAN, S/L Peter MacKenzie (C3964) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - AFHQ - Award effective 1 January 1946 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 82/46 dated 25 January 1946. Born in Toronto, 10 August 1906. Home in Toronto. Initially interested in mountain climbing but about 1924 developed a passion for astronomy. Enrolled in University of Toronto, 1925, graduating in 1929; member of COTC while there. Employed at the Dominion Astrophysical Laboratory, Victoria, 1927-1929. Next attended Harvard University, securing MA and PhD. Taken up by the David Dunlap Observatory, Toronto, 1935. Enlisted in the RCAF in Toronto, 20 January 1941 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon. To No.1 ANS, River, 2 February 1941. Graded as Navigation Officer and Flying Officer as of 12 April 1941. To No.1 AOS, Malton, 14 April 1941. To No.1 ANS, Rivers, 5 September 1941. To No.2 ANS, Pennfield Ridge, 22 January 1942. To No.1 CNS, Rivers, 25 May 1942. To AFHQ, 20 September 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 October 1942. Promoted Acting Squadron Leader, 12 June 1943. To Temporary Duty in Washington, 9 August 1943. To No.5 Manning Depot, 31 August 1943. To RCAF Overseas Headquarters, United Kingdom, 13 September 1943. Confirmed as Squadron Leader, 1 January 1944. Repatriated 16 December 1944. To AFHQ, 18 December 1944. Re-engaged for Interim Force, 11 April 1946. Retired 26 June 1946 and joined the staff of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa and subsequently the National Research Council. On strength of RCAF Reserve, Aeronautical Engineering Branch, 30 May 1952 to 3 July 1952 with rank of Squadron Leader for special duties - travel to Japan to obtain first-hand information on atomic bomb effects and to study RCAF navigational methods. He was also prominent in the 1963 version of Operation "Eclipse". A member of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada for 65 years, he was its President from 1960 to 1962. Died in Ottawa, 11 December 1990. A crater on Mars and a planetoid (2904 Millman) are named for him. See <http://ufo-joe.tripod.com/gov/millman.html> for a detailed biography.

As head of the Operational Research Centre at Air Force Headquarters, this officer has prepared a mass of scientific statistics most reliable in analyzing past overseas operations and preparing plans for future activities. During his tour of duty overseas he was the senior Operational Research Centre officer and he carried out a number of flights in operational aircraft to test and study airborne radar equipment. He contributed greatly to scientific warfare, particularly bombing operations and anti-submarine activities. He headed the Royal Canadian Air Force Scientific Eclipse party in his capacity of officer-in-charge of operational research, member of the Radio Wave Propagation Committee and as an astronomer and navigator. To ensure complete photographic coverage of the phenomena, this officer prepared all the intricate scientific statistics relating to aerial navigation for the three aircraft as it was most important that they be on the correct course at the precise time of totality. He was responsible for the installation of a stereoscope camera mount in the aircraft. Without Squadron Leader Millman's 100 percent activity in preparing this scientific expedition and his skilfulness in navigating the main photographic aircraft under trying conditions, the Royal Canadian Air Force co-operation would not have been so successful.

The recommendation was raised about 25 July 1945 by A/V/M W.A. Curtis. It stated he had flown 747 hours (57 in previous six months) of which 541 had been instructional. It also credited him with 46 operational hours and three sorties (not stated where or when). Although similar to the above, the original text was as follows:

As head of the Operational Research Centre at Air Force Headquarters, this officer has prepared a mass of scientific statistics most reliable in analyzing past overseas operations and preparing plans for future activities. During his tour of duty overseas he was the senior Operational Research Centre officer and he carried out a number of flights in operational aircraft to test and study airborne radar equipment. He contributed greatly to scientific warfare, particularly bombing operations and anti-submarine activities.

Squadron Leader Millman is a Navigator (Non-Flying List) on leave of absence from the David Dunlap Observatory, University of Toronto. He headed the Royal Canadian Air Force Scientific Eclipse party in his capacity of officer-in-charge of operational research, member of the Radio Wave Propagation Committee and as an astronomer and navigator. To ensure complete photographic coverage of the phenomena, this officer prepared all the intricate scientific statistics relating to aerial navigation for the three aircraft as it was most important that they be on the correct course at the precise time of totality. The period of totality lasted approximately 35 seconds. Squadron Leader Millman personally navigated the B-25 Mitchell aircraft at a height of 26,000 feet. Excellent photos were obtained at the various heights from the seven cameras and as the main ground observation party was clouded out, the RCAF photos will be of immense value. As far as is known, this was the first time in the world that photos of an eclipse have been taken at over 27,000 feet and the first time stereoscopic photography has been carried out in the air.

He was responsible for the installation of a stereoscope camera mount in the aircraft. Without Squadron Leader Millman's 100 percent activity in preparing this scientific expedition and his skilfulness in navigating the main photographic aircraft under trying conditions, the Royal Canadian Air Force co-operation would not have been so successful.

Subsequently cleared AFHQ Awards Committee, 20 November 1945.

Notes: Upon application to the RCAF he provided a remarkable statement of his life and career to that point:

High school education at the Canadian Academy, Kobe, Japan, 1920 to 1925. During the last three years of this period I was employed in teaching English at a number of Japanese Government schools. Entered the Mathematics and Physics course at the University of Toronto, September 1925, standing first with first class honours in each of the four years of the course. Graduated in the astronomy division in 1929 with the BA degree and the Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada. During the summers of 1927, 1928 and 1929, I was employed by the Civil Service of Canada as observing assistant at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, Victoria, B.C., part of my duties being to operate the 72-inch telescope and to make astronomical computations. In 1929 was appointed as assistant in Astronomy at the Harvard Observatory. This position was held till 1939 when the degree of AM was received from Harvard University. In 1931-32 was the Agassiz Fellow at the Harvard Observatory, receiving the degree of Ph.D. in 1932. Received a fellowship from the Royal Society of Canada to continue work at the Harvard Observatory, 1932-33. In September 1933 was appointed to the staff of the University of Toronto as Demonstrator in Astronomy, promoted to Lecturer in 1934. Since that time I have been on the staff of the Department of Astronomy in the University of Toronto, and since 1935 on the research staff of the David Dunlap Observatory, Richmond Hill.

My university teaching experience, dating from the fall of 1929, has consisted in giving lectures in both elementary and advanced astronomy to all grades of students. Also in conducting laboratory classes in all branches of astronomy. This practical work has included teaching the use of such instruments as the sextant, transit theodolite, transit instrument, astronomical telescope, astronomical cameras and spectrographs. The laboratory courses I have taught have covered, among other things, the principles of map making and navigation, and the determination of time, latitude and longitude.

My astronomical research experience has included photography with all sizes of astronomical telescope (including both the 72-inch in Victoria and the 74-inch at Richmond Hill), and work in the determination of radial velocities of stars. My chief field of research, however, has been in the study of meteors and other phenomena of the upper atmosphere of the earth. I have published over 30 scientific papers in these fields and, for the last seven years, have conducted in the Journal of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, a monthly department on meteoric astronomy.

For the past fifteen years photography has been my chief avocation and considerable experience has been gained in various fields, including infra red photography and stereoscopic colour work.

Course at No.1 ANS, Rivers, 2 February to 12 April 1941 entailed 41 hours 55 minutes flying in Anson aircraft. Described as "A first class air worker. Neat, thorough and accurate." Ground courses in DR (472/500), Compasses (182/200), Instruments (143/150), DF and W/T (95/100), Mathematics (98/100), Maps and Charts (136/150), Meteorology (127/150) and Astro Navigation (221/250). Placed first in a class of 16. Described as "Exceptional - a very capable man. Neat, accurate, fast and dependable. A good speaker."

He was routinely assessed as a superior navigation instructor. However, an assessment dated 17 August 1942 (S/L .S. Pitcairn, No.1 CNS, Rivers) struck an amusing note: "A most capable instructor. Carries his desire to explain a problem to such extremes that it is sometimes painful for the listener. This could be only a desire to explain thoroughly. Thorough and accurate."

A letter dated 5 September 1945 (G/C C.L. Annis to AFHQ) noted that Millman had that day given the 8th War Course (RCAF War Staff College) a "most interesting and valuable lecture" on Atomic Energy. "Although the subject was quite a technical one he presented his lecture in a most scholarly and understandable way."

On 24 May 1945, Air Commodore J.L. Plant recommended his promotion to Wing Commander.

Late in 1945 he prepared a statement of his service experience to date. This read, in part:

Served as navigation instructor at:

No.1 AOS, Malton, April 1941 to September 1941

No.1 ANS Rivers, September 1941 to January 1942

No.2 ANS, Pennfield Ridge, January 1942 to June 1942.

CNS, Rivers, June 1942 to September 1942.

While at Pennfield Ridge was in charge of all compass and airspeed indicator checks. Personally air swung between 100 and 200 compasses and carried out over 50 airspeed indicator checks in the air. On return to Rivers this work was carried on in cooperation with others.

Served as navigation staff officer in AMT/DAT from September 1942 to August 1943. During this period duties consisted of planning navigation syllabi and in writing and editing publications for use in navigation training.

In September 1943 was posted as Operational Research Officer to RCAF Overseas Headquarters. While on temporary duty with No.45 Transport Group, navigated a Mitchell across the Atlantic on a delivery flight.

Served as ORO in London from September 1943 to November 1944. In this capacity it was necessary to contact most of the leading research and development units in the United Kingdom. Special courses were attended at RAE, Farnborough and TRE, Malvern. Regular personal liaison was maintained with all Operational Research Sections in both the British and American Forces. ORO also acted as RCAF representative on five Air Ministry and Admiralty committees.

From December 1944 to the present the subject officer has served at AMAS/ORC, AFHW, Ottawa as officer in charge of all Operational Research Activity in the RCAF. This has involved the coordination of work carried out at EAC and WAC and the circulation of information obtained from England and the United States. ORC has sat as Air Force representative on the Anti-U-Boat and the Canadian Radio Wave Propagation Committees and has acted as Chairman of the RCAF Consulting Committee to the Inventions Board. In July 1945, ORC was in charge of "Operation Eclipse", on which significant photographs of the Total Eclipse of July 9, 1945 were secured. At present ORC is sitting on the Research and Navigation Sub-Committee for winter exercise Musk Ox.

The subject officer has to date completed 750 hours flying time, most of it navigational experience.

MILLS, F/L Charles Albert (C8043) - Mention in Despatches - Overseas - Award effective 22 March 1946 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 602/46 dated 14 June 1946. Born 13 June 1920. Home in Strathroy, Ontario; enlisted in London, Ontario, 8 April 1941 as Radio Mechanic and posted to No.1 Manning Depot. To University of Toronto, 23 May 1941. Commissioned 30 August 1941. To Trenton, 17 September 1941. Posted overseas in September 1941; promoted Flying Officer, 1 March 1942; promoted Flight Lieutenant, 18 February 1943. On loan to RNZAF, 11 December 1942 to early 1944. Served as Officer Commanding, No.52 Radar Unit, RNZAF Guadalcanal. Leaving that post in August 1943, he then served with No.61 Radar Squadron, RNZAF Rongatai. Repatriated 5 June 1946. Retired 21 June 1946. Radio Officer. No citation. C.M. Hanson, By Such Deeds: Honours and Awards in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, 1923-1999 (Volplane Press, Christchurch, 2001), has the text of a commendation sent by Lieutenant-General M.F. Harmon, Commanding General, 13th Air Force to the Commanding Officer, 18th Fighter Group which included No.52 Radar Unit:

As Commanding General United States Army Air Forces in the South Pacific area, I take great pleasure in commending you and the members of your organization who have been instrumental in the development and execution of the night fighter techniques used at Guadalcanal. The gratifying results obtained in recent interceptions of enemy aircraft attempting night raids on Henderson Field are evidence of complete coordination and cooperation of the controller, pilots, and the anti-aircraft, and all concerned.

Photo PL-25537 (left) shows him. Medal presented by Governor General at Government House, 14 November 1950. Died in Minto, New Brunswick, 25 March, 1987 as per Royal Canadian Legion "Last Post" website and Legion Magazine of June 1987.

Flight Lieutenant Mills has always shown great determination and enthusiasm for his work and has pressed home his attacks against some of the most heavily defended European targets with the utmost zeal. As captain of aircraft he has shown fine qualities of leadership and a total disregard of danger.

MILLS, F/O Jacques George, DFC (J17195) - Croix de Guerre (France) - Overseas - Awarded as per AFRO 1619/45 dated 19 October 1945. Public Records Office Air 2/8769 has recommended citation but does not identify unit.

This officer has taken part in more than 50 operational flights. He has, at all times, proved himself to possess great determination and, as commander of a section of four aircraft, he has set a fine example and achieved excellent results.

The genesis of this award appears to be French Republic Air Force Order No.20, issued on the authority of General Bouscat (Inspector General of the Army Air Force, Commanding the Active Air Force), dated 5 February 1945, for D/L J.G. Mills:

Whilst in operations having contributed directly and efficiently to the liberation of France, this officer completed more than fifty missions. On every occasion, he has proved himself capable of great decisions. At the head of a squadron of four aircraft he has been singled for his remarkable leadership, bringing his squadron to a magnificent success.

Notes in his file state that in October 1943, with No.624 Squadron, he was commanding a flight of a Detachment of five aircraft in North Africa. "He continued to operate there, completing a second tour in March 1944, having flown 250 operational hours comprising 33 sorties. However, he continued to fly operationally until the end of April, doing an additional seven trips, and was then repatriated to the United Kingdom."

Notes: On repatriation form dated 5 August 1944 he stated he had flown two tours (68 sorties, 450 operational hours), the last on 30 April 1944. Total overseas hours were 760 (60 on Oxfords, 100 on Wellingtons, 600 on Halifaxes).

Attending Transport Conversion course, 14 May-22 July 1945, he was assessed in Flying Tests as follows: General Flying (316/400), Applied Flying (156/200), Instrument Flying (205/250), Night Flying (79/1000 and Link (38/50). Ground exams in Air Regulations (82/100), Weight and Balance (79/100), Engines (124/150), Meteorology (108/150), Navigation (168/200), RR and SBA (71/100), Signals, written (88/100), Signals, written (115/150) and Signals, Morse (48/50). "High average range pilot - instrument flying above average. Loop orientation weak. General knowledge very high. This officer shows confidence, initiative and will make a good Captain."

On 14 December 1947 he listed types flown and hours as follows: Anson (112.20, last flown May 1942), Beechcraft (33.00, last flown February 1947), Dakota (600.00, last flown March 1947), Fleet (56.40, last flown August 1941), Fortress (400, last flown July 1946), Halifax (1,200, last flown April 1944), Liberator (520, last flown January 1947), Oxford (120.10, last flown May 1943), C-54 Skymaster (15,00, last flown February 1947) and Wellington (435.00, last flown August 1942).

On 31 December 1956 stated he had flown 8,467 hours 15 minutes; he listed types and hours as follows: Fleet (51.40), Anson (153.55), Oxford (55.20), Hampden (150.45), Wellington (126.10), Whitley (75.45), Lancaster (65.35), Liberator (1,019.20), Fortress (239.17), C-54 (23.15), North Star (476.40), Halifax (611.10), Goose (75.30), Lodestar (25.35), Dakota (4,402.00) and C-45 (211.10).

As of June 1962 he had logged 309 hours on Neptunes and 1,092 hours on the Argus (218 in 1961, 458 in 1962).

Selected Assessments: "On the organization of No.426 (Transport) Squadron at Dorval-Lachine, Quebec, the subject officer was sent in to take over the camp from the Department of Public Works, open it up and establish a basic organization to handle the influx of the bulk of the squadron. This he accomplished with efficiency and despatch in spite of lack of experience in such matters and a shortage of equipment. // Later he was appointed Works and Buildings Officer in the absence of an established Foreman of Works and was responsible for the renovation of the station which included over-seeing of contractors and the organization of 'self-help' schemes which resulted in the redecoration of messes and institutes, etc. // At the same time he was flying as a Captain-Pilot and commenced the organization of a training scheme for Dakota and North Star aircraft with considerable success in spite of inadequate equipment. // His interest in the unit is such that he has used his private automobile on service duties or squadron requirements when Motor Transport was not available and has frequently spent small sums of his own money for items required urgently that could not be covered by Local Purchase. His interest and unselfishness contributed in a large part to the speedy organization and pleasant living conditions enjoyed by this unit. // Flight Lieutenant Mills is energetic and active, works hard and plays hard and is only happy when kept busy. His ability to make men work with and for him and his own dependability are his outstanding assets well backed up by those requirements necessary in a Regular Force Officer." (S/L C.R. Knowles, Flight Commander, No.426 Squadron, 1 October 1947).

"This officer lives, breathes and thinks Air Force to such an extent that it has been almost impossible to prevail upon him to take even a portion of his annual leave. His natural ability as a leader of men combined with his ability to drive them when necessary makes him an ideal officer to use when concentrated effort is required. As Deputy Flight Commander, Training Officer, Captain Pilot, he has been largely responsible for the high standard of aircrew ability prevailing in this unit and his interest and personal endeavor in the general direction of the squadron have been exemplary. He recieves only additional experience as an administrative officer to qualify himself as exceptional in all respects. Highly recommended for retention on a Long Term Commission basis. Other employment - instructor." (S/L C.R. Knowles, No.426 Squadron, 31 March 1948).

"F/L Mills is employed as Captain of the Dakota aircraft allotted to SCAFLO. He has been complimented on numerous occasions for the fine handling of his aircraft and the excellent control and discipline amongst his crew. F/L Mills has a strong and rugged nature which is shown by his zeal for flying and his constant desire to be busy. He is an excellent leader of men and from an operational standpoint I should say he excels most officers of his rank. His administrative ability remains to be demonstrated but his zeal and energy should be of great value in encompassing this phase of air force duty when the occasion arises. I recommend F/L Mills for promotion to the rank of Squadron Leader." (Air Commodore J.L. Hurley, Canadian Joint Staff, London, 5 April 1949).

"Flight Lieutenant Mills has a rugged constitution. He is a keen and above average Captain of aircraft. During the past year he has made numerous flights to many countries. Almost insatiably the passengers have commented on the excellent services provided. Flight Lieutenant Mills' strong personality and qualities of leadership particularly in a fighting capacity give him a potential very useful to the RCAF in the event of war. I recommend him for a Permanent Commission." (Air Commodore J.L. Hurley, SCAFLO, 22 September 1949).

"This officer has been filling a Flight Lieutenant position as the Officer Commanding of the VIP crew in England. In this role he has been outstanding due to his pleasant personality and his unquestioned ability as an aircraft Captain. His knowledge of Air Force administration however is weak for his rank and his ability to express himself on paper is below average. He is of temperate habits and very keen on flying. (G/C M.D. Lister, Canadian Joint Staff,, London, 8 August 1950). To this, Air Commodore J.L. Hurley adds, "I agree with G/C Lister that F/L Mills must improve his knowledge of administration if he is to be considered for higher rank."

Letter, 31 July 1952, A/V/M A.L. James (AOC, Air Defence Command) to Commanding Officer, Station St. Hubert re Supply-Logistics-Exercise SIGN POST - "104 'K' Flight exceeded all expectations in the supply of airlift of AOG equipment during Exercise SIGN POST. I wish to express my personal appreciation to S/L Mills, F/L DeNiverville and F/O Turner for a job well done."

"Squadron Leader Mills is a keen, energetic officer who does not spare himself in carrying out the duties assigned to him. He normally arrives at the flight room from 0630 to 0700 each morning. He is dogmatic and brusque to a point of being rude at times. Squadron Leader Mills is single. While he does not drink often, a small amount of alcohol affects inebriation quickly. This lack of sobriety, however, has no effect on his work. This weakness has been drawn to this officer's attention. These remarks are in no way meant to be an adverse report as Squadron Leader Mills runs an excellent section and has the cooperation and respect of his entire staff. I feel that while Mills is doing an excellent job, I cannot recommend him for promotion at this time." (G/C J.D. Somerville, Station St. Hubert, 17 February 1953).

Letter, 28 February 1953, from Captain D.L. Raymond, RCN (Dartmouth Air Station) to Commanding Officer, Station St. Hubert, re RCN Expeditor 2332. "(1) It has been brought to my attention that on a recent flight to Montreal on January 23rd, one of my aircraft flown by Commander G.C. Edwards, RCN, sustained a major unserviceability while at your station. (2) I understand that No.104 K Flight (S/L J.G. Mills, DFC, RCAF), worked on the aircraft from 0800 until 0100 on January 25/26th to get the aircraft serviceable. Evidently in the process some major Expeditor spares were used and I know only too well how difficult these are to obtain. (3) The effort put forward on this occasion by the officers and men under your command is sincerely appreciated. It is particularly desired to single out Sergeant E.S. Hodges, AE Tech 3, who worked continuously on the aircraft until the repairs were completed. If any RCAF aircraft should find itself in a like predicament at Halifax, we shall be only too glad of the opportunity to reciprocate, I hope we will also be able to return the friendly hospitality shown to our personnel at your station."

"Squadron Leader Mills is a keen, energetic pilot who operates the Communication Flight in an efficient manner. He does not spare himself but works hours beyond the call of duty in order to ensure the smooth running of his unit. Mills partakes in alcoholic stimulants a little too much which fact has been mentioned to him on numerous occasions. His slight intemperance does not seem to affect his work. If Mills has cured his intemperance, I would strongly recommend him for promotion to the rank of Wing Commander." (G/C J.D. Somerville, Station St. Hubert, 28 September 1953).

"A firm, kind-hearted officer with a natural sense of right and wrong. Quick to recognize phoneys and always ready to support the good. In his short period as Chief Administrative Officer at this unit, Squadron Leader Mills has done a great deal to reduce the load on the Commanding Officer and has greatly improved the administration. He is an active early riser, work at any time of the day type. Very interested in the service. Capable of assuming the responsibilities of higher rank. Recommend promotion." (G/C C.G.W. Chapman, Greenwood, 16 March 1955.)

"Squadron Leader Mills has been employed as Chief Administrative Officer at this station for approximately two years during which time he has done much to improve and ensure a high standard of all aspects of housing, messing, welfare, recreation and other administrative services under his control. Squadron Leader Mills is an officer with a keen practical sense of values and the ability to recognize the good and not so good in very short time and the power of will to correct those things which can be corrected with a minimum loss of time. At first one might gain the impression that he is hard man but in fact he is extremely generous by nature and can be relied upon at all times to assist those who are in need of assistance and who really desire to do a good job. On the other hand he will not put up with foolishness. // I have known Squadron Leader Mills since 1947 and although I recognize parts of his life which might be termed 'the good irresponsible times' I can truthfully say that at all times he has shown the true traits of a gentleman and in recent years has steadied down so that he is now living a completely normal life. He is a man of considerable energy which, coupled with an extreme loyalty to the service, ensures that he will be on the job at any hour of the day or night and in fact generally is on the job much earlier than other people, Squadron Leader Mills is benefitting a great deal from his experience in his present administrative job and at the same time maintains an active interest in flying insofar as time permits. He is capable of assuming higher responsibility and is recommended for promotion." (G/C C.G.W. Chapman, Greenwood, 20 July 1956).

"As Chief Administrative Officer over the past two and a half years, S/L Mills has accomplished a great deal towards improvement of the administrative functions of this Station, particularly housing, messing, Non-Public Funds activities and welfare. S/L Mills is a particularly direct, positive type of person with a keen and natural instinct to recognize the good and the bad. He is the on-the-job type of person who does not spend too much time reading and amassing paper but rather sees for himself how things are going. He is an early riser and can be depended upon to be on the job at the earliest hours in the morning and at any time of the day or night. He is entirely dependable and loyal and in all respects capable of assuming high responsibility. He is recommended for promotion at the earliest possible date." (G/C C.G.W. Chapman, Greenwood, 12 February 1957).

“S/L Mills is a very forthright, outspoken person, a man who likes to do things by personal action, leaving the administrative details to others. For this reason he would make a good operational commander, but would grow impatient, and not do as good a job, if placed in a purely admin capacity. His judgement is generally sound, using the simplest, most direct approach to the solution of any problem.” (W/C C. Torontow, Station Greenwood, 30 May 1960).

This officer navigator has now completed his first tour of operations, having carried out 36 sorties.

His consistently high standard of navigation has enabled his crew to obtain the maximum number of successful sorties and the crew's splendid photographic records give ample proof that his timing on targets has been excellent. He has displayed fortitude and calmness during a tour which was by no means free from incident, and his dependability under all circumstances has been most noteworthy.

In recognition of a tour well carried out, pervaded by a fine operational spirit, Flying Officer Milton is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

As air gunner, Pilot Officer Millson has taken part in very many sorties. He has proved himself to be a most efficient and vigilant member of aircraft crew whose example of coolness in the face of the enemy has been highly commendable. One night in March 1945 he was the mid-upper gunner in an aircraft detailed to attack Hagen. On the return flight the aircraft was attacked by a fighter. After giving the necessary combat manoeuvre to his pilot, Pilot Officer Millson opened fire. His bullets struck the attacker which burst into flames and dived towards the ground where, on impact, the enemy aircraft exploded. By his good judgement and excellent shooting, this air gunner contributed materially to the safe return of the aircraft.

DHH file 181.009 D.1509 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 20599) has original recommendation by W/C G.A. Tambling dated 23 March 1945 when he had flown 21 sorties (135 hours 20 minutes).

15 March 1945 - Hagen (7.55)

On the night of March 15th, 1945, this officer was the Mid-Upper Gunner in an aircraft detailed to attack Hagen. When returning from the target at 12,000 feet, they were attacked from above and astern by an Me.410. Pilot Officer Millson ordered corkscrew starboard and opened fire immediately. The enemy aircraft returned the fire, but no strikes were made on our aircraft. Suddenly flames broke out on the Me.410 and it dived vertically on port quarter approximately 200 yards distant, streaming flames all the way to the ground, where it was observed by both our gunners to explode. A moment later another Me.410 closed in on the starboard quarter and after corkscrewing to starboard, both gunners of our aircraft opened fire together. After returning fire, the fighter broke away with no damage claimed.

I consider that by his cool judgement and the dexterity with which he handled his guns, Pilot Officer Millson was most instrumental in saving the lives of his crew, and fully merits the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Millward (Ottawa), both former pupils of Ottawa Technical School who enlisted and trained together but serve in different crews of No.427 Squadron.

Throughout a large number of operational sorties this officer has displayed outstanding courage and devotion to duty. In December 1944 he was air gunner in an aircraft detailed for a minelaying operation in Oslo Fiord. While over the target his aircraft was attacked by a Junkers 88. During the third attack Pilot Officer Millward and his fellow gunner succeeded in destroying the German aircraft.

This air gunner has completed thirty-three heavy operational bombing attacks against the enemy. At all times his work in general has been outstanding and he has been an inspiration to the gunners on the squadron.

On thirty-first of December 31 his aircraft was detailed for gardening in the Oslo Fiord. While they were dropping their vegetables, the bomber was attacked by an enemy fighter (Ju.88). This gunner gave combat manoeuvres and opened fire while the fighter pressed home his attack. The fighter made three attacks and on the third both gunners were successful in destroying the German aircraft.

Pilot Officer Millward's cheerful confidence has inspired a high standard of morale in his crew. I strongly recommend that Pilot Officer Millward be awarded a non-immediate Distinguished Flying Cross.

RCAF Press Release No. 8241 dated 13 January 1945 from F/L H.W. Eggleston reads:

WITH THE RCAF BOMBER GROUP IN GREAT BRITAIN: -- A third attack by an enemy fighter, identified as JU.88, while a Halifax bomber from the Lion squadron was orbiting over the target on a mining expedition, proved costly to the Jerry, and he finally crashed into the sea after the bomber's gunners had beaten off two attacks and outshot the Nazi in a thrilling gun duel on the third.

The gunners, who both scored hits on the fighter, and have received confirmation of their "kill" are P/O H.M.D. Millward, mid-upper gunner, 68 McDonald Street, Ottawa, Ontario and F/O J.R. Thackeray, rear-gunner, 1440 Montague Street, Regina, Saskatchewan. Captain of the bomber was F/O W.B. Britton, Eston, Saskatchewan.

The bomber was circling the target in an effort to drop its "eggs" accurately when the mid-upper gunner spotted the fighter passing below. It moved in to attack with cannon and machine guns blazing. Both gunners returned the fire without visual damage to the fighter. On the second attack, the fighter closed in to 100 yards range, firing as he attacked from the starboard quarter above. Both gunners gave him a short burst and saw hits on the wings. He broke away below, then, attacked again from the starboard quarter above as the skipper had the "Hally" in violent evasive action. In the exchange of fire, the gunners scored more hits on the fighter and they had the satisfaction of seeing him crash into the sea. "That guy came in once too often for his own good", F/O Thackeray related. "We must have hit the pilot on the third attack as there was no sign of flames. It was a clear night and we had no difficulty following him down until he crashed into the water." Both gunners claim "kill".

To "Y" Depot, 28 February 1942. To RAF overseas, 19 March 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 October 1942. Reported from No.23 OTU to No.426 Squadron, 22 October 1942. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 15 February 1943. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 June 1943. Promoted Wing Commander, 17 February 1944. Repatriated 30 May 1945 via Eastern Air Command. Retired 17 September 1945. Rejoined 3 September 1946 (20414), retaining rank of Wing Commander; promoted Group Captain, 1 May 1948. From August 1949 to August 1952 he was Commandant of Royal Roads Military College. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 1953 when CO of Station Trenton. Directed ROTP programmes in AFHQ, March 1960. Promoted to Air Vice Marshal and made AOC Air Material Command, 20 September 1962. RCAF photo PL-31681 shows him being invested by the King. RCAF Photo PL-33952 (ex-UK-16321 dated 9 November 1944) is captioned as follows: "Group Captain J.B. Millward, DF and Bar, Sherbrooke, Quebec, who was recently given command of the RCAF Bomber Group station from which the Lion and Bison squadrons operate. The 33-year old pilot, who has flown more than 40 sorties with the Thunderbird and City of Vancouver squadrons, holds the distinction of having been briefed for the first mission of the Canadian group after it was officially formed in January 1943, when he was at the controls of a Wellington bomber which attacked Lorient. A graduate of McGill University in Montreal, he taught at St. Andrew's College, Aurora, Ontario, in peacetime." Photos PL-32297 (ex UK-14576) and PL-32298 (ex UK-14577), both dated 7 September 1944 shows him - "Since finishing operational flying he has been filling an important post at Group Headquarters." Photo PL-36364 is a portrait. Photo PL-42629 (ex UK-19648 dated 30 March 1945) shows him greeting F/L E.L.B. Warrington (New York City and Strathclair, Manitoba), Bison squadron, following raid on Dortmund. Died in Sand Hill, Quebec, 7 December 1971. Medals with Canadian War Museum (AN 19790183-024).

On two occasions this officer has flown his aircraft safely back to base although damage had been sustained from enemy action. He has also had much success in securing photographs of the target area. As deputy flight commander Squadron Leader Millward has assisted in building up the squadron to its present high state of efficiency. The quiet determination with which he completes his duties has won him the admiration and respect of all.

MILLWARD, W/C James Bert (J10255) - Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross - No.405 Squadron -

Award effective 5 August 1944 as per London Gazette dated 15 August 1944 and AFRO 2101/44 dated 29 September 1944.

Wing Commander Millward has completed many successful sorties during which he has attacked a wide range of strongly defended targets. He is an exceptionally keen and capable flight commander and has at all times displayed fine qualities of courage and devotion to duty.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9632 has recommendation by W/C R.J. Lane dated 22 May 1944 when he had flown 39½ sorties (240 hours) of which 19 sorties (120 hours 30 minutes) had been flown since his previous award. The sortie list and text add to the record.

This officer is an exceptionally keen and capable captain who has completed 39½ operational sorties against such heavily defended targets as Berlin, Stuttgart and Mannheim. The work of this officer, both as a Flight Commander and pilot, has been exceptional. He has, at all times, displayed fine qualities of courage, leadership and devotion to duty which have been an inspiration to those serving under his command. Strongly recommended for the award of Bar to Distinguished Flying Cross.

MILLWARD, G/C James Bert, DFC (J10225) - Mention in Despatches - Leeming - Award effective 14 June 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1395/45 dated 31 August 1945.

MILLWARD, W/C James Bert, DFC (20414) - Croix de Guerre with Silver Star (France) - Award as per AFRO 485/47 dated 12 September 1947. Pilot. External Affairs file "French Awards to Canadian Armed Forces - Particular Cases" (Library and Archives Canada, RG.25, Box 4140) has the following citation:

Group Captain Millward completed two outstanding tours of operations flying heavy bombers, the second tour being with the Pathfinder Force. Many of his attacks were directed skillfully and accurately against German-held communications in France. His outstanding conduct was an inspiring example to all of No.6 Bomber Group.

Retired 5 June 1945. Medal presented 17 January 1948. Worked for Wilson Gregory Lumber Company for many years. He was a past president of Wartime Pilots and Observers Association. Died in Winnipeg, 21 August 2004.

This officer has completed very many sorties, nine of which have been against Berlin. He has displayed great skill, gallantry and determination, qualities which were amply demonstrated on a recent mine-laying mission. In spite of considerable anti-aircraft fire and searchlight activity, Pilot Officer Milne pressed home his attack with great precision. He is a fine leader and a model captain.

NOTE: Public Record Office Air 2/9220 has recommendation drafted 12 April 1944 when he had flown 27 sorties (192 hours 20 minutes. His Commanding Offer suggested a DSO and this was supported by the Air Commodore in charge of No.54 Base. However, Air Vice-Marshal Sir Ralph Cochrane downgraded it to a DFC (24 April 1944). The original submission read:

Pilot Officer Milne, as captain of aircraft, has carried out 27 successful operational sorties, nine of which have been against Berlin.

On one occasion he sighted a dinghy on the water off Maplethorpe, and sent back an accurate navigational fix to base. Pilot Officer Milne then circled over the dinghy for more than two hours, during which time the visibility deteriorated considerably. Eventually he sighted three minesweepers, and by flying towards them and back again towards the dinghy he managed to direct one ship to the rescue.

Pilot Officer Milne's tour of operations has been marked throughout by skill and resource and the 27 sorties which he has so far made as captain have been most effectively and efficiently carried out. He has managed to obtain two aiming point photographs and several within one mile of the aiming point. Recently he took part in six operations, the primary objective of which was the location and illumination of targets for precision bombing attacks. All these missions were performed with outstanding skill and accuracy.

On the night of 9/10th April 1944, this officer was detailed to lay mines in the important Konigsberger Seekanal. This canal, which is only 54 yards wide, is a vital link in the enemy's waterways traffic system. To ensure success the target was attacked in bright moonlight and from a very low level. Pilot Officer Milne approached the canal at a height of only 150 feet and in the face of intense, accurate anti-aircraft fire and blinding searchlights which coned his aircraft. Despite this he held a steady course and pressed home his attack in a most determined manner, all his mines being seen to fall in the narrow channel.

Throughout his tour this officer has shown qualities of leadership, courage and determination of the highest order, and I consider the skill and fearlessness shown by him in this last sortie, made in the face of fierce and determined opposition fully merit the immediate award of the Distinguished Service Order.

No.5 Group Monthly Summary for December 1943 has the following narrative under the heading "Air-Sea Rescue":

On Saturday, 18th December, "F" of 106 Squadron was detailed for air firing over the sea, and shortly after crossing the coast the crew saw pyrotechnics being fired. On closer investigation they saw a dinghy. The pilot and captain (Flight Sergeant Milne) circled while the navigator obtained a Gee fix and the wireless operator contacted Section "J" and reported the sighting. The dinghy position was fixed as 5525N, 0045E at 1111 hours.

The Navy diverted a minesweeper to the position and an HSL [High Speed Launch] continued circling and at 1207 hours confirmed his position with Section "J". At 1325 hours the minesweeper Typhoon appeared on the scene, about a minute ahead of the HSL, and rescued the occupant, Flight Sergeant Hurley of 57 Squadron. Flight Sergeant Hurley was the wireless operator and sole survivor of a crew of a 57 Squadron which on return from operations on 16/17th December had struck the sea after breaking cloud. This aircraft, after receiving a fix 53.10N 01.08E and a QDM to Base, wandered considerably in poor visibility and low cloud, and had struck the water inadvertently.

Bad weather prevented any search on 17th December and Flight Sergeant Milne's sighting forestalled an organized search on 18th December.

MILNE, F/L Leonard Smith (C22109) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - No.24 EFTS - Award effective 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 89/45 dated 19 January 1945. Born in Red Deer, Alberta, 7 April 1913 (press release 4907 announcing the award). Labourer, 1929-1930; driver for Pacific Milling Company, 1930-1932; Salesman, 1932 to 1938. Flying instructor, 1938-1939 with British Columbia Aero Club and Forgia Flying School. Home in New Westminster; enlisted in Vancouver, 22 June 1940. To Trenton, 24 June 1940. Promoted Sergeant, 22 July 1940. To No.8 EFTS, Vancouver, 2 August 1940. Granted Leave Without Pay, 3 August 1940 while instructing. Reinstated as service pilot, No.7 SFTS, Macleod, Alberta, 16 March 1942. Struck off strength of No.7 SFTS, 29 March 1942 and resumed status of Leave Without Pay, apparently being posted to No.18 EFTS. Commissioned 1 December 1942 while on strength of No.15 EFTS, Regina. Promoted Flying Officer, 1 February 1943. To No.24 EFTS, Abbotsford, 10 September 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 October 1943. To No.2 Training Command Headquarters, Winnipeg, 29 July 1944. To No.23 EFTS, Macdonald, and Davidson, 1 August 1944. To No.5 OTU, Boundary Bay, 1 December 1944. To Station Moncton, 27 April 1945. To Station Dartmouth, 29 April 1945. To No.11 (BR) Squadron, 23 May 1945 and moved with that unit to Patricia Bay. To Western Air Command Meteorological Flight,, 12 July 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 29 August 1945. Retired 8 September 1945. Died in Surrey, British Columbia, 24 May 1977 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics.

This officer has carried out the duties of assistant chief flying instructor at this unit since its inception and has at all times displayed extreme devotion to duty. His high regard for the Service and its requirements and the zeal and energy with which he carries out his duties have made a large contribution to the elementary training of aircrew.

Recommendation first raised 18 September 1943 in a letter not found in his file. This letter was mentioned in forma; submission for a Air Force Cross, 11 January 1944, at which time he had flown 2,200 hours (1,900 as instructor), 200 in previous six months:

Flight Lieutenant Milne is presently serving as Assistant Chief Flying Instructor at No.24 EFTS, RCAF Abbotsford. He previously served in the same capacity as Chief Flying Instructor at No.8 EFTS, Sea Island, then at No.18 EFTS, Boundary Bay and at No.15 EFTS, Regina. His services have been distinguished by a high degree of merit and efficiency and he has carried out his duties over this long period in an exemplary and diligent manner.

Air Vice-Marshal G.R. Howsam suggested that this be made a Commendation but even in this form it did not reach the AFHQ Priority List. It was resubmitted on 1 September 1944 by G/C G.H. Sellers (SASO, No.4 Training Command) who again suggested an Air Force Cross. This time he gave the flying hours as 2,100 total (1,827.10 on instruction), and 102.15 in previous six months. Howsam again reduced this to a Commendation, 1 September 1944, and AFHQ accepted it as such. Text on this occasion was:

This officer has carried out the duties of Assistant Chief Flying Instructor at this unit since its inception and has at all times shown extreme devotion to duty. He has also been assistant or Chief Flying Instructor at four other Elementary Schools since 1940 and his high regard for the Service and its requirements has done much towards the successful elementary training of aircrew.

Notes: Flying Instructor course at Trenton was 24 June to 18 July 1940. Previous flying experience shown as 151.00 single engine solo and 45.00 single engine dual; he had spent 50 hours instructing, which was enough for British Columbia Aero Club to recommend him to the RCAF. On course he flew eleven hours single engine solo and 14.25 dual. Tested on Fleet Finch II by F/O W.G. Welstead who wrote, "Good pilot - knows sequence well - good voice, but inclined to monotony - aerobatics good - instrument good - good type. Will do well with experience." Assessed by F/L G.D. Macallister who wrote, "A very good instructor. Flying smooth, accurate. With more experience should classify for Class I rating". He had also completed a Link Extension Course.

He was re-assessed and granted Class I standing, 9 April 1941. By then he had flown 675 hours solo (450 instructing) and 80 hours dual.

On 19 November 1942, at No.15 EFTS, he was assessed again, this time by S/L H.H. Larryford (?) Of No.4 Visiting Flight, Central Flying School. By then he had flown 925 hours solo, 88 dual plus 22 hours solo on twin-engine types and 15 hours dual. He had flown 850 hours instructing. Tested on Tiger Moth for Sequence ("Above average"), Voice ("Distinct"), Manner ("Capable"), Ability to Impart Knowledge ("Above Average"), and Ability as Pilot ("Above average"). Generally described as "An outstanding elementary instructor."

Course at No.5 OTU was 5 December to 8 April 1945. Flying was on Mitchell (8.00 day dual, 1.30 day as first pilot, 29.20 day as second pilot, two hours as second pilot by night, 6.05 as passenger by night) and Liberator (5.45 day dual, 39.00 day as second pilot, 45 minutes night dual, 34.15 as second pilot by night, 13.40 as passenger by night). Also logged 24 hours in Link.

Ground training was in Aircraft Recognition (60/100), Navigation and Meteorology (130/200), Plotting (66/100), Airmanship, Mitchell (243/300) and Airmanship, Liberator (237/300). Also tested in Morse and Aldis (eight words a minute in each, both sending and receiving). "A satisfactory enough pupil, but it is felt he could have done much better if he has worked harder." (S/L W. Grierson-Jackson); "A conscientious and steady worker but not outstanding in any way" (W/C D.D. MacIntyre). "An excellent officer, steady and dependable" (W/C D.J. Williams).

Selected Service Assessments: "At present holding the position of Flight Commander of airforce rank rank and station establishment. Undoubtedly could act as Squadron Commander, Assistant Chief Instructor or even Chief Flying Instructor after a short service course which has many times been recommended for this officer. This officer has been extremely difficult to assess in view of his short term of service in the RCAF since being recalled from the Special Group of Pilots on indefinite leave without pay." (F/L R.A. Haywood, No.15 EFTS, 15 March 1943).

"This officer has shown good judgement and has carried out very well the responsibilities and duties of a commissioned officer." (F/L G.T. Pearce, No.15 EFTS, 30 June 1943).

"An experienced instructor who held the position of Chief Flying Instructor on this unit prior to 1 December 1942. He will improve with the further service knowledge acquired on the officers training course, which he has just completed." (F/L J.M.V. Hambridge, No.15 EFTS, 14 September 1943).

"An above average officer in every respect. Extremely interested in maintaining the efficiency of the service at its highest peak." (S/L G.E. Kerley, No.24 EFTS, 20 May 1944).

Policy Considerations: In the first half of the war the RCAF frequently granted instructors the rank of Sergeant, then placed them on "indefinite leave without pay" while assigning them as elementary flying instructors at civilian-operated schools. After a period of up to two years they were recalled to "Active Service". A note dated 7 November 1945 from Tom Reid (Member of Parliament) to the Minister of National Defence for Air raised this. Milne had argued that he was entitled to Service gratuities for the full period of his association with the RCAF, including the period up to December 1942 when he was a civilian instructor. The sticking point was that in that capacity he had received higher pay than would have been the case had he been a Sergeant instructor. The Minister replied on 13 November 1945 as follows:

I have referred your enquiry with regard to payment of the war service gratuity to C.22109 Flight Lieutenant L.S. Milne to the Authorities responsible for payment, and have received the following information with regard to this case.

This officer served a total of 1,905 days, 838 of which were served on leave-without-pay from the RCAF at civilian operated flying schools. He is therefore only eligible for a war service gratuity for 1,067 days of paid service in the RCAF. The question of paying the war service gratuity to personnel on leave-without pay, while employed as instructors at civilian operated flying schools, was given careful and sympathetic consideration at the time the regulations to the War Service Grants Act were being drawn. It was decided at that time that taking everything into consideration, the war service gratuity should not be paid in these cases. Therefore, as the Act and Regulations now stand, it is not possible to pay him a war service gratuity for this period as such service is not considered as eligible service for payment of the gratuity.

The question of payment of the war service gratuity to personnel who have served at civilian operated flying schools will be referred to the Special Committee on Veterans' Affairs which is now considering all veterans legislation. However, until such time as this matter has been dealt with by the Committee and their recommendations tabled in the House of Commons, no action can be taken to pay the war service gratuity for such periods while on leave-without-pay from the RCAF.

MILNE, S/L Roderick Francis (C1596) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.10 (BR) Squadron - Award effective 5 May 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1133/44 dated 26 May 1944. Born in Windsor, Ontario, 3 December 1915. Member of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, 10 May 1934 to 10 January 1935. Enlisted in RCAF, 11 January 1935 as motor mechanic. Posted from Camp Borden to No.5 (Flying Boat) Squadron, Dartmouth, 7 June 1936. To Station Trenton, 28 July 1937 as LAC. Qualified for Pilots Flying Badge as Sergeant Pilot, 20 May 1938. Transferred from Trenton to Station Ottawa, 13 January 1939. Engaged in ferry of Avro aircraft 267 to No.112 (Army Cooperation) Squadron, Winnipeg in June 1939. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 September 1939. Commissioned 15 November 1939 while still at Rockcliffe and granted rank of Flying Officer. To No.118 (Coastal Artillery Cooperation) Squadron, 23 March 1940. To No.1 (Coastal Artillery Cooperation) Detachment, Saint John, New Brunswick, 27 September 1940. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 December 1940. To No.2 (Coastal Artillery Cooperation) Detachment, Dartmouth, 16 April 1941. To No.1 (Coastal Artillery Cooperation) Detachment, 15 November 1941. To No.117 (BR) Squadron, 7 September 1942. To No.10 (BR) Squadron, 1 May 1943. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 August 1943. To RCAF Staff College, Toronto, 14 June 1944. To "Y" Depot, Lachine, 1 October 1944. Embarked from Canada, 18 October 1944. Disembarked in Britain, 20 October 1944. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 21 October 1944. To No.3 (P) AFU, 7 November 1944. To No.4 (Coastal) OTU, 12 November 1944. To No.423 Squadron, 15 March 1945. To Station Down Ampney, 3 September 1945. To No.436 Squadron, 8 October 1945. Repatriated to Canada, 1 April 1946. To No.9 (Transport) Group, Rockcliffe, 8 May 1946. To No.14 (Photo) Squadron, 7 July 1946. Taken on strength of postwar RCAF, 1 October 1946, retaining rank of Squadron Leader. To Station Trenton, 15 January 1949. To Tactical Group Headquarters, Winnipeg, 20 December 1949. To AFHQ, Ottawa, 9 July 1951. To Canadian Joint Staff, Washington, 11 August 1954. Promoted 1Wing Commander, 1 September 1957. To AFHQ, Ottawa, 19 July 1959. To Maritime Headquarters, Halifax, 24 July 1962. Retired 26 March 1965 Died in Halifax, 30 September 1984 as per Legion Magazine of April 1985. Also reported in Airforce Magazine of April-May-June 1985. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Volume 57, file 190-I) has citation; notes indicate that as of recommendation he had flown 1,551 hours, 535 on operations (134 sorties).

This officer, as second-in-command of a Liberator VLR squadron, has by his example and industry, been largely responsible for the successful formation and operations of his unit. During a recent period of sustained and heavy anti-submarine operations he inspired the officers and men under his jurisdiction by his personal example, ability, and pleasing personality. His wealth of operational experience, both in landplane and flying boat, has made him a most valuable and respected officer.

This award began 12 December 1943 when the Commanding Officer of No.10 (BR) Squadron recommended him for an Air Force Cross (hours as stated above). Text was as follows:

This officer, in the capacity of Second in Command of a Liberator VLR squadron, has by his example and industry, been largely responsible for the successful formation and operations of that unit. During a recent period of sustained and heavy anti-submarine operations, Squadron Leader Milne, while acting as Officer Commanding of his Squadron, was an inspiration to the officers and men who were serving under him. His wealth of operational experience, both as a landplane and as a flying boat pilot, combined with his able administrative ability and a pleasing personality, has made him a most valuable and respected officer in his unit.

The Officer Commanding, Station Gander, concurred (date not shown), but on 11 January 1944 Air Vice-Marshal G.O. Johnson (Air Officer Commanding) suggested that a DFC be substituted for the AFC. This was endorsed by the Chief of the Air Staff, Air Marshal Robert Leckie.

Training:

Course at Flying Training School, Trenton, was 28 July 1937 to 18 May 1938. Aircraft were Fleet (12 hours 35 minutes dual to solo, 28.05 advanced dual, 38.05 solo) and Moth (26.15 advanced dual, 18.55 solo). Courses as follows: Air Navigation (116/200), Meteorology (33.6/40), Airmanship (120.2/170), Engines, written (164/200), Engines, practical (265.7/300), Rigging, written (not taken), Rigging, practical (244.1/300), Administration (75.3/100), Organisation (43/50), Law (70/100), History (19.5/25), Theory of Flight (33/50), Armament, written (62.5/60), Armament, practical (157/200), Signals, written (not taken), Signals, practical (98.9/100), Drill (63/100). Considered "above average" on final flying test on Tiger Moth, including aerobatics. "Took same course in all respects as officer pupils. Consider credit due for passing all subjects satisfactorily." Also described as "Smart, keen and reliable." Assessed by F/L J.G. Kerr (Chief Flying Instructor).

Included in the above period was an Instrument Flying Course (26 November 1937 to 7 April 1938). This involved 12.20 dual in Moth and eight hours in Link. "This airman flies by instruments with average accuracy. He lost height on turns which were otherwise very good. He apparently thinks very slowly."

Course at Air Navigation and Seaplane School, Trenton, 1 June 1938 to 31 October 1938. This seems to have been complex. Aircraft flown were Fleets (1.35 dual, 10.00 solo, 1.55 as navigator, 4.00 as crew, total 17.30), Fairchild 71 (1.10 dual, 13.40 solo, 5.30 as navigator, 7.05 as crew, total 27.25), Vedette (6.15 dual, 28.30 solo, 17.20 as navigator, 49.00 as crew, total 101.05), Norseman (3.30 dual, 1.20 solo, 27.00 as navigator, 12.15 as crew, total 44.05). Ground courses were Photography (73 percent), Magnetism and Compasses (66 percent), Meteorology and Tides (58 percent), Maps, Charts and Instruments (64 percent), Sun Position Lines (60 percent), Dead Reckoning Navigation (16 percent on first test, 75 percent on supplemental), Signals (72 percent). "This NCO is a keen and reliable seaplane pilot. He can undertake cross-country flights in a satisfactory manner, but requires more experience for long distance Air Navigation flights out of sight of land." (S/L J.G. Bryans). "A conscientious and keen NCO with ability to handle seaplanes in an efficient manner. He is thoroughly proficient in map reading, but required more experience in the mechanical methods of air navigation. Sergeant Milne did fairly well in his written examinations with one exception, Dead Reckoning Navigation. There was a distinct improvement in the quality of the answers to the supplemental examination. He is strongly recommended to avail himself of any opportunities which may occur of acquiring further practical and theoretical knowledge of air navigation." (S/L F.J. Mawdesey). Placed tenth in a class of 14.

Advanced Photographic Course at Ottawa, 16 January to 10 March 1939. Subjects were Photography, Practical (64/100), Photography, Theoretical (65/100), and Mapping Methods (79/100). Flew in Fairchild 71 (2.05 as pilot, 3.00 as passenger) and Delta (9.40 dual as pilot, 9.55 as passenger). "A capable pilot. Slow to start but is capable of flying a photographic line accurately and with confidence. Understands the principles involved but requires more practice." Passed but not qualified on Delta aircraft.

Notes: On his application for Operational Wings, submitted 5 May 1945, he listed only his flying in Canada, commencing with a sortie on 1 April 1940 (Lysander, No.118 Squadron, Anti-Submarine, 1.25). He was engaged in such duties on Lysanders until 18 July 1942. He then began operations with No.117 Squadron on Canso aircraft on 10 September 1942, his longest sortie being on 30 September 1942 (17 hours 15 minutes). His last trip on the form with Cansos was 24 April 1943. His first sortie with No.10 (BR) on Liberators was 9 June 1943 and the last listed was 5 April 1944; his longest seems to have been 1 July 1943 (14.25).

On a form dated 16 December 1945 he gave his flying times as follows: Lysander (41.15 operational and 546.35 non-operational), Catalina (348.05 operational and 198.30 non-operational), Liberator (203.00 operational and 355.30 non-operational) and Sunderland (13.30 operational and 124 non-operational - which contradicts statement below). Aircraft types were Fleets, Moths, Fairchild 51 and 71, Delta, Avro 626, Tomtit, Goose, Barkley-Grow, Shark, Lysander, Mitchell, Liberator, Oxford, Dakota, Vedette, Norseman, Catalina, and Sunderland.

On repatriation, 5 April 1946, he signed a form stating that he had flown 100 operational and 400 non-operational hours while overseas. This had included eight combat sorties with No.423 Squadron (the last being on 9 May 1945). He reported 250 hours flown on Sunderlands, 20 on Oxfords, 30 on Liberators and 200 on Dakotas.

Another form (undated but early 1947) lists some types as follows - Goose (25 hours, last flown 19 March 1940), Barkley-Grow (40, last flown 3 March 1940), Shark (30, last flown 10 May 1940), Lysander (450, last flown 13 August 1942), Mitchell (2.00, last flown 13 May 1943), Liberator (350, last flown 27 August 1945), Oxford (5.00, last flown 14 November 1945), Dakota (220.00, last flown 3 April 1947), Norseman floatplane (30.00, last flown 15 November 1938), Catalina (350, last flown 29 April 1943), Sunderland (110.00, last flown 27 May 1945), Fairchild 71 floats (50.00, last flown 15 November 1939).

Selected Assessments: Although he seems to have been an indifferent administrator while with No.1 (CAC) Detachment - and he requested assignment to a flying boat unit - his performance thereafter was very impressive and led to continued contact with maritime patrol work.

“I have been impressed by the ability that this officer has shown in his direction of 414 Photographic Squadron. He has developed immeasurably with added responsibility and can be thoroughly counted on for accurate, mature judgement in his position. He has a commendable, democratic type of leadership ability that produces the best from his officers and men, possibly by reason of the fact that he always provides an excellent example in himself. He has shown above average interest in the Staff administration of his unit. His squadron suffered from a very large turn-over of personnel and from a late conversion from Anson to Dakota aircraft during the past winter and yet despite these difficulties his operations have been most successfully carried out this year. I rate this officer high in all respects." (Air Commodore L.E. Wray, No.9 Transport Group, 2 October 1947).

"This officer has proved to be outstanding as Officer Commanding 414 Squadron. His own bearing and conduct are a fine example to his men. He is very keen on the service and spends a great deal of time studying methods of improving photographic operations." (W/C R.I. Thomas, No.22 Photo Wing, 2 April 1948).

"This officer has made a major contribution to developing accident investigation procedure and the RCAF Flight Safety Program. He is intelligent, very practical in his approach to problems and a good demonstrator and lecturer. A pleasant personality well respected by his staff." (G/C R.C. Davis, AFHQ/DFS, 8 October 1955).

"Wing Commander Milne is doing a workmanlike job as Staff Officer, Plans. He is a quiet individual, competent and generally makes a favourable impression. He has had long experience in the Air Force, and this is reflected in the manner in which he tackles any assignment. Above all, he is a hard worker with a highly developed sense of loyalty and service to the RCAF. Although Milne does not impress one as the forceful, hard driving type of leader, he is recommended without reservation for normal promotion to Group Captain." (Group Captain J.B. Millward, Air Member Canadian Joint Staff, Washington, 12 July 1956).

"Wing Commander Milne continues to carry out his responsibilities as Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations in a very competent manner. In this capacity he is in charge of the operations of ships, Maritime Patrol and shore-based carrier aircraft which have been assigned to the Maritime Commander Atlantic. In addition, he serves as a senior watchkeeper in the Operations Room during large scale operations and ASW exercises. This officer has a sound knowledge of all aspects of Maritime operations which has been built up over the many years he has been associated with Maritime matters. This background was put to good use very recently when he was the project officer in charge of the complete renovation and reorganisation of the MHQ Operational Control Centre. Although due to retire within the next year he has not, in any way, let this prospect reflect in his work. However, in his spare time he has been taking a Business Management Course at one of the local universities. His personal qualities leave nothing to be desired and he and his wife are popular members of the Mess and of their local community." (G/C J.E. Creeper, Maritime Command Atlantic Headquarters, 20 February 1964)

FURTHER NOTE: RCAF file 821-4-47 "McKee Trans-Canada Trophy - Nominations and Presentation - 1947 Competition", National Archives of Canada RG.24 Volume 17796, has recommendation for the McKee Trophy drafted 3 April 1948 by Air Commodore L.E. Wray, Air Officer Commanding, Transport Command, and transcribed here for the historical record.

Squadron Leader R.F. Milne is strongly recommended for the consideration of the Selection Committee for the award of the McKee Trans-Canada Trophy for Aviation.

It is considered that Squadron Leader Milne fills the conditions of the award exceptionally well. In addition to his exceptional contribution to Canadian Aviation during 1947, attention is directed to his consistently outstanding record of conspicuous service for the past several years.

Specific information covering the recommendation of the award is as follows:

- (a) Squadron Leader Milne is a Canadian citizen and is a present a Squadron Leader in the RCAF serving as Officer Commanding No.414 Photographic Squadron in RCAF Air Transport Command.
- (b) Squadron Leader Milne is a pilot of outstanding calibre. He enlisted in the RCAF as a mechanic in 1935. As one of the most outstanding and promising young airmen in the service he was specially chosen to train as a pilot in 1937 and won his wings with honour. As a Sergeant pilot and later as an officer he has been almost continually on flying duties since that time on both Canadian coasts, overseas and in the North. To date he has flown 3,000 hours. Much of his time in the past two years has been taken up with the administration duties of his position; nevertheless, he has found time to devote much of his energy to carrying out frequent flying commitments both in an experimental and operational capacity. Squadron Leader Milne has shown marked ability to organise effectively and his keen devotion to duty and studious endeavour has resulted in a high standard of efficiency in the photographic operations of his squadron.
- (c) The particular recommendation on behalf of the nominee is made on the strength of his continuous performance in the field of outstanding endeavour rather than on the basis of any one accomplishment. In 1947 he flew a total of 495 hours on photographic operations that covered territory from Goose Bay in the East to Vancouver in the West, and from Yellowknife and Churchill in the north to California in the South. During the winter, when the squadron re-equipped with new aircraft, it required firm determination and inspired leadership to press through successfully the work on the aircraft, and the training of both air and ground crews in time to carry out the 1947 summer operations. These operations are recognized to be of vital importance in the advancement of Canadian Aviation through the essential nature of their contribution to the mapping and surveying of the vast unknown areas. In addition to the excellent example which Squadron Leader Milne has shown in the efficient operation of his unit, this officer's personal example and ability has instilled an enthusiasm and respect in everyone under his command.

- (d) Squadron Leader Milne is considered to have contributed generously to the extension of the operation of aircraft into the new fields of photographic survey, both by his own active participation in flights into the far North, and in directing and carrying out the organization of widespread photographic operations into Canada's hitherto unmapped Arctic regions.

MILNER, F/L Allan Ralph (J12764) - Croix de Guerre with Bronze Star (France) - No.429 Squadron - Awarded as per Canada Gazette dated 20 September 1947 and AFRO 485/47 dated 12 September 1947. Born 11 September 1921. Home in Vancouver. Enlisted in Vancouver, 18 August 1941. To No.3 Manning Depot, 8 September 1941. To Station Calgary, 10 October 1941. To No.4 ITS, 10 November 1941. Graduated and promoted LAC, 2 January 1942; to No.18 EFTS that date; to No.15 SFTS, 28 March 1942; graduated and commissioned, 17 July 1942. To No.2 Flying Instructor School, 14 August 1942. To No.11 SFTS, 10 October 1942. Promoted Flying Officer, 17 January 1943. To No.19 EFTS, 7 February 1943. To No.10 SFTS, 30 June 1943. To "Y" Depot, 23 September 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, 10 October 1943. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 17 July 1944. Repatriated 7 July 1945. To No.3 Repair Depot, 20 July 1945. To No.8 Release Centre, 20 September 1945. Retired 18 October 1945. RCAF photo PL-26897 (ex UK-8376 dated 29 February 1944) shows him but caption describes him as "a newcomer to the RCAF Night Intruder Squadron." External Affairs file "French Awards to Canadian Armed Forces - Particular Cases" (Library and Archives Canada, RG.25, Box 4140) has the following citation:

Flight Lieutenant Milner was an outstanding captain of heavy bomber aircraft operating from 6 Group, Bomber Command. He participated in many special missions against German installations in France requiring a high degree of skill and daring.

The website "Lost Bombers" describes his going missing in January 1945. Halifax NR173 of No.429 Squadron (AL-D) engaged in mining operations, 12/13 January 1945. Airborne at 1718 hours, 12 January 1945 from Leeming to lay mines off Flensburg. Two radio messages were received from this aircraft, the first at 2131 stating that the crew were preparing to abandon. Four minutes later a second message gave their position as 5520N 0858E. Crew were F/L A.R.Milner, RCAF (inured). Sergeant K.Turner (injured), F/O H.K.Frair, RCAF (injured), F/O R.H.Barnes, RCAF (injured), WO1 H.L.Johnson, RCAF (injured), Flight Sergeant O.H.Sulek, RCAF (injured), Flight Sergeant J.G.Small, RCAF (injured). These personnel were confined to hospital until liberation and had no POW numbers assigned.

Directorate of History and Heritage file 181.001 D.24 has his "Loss of Bomber Aircraft" questionnaire based on interview of 12 May 1945. He stated he had flown 23 sorties as pilot.

Set course from English coast over Scarborough at 3,000 feet over 10/10 cloud. At Danish coast climbed quickly to 15,000 feet. No moon, complete darkness, 10/10 cloud at 2,000 feet. Cruising at 15,000 feet half way across Denmark on heading 090 degrees True. Fighter attacked from dead astern and level. No previous warning til hit by cannon and machine gun, entered a corkscrew manoeuvre. Rear gunner observed strikes when returning fire and fighter broke away. Aircraft nose heavy and no rudder control. Mission abandoned due to damage of mine-dropping equipment. Returning to England on heading of 290 degrees. Two more corkscrew maneuvers owing to warnings given from rear gunner and mines were jettisoned. Gradually losing height due to loss of power on starboard outer engine and flaps had dropped to full flap. Engineer reported tanks drained and engines damaged. Navigator said we could not reach coast so turned to heading 060 degrees for Sweden. Navigational equipment unserviceable so broke cloud on D.R. but presumed over Baltic. Circled, saw land and abandoned aircraft. Starboard outer engine temperature (cylinder) at 300 degrees and starboard inner glowing brightly but no damage recorded by instruments. Landed easily in field.

The following is from <http://www.thememoryproject.com/stories/3402:john-mcnab-milsom> (The Memory Project):

My best friend and I both wanted to fly. We were both set on getting the first opportunity, which was WWII.

I had a delightful flight, I remember, at 8,000 feet, clear blue sky, across the Bay of Biscay, not knowing any better, and landed in Gibraltar after one of the longer flights of over eight hours in a Hudson aircraft. Gibraltar was a military rock; it was riddled with the Canadian rock miners who worked inside. Gasoline was a huge [tunnel] and rock miners and others would take five gallon cans of gasoline and pour [into this] 24 hours a day because from a five gallon can to say, fill it up with six hundred gallons, the security was very tight of course. The ability to fly on a cross-wind day took a lot of skill. Wind, either from the East or the West was fine, but if you have a rock there and the wind comes over, it's very exciting. And the first thing we were ever told was that if you can't go around, land straight ahead or forget it, don't try to fly, go around from the approach, because the turbulence was so great that it would toss your airplane in. The targets in the Mediterranean were primarily anti-shipping, anti-submarine. We did not see any troop ships from the Germans [or] the enemy-Italians. So I did a tour in – that was considered North Africa – because it was the entrance to the Mediterranean, which was, if you look at any history books of shipping, you see the enormous amount of ships that were sunk and damaged or otherwise put out of action in the area to the East and the West of Gibraltar itself. So I did a tour of operations, which was looking for submarines [and] depth-charging them. The activity in the Mediterranean took us into North Africa, Sidi-Bel-Abbes, which was the headquarters of the French foreign legion for training. They were a tough bunch of guys in there.

The work in Banff was primarily anti-shipping, and that included on water. And I think the first trip I ever had, there was seven German troop ships sunk. People did not realize that the Germans had more troops in Norway than they had in Italy. And they were desperate to get them back down into Europe to work for them. So, it was a very active scene from the German point-of-view to get out of Norway, and for us to keep them from getting back. They also hid their best ships in the deep fjords of Norway. The [Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau*] I think at one time or another were tucked into the Norwegian fjords. One of our tasks was to see what was in a fjord and either encourage it to come out or to do something that they would come out and then the British Navy would move them into wherever they were supposed to go with their armament.”

We had three squadrons on the station – two were British and one was all Norwegian. And these were Norwegian officers who'd escaped by [us] going all the way around the world to get there. And they were tough guys, and they used to lead us into the very difficult targets, where they'd knew the countryside. The other Canadian squadron was 248 and 233.

Missions consisted of single flights going into the Norwegian fjords to see what was there, and taking pictures, etc. and then get home fast.

I had a wing camera, and when the cannon started to fire, the camera started.

It was pretty dangerous; we were losing 15% of our aircraft.

I remember, one record here, we were jumped in the Norwegian fjords, or over the Norwegian fjords, by 35 Focke Wulf 190s. They spotted it, we were coming in, and we lost two or three aircraft.

Porsgrunn Harbour, flack, three thousand [ton] ship was hit, and we lost a Mossy. That means two guys are gone with it.”

The war ended when I had completed seventeen trips and a tour on that particular type of aircraft and that particular job was only twenty trips, as compared to Bomber Command which was thirty trips. So looking back on it, the smartest thing that ever happened to me was the end of the war at seventeen because the chance of coming back were still pretty slim.

The Mosquito was the fastest propeller-driven aircraft of all the armies during WWII.

The crew on our Mosquito was a [GR (General Reconnaissance) pilot] usually pilots with a fair amount of experience, and a wireless operator, navigator. We really didn't do much navigation, other than to find base, and it was pretty easy to find it going home. The difficulty was to know the map-reading, so that you knew which fjord you were headed for.

We never flew night-flights actively in daylight – I'm sorry, in darkness. We, on one occasion, decided to try a night-formation, which means a very early take-off, and unfortunately, in the take-off, one of the aircraft taking off struck the aircraft taxiing across the end of the runway, and that was the end of that pilot.

The interesting thing about our trips were that in order to get into the Norwegian coast, safely, under the radar, our approach was at 35 ft.

A normal takeoff in formation would be three aircraft, just wheels off, three aircraft, half-way down the runway and the third turning on." The Mosquito was the ultimate. To be on a Mosquito was the cat's meow.

The week after war was ended I escorted the King of Norway back to his fighter aircraft to Norway ... and shortly after that, Judith and I decided we would get married.

* The Gneisenau was heavily damaged by bombers in Feb 42 before it could join the Scharnhorst in Norway, it's possible Mr. Milsom meant the Tirpitz

This officer navigator has now completed his first tour of operations, having carried out 36 sorties.

His consistently high standard of navigation has enabled his crew to obtain the maximum number of successful sorties and the crew's splendid photographic records give ample proof that his timing on targets has been excellent. He has displayed fortitude and calmness during a tour which was by no means free from incident, and his dependability under all circumstances has been most noteworthy.

In recognition of a tour well carried out, pervaded by a fine operational spirit, Flying Officer Milton is strongly recommended for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MIMS, P/O Clarence Lewis (J85121) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.625 Squadron - Award effective 2 October 1944 as per London Gazette dated 17 October 1944 and AFRO 2637/44 dated 8 December 1944. American in the RCAF; born 29 August 1922 in Alexandria, Louisiana; educated and home in Houston, Texas (delivery manager, baggage agent); enlisted in Windsor, Ontario, 25 July 1941 and posted to No.1 Manning Depot, Toronto that day. To No.4 BGS, Fingal, 9 August 1941. To No.1 ITS, Toronto, 10 October 1941; graduated and promoted LAC, 6 December 1941 when posted to No.9 EFTS, St. Catharines; may have graduated 13 February 1942 but not posted to No.6 SFTS, Dunnville until 23 February 1942. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 19 June 1942. To No.8 AOS, Ancienne Lorette, 9 July 1942. Granted Leave Without Pay while staff pilot. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 19 December 1942. To "Y" Depot, 9 June 1943. Promoted WO2, 19 June 1943. Embarked from New York, 30 June 1943. Disembarked in Britain, 7 July 1943. To No.81 OTU, 20 July 1943 (Whitley V aircraft, 77 hours 40 minutes). To No.1662 Conversion Unit, 19 October 1943 (Halifax and Lancaster, 37 hours 55 minutes). To No.625 Squadron, 31 January 1944 (217 hours five minutes). Commissioned 28 February 1944. To No.1666 Conversion Unit, 21 July 1944 (Halifax, 16 hours). To No.1659 Conversion Unit, 19 July 1944 (Halifax III, 65 hours 35 minutes). Promoted Flying Officer, 28 July 1944. Embarked for Canada, 26 November 1944. To Western Air Command, 15 January 1945. Resigned commission, 17 May 1945 in transfer to American forces. Died in Houston, 16 April 1996.

This officer has completed numerous operational sorties, many of them against heavily defended targets in enemy territory. His determination to reach and bomb his objective has always been evident throughout his career. On one occasion in May 1944 his aircraft was attacked by an enemy fighter after bombing the target and one engine was set on fire. By skillful co-operation with his gunners Pilot Officer Mims manoeuvred the aircraft so that their fire damaged the fighter which was seen diving out of control. He then flew his damaged aircraft safely back to base, making a successful landing on three engines. He has always shown the utmost courage and devotion to duty.

Notes: Assessed 5 June 1943 - "This man somewhat irresponsible at times but with more service experience should be considered for commissioned rank." (W/C George W. Jacobs, No.8 AOS).

Assessed 5 September 1944 - "This officer is a capable, hard working instructor who handles aircrew under training very well." (W/C H.R.F. Dyer, No.1659 Heavy Conversion Unit).

On Repatriation Form dated 1 November 1944 he stated he had flown 31 sorties (192 hours 20 minutes) plus 65.35 training hours and 156.20 non-operational hours.

Application for Operational Wing dated 8 January 1945 states he completed 31 sorties (192 hours 15 minutes), 14 February to 4 July 1944.

As of 8 March 1945 his flying was summarized as follows - SINGLE ENGINE - day dual, 98.15; day solo, 108.15; night dual, 5.40; night solo, 10.00. MULTI-ENGINE - 40.00 day dual, 358.00 day solo, 11.20 night dual, 495.35 night solo.

Training: Interviewed in Windsor, 21 July 1941. "An average type. Courteous, appears straight forward and intelligent. Boyish type; very keen; may be excitable. Pleasant, fair appearance; with serious training should be satisfactory. Good material."

Attended No.1 ITS, 10 October to 6 December 1941. Courses in Mathematics (108/150), Armament, practical and oral (66/100), Signals (150/150), Drill (85/100), Law and Discipline (91/100), Aircraft Recognition (86/100) and Hygiene and Theory of Flight. Placed 30th in a class of 61. "A bright and cheerful airman - calm and cool. Willing and cooperative. Conscientious and energetic. Is aggressive and has employed himself diligently with his studies. Is endowed with a keen sense of responsibility"

Attended No.9 EFTS, 8 December 1941 to 13 February 1942. Finch II aircraft - 35 hours 45 minutes dual, 35.50 solo; was 11.10 on instruments. Logged twelve hours in Link. "Over confident erratic pilot who must check airmanship. General flying rough but instrument flying indicates student has ability to smooth out and steady down." (J. Cockham, Chief Flying Instructor). Ground courses in Airmanship (124/200), Airframes (54/100), Engines (61/100), Signals, practical (95/100), Theory of Flight (56/100), Air Navigation (120/200) and Armament, oral (144/200 on supplemental). Placed 27th in a class of 30. "Link result (59 percent) - will require more diligent application in both ground school and flying training to become suitable service pilot, although attitude towards service satisfactory."

Attended No.6 SFTS, 2 March to 19 June 1942. Harvard aircraft - flew 62.35 day dual, 72.25 day solo, 5.40 night dual, 10.20 night solo. Was 23.20 on instruments, Logged 20 hours in Link. "Average ability in clear hood, instrument and navigation. Does not look around sufficiently and is careless at times. Should be watched. Link Trainer 70 percent." (F/L W.F. Poag). Courses in Airmanship and Maintenance (105/200), Armament, written (66/100), Armament, practical (705/100), Navigation and Meteorology (118/200), Signals, written (28/50) and Signals, practical (100/100). Placed 48th in a class of 48. "This airman was just average in all his work at this unit. Is not outstanding in any way." Preferred to go on fighters.

Attended No.81 OTU, 20 July to 24 September 1943. Whitley V aircraft - 6.05 day dual to first day solo, 7.15 total day dual, 32.30 day solo; 5.00 night dual to first night solo (total night dual), 32.55 night solo. Was 2.00 in formation, 19.05 on instruments and logged 15.00 in Link. Flying tests in General Flying (250/400), Applied Flying (130/200), Instrument Flying (175/250), Night

Flying (70/100) and Link (28/50). Ground examinations in Airmanship (188/300), Armament (204/300), Navigation (138/200) and Signals (66/100). "An above average pilot whose flying has been of a high standard. He is keen and is an excellent captain. Strongly recommended for a commission." (S/L Douglas E. Street, 22 October 1943).

MINARD, S/L Guy McRae (C2114) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.8 SFTS - Award effective 28 May 1943 as per London Gazette dated 28 May 1943 and AFRO 1459/43 dated 30 July 1943. Born 19 December 1906 in Ottawa; educated at Lisgar Collegiate and Queens University (B.Sc. in Chemical Engineering, 1928). Started work at the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company in Kapuskasing. A few months later, he received his first promotion, to chemist, and by 1930 he was the mill's technical director. Enlisted in Ottawa, 4 June 1940 in Engineer Branch. As of 21 November 1941 he was Flight Lieutenant, No.8 SFTS. To No.1 Officer School, 9 February 1942. To No.8 SFTS again, date uncertain. Promoted Squadron Leader, 1 November 1942. To No.2 Training Command, 28 August 1943. Promoted Wing Commander, 15 November 1943. To AFHQ, 14 July 1944. In 1944, he was assigned to the Canadian air liaison mission to Southeast Asia, flying to India and Burma with the rank of Wing Commander. Retired 8 March 1945. Returned to the Spruce Falls mill as the assistant managing director and by 1948 had been promoted to managing director. He was named vice president for Kimberly-Clark's operations in Canada in 1951, senior vice president in 1961 and president of Spruce Falls Power and Paper and Canadian Kimberly-Clark operations in 1962. When he was named executive vice president of the Kimberly-Clark Corporation in 1964, he moved to the company's headquarters in Neenah. In 1967 he became the first non-Kimberly family member to head the Kimberly-Clark organization, when he was named its sixth president. A year later, replacing John R. Kimberly, he was also given the title of chief executive officer of the company. In 1970, he also became chairman. Retired in 1972, living in Aiken, S.C. Died in Toronto, August 1985 (reported in New York Times of 15 August 1985).

Medal presented 20 March 1944.

The service of this officer as Chief Technical Officer at this unit covered the period when the station changed from Anson Is to Harvard IIs and thence to Anson IIs. During this period Squadron Leader Minard displayed exceptional professional ability, outstanding leadership and resourcefulness in maintaining, under extremely difficult conditions, a constant supply of aircraft. He has, by his exemplary conduct and devotion to duty, gained the respect and confidence of all personnel serving under him and has been a splendid example to other officers. His efficiency and success in the maintenance of aircraft are exceptional.

MIMEAULT, FS Joseph Maurice Edgar (Can 7642) - Mention in Despatches - No.9426 Servicing Echelon (No.6 Group) - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per London Gazette of that date and AFRO 1729/44 dated 11 August 1944. Born 5 May 1918. Home in St.Isidore, Quebec; enlisted in Quebec City, 23 May 1939 as Aero Engine Mechanic. To No.8 (BR) Squadron, 28 August 1939. Promoted LAC, 29 February 1940. Promoted Corporal, 18 October 1940. To No.1 BGS, 27 February 1941. To No.5 BGS, 13 May 1941. Promoted Sergeant, 1 October 1941. To "Y" Depot, 1 September 1942. To RAF overseas, 24 September 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 1 January 1943. Repatriated 17 June 1945. Retired 2 October 1945. No citation in AFRO, which give unit only as "Overseas". DHist file 181.009 D.1658, "RCAF Linton-on-Ouse, Honours and Awards" (PAC RG.24 Vol.20605) says he was involved in design of rig to flush oil coolers on Hercules XVI engines. Bomber Command Inventions Award tribunal applauded his initiative and awarded him £ 2 10s (same praise and sum to R133077 LAC C.B. Robertson, who was not further honoured). DHist file 181.009 D.1719 (PAC RG.24 Vol.20606) has recommendation dated 29 January 1944 which identifies unit and provides following from CO, Linton-on-Ouse:

This Non-Commissioned Officer has been in the R. and I. [Repair and Inspection ?] Squadron on this unit since 18th June 1943 and has at all times shown outstanding ability, energy and enthusiasm in the carrying out of his duties. For some months now he has, through force of circumstances, been the only Flight Sergeant in R. and I. Squadron and has accordingly been called upon to work long and arduous hours as well as assuming full responsibility for the technical supervision of this most important section. Flight Sergeant Mineault has done this without hesitation; in fact many times he has supervised both the day and night shifts in the hangar during busy periods, thus going without rest for 36 to 48 hours at a time and has refused to take any rest until actually ordered to do so. It is felt that such outstanding devotion to duty and enthusiasm is most deserving of recognition...

One night in September 1944, Flight Lieutenant Minhinnick captained an aircraft detailed to attack Volkel airfield. When crossing the enemy coast the aircraft was damaged by anti-aircraft fire. Although one engine was put out of action, Flight Lieutenant Minhinnick continued to the target and executed a most determined attack. He set a fine example of devotion to duty. Flight Lieutenant Minhinnick has completed many sorties against well defended targets and has invariably displayed a high degree of courage and resolution.

DHH file 181.009 D.1513 (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 vol.20600) has recommendation raised by W/C J.F. Easton, 6 November 1944 when he had completed 26 sorties (118 hours five minutes):

On the night of September 3rd, 1944, Flight Lieutenant Minhinnick and crew were detailed to attack Volkel airfield. His aircraft was severely damaged by flak at the enemy's coast and one engine put out of action. Despite this he, disregarding all personal safety, pressed on for eighty miles to the target which was bombed successfully, and brought his aircraft back to base with another aiming point photograph.

More recently against targets requiring extreme bombing accuracy, he has pressed home his attacks and brought back aiming point photographs, He has operated over many heavily defended such as Essen, Kiel, Wesselling and Sterkrade.

He has been on the squadron since July and has proved to be an exceptionally keen operational pilot, and at present is a Deputy Flight Commander. I therefore recommend him for the Immediate Distinguished Flying Cross.

Notes: Repatriation form dated 27 February 1945 stated he had flown 31 sorties (156 hours 25 minutes) with Nos.408 and 432 Squadrons; also 240 hours 25 minutes non-operational. Last sortie was 28 January 1945. Types flown overseas were Oxford (78.20), Wellington (87.40), Lancaster II (88.45), Halifax II and V (40.15) and Halifax VII (111.50).

Assessed 9 February 1945 by W/C R.A. McLernon - "This officer is an exceedingly capable and zealous leader with much business experience. He is a very strong personality of dominating appearance. With more experience in his present duties he should make an extremely good squadron commander."

Application for Operational Wing dated 12 March 1945 stated he had flown 31 sorties (156 hours 25 minutes) with Nos.408 and 432 Squadrons.

Training: Attended No.5 ITS, 31 August to 24 October 1942. Courses in Mathematics, LDAO (whatever that is), Navigation, Airmanship, Anti-Gas, Armament (written), Aircraft Recognition, Drill, Signals (written) and Meteorology. Scored 707 points of a possible 1,000. Placed 58th in a class of 106. "This man was elected class senior, is of excellent appearance, has definitely the ability of leadership, occupied executive position in civilian life. Mature, conscientious, keen."

Attended No.20 EFTS, 7 December 1942 to 5 February 1943. Tiger Moth aircraft - 8.05 dual to first solo, 29.45 total day dual, 30.00 day solo, 3.30 night dual, 30 minutes night solo. Logged 10.10 on instruments and eleven hours in Link. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written and practical), Aircraft Recognition and Signals (practical). Scored 428 points of a possible 700. Placed 30th in a class of 31. "Instruments need watching."

Attended No.16 SFTS, 8 February to 28 May 1943. Anson aircraft - 6.35 dual to first solo, 75.35 total day dual, 56.30 day solo, 11.00 night dual, 6.20 night solo. Was 12.30 in formation, 26.15 on instruments. Logged 27.45 in Link. Courses in Navigation, Airmanship, Armament (written and practical), Aircraft Recognition, Signals (written and practical) and Meteorology. Scored 505 points of a possible 750. Placed 44th in a class of 45. "Average pilot - shows common sense. Fairly mature. Somewhat slow to grasp new ideas, Can be definitely depended on to go through. Conduct and deportment good. Recommended for commission."

Attended No.11 (Pilots) AFU, 23 November 1943 to 7 March 1944. Oxford aircraft - 11.55 day dual to first day solo, 28.25 total day dual, 20.20 day solo, 1.10 night dual to first night solo, 7.00 total night dual, 12.30 night solo. Flying tests in General Flying (240/400), Applied Flying (130/200), Instrument Flying (130/250), Night Flying (66/100) and Link (30/50). "A forceful type of officer who shows good qualities of leadership." (W/C G.M. Wyatt).

Attended No.22 OTU, 8 March to 12 May 1944. Wellington aircraft - 5.50 day dual to first day solo, total 6.10 day dual, 7.40 day with a captain, 33.05 as captain by day, 7.50 night dual to first night solo (total night dual), 6.30 night with a captain, 28.25 night as sole captain.. Was 30.35 on instruments. Flying tests in General Flying (180/400), Applied Flying (160/200), Instrument Flying (160/250), Night Flying (60/100) and Link (32/50). Ground courses in Airmanship (237/300), Armament (294/300), Meteorology (85/100) and Navigation (154/200). "This pilot was slow to convert to Wellington aircraft and his general flying was below average. He improved during the latter stages of the course and proved himself an able and competent captain. The crew cooperation was good and should be competent to operate heavy aircraft. Not recommended for PFF."

Attended No.1664 Conversion Unit, 28 May to 23 June 1944. Crew was himself (captain), J36313 P/O J.A. Bleich (navigator), J35776 P/O H.P. Harriman (Bomb Aimer), R182961 Sergeant D.E. Staples (WOP), 1866975 Sergeant K.A. Partridge (RAF Flight Engineer), R184508 Sergeant A.A. Bulbeck (Mid-Upper Gunner, later commissioned and awarded DFC) and J39043 P/O G.F.G. Bowser (Rear Gunner). Crew described as "An average captain with a good average crew". He was described as follows - "Average 5. Has shown much improvement during course, but still a bit erratic. Average captain. Crew cooperation good." (F/L R. Burns).

MINNIS, P/O Harvey B. (J16658) - Distinguished Flying Cross - No.115 Squadron (dead) - Award effective 25 April 1943 as per London Gazette dated 20 July 1945 and AFRO 1478/45 dated 21 September 1945. Born 26 October 1919 in Victoria: home there. Worked in his father's drug store. Formerly in 5th Coast Brigade and 13th Field Ambulance. Interviewed on 2 June 1941 at which time the assessing officer wrote, "Good looking and physically vigorous. Ample education, proper manners. Probably lots of guts. Excellent material." Enlisted in Vancouver, 18 June 1941. To No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon on date of enlistment. To No.11 Equipment Depot, Calgary, 8 August 1941. To No.4 ITS, Edmonton, 2 September 1941. Promoted LAC, 3 October 1941. Taken on strength of No.18 EFTS, Boundary Bay, 9 October 1941; course completed 5 December 1941. Taken on strength of No.15 SFTS, Claresholm, 7 December 1941. At SFTS assessed as "Average student. Rather immature. Needs to settle down. No outstanding faults. Above average instrument pilot. Link Trainer, above average." However, sentenced to seven days detention and forfeiture of pay, for "neglect to the prejudice and good air force discipline" and "being a pilot of one of His Majesty's aircraft flying it so low as to be likely to cause unnecessary annoyance to any person," both committed on 9 February 1942. Graduated and promoted Sergeant, 27 March 1942 (placed 25th in a class of 45). To "Y" Depot, Halifax, 29 March 1942. To RAF Trainee Pool, 30 April 1942. Disembarked in Britain, 12 May 1942 and sent to No.3 PRC, Bournemouth. To No.11 (P) AFU, 23 June 1942. Crane and Oxford aircraft). Attended course at No.1821 Beam Approach Training Flight, Stradishall, 12 July to 18

July 1942 and assessed as follows: "Pupil had no trouble at any time during course; very steady and confident on Beam and in cloud flying." To No.14 OTU, 21 July 1942. To No.1657 Conversion Flight (later Unit), 24 October 1942. To No.115 Squadron, 25 October 1942. Aircraft damaged 9 January 1943 during a minelaying mission (Wellington Z1657, no injuries). Commissioned 15 January 1943. Killed in action 27 April 1943 (Lancaster DS609; another in crew was P/O Edward Austin Nixon Foster, DFC). His father subsequently wrote a letter to AFHQ (July 1943) stating in part, "I believe our son had completed his allotted trips and was on an extra or additional duty of his own choice." On 25 August 1945, writing to Colin Gibson (Minister of National Defence for Air) the father thanked the Minister for having bestowed the DFC on Minnis, then wrote, "Harvey kept a very complete diary of his daily activities up until his 27th operational trip. We now have this diary. Only on reading it did we realize the service he was doing and the dangers he was facing on each trip. He was our only son, a grand home boy, and we miss him very much." DFC presented at Government House to next-of-kin, 7 November 1949.

Pilot Officer Minnis has attacked many of the enemy's most heavily defended targets including Hamburg, Duisburg, Berlin and Essen. He has always completed his missions with courage and determination. This officer has set an example of the highest order by his skill and courage which have been a source of inspiration to all.

Warrant Officer Minogue has completed 32 operational sorties, fourteen of which have been with the Pathfinder Force against heavily defended targets in Germany and Italy.

This Non-Commissioned Officer is a keen and determined Air Gunner who has always displayed tenacity and great coolness in the face of enemy opposition. He has always shown a marked enthusiasm for operations, and it may be mentioned that he was one of four survivors when his aircraft crashed in this country in November 1943 when returning from Berlin. After he had recovered from his severe injuries he carried on operational flying and elected to continue for the full Pathfinder Force tour. He has always shown a high example in tenacity and devotion to duty and I have no hesitation in recommending him for the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The following from <http://aircrewremembered.com/fordyce-gordon.html> deals with the loss of Lancaster III serial JB293, 23/24 November 1943. Crashed into Manor Farm, Harpley, Norfolk. The crew were R116865 WO2 Gordon William Fordyce (pilot, killed), 1511990 FS George Johnson (flight engineer, killed), Sergeant L.J. Collins, RAFVR (navigator, injured, survived), Sergeant R. Harries, RAFVR (air bomber, injured, survived), 169665 FS Albert Edward Egan, RAFVR (WOP, injured, survived), 754928 Sergeant Ronald Horace Hodges, RAFVR (air gunner, killed) and R69302 FS James Steel Minogue (air gunner, injured, survived). Survivors were helped by a civilian, Reginald Ernest Tipple of King's Lynn (Home Guard Sergeant, Lorry Driver and Special Constable), who rescued an airman trapped in the burning nose and another stuck under the wing. Also helped a third member who had been flung from the plane and the rear gunner trapped in the broken tail. On 13 June 1944 the London Gazette reported that Tipple had been awarded the British Empire Medal (Civil Division) with the following citation:

An aircraft crashed, skidded along the ground, struck a house, burst into flames and set fire to the building which was completely destroyed. Tipple, hearing the sound of the crash and seeing the flames, at once ran to the house. He found that the nose of the machine had penetrated into the kitchen and was burning furiously. One of the crew was trapped with his harness and clothing on fire, and was shouting for help. Tipple attempted to open the cabin with his bare hands but it was too hot. He was able to smash a hole with a brick and then dragged out the airman, promptly removed his parachute and gear and, after putting the flames out, wrapped him in a rug. Later, hearing shouting from the other side of the lawn, Tipple found another of the crew with his clothing on fire which he extinguished. Subsequently he rendered first aid to the airman whom he had rescued from the kitchen and who had suffered a broken leg in addition to his other injuries. Tipple showed great gallantry and undoubtedly saved the life of one of the airmen and probably of two.

Minogue's own account of the crash was as follows:

When crossing the English coast on return from War Operations, the pilot reported that we were flying at 2,000 feet and proceeding at same height to base. We were flying through cloud in which only one break appeared. Through that break I saw a car going along a road from which I judged our height as still about 2,000 feet.. We flew into a black cloud in which we were flying for about four minutes when I felt the speed of the aircraft suddenly reduce and the impact of the aircraft hitting the ground instantly.

Notes: On 17 September 1944 he was tail gunner in Lancaster PB119; airborne 1032 hours from Little Staughton for daylight raid on Boulogne. At 1136 hours on run-up to target, height 2,300 feet, a heavy AA shell burst close under the tail, causing much damage to starboard elevator, rear turret and port tail plane. Minogue wounded. Another shell burst under the aircraft at 1137 hours as markers were being released; navigator P/O N.J. Franklin (176759) wounded in leg. Mission completed and aircraft landed at Tangmere; damaged assessed as Category "AC".

Application for Operational Wing dated 20 March 1945 stated he had flown 62 sorties (325 hours), 12 June 1943 to 17 September 1944.

Repatriation form dated 9 December 1944 stated he had flown 61 sorties (325 hours 50 minutes) plus 121.20 normal training and 111 hours miscellaneous training. Of the sorties, 19 were standard bombing and 42 Pathfinder.

Training: Attended No.3 BGS, 6 July to 25 September 1942. Stage I courses were Armament, oral (70/100), Armament, written (235/300), Anti-Gas (82/100), Aircraft Recognition (83/100), Navigation (50/100), Mathematics, Hygiene and Administration (93/100), Signals (100/100) and Drill (85/100). Stage II involved Fairey Battle aircraft - 18 hours 40 minutes in the air. Exposed three films. Fired 60 skeet rounds, 400 rounds on 25-yard range, 600 rounds on 200-yard range, 710 rounds air-to-ground and 3,000 air-to-air. Turret manipulation (11.20) with Bristol, Fraser Nash and Boulton-Paul turrets. Graded Armament, written (121/150), Practical and Oral (138/200), Aircraft Recognition (79/100). Rated 64/100 in Ability as Firer. Placed 12th in a class of 31.

Died in Chilliwack, 14 May 1964 as per British Columbia Vital Statistics. AFRO gives "Overseas" as unit. DHist file 181.009 D.4364 (RG.24 Vol.20648) has recommendation dated 23 May 1945 which also identifies unit. Clerk/Administrative, in charge of Maintenance Wing Orderly Room. Recommended as a Leading Aircraftman.

LAC Minter has an outstanding record of unflagging zeal and devotion to duty in the execution of his office. He has been in charge of the Maintenance Wing Orderly Room at this unit for the past two years and has attained a mastery of the vast amount of technical data involved that is unexcelled. His efforts during periods of maximum operational pressure and conversion to new types of aircraft have been superb. On more than one occasion, due to rapid changes of personnel in his department, he has carried virtually the whole burden himself, working day and night to maintain efficiency. Without regard to personal advancement or gain, LAC Minter has devoted himself to his work with a cheerfulness and tenacity of purpose which has been a real inspiration to all associated with him and a major factor in the high maintenance record of this unit.

Assessment: "This airman has been in complete charge of the Maintenance Wing Orderly Room for the past 16 months. He is exceptionally well qualified in technical clerical duties and is most highly recommended for promotion." (F/O J.A. Collyer, 12 November 1944)

Station Trenton, 4 October to 2 November 1941; No.3 Manning Depot, Edmonton, 3 November 1941 to 6 October 1942 when posted overseas; arrived at No.3 Personnel Reception Centre, Bournemouth, 25 October 1942; to No.421 Squadron, 10 December 1942; to No.126 Airfield, 9 April 1942; to No.127 Airfield, 14 July 1943; to No.39 Unit, 28 July 1943; to No.128 Airfield, 21 September 1943; to No.144 Airfield, 7 February 1944; to No.416 Squadron, 22 July 1944; to No.127 Wing, 3 January 1945; repatriated to Canada, 8 August 1945; released in Edmonton, 4 October 1945. Medal presented 17 January 1948. Died in Winnipeg, 7 July 1973.

His overseas postings were in the Intelligence role, and while no specific recommendation for his award can be found, the following assessments by his superiors are relevant:

Very keen on his job. Gets along well with the pilots (W/C J.M. Godfrey, No.128 Airfield, 7 February 1944).

A very hard working and conscientious officer. He puts considerable energy into his work but could do better with a little more organizing ability. Has carried out his duties as Senior Intelligence Officer, No.144 Wing in a satisfactory manner (W/C A.D. Nesbitt, No.144 Wing, 27 July 1944).

A very good officer who has performed his duties as S.I.O. [Senior Intelligence Officer] efficiently and conscientiously. Full of energy, he works hard and sets a good example to those under him (G/C P.S. Turner, No.127 Wing, 28 July 1945)

MIRABELLI, S/L Joseph Carmel John Baptist (C1575) - Commended for Valuable Services in the Air - Central Flying School - Award effective 16 April 1943 as per London Gazette of 13 April 1943 and AFRO 1035/43 dated 4 June 1943. Born in Quebec City, 1911. Educated in Ottawa. Enlisted at Ottawa, 30 September 1927; trained as an aero engine mechanic and was a crewman on photo flying duties and on Preventative Coastal Patrols until 1935. In 1936 he was selected for pilot training as an NCO, winning his wings as Camp Borden that year. He was then a pilot on Preventative Operations until May 1938 when he reported to Trenton for an Instructor's Course. He instructed at Trenton and then Camp Borden, and in December 1938 was accorded a "B" Category Instructor Certificate. Commissioned at Camp Borden, 15 November 1939. In December 1939 he received an A.2 Instructor rating and was attached to the staff of the Flying Instructor School at Camp Borden. In January 1940 he was posted to Trenton to help organize the Central Flying School. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 November 1940; awarded A.1 Instructor rating in January 1941 when posted to No.9 SFTS, Summerside as a Squadron Commander assisting in opening that school; promoted Squadron Leader, 1 March 1941. To Trenton, 3 March 1942 (Assistant Chief Flying Instructor). To No.17 SFTS, 8 March 1943. Promoted Wing Commander, 15 April 1943. To AFHQ, 25 July 1944. To No.2 Air Command, 5 January 1945. To No.3 SFTS, 8 January 1945. To "Y" Depot, 6 April 1945. To United Kingdom, 13 April 1945. Repatriated 24 May 1946. Reverted to Squadron Leader, 1 October 1946. Promoted Wing Commander, 19 June 1951. On 12 December 1942, W/C F.C. Carling-Kelly recommended him for an AFC, citing his "excellent flying background and experience.". This appears to have been the basis for the subsequent Commendation. Awarded Queen's Coronation Medal, 23 October 1953 while a Wing Commander, Maritime Air Command. Photo PL-128154 is a portrait taken at Downsview, 1959. Governor General's Records (RG.7 Group 26, Volume 57, File 190-I) has citation.

Squadron Leader Mirabelli has been continuously employed on flying training for five years during which time he has shown marked ability as a Flying Instructor. By his unflinching devotion to duty and enthusiasm he sets an example to all with whom he comes in contact. His total flying time of 2,555 hours, a goodly portion of which was logged since November 1937, covers a period of seven years.

MIRABELLI, W/C Joseph Carmel John Baptist (C1575) - Air Force Cross - No.17 SFTS - Award effective 8 June 1944 as per Canada Gazette of that date and AFRO 1380/44 dated 30 June 1944. Described as having flown 2,645 hours, 2,395 hours as instructor, 34 hours in past six months. Recommendation submitted by Air Commodore F.S. McGill, OC Station Trenton, when Mirabelli was still on staff of Central Flying School. Medal presented 9 March 1945.

This officer has had a long and distinguished career as a flying instructor. He has at all times displayed a keen and energetic spirit in his work. His exceptional qualities of leadership and his ability as a pilot and instructor have been reflected in the high standard of training achieved by those under his command.

Note: RCAF file RCAF file 976-3, Volume 2, "Search and Rescue, Operations, Aircraft Cases", (Library and Archives Canada RG.24 Volume 18114) has report dated 12 November 1937 respecting a search for a missing boat in the vicinity of Cranberry Island. This was undertaken on 31 October 1937 by Fairchild 636 (F/O R.F. Davenport, 1538 LAC J.G. Pytlik, 2089 AC1 A.E. McKean) and Fairchild 640 (1531 Sergeant J.C. Mirabelli, 1913 LAC C.E. Elliott). The unit was No.5 (Coast Reconnaissance) Squadron. The search that day was inconclusive, and the aircraft returned to Guysboro for the night, encountering snowstorms en route. On 1 November 1937 they resumed the search, flying east from Cranberry Island to a distance 100 miles east of the island. En route back to Canso to refuel, they received a radio message from the RCMP cutter McDonald that they were to return to Dartmouth. Total flying time on search had been ten hours 55 minutes.

Medal presented by Governor General, 16 April 1943.

Flight Lieutenant Mitchell is employed as an operational pilot and has flown a total of 801 hours during the past year. He is an excellent pilot and particularly keen officer and good organizer. He takes great interest in improving the efficiency of the squadron both in ground and air training. His enthusiasm for and devotion to duty whilst flying is exceptional.

This was first proposed by G/C A.D. Hull, Senior Air Staff Officer, Western Air Command Headquarters, 8 December 1942. Submission almost identical to above except that read that he had "flown a total of 501 hours during the past year. "

NOTE: DHist file 181.009 D.1753, National Archives of Canada RG.24 Vol.20609 has recommendation for a Mention in Despatches dated 31 May 1943 which casts further light on his career. At the time he was on strength of RCAF Station Ucluelet and specifically singled out as "First pilot, RCAF Canso 9752". He had by then flown 1,673 hours 30 minutes (195 hours 45 minutes since 1 January 1943) including 77 hours 35 minutes of instructional time. He had flown three operational sorties (14 hours 40 minutes) and had participated in 26 flights ferrying the servicing crews of No.14 (F) Squadron to the Aleutians. He was also described as having flown 225 hours five minutes in the period 1 July 1942 to 31 December 1942, including 51 hours 25 minutes instructing and 124 hours on 13 operational sorties. The text was as follows:

This officer displayed outstanding skill, endurance and devotion to duty during the period February 11th-March 18th, 1943 while acting as first pilot of an aircraft assigned as safety aircraft accompanying a fighter squadron on a flight of approximately 2,600 miles in winter weather conditions which were usually arduous and frequently hazardous. The safe arrival in the Aleutian Islands of all aircraft of the fighter squadron was due in considerable measure to the action of this officer.

Accident: Involved in accident, 2250 hours, 24 July 1942, Canso 9744, No.5 (BR) Squadron, Station Dartmouth. He was captain; crew were J4338 F/O James Clayton Snyder (co-pilot), J10723 P/O Raymons Moore Emmons (navigator), P/O Miles Edgar Sturart (navigator under instruction), R59459 LAC Denton Wilson Alfred Russel (first engineer), R101745 Sergeant Kenneth Gerald Adams (WOP/AG), R62934 Sergeant Peter Fraser Burrows (WOP/AG), R111893 LAC Louis Cyril Landry (second engineer). No injuries. Aircraft returning from patrol; undercarriage collapsed.

Flying Times: A statement of flying times dated 18 July 1946 noted he had flown 316 hours 15 minutes on single engine aircraft and 2,440 hours 40 minutes on multi-engine aircraft. Types flown (ten hours or more) were Fleet, Moth, fairchild 51, Fairchild 71, Vedette, Norseman, Delta, Stranraer, Anson (I, II and V), Canso, Harvard, Expedito, Ventura, Dakota.

Application for Operational Wing submitted 23 July 1944 listed his flying to date as follows:

Course at Flying Training School, Trenton was 28 July 1937 to 18 May 1938. Flew Fleet aircraft (10.15 dual to first solo, 44.35 advanced dual, 51.25 solo) and Moth (11.50 advanced dual, 6.40 solo). Also logged time as Observer/Passenger (11.35). Courses and marks were Air Navigation (138/200), Meteorology (34/40), Airmanship (126.4/170), Engines, written (164/200), Engines, practical (269.2/300), Rigging, written (not tested), Rigging, practical (264.7/300), Administration (70.4/100), Organization (38.5/50), Law (75/100), History (17/25), Theory of Flight (26/50), Armament, written (47.4/50), Armament, practical (143/200), Signals, practical (98.9/100, written test not taken) and Drill (75.5/100). Placed seventh in a class of twelve. "Above average pupil pilot. No outstanding faults." Aerobatics average. "Keen and conscientious". (S/L A.H. Hull and F/L J.G. Kerr). Instrument course on Moth (19 hours 45 minutes) where described by S/L Hull as follows: "This pilot flies by instruments with accuracy and confidence. All manoeuvres are uniformly good. Turning onto four different courses his average error before making a correction was six degrees."

Attended Air Navigation and Flying Boat School, Trenton, 1 June to 31 October 1938. Graded 69.25 percent. "A keen and conscientious NCO with good practical and theoretical knowledge of flying and air navigation. (S/L F.J. Mawdesley, 4 November 1938). The course entailed work in Vedette aircraft (3.55 dual as pilot, 42.00 solo plus 17.05 as navigator, 50.05 as crew, total 113.05), Fleet (1.40 dual, 3.35 solo, 1.30 as navigator, 3.45 as crew, total 10.30), Fairchild 71 (1.40 dual, 11.50 solo, 37.35 as navigator, 7.15 as crew, total 58.20) and Norseman (50 minutes as pilot, 7.40 as navigator). Ground courses in Photography 82 %), Magnetism and Compasses (42 on first test, 79 percent on supplemental), Meteorology and Tides (60 %), Maps, Charts and Instruments (67 %), Sun Position Lines (68 %), Dead Reckoning Navigation (73 %) and Signals (62 %).

Attended Advanced Photographic Course, Ottawa, 16 January to 10 March 1939. Flew in Fairchild 71 (2.25 as pilot, 4.55 as passenger) and Delta (10.10 dual and 8.25 as passenger). Courses in Practical Photography (65/100), Theoretical Photography (68/100), and Mapping Methods (74/100). Passed course though not qualified on Delta aircraft. "Keen, resourceful and capable. Readily applies theoretical knowledge to practical use. Flies steady lines and should make a good photographic pilot with more practice.

Selected Assessments: "LAC Mitchell acted as Assistant Instructor in Engines to the Airmen of No.11 (Army Cooperation) Squadron, RCAF, and also was employed on engine maintenance. He is a cheerful and willing worker." (F/L Hugh Campbell, OC No.11 Detachment, 16 July 1937).

"Has performed his duties in a satisfactory manner, pleasing personality, good character and neat appearance. Reliable and efficient officer, average." (1 January 1940)

"Undergoing training on Stranraer aircraft. Progress is satisfactory. Resourceful and should develop into a useful reconnaissance pilot." (10 July 1940).

"This officer is a sound common sense instructor, essentially practical in attitude, although not very imaginative. Very cooperative." (S/L A.H.S, Gilson, No.1 ANS, 15 December 1941).

"Long course in navigation. Outstanding in his work. Has had a great amount of experience in BR squadrons. Qualified Day and Night in Catalina. (W/C R.C. Mair, Uclulet, 10 December 1942).

"An excellent officer. Quiet, efficient and a definite leader. Very strongly recommended for promotion to the rank of Acting Wing Commander." (W/C G.D. Clarke, Western Air Command Headquarters, 25 September 1944).

"This officer has been an outstanding Squadron Commander. As CO of the AAB he has raised the standard of aircrew on the coast to a high level." (Air Commodore D.M. Smith, Western Air Command Headquarters, 6 August 1945, to which A/V/M F.V. Heakes adds, "One of the finest and most capable officers in Western Air Command.")

Notwithstanding his excellent wartime assessments, he lacked administrative skills and in the postwar period he was graded as no better than an average staff officer.

MITCHELL, Sergeant Banks Earle (R80314) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.58 Squadron - Award effective 1 September 1943 as per London Gazette dated 24 September 1943 and AFRO 2322/43 dated 12 November 1943. Born in Radisson, Saskatchewan, 20 June 1917; home in Winnipeg (auto mechanic and paint refinisher); enlisted there 20 November 1940 and posted to No.2 Manning Depot, Brandon. To No.34 SFTS, Medicine Hat (guard), 2 January 1941. To No.2 WS, Calgary, 26 April 1941; promoted LAC, 28 May 1941; to No.3 BGS, 12 September 1941; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 13 October 1941. To Embarkation Depot, 19 October 1941; to RAF overseas, 2 November 1941. To Signal School, Cranwell, 9 December 1941. To No.3 Radio School, 10 March 1942. Promoted Flight Sergeant, 13 May 1942. To No.7 (Coastal) OTU, 9 June 1942. To No.612 Squadron, 12 August 1942. To No.502 Squadron, 26 October 1942. To No.58 Squadron, 26 March 1943. Promoted WO2, 13 April 1943. Missing and presumed dead, 23 August 1943 (Halifax DT636, No.58 Squadron); name on Runnymede Memorial. Cited with F/L G.A. Sawtell (RAF, trained in Canada).

Flight Lieutenant Sawtell and Sergeant Mitchell were pilot and rear gunner respectively of an aircraft detailed for a sortie in July 1943. During the flight a U-Boat was observed on the surface of the sea and Flight Lieutenant Sawtell immediately went into the attack. Considerable anti-aircraft fire was encountered but by skilful manoeuvring he enabled his gunners to rake the U-Boat deck with machine gun fire. The enemy gun crews were put out of action and Flight Lieutenant Sawtell flew into close range to deliver a devastating attack. This officer displayed great skill and determination while the efforts of Sergeant Mitchell contributed materially to the success of the attack.

Accident: On 10 November 1942 he was in crew of Whitley EB282, No.502 Squadron, on non-operational day training. At Carew Cheriton. "Pilot decided to make a practice single-engine approach and landing. The circuit was satisfactory - left hand, having pulled back the starboard throttle, a high approach made, putting down 40 degree flap when overshooting. This proved insufficient in reduced wind from previous landings that day and full flap applied. Aircraft did not touch down before reaching a point almost half way down the runway, and remainder being down hill, use of full brake did not have maximum effect. Pilot was unable to stop before reaching end of runway, after which it was a sheer drop. Aircraft fell down, undercarriage collapsed and port wing damaged a Henley aircraft which was standing below." Mitchell not injured; aircraft written off.

Notes on Training: Interview of 8 September 1940 by a F/L Baskerville read, "The rough and ready type that training will smooth off. With sufficient determination to carry him through on this determination. I give him the Wireless Operator recommend. He is gunner type."

Course at No.2 WS was 28 April to 14 September 1941. Flew 30 minutes as first operator in flying classroom, two hours 50 minutes on listening watch, flying classroom, and six hours as sole operator in a two-seat machine. Marked on Theory (30/50), Radio Equipment (142/250), Morse, buzzer and lamp (189/200), Procedure (122/200), Signal Organization (120/150), Armament (60/100) and PT and Drill (39/50). Placed 46th in a class of 199.

Course at No.3 BGS was 15 September to 13 October 1941. Flew in Battle aircraft (9.25 by day and 3.55 as passenger). Fired 605 rounds on ground, 600 rounds air to ground, and 1,815 rounds air-to-air. Scored seven percent on Beam Test, 4.5 percent on Beam Relative Speed Test, and 1.5 percent Under Tail Test. Placed 29th in a class of 33. "Can be relied upon" (W/C R.C. Ripley, Chief Instructor, 13 October 1941).

Circumstances of death: Apparently shot down by German fighters over Bay of Biscay. Crew were 1199806 Sergeant J.W. Bailey, 100556 F/L G.A. Sawtell, 1349870 FS T.R. Urquhart, 922520 FS A.C. Wilder, 798593 FS L.C. Matthews, J26047 P/O J.W. Clark, R.86553 Sergeant W.A. Tennant, and R80314 Sergeant B.E. Mitchell. "An aircraft of another squadron reported seeing a Halifax believed to be DT636 dive from 3,000 feet; upon impact it completely broke up and burst into flames, sinking almost immediately. No one was seen to bale out and it is considered unlikely that there could be any survivors. It is assumed that the whole crew lost their lives by drowning."

Flight Lieutenant Mitchell is an operator of special equipment who has taken part in a number of operations in a Master Bomber and visual marker crew. The enthusiasm and high sense of duty displayed by this officer has contributed largely to the great success which has attended his crew.

Flight Lieutenant Mitchell still shows the most praiseworthy keenness to proceed on operations whenever possible, and his determination to press home his attacks is undiminished. In recognition of this officer's fine record of devotion to duty he is recommended for the non-immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

NOTE: Assessed very favourably while instructing in Canada. On 8 June 1943, F/E. E.D. Wilson, No.2 AOS, described him as "A little retiring but pleasant. Very keen about his work and creates a very favourable impression. Recommended for continued employment in his present capacity." A form dated 13 March 1945 stated he had flown 657 hours (216 in previous six months) and described him as "A hard working and above average navigator."

The website "Lost Bombers" has the following on his last sortie. Lancaster ME361, No.35 Squadron, target Henningstedt, 7/8 March 1945. ME361 was a Mark III, delivered to No.35 Squadron from No.32 Maintenance Unit in November 1944. It took part in the following operations: Cologne, 23 December 1944 (daylight); Hannover, 5/6 January 1945; Duisburg, 21/22 February 1945. Airborne at 1853 hours, 7 March 1943 from Graveley as Master Bomber for the raid on the Deutsche Erdoel oil refinery. Shot down at 2200 hours in the target area. Crew (all killed) were S/L D.B.Everett, DFC and two Bars (a highly respected PFF captain with 89 sorties to his credit); P/O K.G.Munro, RAAF; F/O J.M.Aylieff, DFC; F/L C.G.Mitchell, DFC, RCAF; F/L C.O.Russell, DFC; F/L R.C.Chapman; F/O R.M.Weller, DFC; F/O A.H.J.Pidgeon.

MITCHELL, F/L Charles Joseph (C7112) - Member, Order of the British Empire - No.2 SFTS - Award effective as of 1 January 1945 as per London Gazette of that date, Canada Gazette dated 6 January 1945 and AFRO 89/45 dated 19 January 1945. Born 10 May 1889 in Kirkfield, Ontario (RCAF Press Release 4907 announcing award); home there. Received his senior education in Lindsay, Ontario. He was manager of the Canadian National Railway Kirkfield Lodge when he enlisted in Toronto, 5 September 1941 and was commissioned. To No.2 SFTS, 20 September 1941. Promoted Flight Lieutenant, 1 January 1943. Retired 23 March 1945. Deceased, 22 September 1967 as per DVA letter. Medal presented 17 June 1945.

This officer has been in charge of aerodrome control at this unit for the past three years, which duties, through both trying and exacting, he has discharged with the utmost efficiency. He has successfully trained a number of officers in this branch. He has always displayed a high degree of initiative and forethought which, on several occasions, has directly saved many aircraft and the lives of their crews. This officer has the complete confidence of all flying personnel on the station and has been an outstanding inspiration to all.

MITCHELL, FS (now P/O) Donald Talbert (R155869/J89204) - Distinguished Flying Medal - No.426 Squadron - Award effective 4 November 1944 as per London Gazette dated 17 November 1944 and AFRO 239/45 dated 9 February 1945. Born 10 October 1917 in Conquest, Saskatchewan; home in Tyvan Lake, Saskatchewan; served in Army before joining RCAF; enlisted in Regina, 27 March 1942; to No.2 Manning Depot, 10 April 1942; to No.2 ITS, 15 August 1942; graduated and promoted LAC, 9 October 1942; to No.19 EFTS, 21 November 1942; ceased training and posted to No.1 Composite Training School, 11 January 1943. To No.5 BGS, 14 February 1943; graduated 14 May 1943 and posted next day to No.1 CNS; graduated and promoted Sergeant, 26 June 1943. To "Y" Depot, 9 July 1943. To United Kingdom, 15 July 1943. Commissioned 2 September 1944. Joined No.426 Squadron, March 1944; Bomb Aimer to Flight Sergeant R.F. Sellen. Incident described was on 20 April 1944. Posted from No.426 Squadron to No.1659 Conversion Unit, 31 August 1944. Repatriated 8 December 1944. To No.4 SFTS, 23 January 1945. To No.2 School of Flying Control, 1 March 1945. To No.4 SFTS, 27 April 1945. To No.2 Air Command, 14 June 1945. Retired 2 October 1945. DHist file 181.009 D.4431 (RG.24 Vol.20649) has recommendation dated 18 August 1944 when he had flown 32 sorties (151 hours 30 minutes), 25 March to 15 August 1944.

Flight Sergeant Mitchell has attacked, with the highest degree of accuracy, numerous targets in Germany and occupied countries. On one occasion in April 1944, in spite of an attack by a Junkers 88 in fire which had broken out in his aircraft, this airman continued to give directions to the pilot. On this bombing run his exceptional display of coolness and tenacity of purpose was largely responsible for the complete success of the mission.

The sortie list was as follows:

MITCHELL, W/C Eric Martin (C175) - Distinguished Flying Cross - Station Croft - Award effective 5 April 1945 as per London Gazette dated 13 April 1945 and AFRO 824/45 dated 18 May 1945. Born 25 October 1912 in Halifax; raised in Wolfville. Educated at Nova Scotia Technical College and Acadia University (member, COTC). Graduated with a Bachelor of Engineering Degree. Enlisted as a Provisional Pilot Officer, 13 June 1935; qualified for wings, 26 May 1936. Promoted Wing Commander, 1 June 1941. At No.3 Training Command. 1 February 1942. To No.11 SFTS, 5 May 1943. To "Y" Depot, 26 September 1943. Taken on strength of No.3 PRC, Bournemouth, 13 October 1943. Served at Croughton, Wellesbourne Mountford and Topcliffe. Commanding Officer of No.431 Squadron, 1944. Repatriated 4 March 1946. To Northwest Air Command, 8 April 1946. Remained in postwar RCAF, rising to Group Captain (1 November 1948). Commanding Officer, Station Goose Bay, July 1955 to July 1957. His final posting was AFHQ, Ottawa. Retired 8 February 1963. Died in Ottawa, 2 July 2004. RCAF photo PL-31954 (ex UK-14208 dated 24 August 1944) shows Flight Sergeant Don Gignac (Windsor, Ontario) and W/C Eric Mitchell (Wolfville) at interrogation after raid on Kiel. Photos PL-32026 (ex UK-14181) and PL32027 (ex UK-14182) dated 24 August 1944 show him as Commanding Officer, No.431 Squadron. RCAF photo PL-32028 (ex UK-14183 dated 24 August 1944) shows leaders in No.431 Squadron: left to right they are S/L W.C. Vanexan, DFC (Smith Falls, flight commander), F/O R.D. Lawson, RAF, F/O E. Bruce Hutchinson (Amherstburg, Ontario), W/C Eric Mitchell (Wolfville, Nova Scotia and Ottawa, squadron commanding officer), F/L Frank Guillevin (Outremont), F/L R.M. Mickles (Toronto), F/O Bert Kaplansky (Hamilton). RCAF photo PL-40196 (ex UK-16963 dated 29 November 1944) shows Flight Officer Mary Carry (Toronto, member of "Blackouts" entertainment troupe) with Iroquois Squadron adjutant, F/L Bob Mickles (Toronto) and squadron commander, W/C Eric Mitchell (Wolfville, Nova Scotia). RCAF photo PL-40370 (ex UK-17134 dated 5 December 1944) shows him with "Minnie Simcoe", a hand-crafted doll and mascot of the Iroquois Squadron, caption says the mascot "has been tagging along on operations regularly." No citation other than "completed...numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which [he has] invariably displayed the utmost courage and devotion to duty." DHist file 181.009 D.1634 (RG.24 Vol.20604) has recommendation by G/C R.S. Turnbull, commanding No.64 Base, not dated but sent to AOC No.6 Group on 25 January 1945, at which time Mitchell had flown 27 operational sorties (161 hours 40 minutes), 12 June 1944 to 16 January 1945.

During this officer's service career he has proven himself to be a fearless and courageous leader, and at all times has shown outstanding ability in all his work.

Since his commencement of operations, this officer has displayed determination, fortitude and exceptional tactical ability. Such targets as Hanau, Merseberg, Zeitz, [and] Ludwigshaven have been attacked with outstanding skill and precision, setting an inspiring example to all his squadron. Under his keen and capable guidance his unit has been welded into a strong and determined bomber force.

RESEARCHER'S NOTE: The following is added to a pencil draft of the citation but not to a typed draft:

For his superb captaincy and airmanship, his undoubted courage and devotion to duty and his magnificent leadership of his squadron I recommend the immediate award of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

DHist file 181.009 D.1634 (RG.24 Volume 20604) has recommendation by W/C R.S. Turnbull dated 24 October 1944 when he had flown 19 sorties (97 hours 41 minutes) as follows:

During this officer's service career he has proven himself to be a fearless and courageous leader.

Wing Commander Mitchell started his career in the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1935. Up to the time he was posted overseas he had served as Chief Flying Instructor at an EFTS, as Chief Instructor of No.2 Training Command and as Station Commander at an SFTS at Yorkton. At all times he has shown outstanding ability in all his work.

Since his commencement of operations Wing Commander Mitchell has displayed determination, fortitude and exceptional tactical ability as an officer, leader and operational captain. Wing Commander Mitchell has given an inspiring example to his squadron, which has contributed greatly to the high standard of operational efficiency of all the men he commands.

I strongly recommend this officer be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

At the time of his release, the counsellor wrote, "Excellent appearance and personality, quiet and confident manner. Clean service record. Highly intelligent and is a fine type. Will return to former employment but is it is found unsatisfactory after a short time may apply for training in architecture. Believe he has ability to succeed."

Assessments (Selected):

"A useful and intelligent type of officer and a sound instructor." (W/C A.W. Oldroyd, No.22 OT, 1 November 1943, at which time he was reported as having flown 723 hours, 231 in previous six months).

"This officer was employed as RCAF Staff Officer at No.3 Group Headquarters in Bomber Command after completion of of aircrew tours. Although totally inexperienced in Administration when he assumed these duties, Flying Officer Mitchell has displayed outstanding qualities and has made an above-average contribution in his present employment. Loss of his services is deeply regretted." (G/C Douglas William Stoneham, RCAF Staff Officer, Headquarters, Bomber Command, 20 November 1944).

“A capable junior officer, carries out his duties as Squadron Wireless Operator in an efficient and dependable manner. Recommend promoted to Temporary Flight Lieutenant.” (F/L J.B. Hart, No.164 Squadron, Moncton, 5 September 1945.)
